Tendency for Many People To See Red at Every Turn

By Earl Heffner

Just what the nationality of the Devil—Satan, that is—may be is subject to the conjecture. Russians would contend that he is a German, Americans would say that he is a Jap, Britishers might contend that he is an Italian. The old boy probably would argue that he is a citizen of the world.

Men of letters and men of words have struggled with numerous hypotheses concerning the devil. Somehow they have missed questioning his political philosophies.

Judging by the pictorial evidence advanced by artists of Satan and his habitat, he probably is a guy who reads Das Kapital, purchased from the book exchange. Certainly the fascists, capitalists, et al will contend that Mr. Red is a communist. Maybe that's why all angry, non-communists and their arguments with an opponent with the stock phrase, "Go to the devil." Birds of a feather.

It might be unjust to argue that Satan is the actual head of the communists. After all, the only evidence is the artists' conception of his red environment. Perhaps the artists should change their color conception to a more conservative note. Unfortunately, this would please the communists and displease other political theorists.

Since this red has become so distasteful to some people, perhaps it should be outlawed from all color schemes. Some radical might even suggest redesigning the American flag. Apparently it constitutes free advertising for the Communist party every time it is raised.

It's surprising also that people do not refrain from smoking a popular brand of cigarettes since the manufacturer uses a red background on his posters.

Too often there is a tendency for certain peoples to see red every time someone advances a thought that does not agree with their philosophies. It might be well for such people to emulate the gentle Ferdinand instead of his bullish ancestors when listening to others.

"Words are a wise man's tools and the money of fools" a psychologist once said. Much weighty wisdom was placed into this abstract sentence.

Promiscuous sex practices are frowned upon by all; yet, it is no greater sin than that of prostitution of words.

All too frequently men are prone to toss phrases at their opponents when neither party even partially realizes the meaning of the term in use.

Such terms as communist, capitalist, socialist, conservative, liberal, reactionary, red-baiter, and progressive have lost their meanings through misuse, have become vague abstractions that no unbiased person may understand where auditing a debate.

On this campus there is a tendency for polemics to argue for the sake of argument, not to exchange ideas and seek the truth. The suggestion that we listen to each other with open minds and seek the truth seems to be naive and trite. It seems to be an insult to the intelligence. Yet the verbal brickbats being thrown recently indicate that such a suggestion is needed.

Certainly, none of us are too old or too educated to learn. If we are, why are we wasting time in school?

Invalidation of Elections Is Example of Accomplishment

By Barron Mills

A well-written petition signed by a group of 85 members of the recently-organized freshman class helped squeeze some "Murine" into the eyes of the Student council and the campus Monday night. The resulting invalidating of the freshman and sophomore class officers is an example of accomplishments and compromises that can spring from simply sitting down and having a quiet "eye wash," listening to all viewpoints of the persons concerned.

In short, before the meeting of the various factions concerned it would be very difficult to determine which stood in the right. As Dewey Dorsett pointed out, when he was called upon by Honor Council Chairman Ray Jefferies, he was moving on precedence when he called forth a mass meeting of the freshman and sophomore classes. Last year, Dorsett insisted, the junior class was formed in exactly the same manner as the lowerclassmen of this year. Namely: (1) A notice of class meeting was published in the Daily Tar Heel, (2) the members assembled and elected a nominating committee (3) the announcement of a second election was announced in the Daily Tar Heel and (4) elections were conducted as announced.

Dorsett stated that this method "worked exceedingly well" and that since it had not been contested in any form he thought that it could be very satisfactorily used again. The junior election of last year in which the above procedure was used was called by the editor of the Yackety Yack in order that the class would be organized in time to include the picture of the class officers in the yearbook.

Perhaps the time factor is the main difference between the two procedure (or procedures—as it may be). One of the chief gripes of the freshman petition was the skimpy amount of time which elapsed between the calling of the meeting of the electing a nominating committee and the actual election of class officers.

The "mistake election" emphasizes the idea that the constitution as ratified by the student body is not in operation on the campus as has been previously stated. This is the first major victory for the constitution. Perhaps there are several other organizations or happenings that do not run along the lines specifically stated in the constitution. The Student council made an important decision Monday night in deciding that the precedent does not in any way overrule the provisions stated in the constitution.

It seems rather important that the decision of the Council should come at such an opportune time—just when the Student Legislature is taking time out to shoot the sun at high noon and get its bearing on some of the clauses in the constitution. The constitution must be in action before it can be preserved.

Strictly Detrimental ....

Time Is Rapidly Approaching For Greatest Show on Campus

By Jud Kinberg

The time is rapidly approaching to buy tickets for the greatest show on campus. Pre-spring electoral fevers are mounting and from here on in there should be hardly a DTH that gets by without a political headline spread across the front page.

"Politikin" has always been the favorite indoor (save one) and outdoor (save one) sport of the students here. Back in the days of the small campus it wasn't unknown for a candidate to stand half the university to a brew at Aggies or a coke at the Varsity. Unfortunately, a bulging enrollment and strict "Hatch" acts have ruled out that convivial custom, but no amount of law can clean up poiltics.

As it has all during the year, the Student Party decided to pitch some hats into the ring first. The result was Sunday's nomination of Tom Eller and Barron Mills, the former for Student Body President and Mills for DTH Editor. I imagine that SP braintrusters well realize that they have named the two most important campaigners in their stable of candidates.

Other announcements will be forthcoming and we should be able to go home for spring vacation with a mind crowded with names, a pocket stuffed with partisan literature. To me, this April election is far more important than the men who hope to ride into office.

The manner in which campaigning is handled can be the crucial test of popular support for student government. Without that support, student self-rule and the many privileges it has engendered are worthless.

If we allow ourselves the privilege of slam-bang mud-slinging and many other ramrod practices which have crawled into popular campaigns here before, we will help chop out the roots of the very organizations we seek to perpetuate. The time for kindergarten name calling, whisper technique, meaningless platform promises and meaningfull "gravy" promises must be ended.

It is too early to attempt any judgment of the candidates. From past observations I know that party affiliation too often plays a part larger than ability when nominations are discussed. Paradoxically, we are still leader-poor at UNC, despite the boost in enrollment. This means that every weak campus officer will hurt the system more than ever, that there can be no place for paying party debts by nominating a man desired by a certain group despite his apparent ineptitudes for the post.

Nomination must be on the basis of ability to do the job, from the most prominent positions down to those listed in small print at the bottom of the page. Only by strict adherence to this can we prove our claim to student maturity and our right to self-rule.

My worries about coming elections were started by the peculiar odor of the now voided Freshmen vote. The one group that will have a voice here longer than any other now present was introduced to elections and immediately got to shake its left hand instead of the right. Quick action by the Student Council has helped to eradicate that first and very bad impression, but I'm afraid that some of the harm cannot be undone.

The affair has had its effect not only upon first year men, but upon the whole campus. If we follow that up in the April campaign with any of the rottener practices currently in vogue, I imagine a lot of the men and women are going to have a dim to dying view of student activities here.

Not only the contested elections, but the recent epidemic of back-biting has taken a good deal of the gilt off student government. The coming election and its preliminaries must be used to regild the lily.

Jayvees Play Here Tonight

Lucky Strike Foe In Return Battle

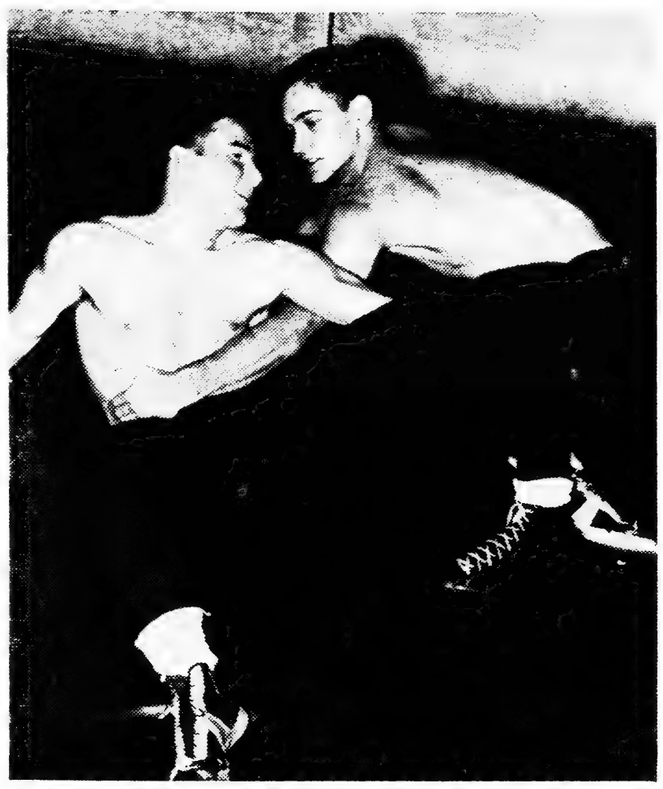
The undefeated junior varsity cagers have a full week ahead of them, with a game tonight, one Friday, and two Saturday.

Durham's Lucky Strike quint will oppose the Hayworthmen in a return engagement tonight at 8 o'clock in Woollen gym.

Carolina's Jayvees won the first tilt, 49-21, but the Lucky Strikes now boast a starting lineup that includes former Duke stars Gordon Carver, Kenny Turner and Buck Cheek. Coach Hayworth is expecting much stronger competition in tonight's encounter as a result.

Hayworth will start Ed Wagner and Jack Fitch at the forward posts, Junie Bailey at center, and Harvey Weinstein and Dan Nyimicz as guards.

Fred Swartzburg suffered an injured ankle during yesterday's practice session, but will probably see limited action tonight.



The Jayvees will face the First Regiment Cannoneers of Fort Bragg in the first game of Friday night's doubleheader in Woollen gym, and Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock they will play the University's Wilmington college center five on the same court. Saturday night they journey to Durham for a return match with the Duke jayvees. The locals took an earlier game from the Blue Imps, 44 to 32.

Over 20 Netmen Answer First Call of Season

Over 20 netters, including seven lettermen, answered Coach John Kenfield's initial call of the season yesterday afternoon.

Included in the group were five lettermen from 1946, Stan Gruner, Jim Nicholson, Sam Daniels, Don Skakle and Duke Wilder, plus the co-captains from the 1944 season, Ray Morris and Don Peck. Others included Vic Seixas, ranked 16th in the nation, Clark Taylor, Charlie Rice, John Kenfield, Jr., and Heath Alexander.

Wrestlers Take On Duke In Loop Skirmish Today

Co-Champions of 1946 Battle in Durham; Tar Heel Team Seeks Fifth Straight Win

Carolina's mat crew shoots for its fifth straight triumph of the season in Durham this afternoon at 4 o'clock when the grapplers of Coach Chuck Quinlan meet Duke's Blue Devils in the Duke gym.

The Tar Heels, who got by Washington and Lee's strong conference contenders masterfully last Saturday afternoon, will likewise be after their fifth loop victory in as many matches, and they will be slight favorites by virtue of their record to date. Duke and Carolina split two bouts last season and were co-champions of the conference.

Following the Duke meet, Carolina will have to face VMI's strong conference favorites Saturday at Lexington in what will likely be the deciding match in the final conference standings. At present Carolina and VMI are deadlocked in the race with a 4-0 record. The Tar Heels meet Navy at Annapolis and Virginia in Chapel Hill before the conference tourney.

The lineup for the Tar Heel wrestlers will remain intact for the meet this afternoon, with the exception possibly of the heavyweight spot. Carl Simpson is tentatively set to compete, but regular Laurie Hooper, who is injured from the Davidson match, may be ready to go.

Four of the Tar Heels sport undefeated records to date and will be after their fifth straight triumph. They are Co-Captains Dick Seaver and Tommy Hearn, 128-pounder Tom Urquhart and 165-pounder Oscar Gupton. Hearn will be seeking his 11th victory in a row, having gone unbeaten in six matches last season. Others set to compete are Doug Thompson at 121, Irv Zirpel at 155 and Bill Kemp at 175. These three have won three and lost one.

Badminton Postponed

The scheduled badminton matches tonight with the Raleigh club have been postponed, according to an announcement last night by Walter Rabb. The regular club meeting will be held tonight as usual, however, and the local tournament will be continued.

"Coach Bunn" Hearn Resting Much Better

(Special to Daily Tar Heel)

Wilson, Feb. 11.—Coach Bunn Hearn, veteran baseball mentor at the University of North Carolina who suffered a heart attack here last week, was resting much better at his home here today.

Hearn, the former New York Giant, St. Louis Cardinal and Boston Brave diamond performer, is expected to be up in about 10 days, according to latest reports from his physician. He has been resting at his home here since the attack last Friday.

It is not known yet whether the well-liked Hearn will be able to work with the Tar Heel baseballers any this spring, but it is expected that he will be in Chapel Hill in a month or so at least in an advisory capacity.

RingCoachHit ByToughLuck

By Roy Holsten

If anyone is planning to run a contest to discover the hard luck Carolina coach of the season, more than ample consideration should be shown diminutive Mike Ronman, versatile coach of the Tar Heel boxing squad.

Plagued all year with injuries, ineligibilities, and boxers with scholastic difficulties, the soft-spoken mentor has come up with a new misfortune to add to his already overcrowded list of difficulties. The latest coup of Lady Luck came in the shape of a sudden resignation from school by his flashy 165-pounder, Leonard Green, one of Mike's most dependable scrappers.

Green, who was undefeated in three tussles, decided to resign on the eve of the Maryland match last Saturday.

At the outset of the current season Ronman viewed his prospects as very bright and expected to come up with one of Carolina's greatest teams. But since that time one stroke of misfortune after another has fallen in rapid succession; Ed McGee, powerful heavyweight, was declared ineligible because of scholastic difficulties; Max Spellman, another heavyweight, suffered a broken hand, and several other prospects figured their schedule was too heavy.

But despite all these disheartening setbacks, the fiery little tutor has done amazingly well in salvaging a fairly potent squad which is gunning for a well deserved second win this Saturday when they clash with The Citadel in Charleston.

Nash, Grads, Aycock Take Mural Cage Wins

High-flying quintets added extra victories to their strings yesterday afternoon as the mural cage play produced little more than routine triumphs.

Nash continued on its winning way by defeating Axes, 46-28, as did the Grads in stopping Lewis, 40-21. Another powerful dorm crew, Aycock, also had an easy time in downing Mangum, 42-22.

In other games, Med School topped Emanons, 20-12, in a wide-open battle; Phi Delt No. 2 found PiKA No. 1 to its liking, 26-17; and Beta No. 1 rolled over DKE No. 1, 37-21.

Nearman, Kohler, Hamilton Spell Blue Devils' Downfall

Locals Display Terriffic Defensive Punch Before a Crowd of 6,400 Howling Patrons

By Irwin Smallwood

An underdog White Phantom basketball team, trailing 8-2 at the five-minute mark in the first period, rose to great heights before 6,400 stunned and thrilled spectators in the remaining 35 minutes of play in Woollen gym last night to topple highly-regarded Duke from the ranks of the unbeaten in the Southern conference race. The score was 49-28 in the victory that will be remembered for years as one of the finest displays of defensive play ever seen in Chapel Hill.

Five iron men, Bob Paxton, Jim Hamilton, Sherman Nearman, Norm Kohler and Jim White, played without substitution for 38 minutes and 40 seconds of the ball game, giving way to relief for only the last minute and 20 seconds of play.

Duke's league-leading Blue Devils, who were rated an easy choice over the Phants, were held to nine field goals out of 60 shots in the fray, and four of the nine were bucketed by the outstanding Duke pivot man, Ed Koffenberger. Koffenberger, a candidate for All-American, was the only man who kept Duke in the running at all, dropping in exactly half of the Blue Devils' total.

In the meantime, Nemo Nearman, who was starting only his third game of the season, turned into the man-of-the-hour for Carolina, playing a bang-up defensive game in addition to dropping 16 points through the hoop to lead both teams in the scoring column. Nearman, who started and played nearly all the game in place of Johnny Dillon, provided the surprise of the season in giving such an outstanding account of himself. He is a freshman from West Virginia.

Jim Hamilton, the consistent little forward from Coach Tom Scott's home town, scooted out from under tight Duke guarding in the second half to connect for 6 out of 10 shots and score 15 markers for the victorious Tar Heels. Norm Kohler, playing an outstanding game at guard, made 13 points to trail Koffenberger in scoring for both teams.

Bob Paxton's big hands played their same steady rebound role, and the White Phantoms' sensational floor leader added five points to the Tar Heel aggregate. Jim White, the floor-covering guard, was held scoreless as he consistently kept the ball feeding into the center and forwards.

After Duke had jumped to an 8-2 lead, Carolina came roaring back, and Nearman tied things up 8-8 at the 9:40 mark with a tip-in shot. Kohler sent the Phantoms ahead a few seconds later with a set shot, and the Tar Heels were never behind again.

By the time the halftime whistle blew Carolina had piled up a 24-11 lead to the amazement of the crowd that packed into Woollen gym. Duke made only four shots in 30 attempts during the first 20-minute period, an average of .122. The Dukes made only two field goals during the first 15 minutes and 30 seconds of the second half.

Graham Memorial to Present Duke Ambassadors Tomorrow

Durham Campus Band Paced by Sam Fletcher Has Played Numerous Big Time Engagements

By Dave Owens

The outstanding dance band on the Duke university campus, the Duke Ambassadors, will be presented by Graham Memorial in an hour-long free concert from 8 until 9 o'clock in Memorial hall tomorrow night. Paced by the "Ambassador of Good Music," drummer-man Sam Fletcher, the visiting band will boast 17 pieces with two vocalists.

The Ambassadors have a long list of successful engagements behind them, including the Roseland ballroom in Boston, Old Orchard pier in Old Orchard Beach, Maine, Palisades park in Fort Lee, N. J., the Seaside casino at Virginia Beach, and the Tantilla Gardens in Richmond.

Players Return

Tomorrow night's concert will see the return of trumpeter Bob Hutchins, and trombonist Tommy Farr to familiar grounds. Hutchins, of Winston-Salem, played with Johnny Satterfield here last year, while Farr, of Charlotte, was with Freddy Johnson a few years ago. Farr has also been with Dean Hudson, Tony Pastor, Woody Herman.

In addition to the 17-piece band, Sallie Waddell, Duke coed from Greensboro, and Clarence Smith from Louisville, Ky., will handle the vocals.

The Duke Ambassadors are already popular with Carolina students having played last quarter at a Graham Memorial dance in Woollen gymnasium.

may ask for exemption from classes at a certain hour if he can show that such class would mean a definite hardship for him. Petitions for hour exemptions may be filed at the same time as the "Green Form" and a faculty registration committee will inspect and pass upon them.

Seniors First

In pulling class tickets the schedules of graduating seniors will be made out first to insure that required subjects are available to them. Schedules of hardship cases will be filled next and then the schedules of all other students will be prepared. These last forms will be picked at random and time of turning in registration forms will have no bearing on the order in which they are taken.

Registration for students in the school of commerce will begin tomorrow and run through February 25. Registration will start next Monday for the general college, arts and sciences, and pharmacy school. Library science students will register February 19; those taking Social work, February 20-22, and students in public health, February 21-22.

The new registration system was devised by a registration committee appointed by Chancellor House following the almost complete breakdown of registration machinery under the overload of increased enrollment since January, 1946.

The committee was headed by Lanier, was composed of faculty members from ten of the University departments which have had the heaviest enrollment of students.

Draft Defiers Hold Ceremony Burning Cards

Selective Service Warns Protestors

Washington, Feb. 12—(UP)—Opponents of peacetime conscription for military service have defied selective service headquarters and staged a demonstration in front of the White House.

Several months ago conscientious objectors picketed the presidential mansion and the justice department.

In this latest protest a small group of men, mostly World War II conscientious objectors who went to jail rather than war, gathered before the White House and publicly burned what they said were their draft cards.

This was done despite a warning from selective service headquarters that the wilful destruction of draft cards is a crime punishable by five years in prison and fines up to $10,000.

Police and plainclothesmen kept the demonstrators moving after a brief pause for the draft-card-burning ceremony, but no one was arrested and it was indicated that the police were instructed not to make an issue of today's picketing.

Hitch-Hiker Robs Man On Chapel Hill Trip

Chapel Hill, Feb. 12—(UP)—A Morrisville tobacco worker told Chapel Hill police today that a hitch-hiker forced him to drive from Durham to near Chapel Hill at gun-point early this morning, and then robbed him of $10 in cash and Navy discharge papers.

Leroy Clegg said he picked up the hitch-hiker in Durham and drove toward Apex. When he reached Lowes Grove, the man pulled a gun and made him head toward Chapel Hill, Clegg said.

The unidentified man made him stop near the Institute of Government training barracks on highway 54 and robbed him. Then the hitch-hiker forced him to drive to the intersection of West Franklin and Rosemary streets in Carrboro. There the gunman departed on foot.

WEATHER TODAY

Ambassadors to Present Free Concert Tonight

Top Flight Duke Campus Band to Feature Ace Drummer Sammy Fletcher as Conductor

By Dave Owens

From the school that gave America Les Brown and Johnny Long comes another great band, this time under the leadership of ace drummer-man Sammy Fletcher. The Duke Ambassadors, to be presented in an hour-long free concert by Graham Memorial, tonight in Memorial hall from 8 until 9 o'clock, have been the outstanding musical organization on the Duke campus for more than a decade. The present band is rated by many as "tops" for all time.

Fletcher took over as leader of the Ambassadors in 1942, and that same summer found him making his bid for the "big-time" under the management of Music Corporation of America.

Greetings Received

"Greetings from the President" were getting popular at that time, however, and most of the Ambassadors answered the Army and Navy calls.

Now, most of the same men are back at Duke and the new band is bigger and better than ever. New additions include trombonist Tommy Farr of Charlotte, formerly with Carolina's Freddy Johnson, Dean Hudson, Tony Pastor and Woody Herman.

The Ambassadors feature the singing of lovely Duke coed Sally Waddell of Greensboro, while the male vocals are handled by Clarence Smith and Sam, himself. Besides drumming and vocalizing, Sam also finds time to do most of the arrangements for the band and still keep up with his studies in the Duke law school.

London Quartet Will Appear Here

The London String quartet, famous the world over for its outstanding concert work, will be presented in Hill Music hall next Wednesday as the second in the Music department series of chamber music programs. The quartet is composed of John Pennington, first violin; Laurent Halleux, second violin; Cecil Bonvalot, viola, and Warwick Evans, violoncello.

The quartet, now residing in California, has given over 300 concerts in London alone, besides touring Spain 14 times, Scandinavia four times, South America four times, and the United States and Canada 16 times.

Their program Wednesday night will consist of Mozart's "Quartet in C Major," Debussy's "Quartet in G Minor," and Beethoven's "Quartet in F Minor." Guest tickets are available to the general public at Hill Music hall.

Floridians Plan Party For Tomorrow Evening

The Florida club will have a party for all active members tomorrow evening. The first truck will leave at 3:45 and the second at 6 o'clock from Graham Memorial.

All members who have not paid their $2 membership fee and who wish to attend the party are asked to contact Walter Talley at the Y between 12 and 12:30 today or call either Walter Talley, F-2236 or Ellen Price, 8066.

WSSF Collects Total of $187 In Lenoir Hall

Contributions Reach $1,200 During Week

By Ed Long

A total of $187 was collected at lunch yesterday from Lenoir hall in the "Take a fellow student to dinner" campaign, in connection with the World Student Service fund drive, to swell total contributions so far this week to $1,200.

Collections were also made at the Carolina Inn and at the N. C. cafeteria, but these totals have not as yet been tabulated. Students who failed to contribute yesterday can still do so since the drive extends through today.

Not Release Tabulations

Dormitory collections are rising rapidly but results will not be announced until after the completion of the service fund campaign Sunday.

Gay Morenus and Walt Stuart, co-chairmen for the drive, have pointed out that relief goes to Asiatic countries as well as to countries in Europe. In China, where the need for relief work is greatest, the second great migration of students is still in progress. More than 90,000 students are moving back from the war-time centers of study in the interior to the university campuses on the coast which had to be abandoned with the invasion.

Hardships Immense

The hardships of travel are immense and the task of rebuilding shattered campuses is enormous. WSSF offers help and encouragement through relief operations at rail and road centers where supplemental food, lodging, medical aid and other necessities are supplied. Ten new relief centers are being established in cities where the aggregation of students is greatest.

Men's Glee Club Begins 3-Day Tour Tonight

The Men's Glee club, under the direction of Paul Young, will go on a three day tour tonight, presenting programs at Meredith college, tonight, Winston-Salem tomorrow night, and a final program at WCUNC Saturday night.

Rufus Norris, baritone, and John Ellis, pianist, will be featured soloists at tonight's performance in Raleigh. Tomorrow night and Saturday night's appearance will feature Ed Vom Lehn, baritone, and John Ellis.

Pianist John O'Steen will accompany the Glee Club for the entire tour. Director Young stated that the Club will give a campus concert in March.

Dance for Married Students To Be Held Tomorrow Night

A Valentine dance for all married students will be held in the main lounge of Graham Memorial tomorrow night from 9:30 until midnight. Admission is free and dress for the affair will be optional, according to Martha Rice, director of Graham Memorial, sponsors of the dance.

The "Stardusters," popular Candlelight Room quintet, will furnish music for the dance by courtesy of the student union night club.

"The dance will not start until 9:30 because of the Georgia Tech basketball game tomorrow night. Dress is optional so that couples leaving the game can just drop by Graham Memorial for the dance without having to change into formal or semi-formal dress first," said Miss Rice.

Free bids for the dance are available at the office of Graham Memorial or from any representatives of the Carolina Dames.

AVC Urges Control Of Rent Ceilings

At a brief meeting Tuesday evening held prior to the Duke basketball game AVC members heard a report on a current congressional bill to lift the ceilings on rents presented by Garry Fullerton.

At Fullerton's request a resolution was passed urging all veterans on campus to write individual letters to their congressmen to keep the ceilings in effect.

In addition the local chapter voted to conduct a campus public opinion poll in collaboration with some other organization.

Summer Enrollment May Break Record

Advance Applications Number 200 More Than Received at Same Time Last Year

Prospects for enrollment in the summer session look very promising, as indicated by the advance requests for information, according to reports from Chancellor Robert B. House and Director Guy B. Phillips today. There are 200 more requests now than there were at the same time last year when the enrollment for both terms was the largest in the history of the University, Director Phillips said. There were 3767 enrolled in the first term last summer, and 3951 in the second term, making an all-high total of 7118 for one summer.

The first term this year will open June 12 and continue through July 22, with the second term starting July 23 and continuing through August 29.

Must Apply in Advance

Due to the housing shortage, Director Phillips said, it will be necessary to apply for admission to the summer session in advance. All applicants not now enrolled in the University should apply at once for admission to either or both summer terms if they wish to attend, he said.

Applications should be sent directly to Director Phillips who will refer approved requests for campus dormitory space to Dean Katherine Carmichael for women and J. W. Wadsworth for men.

Men's dormitories will be operated on the same plans as during the regular term with priorities as follows: 1. Students now in residence (North Carolina veterans, North Carolina non-veterans, out-of-state veterans, and out-of-state non-veterans).

2. Former students, with veterans and non-veterans coming in the same order, and 3. new students, same.

Women, Men on Same Basis

Women students will be admitted to all classes of the summer session on the same basis as men. Those eligible are graduates of standard high schools, college students from other institutions, teachers holding regular state certificates, graduate students, special mature students who are not applicants for a degree, and institute groups.

A student entering as a regular freshman should apply directly to Director of Admissions Roy Armstrong.

Director Phillips pointed out that a balanced program of graduate courses will be offered in the various fields. Particular attention, he said, will be given to graduate work for teachers, the courses being designed to meet the requirements of the North Carolina Graduate Teachers' certificate.

Summer school director, Guy B. Phillips, announced that the largest enrollment in the history of the University is expected for this summer's session.

Solons Debate Amendments

Assembly Postpones Council Discussion

By Bookie Jabine

After tabling the much-publicized student council amendment, the Student Legislature last night busied itself with constitutional changes of a more mechanical nature, passing three and defeating three.

Primary in importance was the unanimous passage of an amendment which would shift the spring elections from the first Tuesday in May to the first Tuesday in April, and advance the date of the December elections by one week.

Although the voting was unanimous, it was in the discussion of this bill that Speaker Charlie Warren and Parliamentarian Jimmy Wallace carried on a two-way verbal shooting match.

Wallace rose on the point as to when the amendments would be referred to the student body. Warren called Wallace out of order.

Wallace replied, "I am not."

Said Warren, raising his voice, "Mr. Wallace, you are out of order, sit down!"

Wallace declared that his remarks were pertinent to the floor. Then the Speaker looked straight at Wallace and said, "I wish you would sit down," and went on to further discussion.

But Wallace refused to be pushed aside, and shouted, "As parliamentarian of this assembly, Mr. Speaker, I declare you out of order."

Then Wallace took a seat. It was unanimously approved that the amendments be put before the student body in the general elections this spring.

The amendment to put two faculty members on the Student Audit board met with expected opposition. Johnny Clampitt, chairman of the finance committee, rigorously opposed the measure. Finally, the change was amended so that the faculty representatives would have no vote as to the board's policy, only to act as advisory members.

Debate waxed long over the amendment to do away with the House Privileges board, but the assembly unanimously accepted the change.

Chief opposition to the bill was concerned with just who did have the power to check on the fraternity-coed visiting agreement.

Speaker Warren announced that there will be a meeting of the legislature this evening at 7:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall. This session has been called to discuss several bills which have been hanging fire to the constitution debate.

College Center Students Faring Well

Grades Are on Par With Average Here

The approximately 1,000 students enrolled in the 12 North Carolina College centers throughout the State are averaging practically the same grades as students in the University at Chapel Hill and State College in Raleigh on the same subjects, C. E. McIntosh, assistant director in charge of the centers, said recently.

The courses, including English, social science, mathematics, botany, chemistry, physics, French and Spanish, cover the same amount of material as do these courses being given at the University and at State, and the teachers, according to McIntosh, are for the most part as highly qualified as many University instructors.

Only Slightly Behind

The grades the College center students received this fall and winter, he said, were just slightly behind those of University students in all subjects.

One hundred teachers compose the staffs at the 12 centers which are Albemarle, Burlington, Burnsville, Charlotte, Fayetteville, Gastonia, Goldsboro, Greensboro, Hendersonville, Murphy, Rocky Mount, and Wilmington. All have enrollments of 30 or more. Charlotte and Wilmington have the largest registrations with 278 and 212 respectively.

All Credits Earned Can Be Transferred

By vote of the North Carolina College Conference all credits earned in a college center are transferable to a college or university within this state.

Free Will Forgotten?

Much like the mountain which, after fitful labor, gave birth to a mouse, the administration's latest hold-that-line move in regard to registration would seem only to have made more tangled an already muddled situation.

Yesterday's announcement of the proposed catch-as-catch-can method of course selection, to go in effect next quarter, met with a larger amount of student disapproval and resentment than any other issue in recent memory. Many who stood last quarter's confusion by philosophizing that things could not be so bad again changed their minds and seethed anew.

To be forced to queue and stew through interminable lines was bad enough, but at least it was a sign of the times and could be tolerated. Now, with not even a choice of hours, let alone professors under whom to study, the students, we feel, have a legitimate right to frequent the nearest wailing wall.

As in the lately-debated anti-smoking in classes action, the oracles that be in South seem to have forgotten that the student body is composed of supposedly mature men and women consciously pursuing their education of their own free will. Free will would here seem to be forgotten.

We don't pretend to offer a panacea to the problem of registration. That hardly could be classed as anything resembling the student's business, especially in light of the most recent plan excluding them almost entirely. It's true that registration systems in colleges all over the country are wheezing and cracking under unprecedented enrollment. It may be a thorn which only time can remove. But at least there certainly would seem to be no call to make any such bad situation worse.

Specifically, what's wrong with the present set-up is:

(1) Students are forced to take classes which may be personally inconvenient to them (unless they can prove a "hardship"), all of which is distastefully reminiscent of the worst features of regimented bureaucracy: such as the OPA and its "hardship forms."

(2) The new system was devised for the convenience of, and wholly by the faculty. Not one student was asked to give his views. The reason for that is obvious.

(3) Other schools such as Columbia University (with an enrollment up to 30,000) seem to be able to allow the student to choose his professor and hours. Why can't UNC do it, without reducing us to the level of high school sophomores, or inmates of an educational prison?

(4) The routine about saving "student's time at registration" falls pretty flat when you consider that a student might save an hour or two in the registration line; but may be forced to waste hundreds of hours waiting for an afternoon class to fill up an academic program that normally would end during a morning hour.

If the school is getting too big for its breeches and traditionalized ideas, we suggest that it get a set of new, large-size breeches that will stand the strain of present-day conditions, and stop wielding arbitrary power to the detriment of the students.

What the Students Think

Below are the results of a poll taken yesterday morning to show the student body's sentiment about the proposed change in registration procedure:

One hundred students, 90 male and 10 female, expressed their opinion as follows:

1) Were you satisfied with the registration system in force last quarter? Yes: 86. No: 14.

2) Would you like the new registration to be adopted by the University? Yes: 5; No: 95.

3) Do you think that the new method of registration is more efficient, or will prove itself to be more efficient, than the previous method? Yes: 7. No: 81. Don't know: 12.

4) Do you like to pick your own schedule when possible? Yes: 97. No: 3.

5) Would you like to retain your teachers if you could and wanted to do so? Yes: 93. No: 7.

New Registration System Causes Great Resentment

By Jud Kinberg

The brave new world of push-button tuning has descended upon education. With the merchandise brain-child of Ed Lanier, we pays our money and then takes our chances on how the cards will fall. This new registration system, with its potluck feature, is the latest phase of a perilous swing towards dehumanization of collegiate study at UNC.

With the 7,000 students threatening to worry the brains out of all and sundry in South Building, it is only natural that they should attempt to set up barriers beween themselves and expression of student desire. It is just as natural that such a move as Lanier's cockeyed registration plan should bring immediate and deep resentment. Never in the years that I have been here has campus opinion crystalized so quickly and so concretely against the administration. All the good will engendered by South Building plugging during the past few months has been swept away by this proposed system.

Elsewhere on this page, the many bad points of the plan have been discussed. That it takes away the essential student freedom of choice of courses and professors is the most important. At best, we may find ourselves unable to take classes with men whose ability we respect. At worst, we will find ourselves unable to take classes themselves because by the time our number came up to be class-ified, the desired course was closed or we had to take a required subject at the hour.

The Winter quarter registration went off smoothly, with all students aware that there would be a one to two hour wait. Since Memorial Hall benches were the waiting room, studies could be continued during the two hours. Unfortunately, for I hope it is not true, it looks like the administration was introducing this Lanier Plan to simplify their job and not the student's. Equality among 7,000 minions is what we will get.

But it is not this turn of events alone that heralds the era of bigness and boorishness. In some of the departments the "hellwithem" attitude has also been crystalizing to a dangerous degree. One example is the experience of several Commerce majors. Promised a week of intensive study for a crucial eight-hour exam, they were suddenly told that it would be held only three days hence and one week earlier than it had been scheduled. No explanation was forthcoming, no preparations made to ease the shock.

Again, a returning veteran took a series of tests at the Extension Division. From them, the potentates decided he was not as well suited for his present major as he was for another. Unfortunately, the student liked what he was doing and told them that he was disregarding their advice. Huffed by such resistance, the officials went so far—according to the report—as to threaten to report the man as an "uncooperative" at the VA in Winston-Salem.

The harsh fact cannot be glossed over. There seem to be men in control who would make a factory out of the University of North Carolina. We would turn out BA's with the efficiency and lack of interest with which we put together cars of bottle-tops. It can make money, but it will make enemies.

Originated at Vanderbilt....

Newest Southern 'Movement' Is Little Known at Carolina

By Dick Stern

Chapel Hill is the center of a movement and a group of thinkers which is most vividly personified in this university's president and in the ex-governor of Georgia, Mr. Arnall. The South can and should they say be industrialized, educated and, in short modernized. This group is equipped with figures, science and what is called the "liberal" attitude. There is another Southern "movement" in full swing which is more complex and consequently remains comparatively unrepresented at the school.

It originated at Vanderbilt University but its founders have been drawn by big demand and bigger money all over the United States, to Kenyon College in Gambier, Ohio, to Minnesota to Louisiana State and to Princeton. Its most distinguished representatives include America's most arresting novelists and poets along with fellow traveller economists and political scientists, at least one of whom is at Chapel Hill. It is an anti-industrial, anti-scientific, anti-urban group which has been labelled fascistic by the people who don't understand it and been dismissed as poetic by the people who don't understand anything.

I suppose that its impetus is a revulsion against nineteenth century science and eighteenth century liberalism. Science describes the world in empirical terms. If you disregard science you are going to be run over, or are going to die of malnutrition or influenza. But science cannot say that you should not be run over or should not want to die of influenza. Science does not reveal the complex of judgments, ideas and harmonies that underlies the experience it thinks it is describing adequately. But we have been ruled by this descriptive judgment.

We crowd in cities, we go to war, we get educated to make the wheels go round without realizing they are unattached wheels or at best wheels of pain. Our lives are spent as Robert Lowell says "burrowing into the lion's mouth." This is it. Our lives are a slow crusade into insignificance.

But Allan Tate and John Crowe Ransom and Robert Penn Warren are dissatisfied with the incoherence, the meaningless of this existence. They are shopping for a faith, a local logic by which they can interpret and enrich their experience. For experience is the test and the end. Our experience is bookish they say. Our experience is mechanical. We know what the postures of love are but we do not know what the postures mean. We live in a "democracy" but we do not know the lies and the truths, the compromises and the stubborness, the spirit and the flesh which give significance to the word.

How can we interpret experience? Well, since we can't know all, let us know one part well. Let us know what one segment means and then let us categorize our experience in terms of it. Let it be our microscope, and sometimes, our telescope. Let us know its logic (if it is or was logical) and let us correlate it with other logics, other worlds.

They have picked the Old South for their instrument. Of course, it is a more complicated and "real" Old South than Scarlet O'Hara's and Rhett Butler's. It is a tradition around which they have written much great poetry and much good sense. It is an important aspect of modern thought which deserves attention by anyone who is interested in life and most certainly and more immediately it deserves a course to itself.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

PALACE GUARD SORE AT HANNEGAN'S NOMINATION OF TRUMAN FOR 1948; BIG BUSINESS MAN MAY RUN LITTLE BUSINESS COMMITTEE; REP. KNUTSON PREPARES TO RULE TAX BILL WITH IRON HAND.

Washington.—The White House palace guard was really burnt up at Bob Hannegan for tossing Truman's hat into the ring for 1948. They claim Hannegan has now made the President a target for political opposition just as his prestige is running high. No matter what he does now, they say, he will be accused of playing politics.

Real fact is that Hannegan conferred twice with Truman before making the speech, but the palace guard is peeved just the same. They think Hannegan pulled a "Henry Wallace" on the boss. Wallace, they point out, officially cleared his Russian speech with Truman last summer, but didn't point out to Truman its innuendoes and possible repercussions.

THE MERRY MORTICIAN

Senator Kenneth Wherry, Nebraska's merry mortician, who has promised to do so much for small business, now seems to be a little forgetful about it.

Wherry pushed a resolution through Congress whereby a special Small Business Committee was created with him as Chairman, thereby keeping the Chairmanship out of the hands of his fellow Republican, Senator Wilson of Iowa.

And previously, when the Democrats controlled Congress, Wherry blocked an investigation of the newsprint monopoly, so strongly favored by small newspapers.

Now that the new Small Business Committee finally has been voted, the Nebraska ex-undertaker has been dickering with Joe Borda to become head of the Committee staff. And, believe it or not, Borda is on the payroll of the National Association of Manufacturers, which represents the biggest business in the country.

No wonder the Nebraska undertaker's Committee is now nicknamed the Big Business Committee for Small Undertakings.

WHITE HOUSE STAMPS

President Truman doesn't go in for his predecessor's favorite hobby of stamp collecting, but another member of his family does.

Representative Bob Poage of Waco, Texas, went over to the White House the other day to offer the President the hospitality of Waco when he returns from Mexico City, and noted on the Presidential desk several booklets filled with stamps.

"You ought to see these, Bob," said the President, opening one. "These are Egyptian stamps which the Egyptian Ambassador gave me for Margaret's stamp collection. They're beautiful things, although I admit I don't know too much about stamps."

Note—Interesting fact about the stamp gift by the Egyptian Ambassador is that while he could legally give them to Margaret Truman, he could not have given them to her father. It is against the law for the President of the United States to receive gifts from a foreign government. FDR's secretary, Miss Lehand, used to insist that stamp collections given him by foreign governments be sent to the State Department to be kept until his term expired. But the late President frequently hid the stamp gifts before she could dispose of them.

TAX CZAR KNUTSON

Minnesota's Rep. Harold Knutson, whose self-styled role as tax expert has been challenged of late, doesn't plan to take any chances about losing control of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Meeting in secret session last week, Knutson wasted little time in passing a motion permitting unrestricted use of proxies. In other words, no matter how many Republican members may be out playing golf or mending political fences when a Committee meeting is scheduled, Chairman Knutson will be able to vote them almost any way he pleases. Even though a majority of those on hand for the meeting may be Democrats, the GOP—by voting proxies—can prevail.

Answers

Personally yes, but I do think the allotments for dependents could justifiably be increased.—Pete Price, Greensboro.

Definitely not. January was my first month at school. I spent $48.50 for meals, $10 for laundry, and $8 for room. That is a total of $66.50. This does not include all the expenses of any veteran.—J. B. Griffin, Rocky Mount.

Frankly no. Sixty-five dollars a month is hardly enough to meet all the expenses. For those who eat only twice a day and have free lodging $65 might be sufficient.—Bill Farrior, Wallace.

Yes, since I am under PL16 which allows more money than most veterans receive under PL 346. However I am sure I would not be able to get along on $65 a month.—Garnett McCoy, Charlottesville, Va.

No. The $65 a month barely covers the cost of food. When I pay for my room rent, laundry, and similar miscellaneous articles, I'm in the red by the end of each month.—George W. Michael, Lincolnton.

No, I do not. I am married and receive $90 a month, but this is not sufficient for two people. I am certainly glad to be getting the money, but I think a general increase, with a larger spread between the married and single figures, would be in order.—Charles Riddle, Burlington.

No, but then maybe I should go on a diet.—Nina Lide, Wake Forest.

Maybe it can be done, but I haven't been able to live within the present allotment since being in school.—Bill Wilder, Raleigh.

Almost, but not quite, since it depends on the activities of the individual. A student, yes; a playboy, no.—Tommy Houser, Lincolnton.

Carolina Grapplers Breeze Past Blue Devils By 22 to 6

Urquhart, Hearn, Seaver, Gupton Remain Undefeated

Tar Heels Capture Fifth Conference Triumph, Play Host To VMI Saturday

Durham, Feb. 12—The powerful University of North Carolina wrestling team walked off with its fifth consecutive conference victory here this afternoon, turning back the Duke Blue Devils, 22-6, in a match here in the Duke gym. The Tar Heels swept all but two individual bouts in gaining the win.

The Dukesters started hot and ended hot, but in between, the Devils' steam just wasn't up. After Doug Thompson, Carolina's 121-pounder, had dropped a 11-4 decision to Kusturiss, the Tar Heels went to work in earnest, copping the next six bouts, four via the decision route, and two by pins.

Tom Urquhart started the ball rolling by scoring a minor upset over Loucks of Duke by a 3-0 count. The bout looked as though it might end in a draw until the last thirty seconds, when Urquhart came to neutral and then scored a quick take-down to provide the margin of victory.

Co-Captains Win

Co-Captain Tommy Hearn jumped on the "Beat Dook" bandwagon by wasting little time in disposing of Duke's 136-pounder, Pumpian, in 1:02 of the first period. Co-Captain Dick Seaver pushed the Carolina lead up to 11-3 by decisioning Billmire 8-2 in a one-sided 145-pound bout, and Irwin Zirpel gained a two-point time advantage on Duke's Jouannet at 155 pounds to walk off with a close 6-4 decision in the best bout of the afternoon.

Oscar Gupton also kept his slate clean in the 165-pound class as he bulled out a lopsided win over Fitzsimmons of Duke, 6-1, to clinch the meet for the Tar Heels.

Just to rub salt in the already-raw Blue Devil wounds, Bill Kemp, who last week had scored a quick pin against Washington and Lee, matched that performance by pinning Gellet of Duke in 1:24 of the second period and roiling the Tar Heel margin up to a 22-3 count.

In the unlimited match, C. J. Simpson, wrestling his first bout for the Carolina matmen, was decisioned by Heiss of Duke by a 9-1 score, but showed up well against a strong opponent.

"Leave A Little Of The Devil..."

There wasn't much left of the "Devils" when the White Phantoms got through with them Tuesday night, but they did have a request to leave a little of them for State's Red Terrors.

The request came in the form of a telegram to De Van Barbour, head Carolina cheer leader. It read thusly:

Raleigh, Feb. 11.—"Good luck tonight dear 'brothers.' But please leave a little of that Devil for us next Tuesday night. Our Red Terrors are uncommonly Devil hungry." The communique was signed by George Harrell, sports editor of the State Technician.

Thanks, lads. Same to you Tuesday night.—Irwin Smallwood.

Carolina Netmen To Face Tough Season

Phantoms Prep For Tech Tilt

Scott To Start Team That Crushed Duke

After a surprising upset victory over Duke Tuesday night, Carolina's White Phantoms settled down to work yesterday for the last home tilt of the season—the intersectional clash here Friday night with Georgia Tech of the Southeastern conference.

Georgia Tech had little trouble with the two Southern conference teams it played earlier in the year. The Techs trounced South Carolina, 51-34, and Davidson, 44-41.

Coach Tom Scott is expected to ride with the same starting lineup that smashed the Dukes, using Nemo Nearman in the center slot in the place of Hook Dillon, the 1946 All-American. Nearman, a tall freshman from Charleston, W. Va., was the key man in Carolina's defense and offense against the Blue Devils.

Hamilton Hot

Daddy Hamilton, the Phants' Wizard of Weir, upped his conference record to 112 points with his 15 points against Duke and is now riding high among the loop leaders. Coach Scott is grooming Hamilton to play a leading role against the boys from the Flats tomorrow.

Carolina has moved into a tie with Maryland in the conference standings. The White Phantoms have a record of six wins and two losses. State leads the league with a slate of 9-1, followed by Duke with 8-1.

Wagner Stars As Jayvee Quint Rolls Over Lucky Strike, 60-37

Local Forward Scores 26 Points To Lead Hayworthmen To Ninth Straight Triumph

By Gil McLeod

Coach Lew Hayworth's junior varsity cagers continued their winning ways last night by downing Newton King's Lucky Strike five, 60-37, in Woollen gym.

Jayvee forward Ed Wagner, playing his best game of the season, burned the nets for 26 points to grab high scoring honors, and lead his teammates to their ninth consecutive win. Jack Fitch tallied 15 points, for second place, and Lucky Strike's Gordon Carver was third with 12.

Kenny Turner put the Durham quint ahead for the only time during the game when he sank a long set shot after 30 seconds of play. Ed Wagner started his scoring spree five seconds later when he broke through for a lay-up, and by intermission the Hayworthmen were leading, 29-17.

Wagner really turned on the steam in the second half as he added 15 points to his first half total.

Junie Bailey and Jack Fitch played their usual fine defensive ball, and were outstanding under the backboards.

The Box Score:

Jayvees (60)		Lucky Strike (37)
Fitch (15)	f	(12) Carver
Wagner (26)	f	(7) Cheek
Bailey (9)	c	(0) Womble

Substitutes: Jayvees: Von Bramer (2), Swartzburg, Henson (2), Nathan (2), Curtis (2).

Schedule Includes Nine-Day Journey, Five Loop Clashes

By Bob Goldwater

A schedule of 23 matches, two tournaments, and possibly four more encounters faces Carolina's 1947 tennis crew, according to the list released yesterday by Coach John Kenfield.

Certainly one of the toughest slates ever arranged for any Tar Heel team, the card features nine outstanding intersectional clashes at home with teams from the East and Midwest plus a nine-day jaunt that sees the netters perform six times in one week in New York and New England. In addition, five Southern conference engagements, plus the conference tournament, have been listed, with three more loop engagements still tntative.

Open March 29

The net campaign opens Saturday, March 29, when Yale university plays the first of a four-game series with the locals, and continues until the middle of May. After two more tussles with Yale and encounters with Kalamazoo and Haverford, the Tar Heel netmen complete their first week with several entries competing in the annual Sedgefield tournament in Greensboro. During their second week, the racquetmen play intersectional contests with Michigan, Colgate and Cornell, as well as starting their loop slate against South Carolina.

After a one-day jump to Annapolis to oppose the Middies April 19, the netters depart on their long excursion Saturday, April 26, opening that day in Charlottesville, Va., against Virginia. The following Monday sees the team at West Point against the perenially-strong Army outfit and the following four days takes the Tar Heels to two matches apiece in Massachusetts and Connecticut. The team finishes the long grind Saturday, May 3 in New York City against NYU.

Toughest Tilt

Undoubtedly the toughest encounter of the season for Coach Kenfield's charges comes up May 7 when William & Mary's 1946 loop champions invade the local courts. The Southern conference tourney will be held here May 8, 9 and 10.

Current plans call for the netters to begin concentrated practice on March 24, the first day of the spring quarter.

The complete schedule follows:

March 29—Yale, here.
March 31—Yale, here.
April 1—Yale, here.
April 2—Kalamazoo, here.
April 3—Haverford, here.
April 4, 5, 6—Sedgefield tournament, Greensboro.

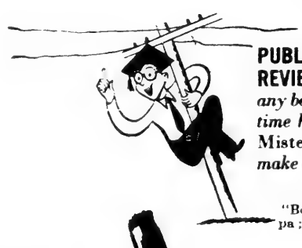
They're Poles Apart on: "What's Best in Esquire?"

We gave some of your classmates a sneak preview of the March issue of Esquire (now on the newsstands) a few weeks back. They couldn't agree on what particular feature was best.

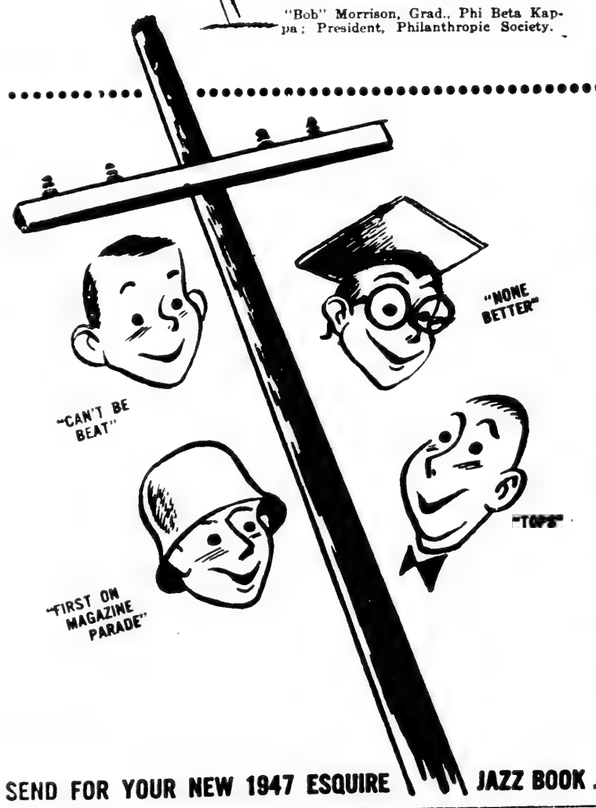


CAGE STAR PREFERS SPORTS "I always read Esquire's sports stuff first, anyway. And in this issue, there are two terrific articles on horse racing I got a big kick out of. Second best is the 'Falling Plasterer.'"

John "Hook" Dillon, '48, Sigma Chi; All-American, UNC Varsity.

EX-SOLDIER PICKS ESQUIRE GIRLS "I don't read all the stories, I admit, but I make up for it in looking at the Glamor Gallery. That one special painting of a beautiful gal playing leapfrog in a pool has my vote . . . and how!"

Johnny F. Jones, Jr., '47, Independent; Manager, Graham Memorial Candlelight Room.



PUBLIC SPEAKER SELECTS BOOK REVIEWS "Book reviewers don't come any better than A. J. Liebling, and this time his reports on the Bitter Season, Mister Roberts, and The Iron Chain make excellent reading."

"Bob" Morrison, Grad., Phi Beta Kappa; President, Philanthropic Society.

MUSICIAN CHOOSES STORY ABOUT A SONG "I practically memorized the Feb. Jazz issue, and in this March number my favorite was the tale of how Sweet Adeline came to be written . . . named . . . and famous."

Ned B. Reap, '49, Independent; Leader, Graham Memorial Dream Serenaders.

but they're all together on: "Esquire is Best!"

Yes, they all had their own favorite among the dozens of Esquire features. The athlete preferred sports; the soldier, the girl; the musician, a story; and the orator, book reviews. But, when it came to choosing their FAVORITE MAGAZINE, Esquire was a unanimous selection.

Coed Senate Appoints Evans Editor of Woman's Handbook

Green Presents Point System to Limit Office-Holders in Student Activities

Ruth Evans, rising senior of Ft. Knox, Ky., was appointed by the Coed senate Tuesday to fill the post of editor of the 1947-48 Woman's Handbook. Evans, who edited the newspaper and literary magazine at Ward-Belmont Junior college, is organizations editor of the Yackety Yack, a member of Coed senate and the Woman's Athletic association.

Point System

Betty Ann Green, chairman of the Senate ways and means committee, presented a tentative system of points to be used in limiting the offices and extra-curricular activities of coeds. The point system was discussed at length and the Senate decided to discuss it further at its next session before presenting it to the coeds for their approval or disapproval.

The present plan was formulated after consultation with various student government and organizations officers and is based on the amount of time required in the respective jobs, not on the prestige of the positions.

It is hoped that men's government will also formulate such a system so that all campus offices will be based on the point system.

The system, as presented by Green, sets 14 points as the maximum to be held by any single student. The positions of president of the Woman's council, Interdormitory council, speaker of the Coed senate, and the editor, managing editor, or business manager of any major campus publication each has a rating of 14 points, with a gradual gradation in points for the lesser offices existing on campus.

Latest Paul Green Drama Will Be Presented In Specially-Erected Williamsburg Theatre

By Sigsbee Miller

Paul Green, playwright, novelist and for 14 years a Hollywood writer, sat back in his library at Greenwood and talked for an hour or more about his new play, which will be produced in a specially-constructed theatre in Williamsburg, Va., next summer.

He also managed to get in a few thrusts toward cigarette advertising, the unhealthy calibre of current film fare and capital punishment (all indications of twentieth century barbarism). It was a typically Paul Green interview.

Practical Idealist

Paul Green is an idealist with practical ideas. Driving in to Chapel Hill from his home two miles outside of town, he was asked, "Do you think that Chapel Hill is, as it has been claimed, the most cultured town in the South?"

He did not answer the question immediately but turned his car down a side street toward a row of tiny Negro houses. He stopped before one of them and pointed to a pair of small black faces pressed against a window pane.

"Both of those children are illegitimate," he said. "Their mothers are prostitutes. I know of this case because I had to come here to tell the madam of the house that a relative had died. I don't know how often it is repeated."

With a sweep of his hand he indicated the campus of the University, a few hundred yards to the south.

PAUL GREEN

"Yes, Chapel Hill is cultured—if you don't mention places like this. But did you know that voodooism is practiced right here in this mecca of culture? I've seen it. What kind of system produces this sort of situation?"

It was the same thing he had been talking about earlier in the morning back at Greenwood.

Revert to Jefferson Doctrines

"We in America have never put our democracy into practice," he said. "We have never grown up to Thomas Jefferson, who was the first great universal mind this country ever produced. Jefferson taught applied Christianity. We must revert to this if we are to survive."

This is what Green hopes to put across in his Williamsburg drama. The play will be on the order of "The Lost Colony," the symphonic drama written by Green for production on Roanoke Island.

"This play will be eighteenth century and it will show the very founding of democracy in America, emphasizing the Revolutionary war. There will be music and choruses, and I hope the play is very beautiful; but it will also be terrible, because some of the things it tells of were terrible. I want to dramatize democracy in dramatizing the character of Thomas Jefferson."

Most Beautiful Theatre

For his new play Green has specified "the most beautiful theatre in the world." Both the theatre and Green's scenario are half finished. The play will be a perennial affair and will probably open in late summer, with players recruited both from the professional stage and Virginia dramatic groups.

The Williamsburg production and "The Lost Colony" are planned as twin enterprises, Green said, adding, "There is no reason why two children in the same family should compete instead of cooperate. Our twin method of advertising the two plays should be beneficial to both Williamsburg and Roanoke Island."

Green is a member of the University dramatic arts department now on indefinite leave. He returned to Chapel Hill last November from Hollywood but says there is no immediate prospect of his returning to teaching.

"It's not that I don't like teaching," he explained, "but I'm working on a novel, have several more in mind, I want to do a small book on tragedy, and I plan to do one or two pictures soon."

Senators Halt White Primary With Filibuster

Talmadge Bill Makes Very Little Headway

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 13—(UP)— A filibuster against Governor Herman Talmadge's white primary bill forced the Georgia Senate to adjourn for the week-end this afternoon without passage of the key measure.

Led by Senator Everett Millican, who had stacked fruit and crackers on his desk for an all-night stand if necessary, implacable foes of the Talmadge-version of the 50-section bill plunged the Senate into wearisome consideration of each section.

But whether the filibuster is continued or not, it appears that the primary bill cannot get final approval before next Tuesday at the earliest. Herman himself tonight says he fears the measure might not win passage before March 1st.

Foundations Begun For New Buildings

Workmen Commence Digging Footings; Army Structures Due Here Next Week

By Ed Joyner

Workmen yesterday began digging footings for the first of 29 Army surplus frame buildings which are soon to be erected on the campus, adding 80,000 square feet of floor space for classrooms and laboratories. First of the buildings will arrive near the end of next week, University engineer A. R. Hollett said yesterday, and erection will start immediately.

Work of dismantling the structures is already in progress at Camp Forrest, Tullahoma, Tenn. Hollett said some are now on their way to Chapel Hill by truck. However, the buildings must be brought by way of Atlanta as curves and mountains block a more direct route.

J. C. Stone, superintendent in charge of construction here for the J. A. Jones Construction Co. of Charlotte, has been supervising the dismantling in Tullahoma but is expected to return today to begin work of erection.

Like Army Day Room

Initial building to go up will be of the Army day room type and one of two structures to be erected on the west side of the library for use as reading rooms. It will not be turned over to the library immediately but will be used as a pay office and tool room for the construction company.

Next in order of construction will be a laboratory for the public health school and the second library building. The latter will be L-shaped, constructed from two army hospital administration buildings.

Thirty-Four Initially Alloted

Thirty-four Army surplus buildings were alloted to the University by the Federal Works administration but several are being joined together as one unit and three are designated as surplus material to be used as incidental building supplies, reducing to 29 the number of units which will be available for use.

Hollett, who selected the buildings in Tullahoma last month, reported that all were in excellent condition. Upon erection, all the buildings will be painted white. The project is expected to be completed in six or seven months.

F. W. A. Paying

The F.W.A. is paying all cost of dismantling, transporting and erecting the buildings. Only cost to the University will be any outside work such as connecting the units with electricity and sewer lines.

Original request of the University was for buildings totaling approximately 150,000 feet of floor space. Additional buildings may be sent here when and if the F. W. A. obtains more funds.

'Wunderkind' at Age of 10...

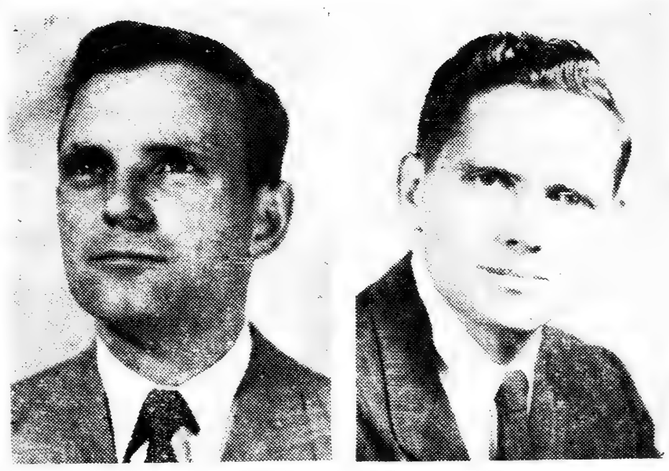
Kindler Abandoned Career To Form National Symphony

The National Symphony Orchestra of Washington, D. C., hailed as one of the six top symphonies of the nation, will play a concert in Memorial hall next Tuesday evening, at 8:30 under the sponsorship of the Student Entertainment Series.

DR. HANS KINDLER

Organized in 1931 by its permanent conductor, Dr. Hans Kindler, the National Symphony is composed of almost a hundred musicians. Kindler, who was challenged by the fact that Washington was the only great capital in the world with no symphony orchestra of its own, chose to abandon his own career as one of the great virtuoso cellists at the height of his reputation in order to organize the National Symphony.

To America in 1914



Born in Rotterdam, Holand, in 1893, Kindler was a "wunderkind" and played in public at the age of 10. Having made his official debut as soloist with the Berlin Philharmonic at 17, he came to America in 1914 and took the post of first cellist with the Philadelphia Orchestra under Stokowski.

Now in Sixteenth Season

Now in its sixteenth season, the National Sympohny's two regular winter series and summer Watergate concerts in Washington are an accepted part of the capital's cultural life.

Admission to the concert will be by season tickets for the Student Entertainment series. Others may buy individual tickets at the Playmaker's business office or Ledbetters-Pickard's.

Legislature Approves Addition Of Four More Polling Places

Johnny Clampitt (right) introduced the bill passed by the Student Legislature last night providing for the addition of four new polling places on campus. Tom Eller, (left), who received the Student party nomination for president of the Student Body last Sunday, centered in the heated debate concerning punching I. D. cards for voting.

Lower Quad, Inn, McIver, Lenoir Will Get Boxes

By Bookie Jabine

After wandering through the evening's business like men in a mist, the Student Legislature last night finally set its sights on the traget and passed Johnny Clampitt's bill providing for four additional ballot boxes to be placed on the campus.

The measure which creates polling places in Lower Quadrangle, McIver, Lenoir hall, Carolina inn, and Gerrard hall was approved by a vote of 17-10. However it was an amendment introduced by Jimmy Wallace and Tom Eller that started the big fuss.

Wallace, upon Eller's recommendation, said the bill should be changed to make it necessary for voters to show their I.D. cards and have them punched before casting their ballots.

Lashing out at the bill, Wallace said that it "showed lack of foresight and mature thought."

Then the fur began to fly, as Johnny Clampitt, head of the elections committee, rose to defend the proposal which he affirmed, "had been carefully thought out by the committee."

The committee chairman accused Wallace of "conceit," that he "should hope to amend the bill on the floor after it had been so carefully considered by the election group."

Said Clampitt of Wallace's action, "It's the height of something or other."

Debate Rages On

The debate raged on as Wallace scathed the bill on the basis that it would prevent no one from voting more than once. Clampitt's stand against the I.D. card system was based on faith in the honor system. Wallace called the bill "stupid," and asserted that "election fraud would run rampant."

At last the body got around to voting on the I.D. card amendment and defeated it, 17-16. There was also a motion to recommit the bill by Bob Stockton who claimed that such a system of voting would lead to "nothing but confusion." This motion was defeated. And the Legislature then passed the original resolution by a 17-10 count.

Charlie Long introduced a bill to authorize organization of freshmen and sophomore classes, specifying that the board of election shall conduct lower class elections on February 20. The method in which this bill was handled drew severe criticism from cloakroom observers.

Before the proposal was brought up, a motion had been passed to adjourn at 9:30 o'clock. Then the discussion became so involved that a motion was passed to extend the time to 10 o'clock. It was at this point that Tag Montague, who had conducted the disputed elections stomped out of Gerrard hall, thus eliminating a quorum, and the meeting stood adjourned.

Charlie Warren bawled out "the uncooperative members" for their "poor spirit." The whole conduct of the assembly was disorderly, and several members expressed comment on what they termed the "fatious manner of answering roll calls, and walking in and out of the hall."

'Take Student to Dinner' Adds $300 to WSSF Drive

Central Committee Members Are Pleased With Results of Contributions at Lenoir

By Ed Long

Total receipts for the two-day "Take a fellow student to dinner" campaign have not yet been tabulated, but the co-chairmen for the WSSF drive, Walt Stuart and Gay Morenus, have announced that over $300 was collected at lunch and dinner Wednesday from Lenoir hall, the Carolina inn and the N. C. Cafeteria.

Pointing out that this does not include yesterday's collections, the central committee has expressed its pleasure at student response so far in the campaign, but said in effect, "We're shooting high and still have a long way to go." The Carolina goal is $5,500."

As announced yesterday over $1,540 has been turned in to the central committee. Solicitors are urged to finish covering their territories and to turn in receipts daily. "Soliciting will continue in dormitories, fraternity and sorority houses and other living units until Monday, and final tabulations will be made on Wednesday of next week," Stuart said.

It has been learned here that the Duke campaign, which was scheduled to start this week with a goal of $5,000, has been postponed, and is now slated to start next week. After tabulations for both Duke and Carolina have been completed, comparative totals are to be published.

According to word received from the national office of WSSF, the large universities in the U. S. A. are getting behind the student relief campaign in a bigger way than ever before.

Wisconsin leads with a chest budget of $20,000, 75 per cent for WSSF.

Illinois set its goal at $12,000 in a separate campaign.

Syracuse and Yale have allotted 30 per cent of their chest budgets of $17,500 and $20,000 to WSSF.

Pittman Art Work Now Being Shown

By Dee Sweat

Included in the Tenth Annual North Carolina Artists exhibit now showing in Person hall is a still-life by Hobson Pittman, prominent North Carolina artist. The painting shows a vase of colorful flowers, half of which is viewed through a thin veil. Done in oil, it is an excellent example of Pittman's work.

Pittman first began his studies in art at the Rouse Art school in Tarboro, later attending Pennsylvania State college, the Carnegie Institute of Technology and Columbia university. From 1930-35 he traveled abroad, studying important museums and galleries.

His work has been exhibited in many American cities, as well as in Paris, London, Venice, Cairo, and other foreign cities.

His oils and pastels have won him numerous awards and distinctions. Among them were Honorable Mention at the San Francisco World's Fair in 1939 and at the New Haven Paint and Clay club in 1946. Mr. Pittman is now lecturing on art at Ogantz Junior college in Pennsylvania.

Independence Needed, Says Leader in Korea

Seoul, Korea, Feb. 13—(UP)—A Korean rightist leader, Kim Koo, told a group of visiting American newspaper editors today that Korea should be granted independence immediately. He blamed the joint American-Russian occupation for what he called the "present state of confusion" in Korea.

Cities of China Ban American Money, Gold

Shanghai, Feb. 13—(UP)—China's runaway inflation has caused several Chinese cities to ban all transportations involving American currency and gold. In one section of Shanghai, citizens raided rice shops because they were unable to buy food at inflation prices.

Dance for Married Students Will Feature 'Stardusters'

The popular Candlelight room "Stardusters" will furnish music for the married students Valentine dance sponsored by Graham Memorial, in the main lounge of the of the student union tonight from 9:30 until midnight. Dress will be optional and bids may be picked up at the Graham Memorial office today and tonight.

The "Stardusters" have become favorites with students by their regular Friday night appearances in the student union's night club, the Candlelight room. Members of the instrumental quintet also contribute to Johnny Jones' floorshow.

Harry Shipman heads the five-star combo with his sax-and-clarinet playing. Jack Burney plays piano, Harry Hinson is bull fiddler, Clifford Doll plays trumpet and Norman Delancy is trombonist.

Young faculty couples will act as chaperones, according to Martha Rice, GM director, and decorations will follow the Valentine motif.

Resentment Rises

Usually there are too many widely-separated factions on this campus to make it possible for them all to get unanimously behind any one movement.

At least, such was the case until two days ago when the new registration system was released for public indigestion. Regardless of their views on any subject, almost every student on the campus has risen to denounce the new system.

If anything will ever arouse the student body from its current apathy, this registration incident will do it. It is time that the students awoke to the fact that they are becoming mere pawns on an educational chessboard—and there are too many pawns to play the game correctly.

The policy of charging all-the-traffic-will-bear is tottering on the verge of a breakdown. In this case, the student traffic cannot bear much more.

Many of us have realized for some time that education as such in the true sense of the word no longer exists here. It has overrun its bounds and is fast becoming a hodge-podge of confusion. The administration can no longer consider the feelings or desire of the students in "insignificant" matters such as what courses they are going to take and when they are going to take them.

And when such becomes true—as it is now—and the students must all suffer because the machinery for educating them has become totally inadequate, it is time for the students to realize they are paying their money and not taking their choice.

North Carolina is not a prep school or a military school. Regimentation is as much out of place on this campus as would be a statue of Benjamin Duke. Yet, because of the overloaded facilities, the administration seems moving more and more towards a policy of regimentation that gives no student any voice in what he is paying for at Carolina.

The new registration system is just an outstanding example of the philosophy in effect on this campus at the present time. It is so drastically wrong that something should be done about it.

The people capable of doing something about it are the students. The furore created by the announcement concerning registration is noteworthy. If the student body can become aroused enough to attempt to do something about regimented, Willow-Run-type education, perhaps there is still hope for improvement.

Sincerity Not Questioned

We do want to make one thing clear. No one can question the sincerity of Mr. Lanier and his faculty committee that drew up the new registration plan.

But sincere as they are, we feel they have made a great mistake. They have honestly tried to derive some method by which the registration system could be speeded up. The new system sounds as if it might possibly do that, but even so, every student we have talked with has told us he would rather stand in line for a couple of hours and have some choice in the matter than to have no choice at all.

It is regretful that a sincere effort to improve matters should turn out so dismally, but we hope that the registration committee will recognize the error of its ways and take congizance of the overflow tide of student resentment.

Political Forces of Western Europe Divided in Two Camps

(Ed. Note: The views presented herein are strictly those of the writers.)

By John W. Bristow and Stuart Lucas

The political forces of western Europe stand divided today into two militant camps: In one camp are the Communists; in the other, the "Christian Democrats" and "Popular" parties of Catholicism. Meanwhile, the Socialist and Conservative parties are split with internal discord.

Neither the Communists nor the Catholics look within their own nation for principle guidance. The Communists turn to Moscow; the Catholics turn to Rome.

The policies of the Communists are generally known, but the aims of the Catholics are more obscure. What are those objectives and how do the Catholics attempt to realize them?

The fundamental guiding order of the Vatican is that the extinction of Catholicism would be the greatest catastrophe ever to overtake the world. Any expedient therefore is justifiable to preserve the Church. Atheistic Communism constitutes Catholicism's most virulent enemy. The Vatican is committed to unyielding opposition to the "rising menace" of Communism.

Furthermore, the Papacy wants to consecrate governments favorable to the Eucharistic mission of the Church. According to this viewpoint, national governments must not interfere with internal Church affairs, with Church control over education, or with the liberal property privileges and tax exemptions granted to the Church in the past.

In what form are these aims of Catholicism best realized? The model "Christian State," as defined in Rome, is best approximated by the Salazar regime in Portugal. This dictatorship has been described several times by the Vatican organ, "Observatore Romano," as fulfilling all Catholic requirements. To a lesser degree, the Franco regime in Spain also represents the model government according to the Church.

As a matter of fact, Franco has restored to the Jesuits and other religious orders all their former possessions, rights, and privileges, and has put the schools under their control again. Furthermore, he has outlawed Freemasonry, has expelled Protestant missionaries, and has forbidden the public practice of any save the Catholic religion.

These are the aims of the Vatican. In varying degrees they are also the aims of the Catholic parties in western Europe; ranging in viewpoint from the Roman Catholic State Party in the Netherlands, which bases its policies on Papal encyclicals, to the predominantly leftist MRP of France.

It is a common illusion that in the Catholic countries of Europe the Vatican has immense power over the people; that the Catholic hierarchy will be able to mobilize the masses and lead them wherever they wish. This illusion ignores the long tradition of anti-clericism which exists in these Catholic countries. This anti-clericism is due in part to the fact that in Italy the Papacy was the last stumbling block to national unification; in France the Clergy were constant foes of the Third Republic; and in Spain and Portugal they have constantly supported the forces of reaction.

The reaction against Papal political control is especially notable in Italy. Before the advent of Mussolini, the Vatican forbade Catholics to vote in parliamentary elections or take part in the central government. Deputies and ministers in the government were to incur excommunication. But despite these pronouncements the Italian people, nearly all of whom are Catholics, continued to vote and hold office. More recently, in last year's plebiscite, even though the Church threw its whole weight behind the house of Savoy, this did not prevent the selection of a republican form of government.

The Vatican has emerged from the war considerably weakened in its political power. Despite the fact that many of its policies are reprehensible to the American ideal of government, Catholicism (and the parties which claim her name) stand today as the main political force opposing Communism. Any non-communist government which is to endure in Europe today must recognize Catholic aims and make concessions accordingly.

Europe seeths today with the same underlying forces that have ravaged her for centuries. Among these is the enduring power of Catholicism. To this picture is added the comparatively new and growing force of Communism. As the consolidating strength of each of these builds, Europe is being divided into an eastern and western block. The peace of Europe demands a reconciliation between these views.

Listen My Children....

Twentieth Century Version Of Paul Revere Runs Wild

By Eddie Allen

Listen my children and you shall hear of the midnight ride.....

Whoa, there, Longfellow. In the first place it wasn't midnight. It was four hours later and Fraternity Court was as quiet as a poker game with three aces showing. Even the PiKA House's nightly seminar on the respective merits of jacks or better had long since closed and the debaters soundly nestled in their trundle sacks. When...

"WHAM! BLAM! The British are coming!"

Thus came this somewhat astounding information punctuated by the clop-clop of a horse's hooves and a frenzied banging on doors and windows on practically every abode in the fraternal sector. It evidently was the 20th century version of Paul Revere, covering every Middlesex, (i.e., Danziger's) village and town to carry his alarming news.

Bedclothes were thrown off, eight-day clocks were discharged, bottles were broken and hastily lapped up, and Fraternity Court was aroused. Maybe this Revere had taken a detour off the Boston Post road. Maybe it was just a Mississippi Revere riding a nag so many UNC students lost on the New Orleans fairgrounds. At least, the alarm had come and every citizen arose, literally, to the occasion.

The PiKA's Art Thomas, a native of Concord, a town near Lexington, was among the first to respond. Grabbing Bill Story's Samoan bolo, he bolted downstairs, a foot ahead of Ted (Stone) Wall, who evidently thought it was Bull Run all over again. Ken Merritt, the local representative of the United Kingdom, thought that Robert At-Lee had come to his rescue, and brought his broad A's to the scene of the excitement.

There seems to be some discussion whether it was the horse or the rider who was beating at the door. Richard, by the way, wasn't there. At any rate by the time the sonambulistic frat villagers had arrived, all that was visible was the equestrian sentinel coursing down moon-lit Columbia avenue. Evidently he was headed for Pittsboro or to go to the Belltower for further instructions (one if by land, two if by Morgan's Creek.)

There was a disappointing postlogue to the whole situation. Someone hinted that maybe it wasn't even Revere after all but just some nocturnal havoc-raiser who will be eating on the mantle piece for the next few weeks. And not because of horseback riding either, if his future fraternity brothers have anything to say about it.

As it was, the lost sleep was hard to regain. And there was little the harassed unfortunates could do. Just try and tell some prof you were up all night with a horse and couldn't study. Not even at N. C. State would that work.

Yesterday morning, even in the absence of hoof prints, there was evidence that there had really been a horse after all. But everything is more believable in the cold light of day, even when the forenoon brought an onslaught of dogs of questionable vintage, a malcontented cow, and even a pig, squealing well-known fraternity songs in perfect sty-lized dialect.

All of which is a pretty story which nobody will believe in years to come. But it really happened.

Okay, Henry Wadsworth, go on with YOUR tall story.

Open Letter to Mr. Lanier

Dear Mr. Lanier:

Your announcement of the proposed change in the University's registration system is receiving much comment today: We students are weighing pro's and con's carefully in an effort to determine whether the new system is of any benefit. This letter is one of the results of our consideration.

The new system claims that it is more efficient and fairer to us than any previous devise by which registration has been accomplished. Concensus proves the opposite: The right and privilege common in colleges all over the country today permits a choice in professors was inadvertantly taken from us last term. As of today we have gone one step farther: we have been told that the primaries have been abolished. Any student would rather stand in line for half an hour or longer if it would permit him to choose between professors and subjects than blindfoldedly reach into the glassbowl to determine his own fate. Below the "benefits" of the new system are summarized:

Advantages: to wit, only one: "Pulling of class tickets for graduating seniors would insure that their required subjects are available to them." No one of our student body would raise an objection if graduating seniors were permitted to register first under our existing registration system.

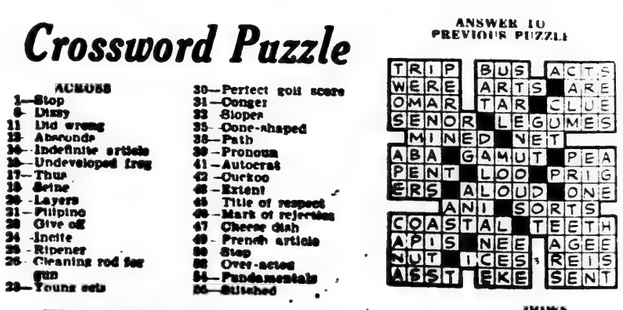
Disadvantages: to wit, three:

1) "A student has no choice between professors".

2) "A student has no choice in the selection of class hours". This is not the army. Some students welcome the fact that they need not get up at an ungodly hour; others are early risers, and still others can absorb most when they start at ten o'clock. This is important to us all as part of student life and we like to regard our personal preferences with a sort of partiality, being human we cannot stand to watch them being molded into plastic efficiency.

3) "I'd rather make my own mistakes than let someone else make them for me" is the opinion of the individual student. Students who carry "bad" schedule now attribute this to their own negligence at registration time: they are not griping.

In conclusion, may we point out that we believe that you and your staff are sincere in your efforts to ameliorate the situation: however, no one can ever convince us that the new system is in the best interest of us students.



Hopefully yours,
PETER H. GERNS

Phants To Battle Georgia Tech Here Tonight

SPORT SPINS - -

IRWIN SMALLWOOD

A GUY NAMED Sherman will be marching against the Georgians here tonight. Meaning, of course, Sherman Nearman, the towering center Coach Tom (Great) Scott inserted into the pivot position against Duke last Tuesday night to transform five White Phantoms into White Phantastics and humble the Blue Devils by a 21-point margin.

Nemo, as he is affectionately referred to by his followers, was starting only his third ball game when he reported for the opening whistle against Duke. He was a major part of a defensive plan of operations devised by Coach Scott and his assistant Pete Mullis in order to curb the offensive power of the Southern conference pace-setters.

And again tonight, when the Tar Heel cagers take on the strong invaders from Georgia Tech, Nearman—whom we are dubbing "The Reach" after his excellent rebound work against Duke—will be in the starting lineup to try to keep the present combine going.

"Georgia Tech has the biggest team we have come up against this season," voiced Scott yesterday. "Their smallest starting man is six, one, and their center is six, eight. We will be starting Nearman again, depending on him in the bucket defensively. We will be depending on the whole team, however, employing speed and ball-handling to best advantage."

A big question mark in everybody's mind is what All-American Johnny Dillon is going to be doing from here on out. And Scott had a good answer for that, to wit: "We're going to use Dillon, plenty. He was slowed up by injuries at the first of the season, and again by a bad blow in the Wake Forest game. So we used Nearman, mainly as a defensive measure, and he did fine. But don't count Johnny out by any means," the smiling Kansan continued. "He will likely be playing as usual by next week, or maybe even tonight if the Techmen wear down the starters I plan to use."

LAYUP NOTES. In conversation about the win over Duke last Tuesday, Scott mentioned the fact that two things that put Carolina on the victory road were Norm Kohler's two straight sets for four points, and Nemo Nearman's block of Ed Koffenberger's shot early in the game. . .Nearman connected for seven out of 14 shots against the Blue Devils, and Jim Hamilton—better known now as the Wizard of Weir—connected for six out of 10 shots in the second half . . . There were several Phantom shots that went in and out for heart-breaking losses, but the one Jim White lost was the most teasing we have seen in ages. The ball came to rest momentarily on the back of the basket and then rolled out. . .At practice yesterday afternoon, when the Tar Heels went through fast defensive maneuvers, there was more spirit displayed than at any time during the season. That victory over Duke—which, incidentally, was the worst defeat the Blue Devils have suffered at the hands of Carolina—must have really been a shot in the arm for the Phants. . .And at the same time, Johnny Dillon was moving back into his own and showing considerable improvement on the backboards and on the defense.

JUST SPORTS. The athletic department extends its thanks to the student body for its cooperation at the Duke game earlier in the week. Everything went over very smoothly, and the sportsmanship was the best. . .The Carolina NROTC rifle team, which defeated Miami university of Ohio just recently, is currently shooting in the nation-wide Randolph Hearst trophy matches. . .Carolina's Clowns, intramural basketball team composed of footballers Charlie Justice, Jim Camp, Joe Wright, Max Spurlin and others, will play two games this weekend.

Contest Slated For 8 O'clock

Jayvees To Battle Ft. Bragg Tonight

By Bob Goldwater

Making their final home appearance of the season, Carolina's White Phantoms temporarily forsake their own conference warfare tonight when they play host to a tall Georgia Tech team. The clash is scheduled to start at 8 o'clock.

In a preliminary tussle starting at 6:15, the Tar Heel jayvee quintet, plays a return encounter against the First Regiment Cannoneers of Fort Bragg.

Same Lineup

The same lineup that performed for over 38 minutes against Duke Tuesday evening will take the floor for the opening jump tonight. The main pointmakers, Jim "Wizard" Hamilton and Bob "Rebounder" Paxton, will be at the forward positions, Nemo Nearman, the sensation of the Blue Devil fray, will open at center, and Norm Kohler and Jim White will handle the guard assignments. Johnny Dillon, Jim Hayworth, Dick Hartley and Taylor Thorne will be the chief reserves.

The Yellow Jackets, one of the leading cage powers in the Southeastern conference, sport the tallest team that has faced Carolina all season, with the starting five averaging well above six feet. High man on the Tech totem pole is Jim Nolan, six-foot, eight-inch center. Other starters include Wes Paxton, high scorer of the club and rated one of the leading players in the conference, and Dick Collier at the forwards, and Herb Bergman, six-foot, four-inch captain and grid star Frank Broyles filling the guard berths.

In the preliminary game, Coach Lew Hayworth is expected to open with Jack Fitch and Ed Wagner at forwards, Junie Bailey at center, and Dan Nyimicz and Harvey Weinstein in the guard slots.

Undefeated VMI Grapplers Meet Locals Tomorrow

Blood, sweat and the like will undoubtedly be the order of the day here Saturday night. For at 8 o'clock the Carolina groaning grapplers will tangle with VMI in the No. 1 meet of the year in Southern conference competition.

Carolina and VMI, both undefeated in loop matches this season, are the top contenders for the SC crown, and the match will be the big test for both clubs. VMI won the last conference tournament, which was held in 1942.

Coach Chuck Quinlan, who is coaching his 21st Carolina wrestling team, sent the matmen through running drills on the outdoor track yesterday afternoon and then worked the men for several minutes each on the mats. The whole team remains intact for the important meet, and Laurie Hooper, star heavyweight, is expected to be ready to go against the Cadets.

Four Tar Heel undefeated records will be put on the block tomorrow night, those of Tommy Hearn, Dick Seaver, Tom Urquhart and Oscar Gupton.

Scholastic Meet Set

Outstanding Schoolboys To Compete Today In First Annual Southern Swimming Event

Schoolboy swimming stars from outstanding schools of this section of the country will treat fans of the water sport with plenty of action in Bowman Gray pool this afternoon, when the first annual Southern Interscholastic swimming meet gets under way. Finals competitions will begin at 4 o'clock.

Staunton Military academy has been established as favorite in the meet today, as a result of an undefeated season in dual meets. The Staunton boys will have some strong competition from the large field of 10 teams and over 100 individual swimmers entered in the meet.

Schools represented in the event include Wilson, Western, and Central high schools, all of Washington, D. C.; Georgia Military Academy and Druid Hills high of Atlanta; Albemarle, Greensboro, Chapel Hill, and Greensboro Currie high, from North Carolina.

Meet Chairman Dick Jamerson, of the Carolina Blue Dolphins, expressed pleasure over the field enrolled for the meet. "We feel that we have made a good start," he said, "and hope to make this a big annual event."

Varsity Swimmers To Meet VMI Team

Carolina's potent swimming team will meet the mermen from VMI in a conference meet tomorrow at Lexington, Va. The Tar Heel swimmers will be favorites to cop their 25th consecutive loop victory.

The jayvees are scheduled for a home tank meet here tomorrow against Staunton Military academy. Staunton has a strongly-rated team and are expected to give the junior Tar Heel mermen a tough battle.

Captain Warren Ficklen will lead the varsity tankmen against the Cadets tomorrow. Some of the outstanding Carolina mermen who are rated among the leading swimmers during the season thus far include Pete Hexner, Norm Sper, Buddy Crone, Bo Jenkins, Bob Hutton, Jesse Greenbaum, Garnett McCoy, Sam McCauley, Dan Breedon, Jerry Cook, Dewey Baultman, and Eston Norwood.

Trackmen Face Duke At Durham Tomorrow

The tracksters will get into informal competition for the second time this season when they journey to Durham Saturday afternoon to hook up with the Blue Devils of Duke.

In case of inclement weather the meet will be transferred to the Tin Can as Duke has their track set up outdoors.

There will be no sprints or hurdles held if the meet is run at Durham. The tentative schedule is as follows: 3:30—pole vault, 330-yard run; 3:45—660-yard run; 4:00 — ¾-mile run; 4:15—1½-mile run; 4:30—broad jump and relay.

Ruth's Condition Listed As "Fair"

New York, Feb. 13—(UP)—Babe Ruth, the "Sultan of Swat," was described in a bulletin from French Hospital early today as being "fair."

Ruth had a "fairly good day" yesterday, the report said. The former home run leader entered the hospital November 26 and had a serious neck operation January 6.

GIRLS' BADMINTON RESULTS

Judy Swain and Burt Carter advanced to the finals of the girls' intramural badminton tourney yesterday by virtue of easy wins over Nina De Berry and Jean Roddy. The two finalists will battle it out for the championship Monday afternoon at 2:30 in the Woman's Gym.

Close Clashes Spark Murals

Agony, Everett Turn In Victories

A quartet of thrill-packed, airtight ball game sparked the mural cage play yesterday as two point victories seemed to be the order of the afternoon.

Agony turned in the top win of the day as it nosed out powerful Aycock No. 1, 33-31, in a contest that was undecided until the last seconds, while potent Evertee was squeezing by Ruffin, 28-26.

Other close tilts saw Kappa Sig No. 1 edge Pi Lam No. 1, 31-29, as Emanons was staving off a last minute rally to defeat Nash, 28-26.

Elsewhere, Chi Psi rolled over DKE No. 2, 37-32, and Med School stopped the Delancy Maulers, 28-14, in purely routine tilts.

NO MURALS TODAY

The intramural games scheduled for this afternoon have been cancelled and will be reslated at a future day.

Following the Georgia Tech clash this weekend the stands will be removed from the Woollen Gym floor and the mural program will swing into high gear for the first time in several weeks.

University Plays Host To over 6,500 Visitors

A total of 6702 visitors to the University campus spent 201 days here last year attending the 43 various short courses and institutes sponsored by the Extension division, a report for 1946 shows. The University played host to meetings of Rotarians, police executives, accountants, bankers, newspapermen, health officials and college center directors almost weekly.

The short courses and institutes supervised by the Extension division are either initiated by the University to fill a recognized need, grow out of a year-round service to an organization, or else are held at the special request of an organization. When sponsoring meetings of such associations as the bankers and the accountants, the division acts in a liason capacity between the organization and the University department directly concerned.

Coed Room Reservation Must Be in by March 1

All women who have not reserved summer term rooms by March 1 will not be allowed space in the dormitories. The office of the Dean of Women has made this rule because of the large number of summer school reservations that have already been made.

Group Proposes 6 Billion Dollar Cut in Budget

Congress May Vote Action Next Week

Washington, Feb. 14—(UP)— A joint committee of 102 Congressmen has told President Truman it thinks he ought to be able to run the government next year on six-billion dollars less than his estimate. The committee voted 50 to 22, with 30 members abstaining, to cut President Truman's budget to $31,500,000.

Approval of this cut came after the committee had voted down two proposals specifying use of the money that would be saved. Democratic Senator Green of Rhode Island, asked the group to require that the whole cut be used to reduce the national debt. And Republican Senator Knowland of California wanted half the saving applied to debt retirement. But both proposals fell by the wayside. The House is expected to vote on the committee's action next Wednesday, and the Senate probably will take action by next Friday.

New Dorm Construction Moving Rapidly; Two May Be Ready for Occupancy Next Fall

By Sigsbee Miller

Construction of three new dormitories for men at the corner of Raleigh street and Raleigh road is gaining rapid headway in the face of eased labor problems and improved weather conditions, and at least two of the buildings will be ready for student occupancy by next September, W. E. Swain, building superintendent, said yesterday.

Blueprint plans for the million-dollar project for three four-story dormitories of brick, concrete and steel, each with 95 student rooms. Each student room, with two built-in closets, will be an average of 13x14 feet in size. The number of students to occupy each room has not been announced.

Social Lounge, Game Room

In addition, a social lounge will be included on the first floor of each dormitory, with a game room in the basement. All floors will be of terrazzo, a type of marble. The plan of architecture is similar to that of nearby Lewis and Alexander dormitories, but the new buildings will be considerably larger than either of the other two. All of the fourth floor rooms will have dormer windows.

Names have not yet been designated to the dormitories. Dormitories A and B are between Woollen gymnasium and Alexander, and Dormitory C is between Alexander and Lewis. Construction is being carried on under a system of rotation, which Swain says will speed the building and cheapen the costs. Thus, the first story is nearly complete on Dormitory A, the first story walls are beginning to go up on Dormitory B, and the first floor is complete on Dormitory C. It is hoped now, Swain said, that the first two buildings will be ready for students by the beginning of the 1947 fall quarter. The other dormitory will be completed by the beginning of the following winter quarter.

Many Hindrances

Construction was started last August 3 but has been held up by a shortage of skilled labor, inclement weather and unexepected discovery of a layer of rock that had to be blasted.

During the fall quarter student labor was utilized considerably. The general construction contract was let to Thompson and Street Co. of Charlotte for slightly more than a million dollars but the final cost, Swain estimated, will run to one and a half millions with the installation of plumbing, heating and other equipment.

Each of the buildings will be 204 feet long and 44 1-2 feet wide. H. R. Weeks of Durham is the architect.

Ramsay, community relations representative of the Congress of Industrial organization Organizing committee, is in charge of the talk centering around Social Justice, A Christian Goal.

Three meen will lead the students studying the kinship between Judaism and Protestantism. Rabbi Abraham Feinstein will speak for the Jewish religion, Dr. Clyde A. Milner, president of Guilford college, for the Protestants, and an unannounced leader for the Catholics.

Dr. Raymond Seeger, who was present at the Bikini atom bomb tests, will lead the group on Science and Religion. All interested students will be given an opportunity to register for these seminars.

Dormitories, fraternities, sororities and clubs will use the conference leaders in their meetings during the week. Some of the groups who have already requested speakers are Spencer dormitory, Delta Psi, Beta Theta Pi, Sigma Chi, the Dialectic senate, the International Relations club, and various church groups.

Anyone else interested in having Religion in Life speakers to special meetings during the week are asked to contact Dewey Dorsett, chairman of the organized houses and club committee.

Fiery-Thatched Ben Rouzie Proves to Be Human Dynamo

By Ken Rothwell

Ben Rouzie, a senior from Richmond, Va., as recently-elected chairman of the local chapter of the American Veterans committee, has assumed leadership of the sole national veterans organization active on this campus.

Twenty-five year old Ben, a veteran of the Army Air forces, joined the Richmond chapter of AVC last spring following his discharge from the service.

Citizens First, Veterans Second

"Like most others in AVC I joined because this is a veterans organization for those of us who don't like groups patterned along traditional lines. This is perhaps best summed up in our AVC motto, 'Citizens first, veterans second," said Rouzie.

A political science major Rouzie has already been active in politics in his native state of Virginia. Last spring he headed publicity for the Hutchinson-for-Senate veterans committee. Hutchinson opposed Senator Harry F. Byrd in the democratic primaries.

Prior to his war service Rouzie attended the University of Richmond. Despite a part-time job as cub reporter on the Richmond Times-Dispatch he managed to find time to become student government senator-at-large, a job at Richmond second only to president of the student body. In addition he was leader of the student co-op party.

BEN ROUZIE

While in the service Rouzie, who also holds papers in the merchant marine, served as chief engineer on an Army Air Forces crash boat. He recalls with amusement the sensation which his fiery red hair caused in various Central American towns.

"I hope while serving as chairman of AVC here to make the organization an even more potent force than it became under the capable leadership of Winston Broadfoot. We'd like to see every veteran on the campus get into the fight with us," said Rouzie.

WSSF Drive Takes in $1,870

Drive Will Continue By Religious Groups

To date $1,870 in contributions for the World Student Service fund campaign have been turned in to the WSSF central committee, according to Walt Stuart, co-chairman for the drive.

The committee has announced that contributions received through today will be tabulated and published in tomorrow's Daily Tar Heel. It was also announced that no solicitations in the YMCA booth will be made after Monday.

Religious groups over the campus are planning to continue the "Take a fellow student to dinner" drive in their meetings aver the weekend. Students who have meals at the meetings are being asked to pay double for them.

Other groups which have voted to take offerings for the WSSF are completing their activities, and their contributions, along with those from dormitories, fraternity and sorority houses and other living places will be announced tomorrow.

Artist Representative Says Men Now Prefer Girls with Robust Gams

By United Press

There was a time when Marlene Dietrich had both feet planted so squarely under a title that nobody even thought of challenging her.

The title, of course, was the girl with the world's most beautiful legs.

Marlene's legs have not changed. But times have. And so, it seems have men's ideas on what constitutes gam glamor.

Anyway, Barry Stephens, a New York and Chicago artists representative who makes his living just looking at women's underpinnings says Marlene's legs no longer rate the world's championship.

Too skinny, says Stephens. That's just the word he used—skinny. Not even gentle enough about it to say slim.

Since the war, says Stephens, men's ideas—and their eyes—have turned to girls with more robust legs. Stephens doesn't pick any one girl as champion. He picks five. And every one of them is either on the stage or in the movies. They are Alice Faye, Ann Miller and Betty Grable, all film actresses; dancer Flora Stuart and Beryl Davis, the English singer who is now in Hollywood.

Dietrich no longer is champion. She doesn't even place. But she can still show those ex-million dollar legs.

Sam Selden Is Author Of Two Recent Works

Samuel Selden, director of the Carolina Playmakers, has had two new books published by F. S. Crofts and Company in the past two months, "An Introduction to Playwriting," which appeared on December 15, and "First Steps in Acting," which appeared on January 20.

In addition to these books Selden has had three others published within the past year; a book on the organization of community theatres which he edited for the National Theatre Conference, a University Sesquicentennial volume in the preparation of which Mr. Selden served as a principle editor and a revised edition of a former textbook by him.

At present Mr. Selden is editing an anthology of international folks plays which were chosen from his Playwriting courses here. He is the author of three other books on the theatre which are widely used as textbooks in colleges throughout the nation, "Stage Scenery and Lighting," "A Player's Handbook," and "The Stage in Action."

Henrik F. Infield Will Talk Monday On Palestine Life

Dr. Henrik F. Infield, renowned authority on the cooperative movement in Palestine, will lecture on the "Cooperative Life in Palestine" Monday evening at 8 o'clock, on the fourth floor of Alumni. Sponsored by the Hillel Foundation of the University, the lecture and March of Time film will highlight what is now a front page issue.

Infield will discuss the present tension in Palestine which holds the fact that despite oppression and insecurity the Jewish community is carrying on not only its normal existence, but is constantly progressing. Dr. Infield escaped to Palestine from Hitlerized Vienna. There, he was able to make a first hand study of the Hebrew pioneering effort, and in his book "Cooperative Living in Palestine," he relates the story of these people who have resurrected the desert.

Dr. Infield is a frequent lecturer at Columbia University, Vassar College and other institutions.

Talmadge Seems Concerned By Senate Filibuster Tactics

Housewife Turns Senator, Gets Quotation From 'Romeo and Juliet' Thrown at Her

Atlanta, Feb. 14—(UP)—Georgia's so-called "white primary" bill is stymied until next week, and the state senators who have been working it over for the past two weeks have packed up and gone home.

As for the bill, even Governor Herman Talmadge is concerned by the dilatory tactics which a minority group of senators have called upon to delay action.

In congressional parlance, these tactics are called a filibuster. The way the senate is doing it, you could call it a discourse upon everything ranging from bird dogs to the odors of dead mules.

At any rate, Talmadge has issued an encouraging statement to his forces to hold their lines and beat back the filibuster.

Mrs. Iris Blitch, a housewife turned senator, came up against her first filibuster and had a uotation from Bard's "Romeo and Juliet" tossed at her. Her exchange with Senator E. F. Griffith went like this:

Says Her Piece

Said Mrs. Blitch: "Since you admit your talk will not change any member of this body, will you deter and spare us and the taxpayers this time and money?"

Griffith turned to the lady, bowed low and said: "Methinks the lady doth protest too much."

The white primary bill, which seeks to skirt a United States Supreme Court ruling declaring that Negroes are entitled to vote, has been overwhelmingly adopted in the house.

But rebellion has broken out in the upper house where greater numbers of Talmadge opponents are entrenched.

One of them, Grady N. Coker, a white primary advocate, gained the floor brandishing a Bible. He quickly read: "He that keepeth his mouth keepeth his life; but he that openeth wide his lips, shall have destruction."

Munches Apple

Senator R. G. Daniell munched on an apple waiting his turn to speak. A limit of one hour had been imposed under Senate rules. All the while Talmadge forces has sought to end the delays.

For A Better Education

The letter that appeared in yesterday's issue of the DTH ably set forth the student complaint that the new registration system sacrifices student choice. If we go a bit further into the matter and examine some of the reasons for the complaint, the issue takes on even more significance.

A professor's most qualified critic is the student. Notwithstanding his string of degrees, his published works, the papers he has read to various societies, the class-room is the payoff—literally and figuratively, as concerns the student. It has oft been said that the present student body is more mature than previous ones, nevertheless that reiteration does not detract from the truthfulness of the statement; we must readily admit that the students today are more discerning, more critical, and more skeptical. Consequently, professors are more closely scrutinized and there is great sentiment against taking classes under professors who are unqualified, and/or, poor lecturers.

One of the evils of the rapid expansion of the teaching staff is the acquisition of "teachers who do not measure up to the academic standards of previous years. American colleges and universities cannot truthfully say that their teaching staffs have not declined in quality as a result of this great expansion. The obvious question follows: Are not the colleges making a mistake by adding below standard teachers just to supply the demand? Will not the students and the colleges suffer more in the long run if they continue to do so? Will not the college of the future be staffed by inefficient, unqualified "deadwood" on which to build.

In conclusion, any student worthy of the appellation should demand to know the background and qualifications of his professors. His university should be the first to welcome such interest and help him in his search for a better education.

Intelligent Statement

In an effort to get still more opinion on the controversial registration system, we asked the president of the student body for a statement since he can speak intelligently on the subject.

He expressed his belief that the students should have the right to choose their own instructors as well as their own class hours. These two principles are the crux of the whole matter and, as this newspaper has already stated, are two big enough reasons to consider the new system unacceptable to the students.

The statement follows:

Dewey Dorsett, student body president: "The new registration system, though designed to save time and to be fairer to all students, nevertheless denies to us choices of both professors and time of classes—rights which each one of us should have.

"Accordingly, I shall see both Chancellor House and Mr. Lanier and urge them to use the same system which was used last quarter and to reinstate on the class schedules the names of the instructors of all classes."

In Graz, Austria, students live on 1,200 calories a day while Viennese students live on the urban average of 750. This contains no meat, no flour, no vegetables, no butter, no milk.

One-half of the University of Oslo's 6,000 students are unable to find satisfactory lodgings.

Of 8,800 students at the University of Belgrade in 1940, 4,478 lost their lives. 12,000 now jam this University and food, clothing, and shelter are very insufficient.

Brews and Views Discussed With Dan by DTH Columnist

By Jud Kinberg

Just when I had given up hope that Dan the Dog would ever again prance through this column, he raced up to me yesterday, put out a paw and blew a friendly smoke ring in my face.

"You're lucky I was blind with Christmas cheer," said The Dog Dan, "when you classified me as a 'mongrel.' I've had some juicy offers to go with Winchell, but I've decided to steak with you."

"Dan, old buddy, I've missed you. Have a cigar."

"None of your junior executive type. Ever since Irwin Smallwood and Carmichael called you a hot-rock dresser, I've noticed you've given up While Owls for the 25 cent cheroots. Getting out of touch with your audience, aren't you?"

"Not an iota of truth in it, Dan. I'm merely smoking the big black ones to help me get into training."

"Not going out for the corn-popping team, again, are you? I heard you'd been disqualified when they found you popping for pay at the local sideshow."

"No, Dan," I said. "No, these cigars are part of the regime to get me in shape for next week's Daily Tar Heel-Carolina Magazine Beer Drinking and Burping Contest."

"Ahah," barked my canine companian, "I thought there were a lot of empties going out the back door of Graham Memorial. So that explains it. You've been. . ."

"You've guessed it, Dan. I've gotten my daily quota up to a full case—and that's with pretzels."

"Kinberg, I never dreamed what capacities you had."

"Tut, tut, Dan. It's really nothing, "I insisted, hiding my blushing head under the nearest beer bottle. "When I told you my father was Master of a Skooner, I didn't mean a sailboat. Why, in his good days he often knocked off a keg of bock between the appetizer and entree at dinner."

"What a pedigree," Dan exclaimed, visibly impressed. "But tell me about this coming shindig."

"Well, it seems the DTH has gotten ahold of a ringer from one of the Milwaukee schools. This character is handicapped by the National Guzzlers of America at 26 bottles and has broken every course record for the Chugalug. Name's Schaap."

"Sounds like the Daily Tar Heel boys have brewed quite a plot—or pot, as the case may be. By the way, for which team will you be competing?"

"I'm going down the line and under the table with the Magazine, Dan. I won't desert my friends, even in their bitter days."

"Noble sentiments, laddie, but have you devised any system to see that this Schaap character does not guzzle his way to victory?"

"You've guessed it, Dan. This Milwaukee Mastodon failed to reckon with my warped mind. He has a weak spot, and I, J Kinberg, have searched it out. He downs a brew so quickly that half the bottle is filled with foam. I'm going to insist on Eastern Intercollegiate Drinking Rules. . . .the bottle will have to be emptied, foam and all."

"Diabolical, Dr. Moriarty, diabolical."

"Glad you like it, Dan. Now I must go back in and run my boys through some time trials. I've started them out on straight corn liquor and am gradually tapering them off to the 3.2. We need more training, as I understand none of the DTH squad are soft touches. Such celebrated inebriates as Woestendiek, Giduz, Smallwood, Allen and Heffner (Ed note: he's kidding, of course) are being groomed by the paper for the contest. Then to, it's on their home court where they've never been outbeered or outburped."

"Sounds ominous. But I have faith in you, JK. Get in there and guzzle. We want this one for the old Nipper."

In Defense of the System

February 13, 1947

Dear Sir:

I have just been reading in your paper of the great opprobrium that has been heaped upon the so-called "Lanier Plan" of registration, some of which has, inadvertently perhaps, spilled over on Mr. Lanier himself. As one who had no part in drawing up the proposed plan, I would like to suggest three points:

1. I have been connected with the University for a good many years. If I were drawing up a list of faculty and administrative people who have the interests and well-being of students in mind, Mr. Lanier would top my list. To mention one minor incident, I have known him to spend a weekend in coaching a poorly prepared student for whom he was in no wise responsible. The number of students whom he has helped to make adjustments, financial and otherwise, in the last fifteen years is probably equal to the current enrollment in the University.

2. The obvious situation is that we have adequate facilities for 5,000 students while we have 7,000 enrolled. It may be that the University made a mistake in not limiting enrollment to 5,000. If it had adopted such a policy, 2,000 people now here (probably including some who are so unhappy over the registration) would not be here. The proposed plan is simply an effort worked out by a committee that has studied the matter for many months to ration fairly a scarce commodity.

3. It would seem that the mature attitude in keeping with the current character of our student body would be to give the plan an adequate trial. Then if it proves itself to be as unsatisfactory as some think, it can readily be discarded.

Sincerely,
CECIL JOHNSON
Adviser

Regimentation

Dear Sir:

I wish to echo the sentiments of Mr Jud Kinberg in his column in yesterday's DTH concerning the new registration system.

Another point which seems not to have occurred to the members of the administration is the plight of those who work. Many of the people who work have jobs at particular hours. They must have classes at certain hours to agree with this work schedule. I realize that as the plan was announced it did contain provision for certain "hardship" cases but the way in which this provision was stated seemed to indicate that schedule changes would be few and far between. There are a great number of people who work and I imagine that in the majority of cases there would be a conflict between work and school.

It has been my understanding that anyone who desired to work his way thru Carolina was free to do so, in fact, was encouraged to do so. But with the advent of the new "registration" plan, this seems no longer true. The person who wishes to work must fight through a maze of bueaucracy. It seems to me that if Carolina is to be changed like this, the majority of us who are here because we liked what Carolina stood for should look for education elsewhere.

WILLIAM H. STEWART

Suggested Remedy

Dear Sir:

That the Daily Tar Heel is unfair, unethical, and untrue in some of its reportorial accounts is apparent from the article 'DTH Heads Upheld by Phi Assembly.'

It is regrettable that the DTH should have an attack against the policies of the editors gain such note as to warrant the story becoming the lead article, but far worse is a supposedly unbiased, fair account of proceedings that gives the readers opinions that should be moulded by editorials and not by news articles.

There is nothing wrong with the Daily Tar Heel that a good election cannot change.

Most sincerely,
JOHN T. KERR

Carolina Merry-Go-Round

By Bob Jones and Bill Robertson

The recent incident in which one of the trustees of our university requested that Dr. Guy B. Johnson of the sociology and anthropology department be dismissed is an incident that should certainly receive the closest attention of the student body.

We do not know too much about what goes on at the meetings of the board of trustees, but we do know that the decisions made by that body directly affect our welfare.

Further, those of us who belong to campus organizations know that arguments have been made from time to time against the taking of liberal positions on racial questions and those concerning organized labor, on the grounds that they might offend certain people who wield economic power in this state.

These arguments are open admissions that our university is not as free as we should like it to be.

Controller Carmichael has conjectured that "the race discussion" began as a result of the appearance of a Negro singer, Miss Dorothy Maynor, before an unsegregated audience. It is interesting that such a conjecture can be made in the year 1947 in the state of North Carolina. Perhaps it explains why this is Negro History Week—a week dedicated to a study of the contributions of the Negro people to our country.

At any rate, it is certain that any person who uses such a vague and abstract term as "conglomeration" to describe a possible development in the racial problem as did the abovementioned member of the board of trustees could learn something of a scientific nature from the sociology and anthropology department.

Lowest Blow of All

My letter to the Editor
Comes in the form of verse
I wish to make a protest
About our latest curse.

First our beloved advisors
Erased our right to pick
The profs of our own chosing
And it brought no major kick.

Then came the lowest blow of all
The right to choose the time
We wished to take our courses
And hence—this little rhyme.

Of course, the lines were boring
And we heard a gripe or two,
But at least we had the class cards
That we wished when we were through.

So I say let's vote this system
Back to whence it came
And let our choice of classtime
Remain the very same.

What Do YOU Say?

By Harry Snowden

Today's Question

What is your opinion of the new registration system?

The Answers

It is impossible for me to express fully my contempt for the whole system, limiting myself to civilian terminology. The administration seems intent on killing student initiative and prostituting the liberal reputation of the university.—Edward Blankstein, Greensboro.

The new system is wholly for the purpose of making it easier for the administration, disregarding the students' feelings. In my personal opinion it stinks.—B. T. Hill, Wadesboro.

Carolina is supposed to be a liberal institution of learning. With such new ideas of student regimentation Carolina will eventually lose much of its academic prestige. This new system is entirely unfair to the student, and, after all, is the university not run for the student?—Robert Baxter, Columbus, Ga.

The new system appears to be easy for the officials and "rough" for the students.—Emile M. Saleeby, Wilmington.

Carolina is fast losing its reputation as one of the most liberal institutions in the country. The new registration system certainly doesn't advocate liberalism.—Vivian Wise, Latta, S. C.

The freedom of the student to select his professors is paramount in regard to effective education. No matter how devoted a student may be to his subject, the personality of the professor is the deciding factor as to the impression gained by taking the course. I have been sung to sleep enough. I should like to choose my own minstrel.—Roger Hall, Plainfield, N. J.

It fails to let students choose the professors they want and sometimes they came for their special classes. The other system wasn't perfect, but this is unfair.—Lurline Byars, Marion, S. C.

I am thoroughly dissatisfied with this new system. It reminds me of an old Navy rule, "Never do as you think, but do as you are told." The spirit of military domination is drifting into Carolina.—Wayland Maddrey, Weldon.

I think that it penalizes the students who organize their work with definite objectives in mind and who choose as far as possible their courses and instructors. It certainly favors those who are more lackadaisical in their plans.—Harold A. Keen, Raleigh.

Tar Heel Matmen Battle VMI Here Tonight In Crucial Test

Teams to Risk Perfect Slates

Victor Will Remain At Top of Circuit

By Irwin Smallwood

The two remaining undefeated wrestling teams in the Southern conference tangle here in Woollen gym tonight at 8 o'clock, when the Tar Heel grapplers of Coach Chuck Quinlan play host to VMI, potent mat crew from Lexington, Va.

Carolina holds a 5-0 record in loop competition, and VMI has a 4-0 sheet to date, not including yesterday's clash with N. C. State. VMI was the winner of the last conference tournament held before the war, and the visitors tonight are ranked as the top choice to take the title this year. However, the Tar Heels have defeated all their SC foes to date, and on a basis of their improvement are being mentioned as the team to turn back the Cadets. It will be Carolina's last loop meet.

Both Beat Duke

Both Carolina and VMI hold victories over Duke this season, and the match-for-match score was the same in the two meets. VMI's 128 and 136-pounders were defeated by Duke, while the Tar Heel matmen in those weights triumphed. However, the VMI 121-pounder turned back the Duke man who beat Carolina's lightweight, and the heavyweight did likewise.

Coach Quinlan's four undefeated men, Tom Urquhart, Co-Captains Tommy Hearn and Dick Seaver, and Oscar Gupton will all be trying for their sixth consecutive victory of the year against the Cadets. These unbeaten men fight in the 128, 136, 145 and 165-pound divisions respectively. Others to wrestle tonight, in addition to those already mentioned, are Doug Thompson at 121, Irv Zirpel at 155, Bill Kemp at 175, and Laurie Hooper heavyweight. Hooper is wrestling his first match since suffering an ankle injury in the Davidson fray here. His presence on the team will bolster the chances of the Tar Heels considerably.

Individual Scores

In their five matches this season, Carolina has piled up an aggregate of 114 points, as against 34 for their opponents. And leading the scoring parade are the team's co-captains in the No. 1 and No. 2 positions. Hearn has scored 19 markers and Seaver 17. Other leaders include Zirpel and Kemp with 16 each, and Urquhart and Gupton with 15 each.

Blue Dolphins Face VMI Team Today; Ringmen Oppose Citadel in Loop Clash

Tankmen Seeking Second Loop Win

Carolina's Blue Dolphins will go after their 25th consecutive conference victory this afternoon when Coach Dick Jamerson's charges journey to Lexington, Va., to swim against the VMI tank team.

The local mermen will be trying to raise their season's average above the .500 mark in today's meet, currently sporting a 2-2 record against tough competition. The Dolphins are undefeated in one conference encounter this year.

Revised Lineup

Coach Jamerson will start a revised lineup against the Cadets, due to several regulars being unable to make the journey. The Tar Heels will be strongest in the 200-yard breaststroke, where Pete Hexner and Jerry Cook will handle the assignments, and in the 300-yard medley, where Norm Sper, Dan Breeden, and co-captain Warren Ficklen will swim.

Leading performer for the Cadets is Bill Carrigan, conference champion in the 50 and 100-yard free styles.

Carolina's probable lineup:
50—Herr and Perry.
100—Greenbaum and Elliott.
220—Hutton and McCauley.
440—Norwood and Scheinman.
150 back—McCoy and Johnson.
220 breast—Hexner and Cook.
Diving—Sper and Swigart.
300 medley—Sper, Breeden and Ficklen.
400 relay—Beam, Carnes, Truitt and Elliott.

Jayvee Mermen Face Staunton Team Today

Carolina's jayvee tank squad will oppose Staunton Military academy, winners of the Southern Interscholastic swimming meet yesterday, in Bowman Gray pool this afternoon starting at 2:30 o'clock.

The jayvee lineup will have Barth and Erle in the 50-yard free-style, Dietzel and Snow in the 100, Whichard in the 220, Cohen and Pell in the diving, McKenzie, Pell and Sutton in the 150-yard medley, and Langele, Whichard, Barth and Dietzel, in the 200-yard relay.

Trackmen to Compete On Duke Boards Today

Dale Ranson's Tar Heel tracksters will invade Duke today to engage in the second of a series of informal meets on the Blue Devil's outdoor board track.

The meet will be a preparatory affair for the Fifth Annual Southern Invitational games to be held here March 1, and no official score will be kept.

Coach Ranson is expected to carry with him pole vaulters Leroy Ward and E. C. Russell; middle-distancers Don Nelson, Tommy Turner, Dick Hollander, Alvin Smith, Halstead Holden, and Bill Halsey; distance runners Walt Francis, Mark Burnham, John Bristow, Sam Magill, Frank Hardy and Jim Hunt; and high jumpers Bill Joyner, Joe Corpening, Doug Smith, Chunk Simmons and Fred Saunders.

Sprinters and hurdlers will make the trip to appear in the relay events.

Jayvee Cagers Top Fort Bragg, 51-43, For Tenth in Row

By Morty Schaap

Carolina's Jayvee's took their tenth straight win in the preliminary tilt last night by downing the 4th Signal Batallion Quintet from Fort Bragg, 51-43.

The men of Lew Hayworth found the going tough in the first half as Lowther of the visitors, time and time again broke under the basket to sink shots or pass off to his teammates.

The Tar Heels (JG) had to make up a 28-22 half-time deficit and they came through with long shots by Dan Nymicz and driving shots from under by Fred Swartzburg to catch the tiring Army five.

The Jayvee's pull the iron man stunt today by playing two games, meeting the Wilmington College Center in Woollen at 2 o'clock and then journeying to Durham to meet the Duke Blue Imps tonight.

The box score.

Halftime score: 4th Sig. Bat 28, Jayvees: 22.

Two New Starters In Boxing Lineup

Set for a conference clash with The Citadel Bulldogs at eight o'clock tonight in Charleston, the Tar Heel Blue Bombers embarked on their trip yesterday afternoon after finishing up a week of heavy drills.

Taking a squad of eight men, Coach Ronman left Chapel Hill at four o'clock to spend the night in Charleston. They will complete a light workout in The Citadel field house this morning and fight this evening.

Charlie Norton, classy 145-pounder, was unable to make the trip due to a heavy cold and Coach Ronman has been grooming Dick Weintraub in his place. Weintraub fought in intramurals this fall and showed a great deal of promise at the time. He is an aggressive fighter and is very steady despite his lack of ring experience.

Another new scrapper on the squad is Hubert McKeithan, who will be the starter in the 135-pound division. Although he came out late, McKeithan worked out all fall and winter. Ronman praised his poise in the ring and stated that with more experience, he would develop into an excellent boxer.

Tonight will be the Ronmanmen's fifth encounter of the season and they will be out to bring their record up to two victories as against three defeats. Both teams met the South Carolina Gamecocks earlier in the season, with the Tar Heels making an impressive triumph while the Bulldogs settled for a draw.

Locals Make 22 of 25 Fouls To Win Last Home Contest

Jim White Paces Scottmen With 15 Points; Paxton, Hamilton Also Star in Rough Tilt

By Bob Goldwater

With no governors to control their scoring, the White Phantoms rolled to a 58-48 triumph over Georgia Tech here last night in their final home appearance of the 1947 campaign.

Led by their classy guard, Jim White, who was playing his last game in Woollen gym and celebrated with a total of 15 points, the locals registered their 13th success of the season in winning their 11th tilt at home. The contest was actually won at the foul line, where the Tar Heels tallied the sensational total of 22 out of 25 throws to provide their 10-point margin.

Paxton Scores 13

Carolina began its heavy scoring punch after seven minutes had elapsed, forging into a 7-6 advantage on a charity throw and one-handed set by Bob Paxton, whose 13 tallies and control of the boards played a big part in the triumph. Dick Collier's layup brought the Yellow Jackets back into a 9-9 deadlock, which Nemo Nearman promptly broke at 10:10 with his first hook of the evening to give Carolina a lead it never lost.

For the following five minutes, the margin alternated between one and three points, with White's two foul shots giving the home quintet an 18-14 advantage as the tussle passed the 15-minute mark. Wes Paxson narrowed the gap with a two-pointer, but Jim Hayworth's foul toss and White's snowbird shot, after a Paxton pass covering half the length of the court, ran the count to 21-16. Three Tech goals and two Carolina baskets resulted in an intermission mark of 25-21, Carolina.

Seven Points in Row

The Phantoms virtually iced the game at the start of the second half by pouring in seven straight tallies before the Techmen registered a free throw after four minutes. The Scottmen kept the margin in the vicinity of 10 for over six minutes, the Engineers gradually cutting the advantage shortly after 10 minutes on successive baskets by Collier.

With the score reading 42-37 at the 13-minute mark, Johnny Dillon, taking over at center after Nearman had fouled out, hooked one through the cords to start the Carolina scoring movement on the right road again. Norm Kohler contributed a long set and Dillon registered another of his specialty shots to give the Tar Heels a comfortable 48-40 lead with five minutes to go. Every Phantom contributed at least one two-pointer during the remaining time and Collier's one-hander from mid-court as the final gun went off served only to narrow the final margin to 10 tallies.

Finale for Hamilton

Jim Hamilton, also making his farewell appearance before the Woollen crowd, ran his count into double figures as usual with 10 to his credit. Jim Nolan, six-foot, eight-inch center, was high for the visitors with 15, with grid star Frank Broyles scoring 11.

White had a perfect score in charity throws, making seven for seven. Paxton was close behind with seven for eight. Carolina averaged .276 in field goals while Tech made .256.

The Tech starters played the entire first half with no substitutes coming in until five minutes had gone by in the second half.

Raleigh...

Feb. 14—(UP) — Bandleader Kay Kyser brightened a rather dull session of the House of Representatives today, and told the legislators that "things look pretty good for my being able to get back here permanently pretty soon." The Rocky Mount musician of radio and moving picture fame shied away from rumors that he had any Gubernatorial aspirations, and did not mention his favorite project—the State Medical Care Commission's good health program.

Huske says the state ports authority wants to buy the shipyard outright, and adds "it looks as though somebody in the government is trying to sell the shipyard right out from under our noses."

Gastonia Police Break Wave of Family Crimes

Gastonia, Feb. 14—(UP)—Gaston county police are calling on the public to help them catch a family of thieves that might have stepped from the pages of Dickens.

Principal characters in the cast are three small children. But behind the scenes are their parents who did the training and get the rake-off.

Here's the way police describe one of many typical operations that has paid off in various towns over a period of several weeks.

Three children, dressed to look lean, hungry, and neglected, sadly appear at the door of a house asking for something to eat. When the householder goes to the kitchen, one child slips in and starts raiding a bedroom. The others explain to the kindly home owner that he decided he wasn't hungry and left. Then when the children are through and dishes or glasses are being returned to the kitchen they give the high sign and number three slips out.

All pile into a car parked around the corner and a family of five drives off.

Jury of Twelve Men Convicts Leader of Columbians Group

Homer Loomis, Jr., Gets Prison Term; Father-Lawyer Files Notice of Appeal

Atlanta, Feb. 15—(UP)—A jury in Atlanta has convicted Homer Loomis, Jr., on a charge of riot. The brown-shirted, Nazi-minded leader of Columbians, Inc., was sentenced immediately to 12 months in a public works camp.

His father, a New York admiralty lawyer, has filed a motion for a new trial, thereby automatically staying the sentence. Young Loomis, a handsome ex-Princeton student from New York still faces trial on two more charges: usurpation of police power, and illegal possession of dynamite.

Two-Hour Appeal

Today's closing session of the trial was marked by an impassioned two-hour appeal by the elder Loomis on behalf of his son. Most of it consisted of an open and bitter denunciation of Negroes and Jews. He told the jury that his son was being "crucified like Christ by the Jews." Solicitor General E. E. Andrews told young Loomis, "for every day you serve in prison, you can thank your father." He went on: "Your father had the nerve and gall to ask the jury in the name of Christ, who loved all men, to listen to his argument of hatred."

Imperialism Charged In Arctic by Reds

Moscow, Feb. 15—(UP)—The Soviet Journal New Times charges that American military maneuvers are turning the Arctic into what it calls "a theater of imperialistic machinations."

A report from Washington says the American high military commands make no secret of its interest in the Arctic as a vital defense frontier. But, both diplomatic and military officials have repeatedly emphasized that our interest in the Arctic is not aggressive.

Car Sideswipes Truck Carrying Atomic Load

Cincinnati, Feb. 15—(UP)—A Kentucky highway patrolman reported what at first may have seemed like a routine motor accident near Williamstown, Ky., today. A car side-swiped an army truck—not so unusual—not until an army lieutenant who was trailing the truck told the policeman that the army vehicle was carrying $1,000,000 worth of atom bomb material.

Landlord Kills Tenants; Made Too Much Noise

San Francisco, Feb. 15—(UP)—Court records show that several months ago landlord Jacob Watson of San Francisco tried to evict two tenants and failed.

Today he has been charged with murder after the tenants, 40-year-old Harold Collins and 33-year-old Estelle Lincoln were found shot to death in the hallway of Watson's apartment.

Says Watson: "They made too much noise."

House Democrats Flay G.O.P. Budget Report

Washington, Feb. 15—(UP)—House Democrats in a minority report, have criticized the Republican dominated budget committee for voting to trim six billion dollars from President Truman's proposed budget. Pistol Packin' Grandma Hunts Lost Gold Mine

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 15—(UP)—A pistol-packing grandmother is a little late in following Horace Greeley's advice, but she aims to find a pot of gold at the end of the trail.

Fifty-nine-year-old Mrs. Laura Middaugh and her husband, William, of Joplin, Mo., have gone west to search for a lost gold mine. Mrs. Middaugh has a carefully-guarded map handed down from her great-great uncle, Jacob Walz, who dug and lost a fortune from the mine in Arizona's roaring pioneer days. And she says the map shows where the gold is located.

Walz, who used to be known to the Indians as "Snowbeard," died in 1892, without revealing the location of the hidden treasure. Since then, countless gold-seekers have combed the treacherous mountains, 40 miles east of Phoenix. Many of them disappeared without a trace.

Their concert is being sponsored by the University Music Department with the cooperation of the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge foundation of the Library of Congress in Washington.

The program will include Quartet in C major, by Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart; Quartet in G minor, Claude Debussy; and Quartet in F minor, op. 95, Ludwig von Beethoven.

Soliciters Get Almost $2,000 In WSSF Campaign Thus Far

Drive Ends Tomorrow; Special Offerings To Be Continued by Student Church Groups

By Ed Long

With a total so far of $1,920 reported to the central committee of the World Student Service fund campaign, Walt Stuart, co-chairman, has announced that this does not include any fraternity nor all dormitory and sorority contributions.

Church student groups and Sunday School classes are continuing special offerings for the campaign which ends tomorrow. Solicitations will be completed by that time and final tabulation will be made Wednesday of this week.

Half to Asia

Stuart explained that half the money taken will be sent to Asiatic countries, the neediest of which is China, and the other half will be sent to Europe, where the need today is greatest.

He added that persons responsible for allocation of funds have volunteered for the job and have been specially trained in order to prevent graft and other such practices. During the war all other relief agencies approved in unison the WSSF allocation board. "The WSSF is an impartial group which gives no regard to politics, capital or other influences," he said.

He also expressed the desire to see persons on the campus who have not as yet contributed take advantage of their last opportunity tomorrow. "Primarily, our students should give because of the appalling need in the war-struck countries, but, also to be taken into consideration is the fact if our contributions stand anywhere near the present $1900 figure, the University will be registered as giving the lowest per capita of any of the colleges and universities who have reported a drive."

Rumors Still Making Rounds On Kay Kyser Governorship

(By United Press)

The Ole Professor says there's nothing to it, but the rumors are still going around that Kay Kyser may run for governor of North Carolina in 1948.

The Rocky Mount bandleader, who is back home this week, says it's only to help with the North Carolina good health program, now before the legislature. And also, Kyser says, he brought his wife, singer Georgia Carroll, and their young daughter to see Kyser's mother in Rocky Mount.

However, the radio celebrity has been very much in evidence in high political circles. Thursday night he was the center of attention at a reception attended by all the state officials, and Friday he made a speech in the House of Representatives.

Kyser admits he intends to come back to North Carolina to live, but he denies any political aspirations.

Observers Predict State Legislature Will End in April

Raleigh, Feb. 15—(UP)—Bills for a statewide liquor referendum and a minimum wage and hour law hit the legislative hoppers this week, virtually cleaning up the introduction of major legislation expected during the 1947 General assembly.

Public hearings remained to be held on the liquor and wage-hour bills, along with the anti-closed shop and co-operative-taxation proposals, but the first phase of the session's work was about over.

Observers predicted that the session could be over by the early part of April unless the legislature wrangles too long over the medical care and school teacher salary issues. Of all issues before the body, these two demanded final decisions, and most of the appropriations and revenue acts hinged on this action.

The medical care issue resolved itself into a fight over the four-year medical school in Chapel Hill when opponents and advocates of the good health program appeared before the joint appropriations committee during the week. All agreed the general hospital care community clinic programs should be accomplished. Legislative sentiment appeared favorable to this view.

The House and Senate met at 10 o'clock this morning for short sessions to consider local bills.

Byrd Discovers New Mountain

Experts Think Peaks Of Volcanic Origin

Little America, Feb. 15—(UP)—Rear Admiral Byrd's Polar expedition has discovered a major mountain range near the frozen waste of the South Pole.

The discovery was made in a plane piloted by Lieutenant George Anderson of Holly Springs, Miss. The new mountain range was seen some 600 miles southeast of Little America, beyond the Horlick mountains. It is described as a ridge-shaped range of reddish colored mountains rising 15,000 feet. Geologists say the color indicates possible volcanic origin.

Fit in with Other Discovery

Byrd himself took off in another plane a half hour before Anderson, flying within 170 miles of the South Pole. He said his flight also sighted in the distance a vast mountain range which he believes will fit in with Anderson's discovery when air photographs are pieced together.

Anderson says the new range appears to be an extension of the Queen Maud range. Movie and color still pictures were taken at a 13,000-foot altitude. As Anderson turned back, he could see the mountains curving off 50 miles farther away.

Sparkling sub-zero weather gave the explorers excellent visibility after a long period of blizzards and overcast.

All Registration Begins Tomorrow

All students in General college, Arts and Sciences, and the Graduate and Pharmacy schools will begin registration for the Spring quarter tomorrow by preparing their Green Forms with their advisers or deans. Students in Arts and Sciences will pick up their forms at the information desk in South Building.

Registration period for the schools of Arts and Sciences and Pharmacy will be from tomorrow through next Saturday. The period of registration for General College and Graduate students will be three days longer and will end on Tuesday Feb. 25.

Yell Bill Brown, Get 11 Responses. . .

Nearly Every State in Union, 18 Countries Are Represented in University Enrollment

By Lou Guthrie

"Hey, has anybody seen Bill Brown?" You could yell that on the campus and you might get 11 responses.

At this centrally located, average-sized University there are 7,000 students representing practically every state in the union and 18 foreign countries. It is of general interest therefore to notice the following facts concerning the surnames of this cross-section of life.

Take the colors, for instance. There's an Auburn, a Blue, four Cherry's, six Blacks, seven Grays, 11 Greens, 30 Whites, and 38 Browns, including the aforementioned 11 "Bills".

Trade Name

As it is known that many of our surnames originated from a trade or profession, it is not surprising to find Bakers, Barbers, Carpenters, Brewers, Coopers, Fishers, Gardners, Masons, Merchants, Millers, Tailors, and Wagoners. Also there are Deans, Abbotts, Monks, Knights, Kings, Bishops and Queens. Quite enough for a game of chess.

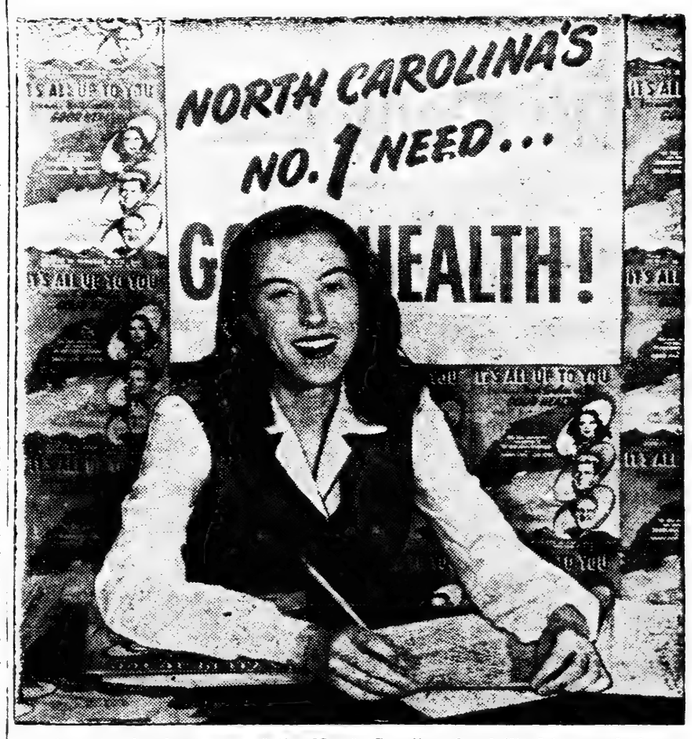
We must have emulated the Indians in some of our name-giving, for we have collected from fish, fowl, and animals, such names as: Bass, Herring, Crow, Hawk, Parrott, Partridge, Peacock, Sparrow, Buffalo, Bullock, Fox, Giraffe, Moose, Wolf, Lamb, Lamkin, Beagle, Bernard, and Collie.

Various parts of the anatomy have been called upon to share their names as Cheeks, Beard, Foote, Hand, Hart, Temple, Barefoot and Broadfoot.

Farm Handles

Names reminiscent of the farm also creep into the registry. Among these are Bush, Fields, Hills, Sands, Poole. After reading names like Cherry, Flowers, Chestnut, Almond, Corn, Bean, Cotton, Dill, Mustard, Rice, and Wheat, you feel as if you had picked up a seed catalogue, instead of a college directory.

Again we are reminded of great names in history of which these are possibly descendants: Byrd, Burns, Bryan, Bryant, Boone, Beach, Bach, Alexander and Adams.



And there are surnames like the biblical names, as James, John, Andrew, Thomas, Joseph, Adam, Daniel, David, Moses, and Soloman.

The romantic names include Starr, Moon, Beam, Rose, May, Valentine, and Love.

Long, Short But Lively

Unusual names include Batchelor,

At state headquarters of the North Carolina Good Health association in Durham, Miss Mimi Patton, who is kept busy these days answering requests for piano copies of the Good Health song, "It's All Up To You," pauses to smile prettily for the photographer. Wall in the background is appropriately papered with sheet music of the health hit song.

Unlegislated History

The shape of things to come frequently is affected by legislation passed today by state assemblies as well as the national Congress. However capable a body of learned men are, they are physically unable to legislate history. The past is what it is and was an cannot be more. This fact was well recognized by the education committee of the N. C. House of Representatives which turned in a good day's work when, by unanimous vote, it killed a bill that would have refined the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence as gospel truth and required all teachers in the state to accept it.

Introduced by Representative Dellinger of Gaston, the bill was reported back to the House unfavorably by the committee with no comment. The Daily Tar Heel, in concurrence with the Charlotte News, agrees that a few words are in order.

Citizens of Mecklenburg can appreciate Dellinger's effort to defend a proud historical tradition against its detractors. It is their heritage to point with pride to the Declaration which most believe that all available evidence indicates did exist prior to the fire in John McKnitt Alexander's house. They believe also that no amount of legislation can determine whether or not the famous document existed. It is or is not a fact.

All North Carolinians share Mecklenburg's pride in the doughty men who assembled in Charlotte on May 20, 1775 to declare their independence from England. Many competent historians share that opinion; the State of North Carolina long ago gave the Declaration official recognition when it emblazoned the date upon the State flag. Any further action other than a single resolution expressing faith in the Alexander version of the Declaration is out of order.

Had the Dellinger bill been passed, textbooks would have to have been revised to remove all reference raised to the question by historians and statesmen from Thomas Jefferson forward. It would have established by law one version of the Declaration, would have permitted no other version to be taught. It would have been educational anarchy.

Even worse, it may have cost the University some of its able professors. Chapel Hill retains excellent men in the teaching profession in spite of the poor salaries that the men receive. These men possess a Fifth Freedom of education compensates for their lowly pay status. The Dellinger bill would have denied a portion of this freedom the history professors. None could have been critcized, had the bill become a law, for leaving the University to seek work at another institution offering higher wages.

The bill by the Gaston representative was based on a dubious theory—the idea that government is empowered to determine whether history is true or false. This kind of arbitrary power is indeed the very thing that the Mecklenburgers rebelled against in 1775. The Declaration signers pledged themselves to "use every exertion to spread the love of liberty." Certainly it would be most improper to restrict, in the name, the right of every North Carolinian to seek the truth.

Two to One!

With men who know political integrity least, it's Talmadge, two to one!

Apparently this tobacco slogan may be applied to politics in Georgia where Herman (Son-of-his-Father) Talmadge won his second court verdict in his dispute over the governorship with M. E. Thompson yesterday as Superior Court Judge Bond Almond ruled Talmadge the legal governor of Georgia in a suit borught by an Atlanta bank to determine which claimant is entitled to draw funds from a $100,000 executive department bank account.

Last week a contrary ruling was issued by Judge Claude Porter in Superior Court at Rome, Georgia. On Wednesday of this week Judge Walter Hendrix ruled for Talmadge.

The Georgia Supreme Court is scheduled to consider the matter in March.

In the meantime we may expect the merry-go-round to continue until one of the claimants grabs the brass ring from the high court.

Apparently it is all too simple and democratic to permit Georgians to express their views in another election. If legal machinery will not permit this, it should be changed so the people may have the democracy guaranteed under the Constitution.

U. S., Britain Are Preparing For 'Peace'!

By Manny Margolis

A Washington correspondent for the "London Daily Mail" sent an almost fantastic dispatch to his paper which was printed on Dec. 31, 1946. In it, he asserted that drafts of plans for joint training of R.A.F. and U. S. Air Force personnel, including the technique for atom-bombing, was merely awaiting General Carl Spaatz's "signature."

"An Anglo-American Air Force," he stated, "is a logical conclusion. . . It means that besides arms and equipment, training and manpower will be standardized. . ."

At the time, this created quite a stir throughout the capitals of the world. Yet, it shouldn't have. For as early as Oct. 31, 1946, AP correspondent Arthur Gavshon reported from reliable British military sources in London to the effect that "Britain and the U. S. A. were continuing to swap information on military weapons developments more than a year after the end of the war."

One of the informants stated bluntly, "I don't believe there is a single military secret between ourselves and the Americans."

A later report by Gavshon on arms-standardization pointed out that "a big advantage to the U. S. A. is that countries like Australia and New Zealand, where British weapon and munitions factories are to be established, would in effect become 'advanced bases' for U. S. forces in the event of conflict."

A similar accord was signed this week with Canada. Thursday's "New York Times" went out of its way to indicate that this pact was clearly "distinct from the project of the United Kingdom for standardization of arms with the United States."

In a discussion of the significance of this agreement, New York Times' regular columnist James Reston produced the following masterpiece of editorial naiveté:

"The main worry now is NOT that the military will influence our policy TOO MUCH, but that Congress will repeat the cardinal error of our foreign policy in the past: namely, the error of failing to keep our military power in balance with our world commitments, and in step with changing strategic conceptions."

Mind you, these accords have not been entered into "by and with the advice and consent" of anybody but top military officials. They are not even subject to investigation by the un-American House Committee on un-American Activities. Yet, Mr. Reston is clearly alarmed by the future possibility of NOT ENOUGH military support for our "foreign commitments."

What commitments does he have in mind? Commitments for war? For peace? Commitments to whom? And when were they assumed?

It would seem as if there are more vital commitments which are not only being conveniently ignored, but which are being jeopardized by this it'll-have-to-wait-till-we're-secure approach to waging peace. These commitments are in the direction of peace, disarmament, Big Power unity, atom control for peacetime development, and so forth. It is very difficult to understand what the redesigning of the British .303 rifle to the U. S. .30 caliber has to do with disarmament, or how joint Anglo-American air training enters the realm of "regional arrangements."

Of course, there is always the specter of the Red Rose. That can cover up for any multitude of military sins. "If there is a third World War, its strategic center will be the North Pole," said General Hap Arnold recently. "Our frontier now lies across the Arctic wastes of the Polar Regions," added General Curtis Lemay. Moreover, Tooey Spaatz has felt that "we are, in fact, wide open at the top."

Strange preparations for "peace"! We have been "wide open" along our 49th parallel for a good many years now. This very "wide-openness" has, in fact, been one of the solidifying and stabilizing factors in American-Canadian friendship. Would it not follow logically, therefore, particularly in an atomic era such as ours, that such a policy could very well be instrumental in the achievement of lasting friendship between the U. S. and the Soviet Union?

Or possibly that is not included among our commitments. There are mountains of evidence daily which point in this direction. Every "Russia-lover" from David Lilienthal to Gerhardt Eisler are proofs-positive of this general "American" outlook on where our "commitments" lie.

Isn't it high time that we started becoming a little more un-American, or rather, U.N.-American? If this be treason. . .

"... Our Georgia man again. He's burbling with joy."

THE CPU ROUNDTABLE

"Federal Aid to Education"

By Joe Allan

The American people are today faced with one of the most serious crises ever to have arisen in the field of education. The current increase in the cost of living and the certainty of more lucrative employment elsewhere have forced thousands of public elementary, high school, and college teachers to leave their positions in the schools of the nation. Every month thousands of capable, experienced and otherwise loyal teachers are turning in dire necessity to private industry for a living wage. As a result they have left behind them dangerously understaffed faculties.

Even more important is the fact that their vacancies are being filled in many cases by men and women of substandard caliber. This trend must be checked immediately and positive remedial measures made to bring these educators back into the schools. If this is not done the consequences will be such that even the most optimistic thinker will view the future of American education with grave uncertainty.

With this situation in mind it is well to take careful note of the legislation pending in Congress now in the form of federal aid to education. Last January four bills were introduced to the Congress, all of which are markedly similar. One of the broadest in policy is Senator Taft's which is supported by the National Education Association of the United States. Its salient points are as follows:

1) It absolutely prohibits federal control of education.

2) It authorizes federal funds in direct proportion to need and effort and indirect proportion to the financial ability of the states to support the schools.

3) It establishes a minimum foundation school opportunity in the nation, through public elementary and public secondary schols.

4) It protects the educational welfare of minority racial groups.

5) It limits the use of federal funds to such schools as the states make eligible for state support.

If these provisions are intact in the final bill passed by both houses of Congress a very material step will have been made to alleviate the present crisis.

There is absolutely no doubt that the states need federal aid. Surveys have repeatedly shown that many of the states, especially the southern states, can not adequately support the needs of their public school systems, not even if the last cent in their respective treasuries was appropriated to that end.

Under the provisions of the Taft bill, North Carolina would receive from 14 to 20 million dollars annually from the federal government. There are 125 teachers in the public schools of North Carolina who have never been to college, and many more who have not completed four years of college. At its recent meeting the classroom teachers department of the North Carolina Education Association demanded that emergency licenses be abolished.

"Education in North Carolina is suffering a deep loss due to the presence of unqualified members of the profession in its schools," the association said. "Children will be permanently handicapped because of poor professional standards being maintained at present."

And so it is likewise in the nation. The current enlightening survey being conducted by the New York Times points out that America's schools employ 125,000 teachers on emergency or substandard licenses. Almost every city, town, village, and hamlet in the nation is suffering from the question of emergency certificates.

The Times survey also states that the average weekly salary for teachers in the U. S. is 37 dollars. The monies provided for in this bill will increase that amount substantially. The President and certain members of Congress are making strenuous efforts to cut the budget and eliminate appropriations wherever possible. Senator Taft's bill calls for an annual appropriation of 250 million dollars. Surely this is an insignificant sum when compared to the billions spent by the military and naval departments. Hence there is no logical reason for this amount of 250 million to be deemed excessively high or unavailable.

There is an abundance of ability and talent among the present and former teachers in the nation, but there is a growing lack of incentive and interest in the teaching profession. The monetary value of this bill is the key for providing incentive, and encouraging qulified teachers to return to teaching, and will provide an income level upon which the young college students of today can confidently set their sights.

Suggestion

This is just as a suggestion for discovery of an efficient system of registration about which there is much talk but little advancement. Why doesn't the administration call for and survey some of the suggestions for a registration system that the students develop while waiting in some of the long lines? I've heard many, most of which would work much better than any of those tried seemingly without sufficient planning or thought.

Too, it might behoove some of the administrators to enroll themselves, provided the courses could be selected in the present grab bag method, and learn some of the principles of good administration. For example, in the commerce department where the principles of management are tough, it takes two hours to learn that you can't secure an interview to find out what courses you already know you want and have to have to graduate in June. It appears that the staff of the department feels that students have nothing to do but stand in line. They have neither the courtesy nor forethought to inform those in line that interviews will cease at a specific time.

KERGER GARTNER.

Favors System

All day I have read and heard numerous arguments against the new registration system. Judging from the editorial in today's Daily Tar Heel practically no one is satisfied. Perhaps if the majority of the student body would realize that it is their very numbers that make such measures necessary, there would be much less voiced displeasure. There has been no limit put on the size of the student body, other than requiring each student to find a bed. If the ones who don't like what they find here would pack their bags and leave it would be much more convenient and enjoyable for the rest of us.

Jayvees Take Two Wins To Keep Unbeaten Slate

Hayworthmen Topple Blue Imps in Evening After Afternoon Success Over Wilmington

By Gil McLeod

Carolina's junior varsity quintet pulled an iron-man feat yesterday by chalking up a 57-35 success over the Wilmington College center in Woollen gym in the afternoon and then journeying to Durham in the evening to bury the Duke Blue Imps in a 55-41 avalanche.

The twin victories ran the Tar Heel juniors' record to 12 consecutive triumphs and kept them in the unbeaten class. Next clash will be Wednesday against Fort Bragg.

The evening victory was the Hayworthmen's second triumph over the Duke jayvees. The home quintet held the advantage for part of the first half but June Bailey's hook at the 10-minute mark deadlocked the count and Jack Fitch dropped in a two-pointer to move Carolina into a lead. At halftime the score was 25-22.

Ed Wagner and Fitch were the outstanding pointmakers for the Carolina quintet. Wagner tallied 18 points, 13 coming in the first half, while Fitch registered 15. Bailey, Dan Nyimicz and Fred Swartzburg performed well on defense, giving Carolina the necessary control under the backboards.

The Carolina starting lineup remained intact for 35 minutes of the tussle, Harvey Weinstein subbing with five minutes to go.

In the afternoon fray, the White Bantams took the lead at the 10-minute mark on Paul von Bramer's long set shot and stayed in front the rest of the way. Ahead at halftime by 29-11, the Hayworthmen coasted through the second half to register the win.

Von Bramer, dropping in 16 points, sparked the jayvees on the offense while Rover Henson and Weinstein were the defensive stars. Henson also took second place scoring honors with 13 points.

John Tsantes was the big gun in the Wilmington attack, racking up 12 markers and playing an outstanding defensive game.

The two box scores:

Carolina (53)		Duke (42)
F—Swartzburg (7)		(13) Penny
F—Wagner (18)		(10) Youmans

Seven Mural Clubs Unbeaten As Play Enters Final Week

Seven cage outfits still boast perfect slates and one has already clinched the title in its league as the intramural basketball competition enters the final week, according to the latest count released by the Intramural office.

The strong Grad court team tops the list, having run through a six-game schedule in dorm league one without a setback. Two other quintets in the dormitory division and four teams in the fraternity class also sport unbeaten records, all of which will have to be defended during the final week of play.

Closest race among the dormitories lies in league three, where Everett heads the parade with a 4-0 slate while BVP and Oakwood Drive trail with 4-1 and 3-1, respectively. The Independents top circuit two with 4-0, followed closely by Stacy with 3-1. Emanon and Med School are deadlocked in loop four with 5-1 slates.

In the fraternity division, Chi Phi No. 2 appears on its way to the league one title, holding a record of 5-0. Beta No. 1 is undefeated in circuit three with another 5-0 record, pursued by Kappa Psi with 4-1. In league four, Phi Delt No. 2 also sports a 5-0 slate, with Kappa Alpha No. 3 and PiKA No. 1 tied for second with 4-1.

The remaining unbeaten club, Sigma Chi No. 1, leads loop six with 5-0, followed by Chi Psi and SAE No. 2 with 4-1. Four teams are tied in circuit two, Kappa Sig No. 3, SAE No. 1, and Phi Gam No. 1 all sporting 4-1 records. Phi Gamma Delta No. 2 holds a slight advantage in league five with 5-1, with Zeta Psi No. 1 and ATO No. 1 in hot pursuit with 4-1.

The mural cage program returns to Woollen gym for its final week, following the removal of the portable stands.

Tomorrow's schedule:

Monday 4:00—Court 3: Everett vs Oakwood Drive; court 4: Axes vs Aycock No. 2; court 5: Mangum vs Graham; court 6: Independents vs Alexander No. 2; court 7: Law School vs Aycock No. 1.

White Phantoms Play Gamecocks Tomorrow

Free from the worries of a Saturday cage contest for the first time in four weeks, Carolina's cagemen will go through a short practice this afternoon before leaving tomorrow morning for the first of three away-from-home conference battles during the coming week.

The Phantoms, currently entrenched in third place in the circuit, will attempt to fight off the first assault on their position tomorrow evening when they face South Carolina at Columbia, S. C. The locals downed the Gamecocks in their first meeting this season by a 50-49 count and Coach Tom Scott is expecting another tough encounter. Bob Paxton, Jim Hamilton, Nemo Nearman, Norm Kohler and Jim White are slated to open the Tar Heels' ninth loop tilt.

Carolina travels to Charlotte on Tuesday to oppose Davidson and completes the week Thursday evening against the Deacons of Wake Forest, who provided a stunning upset in toppling N. C. State from the conference lead Friday night.

Staunton Tankers Swamp JVs, 64-14

Staunton Military Academy's high powered swimming team put on its second star-studded performance in a like number of day, yesterday afternoon as it roared through the Carolina jayvee mermen with five fins flying to register a 64-14 victory.

It was John Craigie who paced the visitors as he tallied easy victories in the 200 and 400 meter freestyle events. The Staunton ace received able support from teammates Russell in the 50, Smith in the 100, Vandershies in the backstroke clash, and Teneau in the breaststroke.

The Jayvees were hampered by the fact that the majority of its members were on the road with the varsity. For the locals Erle took the only first place edging Jenther in the diving with 82 points. Frazier, Cohen, Pell and McKenzie also turned in notable performances for the losers.

Hearn, Seaver, Gupton Victors

Quinlanmen Rally After 6-0 Deficit

Carolina's mat crew captured the Southern conference dual meet crown in Woollen gym last night by coming from behind to score a 15-11 triumph over VMI and remain unedefeated in six loop encounters.

Behind 6-0 after the Cadets had gained the first two bouts, the Tar Heel grapplers racked up five straight decisions to clinch the meet. On hand if needed, Laurie Hooper forfeited in the heavyweight division in order to gain more rest for a mending ankle.

Co-Captains Win

Co-Captains Tommy Hearn and Dick Seaver and Oscar Gupton registered their sixth consecutive wins of the campaign but Tom Urquhart, unbeaten in the first five tilts, was bested by the Cadets' Jim Spencer in the 128-pound class, 6-2. Hearn topped Joe Hill at 136, 9-4, Seaver handed Bob Sherrard his initial loss of the season, 4-3, at 145 pounds, and Gupton decisioned Joe Gantt, 5-4, in the 165-pound battle.

Carolina's other two victories came at 155 pounds, where Irv Zirpel blanked Harry Dashiell by 6-0, and at 175 pounds, where Bill Kemp scored a 6-3 win over Stubby Graenger. Urquhart's loss came at 128 pounds to Jim Spencer by a 6-2 count while Doug Thompson, Carolina's 121 representative, was decisioned by John Moyr, 8-4.

The loss was the first suffered by VMI this season and knocked the Cadets from a first-place tie in the circuit standings. The triumph did not give the local grapplers the Southern conference wrestling title, which goes to the winner of the anual tournament. This year's tourney will be held March 7 and 8.

Bell, Friday, Blade, Ford, English, Holland, Land, Lively, Miles, Parke, and Street. There are three Smarts, three Smalls, and three Strongs; two Fords and three Nashs; one Patty and two Pancakes; twelve Longs and twelve Littles; one Lively, one Merry, and two Trots.

Now as to the Smiths and Joneses, which would you guess are better represented on campus? You're right, the Smiths have it, with 76 representatives, among them six Williams; the Johnsons are next, with 57 on roll, and only five Williams. Then comes the Williams family itself, with a leaning towards the Christian name of Robert, five. There are 40 Joneses, four Johns; 41 Moores, five Johns, and four are named James.

Would this seem to indicate that it might be hard to remember the names of the new fellows you meet on the campus? It is simple, really. There are 34 Macs and 210 Mcs, and more than 10 per cent of the student body is named William. With crowded conditions every fellow has from two to 20 roommates, so to get your man, you'll simply need to call out, "Hey, Bill!" If that fails try the other, "Hi, Mac," and you'll have him or his roommate. It works practically every time.

Leads Violin Section...

Tomasow Has No Easy Task As Symphony Concertmaster

By Bettie Washburn

Of prime importance to a symphony orchestra, second only to the conductor, in the concertmaster. As the leader of the all-important violin section, it is the responsibility of the concertmaster to transmit the conductor's indications to the string section and other sections of the orchestra. This exacting position is held by Jan Tomasow in the National Symphony orchestra, which is to play in Memorial Hall Tuesday evening under the sponsorship of the Student Entertainment series.

With Paris Symphony

Born in Buenos Aires, Tomasow got his first break in Europe in 1936 when he won a contest which enabled him to appear as soloist with the Paris Symphony orchestra. Since then he has concertized extensively in South America and Mexico as well as in the United States, having given recitals in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago. He has also been soloist on numerous occasions over a nation-wide radio hook-up.

Also important in the National Symphony is the first cellist, Howard B. Mitchell, who has been solo cellist with the symphony since 1933 when he graduated with honors from the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia.

During the winter season, Mitchell frequently directs the orchestra for their youth and school programs. As a recitalist he has met with notable success and won high critical opinion, which stamps him as among the topmost cellists of today.

Shropshire Wins SP Vice-Presidential Nomination

Don Shropshire, president of the Dialectic senate and former chairman of the Elections committee of the Student Legislature, was nominated by the Student party Sunday afternoon as its candidate for vice-president of the student body. A rising senior from Winston-Salem, he will be a running mate of Tom Eller, who was recently nominated by SP for president.

President of Di To Run on Slate With Tom Eller

By Bettie Washburn

Don Shropshire, rising Senior of Winston-Salem, Sunday afternoon received the Student party nomination for the vice-presidency of the student body.

Shropshire, who defeated John Clampitt for the nomination by a narrow margin, was formerly chairman of the elections committee of the Student Legislature and parliamentarian of the Dialectic senate. Twice president of the Di, he was unanimously chosen as speaker of the House of Representatives of the 1946 State Student Legislative assembly in Raleigh.

Lead with Eller

Shropshire, who will lead the Student party slate with Tom Eller, candidate for the presidency of the student body, is also president of the Baptist Student union and a member of the Men's Glee club.

Upon receiving the nomination Sunday afternoon, Shropshire stated: "If it is the will of the student body to change student government from a 'comedy of errors' to an effective drama of worthy achievement, I submit my nomination for the thoughtful consideration of every student."

National Symphony to Play in Memorial Hall Tonight

The National Symphony orchestra of Washington, which ranks among the top six symphonies in the country, will appear under its founder and permanent conductor, Hans Kindler, tonight at 8:30 in Memorial hall, under Student Entertainment series sponsorship.

The orchestra will include in its program tonight Mozart's Symphony No. 25 in G Minor, written around 1778 while the composer was living in his native Salzburg where he served as concertmaster at the court of the Archbishop. Consisting of four movements, Allegro con brio, Andante, Minuetto and Allegro, the symphony is a composition of contrasts which picture human suffering.

Include Prize Ballet

Also featured on tonight's program will be excerpts from Aram Khachaturyan's ballet "Gayaneh," which won the first degree Stalin prize for its composer, a former pupil of Rimsky-Korsakov. The excerpts include the Dance of the Rose Maidens, Lullaby and Dance with the Sabres.

Two etudes by Scriabin, arranged for the orchestra by LaSalle Spier, and one of Frescobaldi's toccatas arranged by Dr. Kindler himself, will also be played, as well as Richard Wagner's Traume (Dreams). This is one of five songs which Wagner composed to poems and contains the thematic material from which the composer wove the passionate love duet in the second act of Tristan and Isolde.

The Orchestra will end its performance with the prelude to the first act of Wagner's opera "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg." Written after many years of labor, the prelude contains significant themes from the opera, including the famous Prize Song and genuine old Mastersinger tunes.

13 Persons Die As Train Hits Bus in Indiana

Train Section Hands Were Bus Occupants

La Porte, Indiana, Feb. 17—(UP)—A west-bound South Shore electric train struck a bus carrying section hands of the electric railroad four miles east of La Porte today. First reports said at least 13 persons were killed and 50 more injured.

Section hands had just finished working on a section of track on a commuter line connecting Chicago and La Porte when the accident happened as they apparently were returning toward their homes.

The crash occurred near the Springfield Township school, La Porte county.

Police and ambulances were called from La Porte and Michigan City and many rushed to the scene.

Governor Orders Police To Hunt Down Lynchers

Greenville, S. C., Feb. 17—(UP)—Governor J. Strom Thurmond has ordered South Carolina police to remain on the job until every clue in the state's first lynching since 1941 is run down. As yet police have been unable to learn the identity of any of the 35 armed men who overpowered a jailer at the Pickens jailhouse, seized a Negro prisoner and lynched him.

Portal Pay Doors Open, Says Justice Jackson

Washington, Feb. 17—(UP)—Justice Robert Jackson charges that Supreme Court decisions on portal to portal pay have opened the door to endless lawsuits. Jackson says the present judicial position on portal pay has made it impossible to settle any "borderline" wage claim without bringing the case all the way up to the Supreme Court.

Burning Brush Blamed For Severe Roof Fire In Local Residence

Sparks from a neighbor's burning brush have been blamed for a fire yesterday morning which severely damaged a house at 137 East Rosemary and displaced two families from their home.

None of the regular occupants of the house, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Weaver and Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Allen, were at home when the blaze started. Mrs. Weaver's parents, who were visiting in the home, did not know of the blaze until after the alarm had been sounded.

Allen, a former ensign in the Navy, and his wife are students at the University. Both displaced families say they have secured temporary living quarters.

Firemen said the alarm was turned in by John W. Davis, a student living at 126 North St., who was burning refuse in his back yard when he saw smoke pouring from his neighbor's shingle roof. Davis told firemen he thought sparks from his own fire, carried by a brisk southwesterly breeze, had ignited the dry wooden roof.

The flames, which had completely enveloped the roof by the time fire equipment arrived, completely destroyed the shingles, and water used to extinguish the fire caused considerable damage to the interior of the home and its furnishings.

Damage to the house was covered by insurance.

Later yesterday afternoon the Chapel Hill fire department was called to another blaze in a student's trailer in rear of the Poe-Mangum garage on West Franklin St. Firemen said damage, caused by defective wiring, was "slight."

Guy Johnson Issues Reply To Recent Racial Charges

Guy B. Johnson, member of the faculty here recently issued a statement to the press in which he said that he was "disturbed" to see that his views on race relations were a subject of controversy at the meeting of the Board of Trustees a week ago.

Johnson who is presently serving as director of the Southern Regional council stated that at the meeting "several unfair allegations were made."

Replying to Clark's accusation that he had advocated "racial amalgamation" Johnson declared, "The fact is that I have never at any time advocated racial amalgamation."

Only Two References

The University professor explained that he had made only two references to segregational problems. In his Greensboro talk, Johnson had said, "Segregation is not only a legal institution, but also a moral problem." His second statement on segregation said in essence: "The church is going to be challenged more and more by the question of segregation in its own membership."

"The whole burden of my talk," asserted Johnson in his statement, "was that the race problem is a moral problem."

The sociologist who was vigorously defended by Josephus Daniels at the trustee meeting, denied that he had urged his Greensboro listeners to write letters of appreciation to citizens of Georgia who opposed the late Gene Talmadge.

Praised Baptist Preacher

He said he "referred to the courage of a young Baptist preacher who appeared before a legislative committee and made a statement against the passage of the white primary bill."

"I said that this man, being pastor of the church to which the Talmadge family belonged was going to be under fire, and I thought it would be a fine gesture if other Christians would write him and lend him their moral support."

Johnson also paid tribute to the state of North Carolina in his statement saying, "God forbid that she (North Carolina) should have an era of race-bating and academic witch-hunting such as Georgia has had."

Students Uphold Action of Negro

Students from three North Carolina colleges have voiced approval of the action taken by Herman M. Sweatt, Negro, against the University of Texas, in which Sweatt brought a mandamus suit against the state of Texas to require fulfillment of the state's obligation to provide adequate educational facilities for all, regardless of color.

Students representing the University, Duke university and the North Carolina college for Negroes sent messages to President T. S. Painter and 17 University of Texas campus organizations upholding Sweatt's now famous and controversial action.

Court action has been pressed by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

This Month's Salary Checks to Contain Sum Voted to State Employees by Legislature

By Ed Joyner

First benefits of the emergency bonus voted to state employees by the state legislature last month will reach the faculty with this month's salary checks according to information contained in a memorandum sent to department heads by the University business office yesterday.

Based on salaries in effect as of February 25, 1947, including the previous emergency pay increase, the bonus covers a period of eight months from November 1, 1946 through June 30, 1947. It will range from $144 on annual salaries below $1201 to $270 on salaries in the $2701-$6600 bracket.

Those Eligible

All full-time, permanent state employees who have been employed continuously since November 1, 1946 are eligible for the full bonus. The amount will be pro-rated for employees hired after November 1.

One-half of the bonus due will be paid with the salary check of February 28 and the remaining one-half will be divided into four equal parts payable with the checks for March, April, May and June.

For employees paid by the hour or week, including janitors and laundry workers, the bonus will be based on the wage in effect February 25 but will be figured on the actual number of hours worked each week since November 1, 1946. The bonus will not be paid on time worked in excess of a normal work week.

Amount of Each Bonus

Amount of the bonus for each annual salary bracket is as follows: Annual salaries up to and including $1,200, bonus of $144; $1201-$1380, $162; $1381-$1560, $180; $1561-$1740, $198; $1741-$1920, $216; $1921-$2100, $234; $2101-$2400, $246; $2401-$2700, $258; $2701-$6600, $270.

Bonuses for employees paid by the hour or week will amount to approximately the same as these figures, the business office said.

Committees Face Heated Sessions

Raleigh, Feb. 17—(UP)—One of the busiest weeks of the 1947 Legislative session is beginning tonight—a week filled with hotly-contested committee hearings.

Officials of farm co-operatives are already flocking into Raleigh for a hearing before the joint finance committee tomorrow. They will fight a bill which would put co-ops on the same tax basis as corporations. Opponents of the bill say 5,000 farmers will try to crowd into the capitol to protest the proposal.

Another hot protest is expected Wednesday, when a House committee holds hearings on a bill to outlaw the closed shop in the state.

The Senate will consider an anti-fireworks measure tomorrow.

But tonight the North Carolina Symphony orchestra will see if music hath charms to soothe the savage legislator. The organization has scheduled a concert for both houses after tonight's session in an effort to gain more appropriations.

Convicts Turn Critics On 'San Quentin' Reel; Razzberry Hollywood

Salem, Oregon, Feb. 17—(UP)—Nine hundred experts have given the razzberry to a Hollywood movie about prison life.

The experts are convicts at Oregon state prison.

They were assembled Saturday night to view the new RKO movie, "San Quentin." And they constituted themselves a nine-hundred member board of experts and gave forth with remarks that would have reddened the ears of the Hollywood producers.

Convict 18269 remarked:

"I was in San Quentin. The only resemblance between the picture and the prison is sure coincidental. I couldn't recognize nuttin' but the gates."

Another convict chimed in with:

"They previewed it here because we couldn't get up and walk out." And a third critic gave this forceful opinion:

"You can quote me personally—it stinks."

Guards watched nervously through the performance as the convicts of Oregon state prison viewed the pictures of rival San Quentin.

UVA Will Entertain Smith, Archer House

Coeds of Smith dormitory and Archer house will be guests of the University Veterans association at an open house tomorrow night in the UVA clubhouse at 8:30 o'clock.

Featuring dance music, free cigarettes, and a floorshow, the open house is one of the series of events honoring groups of coeds each week. All veterans on campus are invited to attend.

The escort committee is requested to be at the club by 8:15 so that they can call by for coeds by 8:30.

Bullfrogs Present Headache For Playwright Paul Green

Local Playwright Paul Green's latest difficulty in writing the script for the outdoor drama now being planned in commemoration of the Revolutionary war period in Virginia is bullfrogs.

The original theme of the drama was to commemorate that period 150 years earlier in which the Jamestown settlement was made, but the entire theme of the drama had to be changed because of difficulties regarding sanitation in the swamp fort site on the bank of the James river. Green is now working on a script to cover the era in which Patrick Henry, Thomas Jefferson and other notables were active in Williamsburg.

According to Green, bullfrogs dwell in large numbers in the lakeland track of 25 acres donated by the William and Mary college near the campus. Considerable progress has been made in all stages of the production including the building of the theater and the writing of the drama, but all concerned are worried over the probable serenades of the bullfrogs all during the performances, scheduled to begin next summer.

He remarked, after a visit to Williamsburg last week, "Suppose those bullfrogs should start up right in the middle of a scene—or suppose they would break in on Patrick Henry while he was making an oration!"

Acid Test

During the last year other criticism has been written about the various policies of the administration. Administrative officials have talked with some DTH writers in an attempt to justify and explain some administrative actions. The keynote of these discussions has always been, "THE ADMINISTRATION WANTS TO, MUST, AND WILL COOPERATE WITH THE STUDENTS IN EVERY WAY POSSIBLE." In a crowded university such as this one with so many post-war difficulties to face, mutual cooperation between administration and students is a necessity—it is the only basis on which the University can successfully operate.

Now the administration has what could be called an "acid test." It has expressed its desire to cooperate and the hue and cry over the new registration system gives it a chance to prove it.

The students are violently opposed to the new registration system. The originators of the system are just as adamant in believing it will work. The students are deeply resentful of being told when they shall take their courses and who will teach them.

It is too late to change the system this quarter. Those advocating it insist it be given a fair trial. But it is not too late to change the system in the future, for the summer session and the following quarters. All of the students, although disliking having to stand in line, confess they prefer the old system to the new.

This quarter's registration will prove once and for all if the system is acceptable. If it fails, the administration must recognize it. If it should succeed the students will accept it readily.

When registration for the summer session does begin, we shall know the results of the "acid test." Cooperation must be the keynote in student-faculty relationships. The registration policy in the future will give an answer to the question of the extent of administration cooperation.

Letters To The Editor

All letters must be typewritten, double-spaced, under 300 words in length, and signed by the writer. Writer's name will be withheld on request, but letters must be signed. The Daily Tar Heel reserves the right to present the letters as it wishes and to delete all matter it considers libelous.

Good Point

There have been numerous letters published in the Daily Tar Heel which ended with the phrase, "names withheld by request." Most of these letters have been written on some highly controversial issues in which widespread interest has been shown. The most recent letter was one concerning the much contended freshman elections in which some very derogatory insinuations were made concerning the integrity of certain members of this student body.

Now the point that I would like to make is, that if a man is not willing to admit ownership to his opinions and convictions, then they are not worth one iota and should not take up space that could be put to better use.

Sincerely,
TAG MONTAGUE
Name printed by request.

Cannot Be Ignored

15 February 1947

The obvious counter by the student body to the new registration system is a general strike. In fact, I am amazed that one has not been already proposed. Student opinion is consolidated—it only remains to act. Should the student body—as a body—simply refuse to register, the administration would be stuck with no other alternative than to acknowledge that registration is for the benefit of the student, not the convenience of the administration.

We must realize that this latest willful and high-handed decree by the administration is not an isolated event—it is merely the most recent manifestation of a trend. The pathetic aspect of this trend is that the students themselves must bear the responsibility for its occurrence. The student body, by abstaining from any concerted action in defense of its own self-interests, is forfeiting to the administration the prerogative of making those decisions which they, as students, have the right to make. The administration, given a free hand, makes its decisions primarily in accordance with its own self-interests, like an bureaucracy.

As it stands today, the student body finds itself hopelessly split into cliques, factions, and parties—fraternity against dormitory, conservative against liberal, what have you—over every conceivable issue irrelevant to its own basic welfare as a unit. The time for prattle, dissention, petty self-seeking, is past. The present challenge cannot be ignored. It can—and must—be met. "Either we all hang together, or we will all hang separately."

Very truly yours,

I'd Rather Be Right . . .

Increased Subsistence Bill Can Further Nation's Cause

By Earl Heffner

Mahatma Gandhi, the fastidious faster of Rudyard Kipling's "India's sunny clime," soon may be able soon to rest on his empty abdomen and no longer fear the possibility of many student veterans in American schools surpassing his lengthy fasting records.

In the Veterans Affairs Committee of the House of Representatives is an amendment to the GI Bill of Rights labeled H. R. 870 which, if passed, will raise subsistence pay for students with and without dependants to $100 and $125 a month respectively. A further stipulation will provide for $10 more a month for each additional dependent. There is a limit to the number of dependents allowed for increased subsistence by the bill.

Before this amendment is passed observers may expect many verbal brickbats to be exchanged on the ofttimes vaudevillian floor of both the lower and upper chamber as solons seek to ascertain the original purpose of the initial GI Bill.

Basically the question seems to be whether the subsistence allotment is supposed to cover veterans' expenses in order that they may study without the necessity of seeking additional work, or whether the subsistence is merely to be a subsidation to aid veterans in meeting their expenses.

The Veterans Affairs Committee (one of the members being Hamilton C. Jones of Charlotte) is expected to act on the bill sometime in March. In the meantime, I have been told that two large national veterans organizations, the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, are opposed to the bill's passage. The truth of this allegation I have not ascertained. On the other hand, I have positive proof that the American Veterans Committee is actively favoring the increased subsistence.

Should the other organizations be opposed to the bill as alleged, their reasons would appear to be quite obvious.

For the most part, these organizations still are under control of the Old Guard veterans of World War I. To the minds of these men the increased subsistence would constitute a bonus for only a small portion of veterans of World War II.

The AVC dominantly is an organization of World War II veterans, many of whom are in school. Obviously these men are aware of the difficulties faced by student veterans trying to live on $65 or $90 a month in spite of the increasing living cost. The AVC has conducted an intensive survey, has determined the average cost of living for a single veteran at about $95 a month. Their statistics, I feel sure, will be further verified by budgets on men on this campus.

Thousands of student veterans, according to the AVC, have been forced to drop out of school simply because they were unable to make expenses meet. This is tragic from a number of standpoints.

First and most important, it means that men with a serious desire for education have had this denied them because living costs have spiraled beyond their reach. Only through subsidation from home, savings or other sources have many other men been able to remain in school.

Also, whenever a student is forced from school because of monetary difficulties, the government takes a financial loss on its initial investment.

The GI Bill was voted into existence in order that men may become properly trained to take over the nation's helm. Whenever one of these men finds it impossible to continue training, the original bill and its purpose suffers a personal defeat with the country.

Arguments that the bill is a bonus have been made since its advent. The pros and cons of this are manifold. As I interpret it, the GI Bill is neither bonus or dole. It is a reciprocal agreement between government and individual.

The veteran accepts the benefits of the bill, pursues his education, emerges from school mentally trained to realize his capabilities, and take a leading role in community affairs.

Eventually, too, the veterans through the medium of taxes will repay this loan and at a time when they are financially more capable of doing so.

Passage of the increased subsistence bill will enable more men to receive an education without fear of financial difficulties, without tightening belts as a result of eating two meals a day, without having to force the same clothes to last them for four or more years.

With strong opposition aligned against it, the bill will need support from every possible source. Veterans can further their own cause and that of the nation with honest, intelligent manifestations of their opinions and needs through the medium of letters to their home state congressmen, the men who were elected to represent them.

PRESIDENT TRUMAN DISLIKES MODERN ART; SAM RAYBURN PANS REPUBLICANS; ARMY SECRETARY SPURS FIGHT AGAINST LILIENTHAL

Washington.—President Truman is strictly a conservative when it comes to modern art. "Ham and Eggs" art he calls the paintings of the surrealists, the futurists, and the cubists. The Chief Executive wants his art down-to-earth and easy to understand. He likes it to be beautiful, not shocking, and to represent something.

Reporters saw an example of the art Mr. Truman loves recently, when he gave them a private showing of "The Peacemaker"—a painting by George Healy which the President had purchased for the White House for $10,000. He confided to newsmen that a New York art dealer originally had asked $18,000 for it, but he argued him down to $10,000. Mr. Truman had called in art experts from the National Gallery, who estimated the painting to be worth about $50,000—a good buy, the President thought, and bought it.

While in his office, newsmen were shown some of the art the Chief Executive despises most. He produced a spread of modern paintings from a magazine, which apparently he had been saving for just such an occasion.

"This is what I mean by ham-and-eggs art," he told the reporters, pointing to a painting of a fat semi-nude circus performer.

"I've been to a million circuses, and I've never seen a performer who looked like her," he said. "The artist must have stood off from the canvas and thrown paint at it. If that's art, then I'm a Hottentot."

SAM RAYBURN HAS FUN

Ex-Speaker Sam Rayburn had a whale of a good time at the White House recently, poking fun at the legislative program of the Republicans. He was nearly worked to death, he confided to friends, because the Republicans were passing so many bills.

"Let me see," counted up the rotund gentleman from Texas, "they passed one bill extending excise taxes and another joint resolution for Senator Butler's alcohol plant in Omaha. It keeps us very busy—very busy."

When asked if he were going to be the new Ambassador to Great Britain, Sam replied: "Well, it will have to be one of us rich boys."

BRASS HATS FIGHT ATOM

One thing to be said for the political generals in the Pentagon Building is that they never do surrender easily—especially when it comes to a seige of Capitol Hill.

Actually, about one-half the undercover opposition to David Lilienthal as Atomic Commissioner comes from the brass hats. The rest comes from Senator Taft's determination not to let a New Dealer get appointed to any high office, with some quiet sideline help from the never-dormant public utilities lobby.

Certain Trustees Could Learn Much By Studying Sociology

By Al Lowenstein

Those who would bar a sociologist from teaching for disbelieving racial nonsensities would soon have to bar all sociologists. Those who would bar a foe of rule-by-force would soon seek to burn the works of Jefferson, of Lincoln, of Lee; they would have to bar the teachings of Jesus—as indeed they seek to do. In Germany the process began with the burning of "non-Aryan" books; in Texas, with the banning of a book titled "America."

In Chapel Hill we have professors who forcibly prevent their daughters from dining where a Negro may dine. We have professors whose writings have been denounced, and many persons feel established, as pro-Nazi. We have students who feel the Negro should be shipped "back to Africa" and students who feel Negroes should be admitted to the graduate school of the University. We have students who favor subsidized football, students who oppose it, and students who don't know what it is.

We talk about these things with one another and with men who are hired to teach because they may know more about them than we. We do not hide the light of Knowledge under a bushel. When we are in the minority we seek to convert the majority.

We go to a university to learn of our fellow-beings, to hear their ideas and to appreciate and profit by their qualities. We do these things that we may live more fully, and so that we, in turn, may be of more worth to others. We can do these things only so long as our books are unburned, our professors unfettered, our student body ideologically untrammelled.

There is nothing academic about "Academic Freedom."

Professor Guy B. Johnson will be back in Chapel Hill next September and so will Professor Howard Odum, and that is good.

It is good for the University, for its reputation, and for its student body. It is especially good for its students of Sociology, and particularly of the sociology of the South, who come from all over to study at the University of North Carolina.

Since they are human and are one-time residents of Chapel Hill and are therefore probably glad to be able to return, it is probably good news too for Professor Johnson and his family and for Professor Odum and his—though financially it may not be so good, considering the doubled and tripled salaries available to both men elsewhere.

Professor Odum has been on a leave of absence for a year, teaching at Yale University. Professor Johnson has been on a leave of absence for three years, serving as a rather successful director of the Southern Regional Council in Atlanta, Georgia. Last week some members of the Board of Trustees tried to prevent the return of the "radical" Professor Johnson.

It is difficult to refrain from observing that these Trustees might benefit a great deal were they to register at the University long enough to take one of Professor Johnson's courses in Anthropology or Sociology.

The Southern Regional Council is an interracial, organization which makes no pleas for "social equality" for Negroes or for Caucasians or for anybody else. It is against things like lynchings, seizing governorships by force, and denying to qualified citizens their right to vote. In North Carolina and indeed in most of the Nation we take an almost universal opposition to such barbarisms virtually for granted.

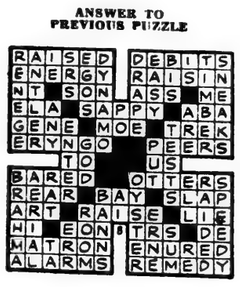
Maybe it reflects merely an unfortunate apathy toward who sits in the governor's chair in Raleigh, but it is not easy to picture Tar Heels vying to squeak through legal loopholes to get into the executive mansion—with or without the aid of detachments of stormtroops. Maybe a governorship without the power to veto just isn't lucrative enough to warrant all the fuss and force. Or maybe the housing shortage isn't as bad in Raleigh as it is in Atlanta.

Guy Johnson recently made a speech in Greensboro which much of the Faculty and much of the student body of this University would have been proud to have made. As a Tar Heel bred and as a Georgian by adoption he voiced the opposition to Herman Talmadge which democrats and Christians everywhere have felt. And as an officer of an organization dedicated to fighting for human rights ("separate and equal" if need be), he asked such members of his church audience as might agree with him to use the revolutionary device of writing letters to a single pastor in Georgia to make themselves heard.

Allegedly on the basis of this speech the sons of the great prophet Walter Clark, who was battling for equal rights for all people while the sons were still in swaddling-clothes, tried to keep Guy Johnson from returning to his post in Chapel Hill.

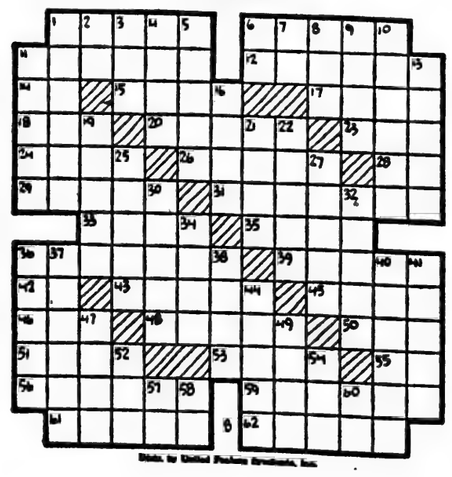
One wonders if this was not the opening gun of an offensive against the traditions of the University and State of North Carolina, as sustained through the years by men of the calibre of William R. Davie, of Nathaniel Macon, of Zebulon Vance, of Charles B. Aycock, of O. Max Gardner, and as epitomized today by Frank P. Graham.

Jonathan Daniels said the other day at a tea in the Bull's Head Book Store that he is afraid that Chapel Hill is beginning to live on its reputation, and that, like Charlottesville, its chief attraction is rapidly becoming its "quaint beauty and charm."



As long as its reputation can lure the Guy Johnsons and can keep the Phillips Russells, Chapel Hill need not fear for its "reputation." Actually a reputation, if undeserved, and even if based on past conquests, can be at best a most unedifying substitute for worth.

Athens, Georgia and College Station, Mississippi are beautiful and charming spots too. The margin of difference between Chapel Hill and Athens or College Station is the margin between the minority and majority on the Board of Trustees in their vote on Guy Johnson.



From Pickens, South Carolina' to Chapel Hill, North Carolina, may not be as far as we like to think.

DTH Misses Story--- Jake Wade Tells Why

(Ed. Note—Today we have a guest column by Jake Wade, former sports editor of the Charlotte Observer and now sports publicity director here at Carolina. He writes of the UNC football schedule.—IS.)

By Jake Wade

THE DAILY TAR HEEL got left on a sports story Sunday. Having gone through the excrutiating agonies of that experience myself many times during the long, dusty years I worked on a newspaper, I know how the boys feel about it. But their chagrin doesn't match mine, even about this particular incident. Their sin of omission was my fault, not the DTH's.

That's why I'm muscling in with this contribution today. It's the first I've done for this great campus gazette since it was a semi-weekly and manned by my young and wonderful generation. I owe the boys an apology. It occurred to me to go the whole hog and make it a public apology—to the ever suffering readers, as well as to the ever suffering editors.

Smallwood is one of my chums. Or was. Also, since I have been stationed at Chapel Hill, doing a little Carolina sports publicity up at Col. Bob Madry's business suite, I have kicked around with not only Smallwood but Goldwater, Pharr, Carmichael, Schaap and assorted other DTH sports staff men. From time to time they've done me good turns as we have hawked the playing fields together, in search of news. Occasionally I've retaliated, I hope.

But I let the DTH boys down Saturday night. It wasn't intentional. It was merely an oversight, with some extenuating circumstances. But it happened just the same. It was the football schedule story, which you didn't see in the Daily Tar Heel Sunday but read in the State papers. It was a big story and the DTH should have had it.

SMALLWOOD AND HIS STAFF had worked hard on the story. It was something that stood ready to break at any time and the boys had hounded the athletic offices daily. I had faithfully agreed to shoot it to them, and see that they got it, when the break came.

Well, the break came under unusual circumstances. I was in Greensboro late Saturday night with Smith Barrier of the Greensboro Daily News when the story of Maryland's schedule came rolling off the wires. Maryland had taken over North Carolina State's game with Duquesne. Barrier knew what that meant. It set up the proposed game between Carolina and State. Barrier had Carolina's schedule. He was ready to shoot it.

Thus, the schedule story had fallen down on our ears. There was some telephoning to Raleigh and Chapel Hill. Complete confirmation was still lacking but it was my opinion that the tentative schedule might as well be released, since the sports writers of the state were ready to cut it loose any way. It was slapped on the Associated Press wires from Greensboro.

Had the story gone out, in the customary process, from my Bynum hall mahogany work bench, the DTH would have been given the release without any delay. In Greensboro I frankly and inexcusably forgot my DTH pals, and when I did think of them, some time later, it was past their deadline and there was nothing that could be done about it. If it's any solace to them, let them know that I've been well self-tortured since then.

INCIDENTALLY, HAVING gone this far in writing for free this guest column on the News Bureau's time, I may as well add a comment or two about the schedule, the most exciting Carolina has had in recent years.

It shows, I think, that Coach Carl Snavely and our athletic council and athletic association are not picking their spots. Friends, this one is loaded with dynamite. The Tar Heels of 1947 will have their work cut out for them. From that September meeting with Georgia until the November windup with Virginia, the Tar Heels likely will pursue a trail of double trouble.

I have been in close contact with Coach Bob Fetzer during the many long hours he has worked on this schedule. It gave him some unhappy moments because of the necessity of so many shifts and the innumerable angles involved. He really had a job on his hands. The results should please Carolina supporters. Win, lose or draw, with this big league card ahead of the Tar Heels, some thrilling autumn afternoons lie ahead.

Georgia, Texas, State On Grid Schedule

Total of 10 Games Face UNC Gridmen

Carolina's seekers of gridiron fortune drew probably the toughest opening pair of games in the history of the sport here yesterday as the official 1947 slate for the Tar Heels was announced by Coach Bob Fetzer, director of athletic activities.

Georgia and Texas offer that competition in the opening two games in the schedule that includes such gridiron powers as Duke, Tennessee, Wake Forest and State in addition to the two aforementioned.

Coach Carl Snavely's gridders will get the ball rolling here in Chapel Hill September 27 with a skirmish with the tough Bulldogs from down in the peach-growing country, and on October 4 they will journey deep into land of tall men and drawls to battle the Longhorns in Austin, Texas.

The Tar Heels play four home games, with Georgia, Wake Forest, Tennessee and Virginia, and two more, Duke and State, are within a 30-mile radius. Navy, Miami and VPI were dropped to make room for the three newcomers.

The official schedule:

Sept. 27—Georgia, here.
Oct. 4—Texas, away.
Oct. 11—Wake Forest, here.
Oct. 18—W. and M., away.
Oct. 25—Florida, away.
Nov. 1—Tennessee, here.
Nov. 8—State, away.
Nov. 15—Maryland, away.
Nov. 22—Duke, away.
Nov. 25—Virginia, here.

Citadel Ringmen Defeat Tar Heel Mittmen, 6-2

Lack of Experience Spells Difference; Speigel, Sunas Register Carolina Wins

Considerably weakened by the loss of two of their best boxers, the Tar Heel ringmen were a comparatively easy target for The Citadel Bulldogs as they went down to defeat by a lopsided score of 6-2 in Charleston Saturday night.

It was the Carolina squad's lack of experience that spelled the difference. Without the support of Charlie Norton, who was unable to make the trip because of a heavy cold, and Dick Young, whose crowded schedule necessitated his resignation from the squad on Friday, the team was noticably short of men who could boast of much ring time.

Heavyweight Bill Spiegel made the best showing by scoring a TKO over his opponent in two minutes and ten seconds of the first round. Scoring continually with his potent left jabs, Spiegel won his first bout of the year, having gained a draw in his only other outing.

Bill Sunas tallied the other point for the Tar Heels by gaining a well-fought decision in the 125-pound division.

Despite his loss to Citadel slugger Jack Dupree, game UNC 155-pounder Al Winn drew much applause from the large crowd as he finished his bout, although bleeding from several small cuts.

Travel to West Point

On Friday of this week, the squad will depart for West Point to clash with the potent Army team. The Cadets have an impressive record this year but the Tar Heels' chances will be improved by the return of Norton, who has recovered from his cold and will work out this week.

The summary:

125: Bill Sunas (UNC) decisioned Albie Wilcox.

130: Lawrence Harris (Citadel) decisioned Charlie Lambeth.

135: Nick Nichols (Citadel) knocked out Herb McKiethan.

165: Dale Matthews (Citadel) won by a forfeit.

175: Bert Watson (Citadel) won by TKO over Bill Bragaw.

Heavyweight: Bill Spiegel (UNC) won by TKO over Howard Suitt.

Locals Encounter Davidson Tonight

Columbia, S. C., Feb. 17—North Carolina's up-and-coming White Phantoms, playing one of their best ball games of the season, jumped to an early lead and held on until the end to turn back South Carolina here tonight 53-47 in a Southern conference cage battle. It was the Tar Heels' seventh loop win of the season and South Carolina's fourth loss in conference play.

Guard Jim White, following up his performance of last Friday night against Georgia Tech, bucketed 17 points to pace the Tar Heel attack, and big center Nemo Nearman came through with 15 for second place scoring honors for the visitors.

Tonight sees the Phantoms journey to Charlotte for a return encounter with Davidson's Wildcats, currently battling hard for a tournament berth. A Tar Heel lineup of Bob Paxton, Jim Hamilton, Nemo Nearman, Jim White and Norm Kohler is expected to open against the Wildcat quintet of Ed White, George Peters, Buddy Cheek, and Mike and Pat Williams.

The Phantoms, who at present rest in third place in the conference standings, got off to a good start to grab a 32-22 halftime lead, and they held a sizeable margin until the final five minutes of play when the Gamecocks sliced the lead down to the six-point final gap.

Lanky Al Adams, South Carolina center, paced his team all night, but his efforts weren't enough to keep the locals in the running with the Tar Heels. North Carolina defeated the Gamecocks in Chapel Hill earlier in the season 50-49.

Journalism Student Interviews Truman

Sechriest's Face Red Over Alleged Rewrite

By Morton D. Schaap

A student in elementary news writing at the University received a big red "F" on his homework and a journalism professor has a red face. The professor has apologized and the "F" has been erased.

Journalism 53 is listed in the University catalogue as "practical exercises in news writing." Students are required to do daily rewrites of news articles, but for weekend assignments they must hand in original stories.

Student Don Wright, of Washington, violated the rules of submitting a "rewrite" of President Truman's recent Saturday press conference as his "original" homework assignment. Whereupon, Prof. Stuart Sechriest fumed, "A pox upon you, Mr. Wright," as he returned the student's paper adorned with an "F" as conspicuous as Christmas tree decorations.

"But sir," protested Wright, "I DID attend the President's conference."

The ambitious student, who apparently is trying to commence his career on the top rung of the journalistic ladder, is the son of James L. Wright, chief of the Washington bureau for the Buffalo Evening News.

It all came about when Don went home for the weekend and his father called the White house asking permission to bring him along to the Saturday session.

Not having a regular press pass, he was subjected to a harrowing ordeal by both the outer and inner gate guards and the secret service men before gaining admittance to the home of the nation's number one citizen.

Upon entrance to the White House the party was escorted to the anteroom of the President's private office, according to Don's description of events.

Regular Members First

When President Truman was ready to start the conference the regular members of the press association were admitted first and they took their regular seats along with the presidential staff. Among those present were Charlie Ross, press secretary to the President; Admiral Frank Leahy, chief of staff to the Commander in Chief, and Clark Gifford, legal adviser to the President.

One of the reporters asked the President about National Cat Week. The President replied, "I am neutral on cats and I particularly hate two-legged cats!" A woman reporter asked if that was intended to mean females. Truman answered, "No." The question was closed when another newsman asked if the reference was meant for tom cats.

Introduced to President

The biggest thrill of the day still lay in store for the young journalist when William Sessions, chief doorkeeper of the White House, took him by the arm and said that he was going to introduce him to the President. Before they reached their goal they were intercepted by Clark Gifford, who turned out to be a Kappa Alpha fraternity brother of Don's. He volunteered to introduce the student journalist to the Chief Executive.

When they reached the President and the formal introductions had been made, they shook hands. Young Wright says that he was so nervous that he still cannot remember what the Chief Executive said to him.

The whole affair lasted about a half an hour but the thrill of a lifetime for Don Wright will always be his first "Washington assignment."

Senate Caucus Fixes Budget

Group Hikes Figure Of Joint Committee

Washington, Feb. 18—(UP)—The Senate Republican caucus late today voted for a budget of $33,500,000,000 for the 1948 fiscal year. The figure is four and one-half billion less than President Truman's recommendation but a billion and a half more than that of the joint congressional budget committee.

The vote for the smaller cut was 22 to 19, with one GOP senator sticking to a five billion reduction figure.

Although the caucus vote does not bind the GOP membership in the upper house, it does indicate that the senate will vote for the lesser cut in view of the expected support from the Democrats.

Debates Tomorrow

Debate on the budget ceiling starts in the senate tomorrow. House Republicans will hold a caucus on it at the same time. The lower chamber is expected to stick to the six billion cut when it votes tomorrow.

The Senate is expected to debate the subject for about a week.

Gen. Marshall Defends Dean Acheson Remarks

House Cites Eisler On Contempt Charge

Washington, Feb. 18—(UP)—The House by a 370-to-one vote has cited Gerhart Eisler, alleged Russian agent, for contempt of congress. The contempt charge resulted from Eisler's refusal to be sworn in as a witness before the house un-American activities committee. The Justice department will now prosecute.

Pennsylvania Express Wrecked in Altoona

Altoona, Pa. Feb. 18—(UP)—An official of the Pennsylvania railroad reports that 13 bodies have been removed from the wreckage of the Red Arrow express near Altoona. Four more are believed in the wreckage. At least 105 persons were injured, some seriously, when the train leaped the tracks, sending two locomotives and five cars crashing down a 90-foot embankment.

Scott Lucas Supports Lilienthal Appointment

Washington, Feb. 18—(UP)—Democratic Senator Scott Lucas, of Illinois, has joined the forces supporting the appointment of David Lilienthal the head of the Atomic Energy commission. Congress Will Vote On Budget Tomorrow

Washington, Feb. 18—(UP)—The House will vote on the proposed six billion dollar slash in President Truman's budget tomorrow. The House Rules committee sent the $21,500,000,000 budget proposal to the floor today and virtually barred efforts to alter the figure.

WSSF Asks Fraternity Group To Select House Solicitors

The central committee for the World Student Service fund campaign has announced that the Interfraternity council will be asked to appoint solicitors for each fraternity house, since only one fraternity had contributed at the completion of the drive Monday.

Phi Gamma Delta has contributed $47, according to Gay Morenus, co-chairman for the drive, bringing the tabulated total to $2,200. Fraternity solicitations will be made only through tomorrow. The campaign can be termed a success, Morenus said. "We barely topped the $1000 mark last year and the committee feels that the over 200 active campus workers for the campaign can be highly commended," she added.

The committee has released some sample total contributions from territories included in the drive. Among them were Victory village, $33; Kenan dormitory, $45; Alderman dormitory, $72; and Mangum dormitory $31.26.

Many groups on the campus have give special offerings in the campaign, including the Wesley foundation, the Baptist Student union, Aquinas club, Presbyterian Student group, Canterbury club, Congregational Christian Young People, and Methodist Young Adults'. Sunday School class.

Tag Montague Named to Head Graham Memorial Directors

Winston-Salem Commerce Major Is Elected To Succeed Sibyl Goerch to Union Position

Paul "Tag" Montague, Deke from Winston-Salem, was chosen to succeed retiring chairman Sibyl Goerch as head of the new Graham Memorial Board of Directors in a meeting of the group on Monday. Montague will be chairman of the student union group, recently streamlined to 12 members, seven of them students.

In the most important business of the meeting, the board voted to send Martha Rice, director of Graham Memorial, to the national conference of student unions in Urbana, Illinois, in April.

Form Four Committees

Four committees were formed in the Monday session. A budget, building and maintenance, space, and an appointment of a new director committee, were created to work with Miss Rice.

The Board of Directors is composed of five faculty or administrative members as well as the seven students. All students are new members. Donald Witter represents the men's Interdormitory council and Virginia Wilson the Women's council. Tommie Holding is delegate from the YWCA, and Jimmy Cansler the YMCA. Furniture Excess Will Be Checked In Dormitories

The buildings department of the University will make a check through mens' dormitories of the upper and lower quadrangles in a few days to remove surplus furniture and to attempt to bring furniture in all rooms up to the required level, dormitories manager Bill Smith said yesterday.

At the present time there is not enough furniture available to equip fully all rooms, and the University has been unable to procure new furniture beyond the amount designated for new dormitories, Smith said.

Normal complement of furniture for a two man room is one double or two single tables, one bureau and two chairs; for a three man room, one double and one single or three single tables, two bureaus, three chairs; for a four man room, two double or four single tables, two bureaus, four chairs.

Students in rooms containing either more or less furniture than the normal requirements may report the discrepancies to Bill Smith in the Utilities office, South building basement.

Two Horns as Easy as One For Jivester Sonny Dunham

By Bookie Jabine

Two horns are as easy as one for Sonny Dunham, trombone-trumpet playing band leader who will appear here at Saturday's concert and dance sponsored by the German club.

One of the few top-flight musicians who have mastered both instruments, Dunham fronts an 18-piece band which features "subdued swing-appealing to both young and old."

On the bill with Dunham will be Paula Kelly and the Modernaires, a vocal group which have won fame chiefly through recordings.

Concert Saturday

The concert scheduled for 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon in Memorial hall, while the dance, to be held in Woollen gymnasium, will get underway at 9 that evening. The German club figure will be held at the Saturday's affair.

No newcomer to swing circles, Dunham has been under the big tent for several years playing with numerous other bands before forming his own.

Playing for Friday night's dance, which will be held in Woollen from 8 until 12 o'clock, will be Dean Hudson and his orchestra whose main claim to fame is innumerable college engagements and dates at some of the bigger east coast night spots.

Carroll Tomlinson, president of the German club, explained that tentative plans call for a concert in Memorial hall on Friday afternoon from 4 until 6 o'clock.

House Managers Group Invites Participation

The House Managers' association, organized several fraternities on campus during the fall quarter, invites all fraternities not participating in its program as yet to send their house or dining room manager, and/or treasurer to attend their meetings every Monday night at 6:30 in Graham Memorial.

The aim of the organization is to make for more efficient operation of fraternities from a house and dining room management standpoint. Mutual problems and possible solutions are presented, aside from the actual sharing of information about sources of supply, services, and prices.

Some of the more important problems under consideration are employee wage stabilization, uniform employee vacation policies, and a cooperative buying system.

Ralph Hyde Quits Ivy Tower to Help Race Relations

Sociology Major Aids Negro Book Drive

By Ken Rothwell

"I'm tired of sitting in an ivy tower philosophizing about race relations and doing nothing about it."

These are the words of Ralph W. Hyde, a senior in sociology from Montgomery, Ala., who probably devotes more time to improving race relations than any other student on the campus.

When the Negro residents of Carrboro last fall decided to launch a book donation drive for the library in their community center they received aid from such organizations as the Southern Conference for Human Welfare and the American Veterans committee. Hyde, a member of both organizations, saw in this an opportunity to translate his words into a constructive line of action.

Collected over 700 Books

The campaign over on the campus, Hyde took it from there and formed the liaison between Chapel Hill and the leaders of the Negro community. Over 700 books had been collected, ranging from light fiction to highly technical textbooks, that had to be transported to Carrboro, catalogued, and arranged on shelves.

Since that time he and his committee of interested students have shared long hours of work at the handsome Carrboro community center with Negro leaders like E. F. Robertson, director of the center, Mrs. Alvese D. Jones, library director, and Melvin Scales, sixth grade teacher and athletic coach at the Orange county training school. The library is but a small part of the center, erected entirely by volunteer workers in the Carrboro community except for some Navy aid.

AVC, SCHW Donate To Carrboro Library

The appearance of the library, catalogued neatly by a combined committee of students and Carrboro residents working under Mrs. Jones, is concrete evidence of how much these donations are appreciated in Carrboro.

At Theological School

Hyde, a veteran of four years service as a Navy pharmacist's mate with the Fifth Marine division, attended Lipscomb college, a theological school at Nashville, Tenn., prior to the war.

"I have always wanted to do something to improve race relations but my feeling crystallized during the war when I realized the Negro was fighting for the same things I was," said Hyde in speaking of his work at the community center.

"It should be understood, however, that I've been acting only as a go-between and the real work has been done by Carrboro residents themselves," he added.

Precincts Needed

The Student Legislature passed a controversial, much-discussed, long-needed bill last Thursday evening, to create four new polling places on the campus. We believe 7,000 students cannot vote in campus elections within one polling place. In a comparable city of 7,000, three or four precincts would be established.

Yet this new measure is in essence exactly the same bill which was defeated in the Legislature shortly before the November elections. The defeated bill also provided for four additional polling places, but they would have been situated so as to be more advantageous to one certain political party on the campus.

However, the great imperfection in this bill is not in the location of the ballot boxes, but in the fact that there is no provision for precincts. That is, a student, under these rules, could legally vote in all five of these polling places—Lenoir hall, lower quadrangle, Gerrard hall, Carolina inn, or McIver dormitory—with ony the honor system to prevent him from "stuffing" the ballot boxes. And great and good as the honor system has proven, there is no sense in actually begging that it be broken.

We emphasize again, there is no provision to require voting in precincts as the bill now stands; a student does not have to vote in the polling place nearest his residence; and there is nothing to prevent him from voting in all five polling places.

This fact seems to have been purely an oversight, yet an extremely serious one. It appears that both parties in the Legislature, each equally surprised that the other one wholeheartedly supported the bill, cast aside any thought as to the imperfection of the measure, and merely steamrollered it through, each feeling a great amount of personal satisfaction over having "engineered" such a political feat.

With four thousand students in school in 1942, there were a number of precincts on the campus, and students were required to vote in their respective residential districts. The polling place was centralized only recently, and now the necessity of additional polling places is once again well recognized.

Thus we urge another legislative look at this measure. We urge President Dewey Dorsett not to veto this bill, but to return it to the legislature with the request that it reconsider it. To leave it in its present state is to invite, even beg for corruption in voting. Therefore we advocate a revision of this bill by the Legislature, and the consequent adoption of measures to create geographical precincts for each of these five polling places, with the requirment that students vote only in their own districts.

—Just as national, state and municipal elections have been run for years.

Twenty per cent of Czechoslovakia's 60,000 students are tuberculars.

I'd Rather Be Right...

Charges Against Catholic Church Termed Baseless and Unwarranted

By Earl Heffner

Europe is in two militant camps. The participants are dueling at close range. The Communists are hurling charges of dictatorship at the Catholics; the Catholics are smearing the Communists with red paint. Communists look to Moscow and Stalin for leadership; the Catholics look to Rome and the Vatican.

Such seem to be the opinions of Columnists John W. Bristow and Stuart Lucas. As I read these opinions and repeat them now, I look for the "grain of salt" or better stimulant to take with this unwarranted standpoint.

The evils of Communism are often cited and justly so. These political parasites work from within and destroy much that is good as well as much that is evil in other systems. An exposure of their policies and aims when based on unbiased facts is an admirable undertaking.

Perhaps, the greatest evil in Communism lies not in it but with it as with all of its opponents in that these conservative and reactionary elements seek to destroy liberal movements by labeling them with the communist name.

It is this smear tactic that hamstrings the liberal movement in this country and in others. Unfortunately, the fallacious practice of grouping liberals with communists generally is effective because of the inability of most persons to ascertain the exact connotation of the word liberal.

But an attack on the Catholic church without any supporting authority is unwarranted.

Often it is fashionable to join in the persecution of a political, educational, racial, or theological group. It may be the communists, the fascists, the conservatives, the Mormons, the Negroes, the Chinese. Or, as in this case, it may be the Catholics.

Or perhaps the assault was intended to create a diversion, to chase the highly controversial and emotional Negro question from peoples' minds with another question of greater emotion and less immediate effect on our campus.

Early in the last war a ship went to a watery grave off Greenland, an icy grip of death for many men in those intolerable waters. The vessel was the Dorchester.

It didn't attract many headlines. It was such a small event that most have forgotten about it. History may never record the incident. Yet, four men displayed a heroism during this tragic strictly in accordance with the teachings of Christ, a heroism requiring more courage than most of us—certainly more than I—could have mustered.

There were too few lifeboats, too few life belts. So four chaplains—their names were Poling, Fox, Washington, and Goode—gave their life belts to other men. Nor did they stop to ask the religion of the men to whom they were being benefactors. Two of the chaplains were Protestants, one a Catholic, one a Jew. These men joined hands in prayer and went down with the ship. Could anyone call this a militant action?

None of these men faced Moscow, Rome, Jerusalem, or Washington. They all faced heaven for leadership, having displayed a leadership of their own.

To the liberals of our nation we owe the American constitution. To the Christian church we owe the concepts of decency that enable us to look forward to a world of peace and happiness.

The Catholic church also was assaulted because Franco, the Spanish Detestable Dictator, has restored to the Jesuits and other religious orders all their former rights, privileges, and possessions, has put the schools under their control, and has forbidden the public practice of any save Catholic religion.

Franco is a corrupt despot with a record comparable, although on a smaller scale, with that of Hitler. Yet, because he is evil, because one of his decrees is basically evil, doesn't mean that no good can come from the man. I'd defend the devil as soon as defend Franco.

Spaniards should be permitted freedom of religion. Yet, as long as this cannot be at present, we should be thankful that at least one Christian religion is permitted in their country.

That Catholicism is an enduring enemy of communism is evident, is good and is true. That the peace and security of Europe is threatened by this division of beliefs is false.

As long as men possess intelligence, they should be able to reconcile themselves in a way of peace. Certainly, the Catholic church can never be charged with desiring to sow the seeds of another war.

Matter of Pride

In regard to the article written by Mr. Al Lowenstein, it seems that he and others feel that our Professor's daughters must dine where a Negro dines in order to improve our University. Frankly, I am truly proud that we have professors who, if it were necessary would forcibly prevent their daughters dining with Negroes. It shows pride that everyone unfortunately doesn't possess.

As of yesterday's article by Mr. Lowenstein, he is afraid of tearing down what noted men of our state such as William R. Davie, Nathanial Macon, Zebulon Vance, Charles B. Aycock, and O. Max Gardner have done. Well, none of these men have advocated Negroes attending school with whites, however, Aycock did do a great part in giving colored and white an equal education. That's fine, I agree that Negroes should have an equal education, but in a separate institution. The Constitution of North Carolina provides that there be equal educational facilities for white and colored alike, but at separate institutions. The people of our fine state agree upon this, but they do not agree that Negroes attend with whites.

Perhaps ones environment has much to do with their outlook upon life. Naturally, if one has been raised with the colored it doesn't quite seem natural unless they attend school with the colored. Here in North Carolina this situation of colored and white attending same schools does not and has not prevailed. Must one attend schools with Negroes to secure a liberal education?

The state of North Carolina provides colleges and a graduate school for Negroes at Durham, N. C.

Dorothy Maynor would not accept an invitation to this University unless there be no racial segregation. It was agreed and she appeared for her program with white and colored sitting side by side, but when she appeared at the Negro college in Durham the whites sat on one side and the colored on the opposite. Have we more pride or have the colored at Durham more pride?

Time Is at Hand to Consider Plans for Summer Leadership

By Jud Kinberg

With spring upon us in full force, how far behind can summer be?

That very potent thought has revolved about in my spring-filled head and brought a conclusion which I'm afraid not too many people have considered.

In former years, and especially on a war-depleted campus, summer school has always been the poor relation of the regular quarters. Most of student leaders were on their two months' fiesta in July and August. The result was student government which not even summer's cool drinks could invigorate.

That lack of leadership and general summer apathy was one of the reasons why the new provisions of the Constitution got off to so disappointing a start last year. I believe it was Chief Justice Hughes who said that all government is one of "men, not laws." Deprived of the men and with no replacements trained, student government has always been incapable of fully discharging its duties during the summer months.

That deficiency was never very hazardous when July-August enrollment was made up of visiting school teachers and high schoolers, as in the past. But last year, enrollment hit well over 3,000. According to a recent report from Summer School director Guy B. Phillips, the coming session will have an even larger number of students.

All this means that none of our essential groups on campus will be able to take a vacation. A student body of 3,500 certainly needs the Daily Tar Heel, the Student Legislature, Honor Council and even a summer Magazine. True they will all be here, with the exception of the Mag, but will there be the talented men to mastermind them.

Right now, or the first month of spring quarter at the latest, all student organizations should take stock of their manpower. No doubt a large number of next year's leaders will not be on campus this summer. If this is true, they must set about finding capable replacements for July and August.

This may seem to be a lot of premature worrying, but I believe it is about time to start substituting inexpensive preventatives for the expensive cures we seem to favor in our student government.

COMING DER SPRINGER zie birdies ben singen, zie ball-basen batters ben ahitten der ballers, and der pipplers be wanten outsiden to being. So speakens Eric von Outsfielder, potentate of der auserletics in der school of de Tahr-ge Hielers.

No, we haven't been swapping glances with "Influence." We have just been observing the actions of the "weather struck" athletes around Carolina who have begun en force to get ready for spring sports.

Between the cold spells that have frequented Chapel Hill during the past couple of weeks, the lads who live and breathe with a baseball glove on and a bat in their hand have been going out and limbering up their arms and gathering in a few deep spring breaths. The gentlemen who stroll the links in the name of Carolina have been accelerating their golfing in view of the close season ahead, and the tennis aspirants are gayly anticipating full-time activities with the coming of warmer weather.

Of course this is only spasmodic action in the realm of spring sports, but the fact remains that before too many more days things are going to be unstling on a full-time spring schedule. The tennis slate has already been released, and the baseball and golf cards will be forthcoming soon.

Turning to the more immediate activity concerning the Tar Heels, we find the White Phantoms moving ever nearer the top of the ladder in the Southern conference race. If State succeeded in defeating Duke last night, the Carolina quint moved into a tie with Duke for second rung (this supposing, too, that the Phants turned back Davidson.)

At any rate, Carolina has come from a 3-2 average to a 7-2 count (before last night), which is a four-game win splurge, and it has brought the Tar Heels from seventh to third and possibly second place in the chase. And it leaves Coach Tom Scott's improved quint a top contender for the conference crown.

LAYUP OBSERVATIONS following Georgia Tech and South Carolina games: Senior guard Jim White, who was an important cog last year in the NCAA finalist White Phantom team, has been running wild in his last two performances before last night. He led the scoring against Tech in a game that was his last home appearance, and then again Monday night he was the top man in scoring and on the floor. He bucketed 15 against Tech and 17 against the Gamecocks. . .Too, Nemo "The Reach" Nearman duplicated his Duke performance of last week against the South Carolinians, adding 15 points to the Tar Heel cause. . .And Jim Hamilton, also a senior and better known as the Wizard of Weir, tallied 12 markers against South Carolina to keep up his current scoring pace. . .Johnny Dillon's two quick hooks in the Georgia Tech game and his two foul shots shortly thereafter provided important points as the Phants took the Georgians into camp. . . And finally Ben Carnevale of Navy writes congrats on the Tar Heel victory over Duke.

One of the best wrestling teams to represent Carolina in years this weekend faces its toughest meet of the current season, and although they are going against heavy odds, the local grapplers are going in for a fight. The meet, with the Naval academy at Annapolis, pits the Tar Heels against several eastern intercollegiate champions and a couple of national champs. The Navy Jayvee team beat State earlier in the season.

This outstanding Carolina team, coached by veteran Chuck Quinlan, the unspoken little head trainer of the football team during the spring and fall, just this past Saturday proved its mettle in the best fashion by whipping a strong VMI mat crew 17-11. This was the score giving VMI five points via the forfeit route in the heavyweight division.

The local matmen, not just the eight men who answer the call in the matches but the whole lot of them, have been working hard since way back in the fall, and theirs has been one of the finest jobs of any Carolina athletic team this season, barring none and regardless of how they do from here on out we should all be proud of them, the lads who grunt and groan daily down there in Woollen gym's "torture" chamber and then go out and bring home the bacon. We're sure we all are. Nice going fellas, keep it up!

Wrestlers Prep For Middies

Coach Chuck Quinlan's undefeated Tar Heel wrestling team underwent two lineup changes yesterday and continued hard preparations for the match this Saturday at Annapolis with the potent Naval Academy club.

Tommy Hearn, unbeaten co-captain, was switched to 128-pounds for the matches, and Tom Urquhart, winner of five out of six matches, was sent up to the 136-pound class.

Navy is a heavy favorite for the match, their Junior Varsity team having trounced State college earlier in the season. The Middies sport a couple of national champs and several eastern intercollegiate title-holders.

This will be the biggest test of the season for the locals according to Coach Quinlan, who is in his 21st year of coaching Tar Heel mat combines. Carolina's matmen are scheduled to leave Chapel Hill Friday for Annapolis and battle the Navy crew Saturday afternoon.

The Tar Heels have one more match, with Virginia here, before the Southern conference tournament which is slated for the second weekend in March.

Jayvee Quintet Plays Tonight

Opposes Fort Bragg In Return Contest

By Gil McLeod

The Jayvee cagers will put their unbeaten record on the line again tonight when they travel to Fort Bragg for a return engagement with the First Regiment Cannoneers.

The Hayworthmen will be gunning for their 13th triumph.

Starting Team

Starting the game for the jayvees will be the same quint that tripped the Duke Blue Imps last Saturday. That places Fred Swartzburg and Ed Wagner in the forward posts, and Junie Bailey at center, with Jack Fitch and Dan Nyimicz filling the guard positions.

Also slated to see action against the service five are Harvey Weinstein, Paul von Bramer, Rover Henson, Marks Nathan, and Ken Curtis.

The jayvees, backed up by several varsity reserve players, took an earlier encounter from the Cannoneers, 69-42, but tonight's game will be played on the Army quint's home court and stiffer competition is expected.

Two other games are scheduled for the jayvees this week. Friday afternoon in Woollen gym they tangle for the third time with the Duke Blue Imps, and Saturday they return to Fort Bragg to play the strong 4th Signal Batallion quintet.

Boxers Leave Friday For Match with Army

Coach Mike Ronman's ringmen will leave Chapel Hill Friday night by train for West Point, where the Tar Heel leather-punchers will meet the Army boxing team on Saturday.

The Black Knights of Army will be rated heavy favorites to take the Carolina mittmen, on the basis of season records for both teams. The Tar Heels have been improving in spite of squad losses and are expected to put up a good battle in the underdog role.

Dolphins Battle State Mermen In Tough Encounter Saturday

Loop Swimming Records Expected to Fall As Two Top Teams Tangle in Tank Tussle

Several dual meet and Southern conference swimming records are expected to be broken in Bowman Gray pool Saturday when the two leading teams in the loop—Carolina's Blue Dolphins and State's tankmen—meet in what looms as the toughest swim of the season for the locals.

State, directed by former Carolina swimming coach Willis Casey, will be rated favorites to win Saturday's meet. The Red Terrors boast an undefeated record thus far this season, with victories over Georgia Tech, Virginia, VPI, VMI, Clemson, Georgia, and Emory under their belts. The Raleigh team added the Carolina Indoor AAU title to their slate two weeks ago.

The Tar Heel swimmers are not quite as well balanced as usual, Coach Dick Jamerson stated yesterday, but are not to be counted out of the meet. "We could win if State slips up any place or if we do a little better than we have managed to do thus far," he declared.

Long Streak

Carolina holds an outstanding record in conference swimming circles. The Blue Dolphins hold a string of 26 consecutive loop wins and are undefeated in conference dual meets since 1939.

The main interest in the meet will center in the 400-meter relay. State has bettered the conference record in this event twice this season in previous starts.

Double Incentive

The Red Terrors will have a double incentive to take the contest this weekend. Coach Casey hopes to break the long monopoly the local mermen have held in conference swimming tilts. And a win Saturday will give State its first victory in dual meet competition over the Tar Heels in the swimming history of the two schools.

Coach Casey has a team built around three outstanding performers, Bill Kelly, breaststroke and free style star, Bill Ward, sprinter and relay swimmer, and Bill Desperes, standout in the 220 and backstroke events.

Entries for Indoor Games Flood Into Athletic Office

State, Duke, VPI, Maryland, Davidson, and South Carolina. Southeastern conference schools signifying their acceptance to invitations are Tennessee, Mississippi, Florida, Georgia and Georgia Tech. The independent schools list Mercer, Virginia, Bridgewater College, Southwestern of Memphis, West Chester Teachers College of Pennsylvania.

Competition is expected to be top-notch in all events and records are bound to be set flying in all divisions.

The early list of high school entrants include North Fulton of Atlanta; Huntington, West Va., George Washington of Alexandria, Va., Greensboro, John Marshall of Richmond, Dunn, Georgia Military Academy, Durham, High Point and Newport News, Va.

The entries are still incomplete and it will not be known until closing time Saturday the complete list of teams entered in the Indoor classic of the south.

Birth of Quadruplets Surprises Biscuit Man

New York, Feb. 18—(UP)—A New York biscuit salesman and his wife had a name ready for the child they expected last night.

They thought they had prepared for any blessed event by picking one name for a boy and another for a girl.

But when 22-year-old Mrs. Judith Mazzei asked to see her child, both she and her husband, a National Biscuit Co. salesman, were stumped. They needed two more names for boys quick. Mrs. Mazzei learned she had given birth to quadruplets, three boys and a girl. She says: "Even the doctor is surprised. He expected only one."

Temporarily, the hospital staff salved the name problem by giving the quads names as easy as A, B, C and D.

Right now, A, B, C, and D, who weigh only about one pound each, are in an incubator. Dr. Stelle Schaeffer Epstein, who deliverde them describes their chance of surviving as "fair."

AFL Official Regards Reply As Rejection

CIO Not Satisfied With Merger Terms

Washington, Feb. 19.—(UP)—A high A. F. of L. official says he regards the CIO reply to his group's merger offer as a flat rejection. He states special committees from the two huge parent organizations soon will hold at least one meeting to see if there is any chance of getting together.

CIO President Philip Murray agreed last night to appoint a five-man group to meet with a comparable A. F. of L. panel. In doing so, he hedged somewhat on the merger issue. He said the committees first should work out a joint program of opposition to restrictive labor legislation. In this way, he said the two unions could demonstrate their ability to carry out joint action and then could proceed to a merger discussion.

The A. F. of L. spokesman hints of a possible working arrangement for the time being. He gave the impression that his organization would ask the rival group to accept a three-way agreement, binding on both sides.

Under this arrangement, both sides would agree not to attempt to organize plants where the other is the present representative; they would refrain from new organizing drives immediately following loss of an election; and they would consent to definite steps toward merger within a year or two.

British Sources Say Wavell Will Resign

London, Feb. 19.—(UP)—Well informed British sources say that Viscount Wavell will return soon to London. They add that he probably will resign as viceroy of India on grounds that a widening split between Moslems and Hindus in the interim government has made his position too difficult. The London Evening Standard says Prime Minister Attlee will announce Viscount Wavell's retirement during his statement on India before commons tomorrow.

Federal Works Agency Approves State Grants

Washington, Feb. 19.—(UP)—The Federal Works agency has approved 13 advances to five North Carolina communities for advance planning on public works improvements.

The city of Durham gets four of the grants totaling about $144,000. They are for plans and specifications on water works and sewerage improvements.

Three of the advances go to Roxboro in connection with proposed water and sewer improvements, and two will go to Liberty for the same purpose.

Kinston will receive more than $4,000 for plans on a stadium and athletic field, and Ramseur will get three advances totaling $2,550 for plans and specifications on sewerage and water extensions.

Freshman Bill To Be Debated In Legislature

Discussion of the bill to organize the freshman and sophomore classes looms as the most important business of the agenda at the meeting of the Student legislature this evening at 7:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

The bill was introduced last week by Charlie Long and debate ended when the meeting adjourned. The assembly had suspended the rules in order to discuss the measure when lack of a quorum forced adjournment.

Class Schedule Bill

To be reported out of the Ways and Means committee is a bill which recommends to the administration that professors' names be attached to the class schedule, and the resolution also contains a condemnation of the new registration system and urges that University officials revert to a modified type of the old system.

The chairman of the Ways and Means committee, Bill Miller, will also report on the recent hearing his group has held concerning publication and policy of the Daily Tar Heel. DTH officials have appeared before the panel at the meetings during the week.

The legislature will vote on the budget for the fiscal year 1946-47 which was submitted by Finance Committee Chairman Bill Mackie at last week's meeting.

Speaker Charlie Warren also stated that a bill to amend the new polling places measures will probably be introduced this evening.

Also pending is another elections proposal which was reported out of Johnny Clampitt's elections last week is a bill giving the student body president power to appoint officers to fill vacancies that may occur in student government.

Officer Impeachment

The Ways and Means committee is expected to report unfavorably on a bill which would in effect give the Student council the power to impeach or punish erring student government officers. Also there will be a recommendation that the Publications Board hold open meetings.

Under the provisions of a recent bill introduced by Tom Eller, and passed by the assembly, the following campus activities have been ordered to appear before the Legislature and render a financial and policy report; Publications board, Student Entertainment committee, Debate council, Interfraternity council, University Veterans' associations, House Privileges board, Graham Memorial board, Interdormitory council, and Elections board.

Denard to Appear Here At Catholic Sessions

The Catholic leader and speaker for Religious emphasis week will be Father Edmund Denard, professor of Sacred Theology at the Catholic University of America. Father Denard will conduct a lenten retreat in conjunction with the University's Religious program for the week on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday nights at 7:30 in Gerrard hall. Benediction, a short and ancient service of the church will be followed with a sermon by Father Denard on each night.

On Wednesday night he will speak in conjunction with the Protestant and Jewish leaders at the campus-wide meeting in Memorial hall. Townspeople as well as students are urged to attend all of these meetings.

Father Denard will be available during the day for informal meetings and discussions groups with any interested persons. He can be reached at the Catholic rectory, 218 Pittsboro street, after Sunday.

Library Seeking New Methods To Combat Rising Book Theft

Officials Attribute Loss of Text Books To Shortage Created by Large Enrollment

By Melville S. Cohen

To combat a 200 per cent jump in book thefts apparent during the fall quarter the University library has introduced stringent regulations governing the checking out of books.

Of 600 books missed during the past year, library officials estimated in recent interviews, 350 disappeared during the two and one-half month fall quarter. Although no figures are available, it is estimated that the financial losses run well into the four figure category.

Library personnel however is more concerned with the loss to the students. Bill Bulloch, reserve reading room supervisor, stated that "the percentage of students gaining access to books is tremendously reduced with each book lost. It is for this reason that the library has shown so much concern over lost books. Many of them are irreplaceable."

Library officials attribute the increase thefts to the irritation of the book shortage by the increased enrollment. After frustrated attempts to obtain books for daily assignments, students have resorted to: (1) deliberately stealing books without checking them out; (2) taking books from shelves intending to return them; (3) keeping checked-out books when they do get them, reasoning that it is worth the fine; (4) tearing pages out of reference books and carrying them to their rooms.

The greatest permanent losses were sustained by the general college library and the reserve reading room. Total fall quarter deficits for these two sections were 200 publications as compared with a previous high for one quarter of 70 books. Consequently the library in January introduced more rigid rules than have ever been exercised in the past, which resulted in a sharp drop in losses.

The reserve reading room and the general college library now require that all students show identification cards upon checking out a book. Narrow passageways leaving the library have been set up next to the check out desks to prevent students from taking books that have not been checked out. In addition, books most frequently missing have been put on closed shelves behind the desks so they cannot be taken without being checked out.

Pointing out the shortage of books as the main factor stimulating thefts, Bulloch said that of an original 45 copies of Rockwell Kent's "Translations of Chaucer" last spring, 15 were left at the end of the summer term. "On the other hand," he said, "the economics department which supplied a sufficient number of books by buying them themselves experiences only negligible loss."

Davidson College Trustees Vote to Increase Tuition

Davidson, N. C., Feb. 19.—(UP)—The Davidson college board of trustees has deferred action on a financial campaign to complete the college building program despite warning that the school is filled to capacity and will need more space desperately next year. The building question will be taken up at a meeting in May.

Today the board voted to increase tuition charges to $300 a year beginning this fall it also voted to speed up salary increases for faculty members by immediate adoption of automatic raises that would go into effect in 1948.

Holding its annual midwinter meeting at Davidson, the board also named Charles A. Parker to the coaching staff to teach wrestling and assist in other sports.

All-Time High

College President John R. Cunningham reported that the 897 students enrolled this year represent an all-time high. He added that many hundreds of applications had been rejected because the college lacked facilities to handle more students.

Cunningham says the problem will be even greater next year. He points out that many college students recently returned from military service have not yet resumed their studies, and that North Carolina high schools will graduate 11,000 boys this year compared to 3,600 last year. The increase, he says, is due to addition of the 12th year to the state school system.

Booker Paintings Now Being Shown In Person Gallery

By Dee Sweat

Among the paintings in the North Carolina Artists Exhibit at Person hall are two excellent examples of the work of Nell Booker, native Chapel Hill artist, entitled "City Street Scene" and "Portrait of a Man."

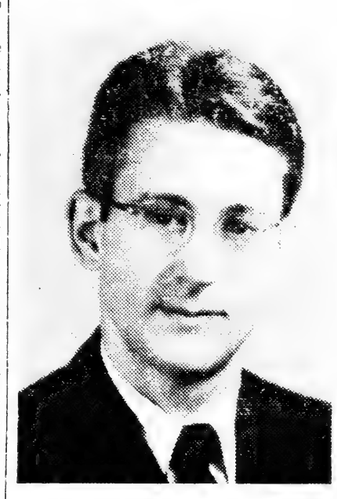
Miss Booker received her college degree here at the University and then went to New York city to study at the Art Students league. While in New York she studied under almost every teacher in the city, from the most conservative to the most radical, including Raphael and Moses Soyer and George Crosz.

She says that drawing comes more naturally to her than painting; that drawing seems instinctive and painting a necessary burden. She, therefore, prefers to work in oil, due to its versatile quality. She lays claim to no approach or technique other than a search for reality in an object. Her two paintings in the exhibit show a strong influence of other artists whom she admires.

Other Chapel Hill artists displaying paintings in the exhibit are Kenneth Ness, Mary Louise Huse, Clare Leighton, Mabel Smith, and Ben Williams.

"The Awakening," a large dynamic oil by Kenneth Ness, is an example of the modern trend in art. Ness is a resident artist at the University. Professor Ness, who has been connected with the art department here since 1941 spent three months in Florence, Italy, during the war, holding studio classes in drawing and painting for combat veterans in the U. S. Army Study Center. He was one of a group if civilian instructors sent to Europe after V-E Day to conduct classes for American soldiers until they could return home.

WSSF Collects $2,300 In Recent Campaign



Gay Morenus, co-chairman of the World Student Service fund campaign, said last night that almost $2,300 has been collected. This sum is well over twice as much as was collected last year. Morenus said, "We are particularly enthusiastic over the response of Victory Village."

As only one fraternity, Phi Gamma Delta, had contributed at the end of the drive Monday; solicitors have been asked to canvass the individual fraternity houses. Although the original goal of WSSF was $5,500, the central committee considers the drive a success.

Solicitations closed Monday. However, individual contributions will still be accepted

New System Will Be Used to Select Nominees for Legislature Positions

Alex Davis, chairman of the University party, announced yesterday that primary elections for dormitory representatives to the student legislature will be held next Thursday. Elections will be held in Manly, Mangum, Lewis, Steele, Old West, Battle-Vance-Pettigrew and in Nash and Miller halls combined. Primary elections will be held in the other nine dormitories next fall before December elections.

ALEX DAVIS

A polling place will be set up in each dormitory and will be kept open from noon to 11 p. m. to insure all residents a chance to vote. Ballots will be printed and the name of every man endorsed by 10 members of the dormitory will be included on the ballot provided that the man is willing to run.

Will Count Write-Ins

Write-in ballots will be counted. To insure a fair election all interested persons will be allowed to assist at the polls and watch the counting of the ballots. Only men living in the dormitory will be allowed to vote.

Davis stated that the University party decided upon the new method for selecting nominees for two main reasons: "First, because there are many good men who have a sincere interest in student government who do not want to join a political party or politick for office."

"The second reason," Davis continued, "is that men living in a dormitory know each other better and are more able to choose the best man. No group of 20 or 40 students can know all the qualified men in a school of 7,000 students. We will do all that we can to insure that these elections are fair to select the candidates which the dormitory residents want to represent them in the Student Legislature."

Zionists Present Field Secretary In Talk Tonight

Gerald M. Littman, field secretary of the national office of the Intercollegiate Zionist Federation of America will speak to the Carolina chapter of the IZFA at their meeting tonight at 7:30 o'clock in the Roland Parker lounge, Graham Memorial.

The campus Zionist organization was founded in 1941 and is the successor to similar organizations on American campuses since the first World War. Membership in the National IZFA includes membership in the World Movement which is sometimes called "Jewish Parliament." Payment of a poll tax called the shekel or 50 cents entitles one to membership and the holder of the shekel subscribes to the "Basle Program and to the discipline of the World Zionist Organization."

The Carolina IZFA, through its speaker's bureau and study groups, seeks to bring the facts of Zionism to the Carolina student and to the public at large. The local chapter, of which Albert Jacobson is chairman, wishes to cooperate with any campus organization that desires information about the Zionist movement.

Talented Art Golby Directs Sound and Fury Production

By Sandy Minnix

Art Golby, director of the new Sound and Fury show "Dear Congress," has had much experience in the theater. During the past summer he was co-producer of the Lake Summit Playhouse company in Hendersonville.

A conscientious worker, Art helped to make the playhouse a great success during the season. Among the plays presented by the groups were "Night Must Fall," "Arsenic and Old Lace," "Angel Street," and "Claudia." He played the leading role of Mr. Manningham, the detective, in the Victorian, mystery-thriller "Angel Street." The company of players was comprised of students from the University and people from the surrounding towns.

Tall, New Yorker

Originally from New York city, this tall, blond with the wavy hair was enrolled in the University when he was inducted into the Army Air Corps in 1942. While a student before the war, he acquired the reputation of an up and coming actor. He appeared in "The Male Animal," "Arsenic and Old Lace," "George Washington Slept Here," and "Abe Lincoln in Illinois." In Forrest theater he played in "Romeo and Juliet." He has been in the cast of two world premieres, Noel Houston's "The Marauders" and the late Joseph Feldman's "Behold, The Brethren."

ART GOLBY

A born actor with a wide, flexible voice range, Art also took part in radio programs that were produced on the campus at the time. He directed the Carolina Round-table program and appeared in 13 coast-to-coast broadcasts of "Men In Action" over the Mutual network.

In 1941 he was chosen to partici-

And the Green Grass Grew

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill has been noted always throughout the nation for its quiet, natural beauty. People will always comment on what a pretty spot Chapel Hill is wherever the University is mentioned.

And Chapel Hill has continued through the years to keep its best scenic foot forward. Regardless of any controversial issues that have arisen as time goes by, not even the most vigorous critics of the University have been able to say anything bad about about this ever-present natural beauty.

If anyone ever dared to mention the words "slums" in connection with Chapel Hill, he would have been only ridiculed. Nothing has ever marred the beauty of this little college town.

Until now. Until now when a certain section of the village is in danger of falling into the slums category unless prompt action is taken by the proper persons.

We are thinking of the Vetville sector. Since its inception, this small area of veterans' homes located on the Pittsboro road has been bogged down in mud and dirt. Its streets become quagmires whenever it rains. It has stood out like a sore thumb in this small, overcrowded town.

But it need not remain in its present condition. For example, the planting of spring grass immediately will improve the muddy fronts of the homes immeasurably. It will cost but a minute amount of money to purchase the grass seeds. It will involve little labor to sow them. It will result in helping beautify the area.

But it must be done immediately if the grass is to grow by spring. And green grass is a necessity in Vetville. No one who has walked by or driven through the area can deny the fact that it is becoming more of an eyesore daily.

Planting grass is only one of the things that can be done to help lift the ugly face of one of Chapel Hill's newest babies. Vet village is a wonderful place that affords married veterans a place to live while attending school. But it is a dirty, unsightly place.

Someone has sadly neglected it. If nothing else is done, we urge those living in Vetville to take matters into their own hands and improve conditions. It is up to the student body to see that our ugly chile gets prettied up in a hurry.

One Dime

Dear Sir:

In front of the Strowd Motor Company, one evening a few weeks ago, I met a Corporal who was looking for a place to have supper. He was waiting for a bus.

His shoulder patch showed that he belongs to the same outfit I was in. His limp and his ribbons proved that a lot of people had shot at him. He was shivering.

The proprietor of a local cafe told me that Negroes weren't allowed to eat there. So the Corporal ate his hamburger in the street.

Let's suppose that the Corporal has exchanged khaki for denims; he goes to the mill office, asks for a job. He cannot tend a machine because of his wounded leg, so he is taken on as a sweeper, at forty cents an hour. The former sweeper, a cripple, drew fifty cents—but he was a white.

So far, this is just a case of dollar discrimination, based on white supremacy. The mill makes another dime. But: Where does this dime go? Does it buy a couple of bricks for a Southern home? Or is it a tip for a New York barman?

If I were one of the men who runs a North Carolina mill from an estate in New Jersey, I'd think this was fine: A divided South means cheap labor, more profits, more investment, more of my own brand of Private Government. (Which is just dandy—but not necessarily for the South.)

Trace every major problem of the South back to its roots, and you will find a white man and a Negro. The Negro on the bottom. A relationship which is worth a lot of dimes, but not necessarily in Southern pockets.

Concert Review....

National Symphony Orchestra Shows Great Improvement

By R. Haskell Hamilton

Returning to Chapel Hill on Tuesday night, the National Symphony orchestra brought a first rate symphonic group to Memorial hall. Almost everyone who has heard this group agreed that the present personnel of the orchestra represents a tremendous improvement over the calibre of the personnel in past years. Nobody will contend that it is a truly great orchestra. During the concert, however, the group displayed an interpretative reach that marks it as a fine, first-rate symphonic orchestra; if not a great group. You missed a rewarding evening, if you were not in attendance.

"Lilting" is the word that best describes the opening selection of the performance. Overly brassy in spots Freschobaldi's Toccata received an excellent treatment by the National Symphony. Victor has recorded this number and it is certainly one that belongs in a music lover's library. Easily the best number of the evening from a standpoint of feeling, warmth, intricacy and tone was Mozart's Symphony No. 25 in G Minor.

Scriabin's work was next presented as Kindler chose two Etudes to play. Displaying a generally good discipline and tonal quality, these selections concluded the first half of the program.

Energetic, lively and modern Khachaturian's Suite from Gayaneh was the initial offering of the second portion of the program. Enthusiastically received in its first Chapel Hill performance, the National Symphony obliged by repeating the third portion of the suite, "Dance with Sabres." It was as though two different orchestras had played the same suite. In the second playing the orchestra for the first time lifted itself out of the drab category and displayed style and many subtleties of orchestral detail. On the whole I got the impression that Kindler conducts Khachaturian with entirely too slight a feeling.

Two Wagnerian selections, Träume and the Prelude to act I of Die Meistersinger concluded what was termed by Katharine Mims, a representative music student, as a "rather satisfying concert."

For their encores the orchestra returned to Mozart and played the wedding procession music from The Marriage of Figaro. Morton Gould's symphonic arrangement of "When Johnny Comes Marching Home" was the final choice of conductor Hans Kindler, as he lapsed into the commercialism which has kept him from building a finer symphony orchestra than the one which he now has.

Student Audit Statements

In this issue of The Daily Tar Heel the Audit Board is publishing the statements of income and expense of some of the student-supported organizations. We shall continue to publish these statements until the financial reports of all student-supported organizations are presented to the students. It is emphasized that these reports cover the fiscal year July 1, 1945 to June 30, 1946.

It would be well for each student to know and understand just how these organizations receive their income and how much each of you contribute to their support. Below is a schedule of charges which are collected as you pay your tuition and other University charges. We know that these charges are listed on your registration forms but there is not listed the breakdown which we are giving below.

Matriculation: Phy. Ed. Bldg.

Phy. Ed. Fee	$6.50
Library Fee	1.50
Infirmary Fee	5.00
Registration Fee	4.50

These fees are based on a period of one quarter and naturally vary for summer sessions and for semester periods. These fees apply to all undergraduates.

All the finances of the campus organizations operated wholely or partially through the use of student fees are handled by the Student Activities Fund Office. The Office is located in Graham Memorial and employes a full time accountant in its operation. The Office is under the supervision of a University employed auditor.

As the fees are collected for the various charges listed in this article, they are credited to that particular organizational account in the Activities Office by the University business office.

The Student Activities Fund Office operates on the voucher system. Before any invoice may be paid, all vouchers must be passed and signed by the president and treasurer of the particular organization and Mr. Kear of the Activities Office. Regular yearly reports are prepared and these reports are the ones which shall be published from time to time.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

INVENTION OF A-BOMB USHERS IN ERA OF BUCK ROGERS FANTASY; REPUBLICAN MOVIE CZAR SUPPORTS ADMINISTRATION'S TRADE POLICIES; LILIENTHAL RECEIVES "TOP-SECRET" VALENTINE.

Washington.—It is difficult for the average person to understand the amazing vistas opened up by science during World War II and realize that the unbelievable era of Buck Rogers fantasy is now actually here.

The most obvious development was the atomic bomb. Not as well known but perhaps even more fantastic are the numerous secrets of the earth which the bomb's invention also opened. For the past three years, for instance, geoclastic scientists have been working on a project for setting off a controlled chain reaction in the crust of the earth.

This project is described by the scientists as a hydrogen chain reaction, in which the hydrogen in the surface of the earth would be made to burn in a slow but continuous stream. Simultaneously, these scientists are reported to be preparing a means for speedily extinguishing such blazes by a system of back fires and chemical devices which could hold its spread at the borderline of any country.

Fantastic as this may sound, it is only a small phase of the field which science opened up at a time when the Government, in desperation and out of fear of what enemy scientists might be doing, gave American scientists full freedom to work.

An earth-crust chain reaction is now deemed a reasonable possibility and might mean the end for a country even as large as Russia. A chain reaction of this type could carry across mountains, through ice and snow, searing everything in its path with the relentless force of a gigantic, fire-burning steam roller.

American scientists warn that what they are working on is also being worked on by scientists all over the world. No nation has a monopoly on knowledge. What American science has is a head start and the "know-how."

Note—Yet there are still some people who wonder whether it is a good idea to have international control of atomic energy!

UNDER THE DOME

President Truman not only has told intimates he will back Lilienthal's confirmation fight to the limit, but added that he would even argue with the TVA director if he asked to be withdrawn. Truman told friends that he could have got Edwin W. Pauley as Undersecretary of the navy if Pauley hadn't lost his nerve. . .Just before he left for Hawaii, Interior Secretary Cap Krug ordered a ten-foot square sign erected in the lobby of the Interior Department Building, bearing the now famous statement on Democracy by David Lilienthal. . .Almost the entire Cabinet will speak at a dinner to be given by Florida Democrats to raise a quarter of a million dollars to back Truman's 1948 election. The dinner will cost $250 a plate . . .American Ambassador Arthur Bliss Lane, who is not returning to Poland, will probably go to The Netherlands. Secretary Marshall will appoint a new Ambassador to Warsaw, but not until after the Moscow Conference.

A STRANGE REPUBLICAN

While Senator Bob Taft of Ohio was opening fire on the reciprocal trade program, another prominent Republican was firing from the opposite direction—right inside President Truman's private office.

The second Republican was Eric Johnston, scrappy Hollywood movie czar, who called at the White House not only to recommend retention of reciprocal trade, but to uncork some views of the coming Geneva Conference, at which time the USA will sit down with 17 other nations to iron out bottlenecks in world commerce.

Johnston, former president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and frequently mentioned as a GOP Presidential dark horse, emphasized that he was speaking as a Republican when he expressed hope that the Geneva Trade Conference will succeed. He strongly urged Truman to do just the reverse of the Taft policy and work for the mutual lifting of restrictive tariffs on international trade.

Unless this is done, Johnston told Truman, all countries will have to go back to barter and national isolation. World peace depends more on opening up the channels of trade than in restricting them, Johnston added, and the Geneva Conference may be the last chance to make a sick world well.

Johnston argued that all nations will have to learn to sacrifice some trade adventages to gain others, and no nation can expect always to get the best of the bargain. In the long run reciprócity works out for the advantage of everybody.

England, for instance, Johnston told Truman, sells Scotch whisky cheaper in New York than in London because of the advantage it gains in the exchange of other goods.

If the United States expects other nations to continue looking to us for leadership, we must continue to take the lead in world cooperation, the movie czar declared.

President Truman's reaction to this unusual Republican declaration could be described as pop-eyed approbation. He was almost speechless. Though Johnston is known for his forthright, liberal views on foreign affairs, not since Franklin Roosevelt was alive had the President's office heard such two-fisted philosophizing.

SOME OF THE SOUTH'S top collegiate runners will pause in Woollen gym March 1 for the fifth renewal of the Southern Invitational indoor games. That's assured already by the entry list that has hit a high of 17 colleges, from Florida to Virginia, to Southwestern and back again.

"From the entries already in, this promises to be the best indoor event we have had since the annual classic first got underway 18 years ago," opined Athletic Director Bob Fetzer yesterday afternoon as he viewed the final plans in his Woollen gym control center.

"To those who have already seen an indoor meet like this and liked it," continued Coach Bob, "it is a real classic, and to those who have never seen one, I would say don't miss it. It is an opportunity to see track events of the highest calibre in the South, and we should have several new records out of the tough competition promised."

The Invitational games were substituted for the conference indoor meet which was held for 13th consecutive years through 1942. However, the conference meet has not been reinstated again with the passing of the wartime era, mainly for the reason that by having an open event, better teams and individual runners can be entered. If and when the conference ever decides to have their indoor meet again, it will more than likely be incorporated in the annual Indoor Games here as one division.

Three more days remain for entries to be received, and among the schools still out who may come through are Navy, Catholic U. of Washington, and South Carolina. Already in the fold are such schools as Tennessee, Georgia Tech, Duke, Georgia, Virginia and Maryland.

It's something to plan for, this great indoor track classic, and it is a sports event that you will not soon forget!

THE FOX PREPARES TO "FOX" OPPONENTS

King Carl Snavely's shift looks definitely out for the 1947 season, but the canny constructor of gridironic formations is busily working these hot and cold days to offset the loss of the maneuver that proved an asset more times than once during the 1946 campaign.

"I won't know for sure until I can read the rules more closely," was the word from the Silver Fox yesterday. "It is designed to do away with shifts like ours," he continued, "and I would say that it will mean the end of the Notre Dame maneuver also. However," Snavely said, "I don't think it will hurt us very much.'

Something like six or seven teams remain out for winter practice, and such new men in the fold as Al Bernot and Bill Smith make the outlook a little brighter. In addition to Ralph Strayhorn and Baxter Jarrell, fleet tailback Billy Myers will not be back for operations this fall. Also, Chunk Simmons and one or two others from last year may not be playing this season.

"I plan to end these winter practices in another week or two," concluded the Carolina grid czar in his chat. "It will depend on the weather during the next two or three days. I will begin my spring drills the first week of next quarter unless something happens to change present plans." Incidentally, summer practice will not be allowed this year for the first time in almost four years, and fall drills will probably not begin until the first week in September.

It all happened when a distinguished little cat sneaked into the office, jumped up on our desk and asked in her meowing manner "where is this guy who was talking about spring weather yesterday." Okay, we were wrong, but the little cat wanted to stay, and she agreed to tell all. To wit: Carolina needs a golf course of its own, a good one, that is. . .The Tar Heel boxing team has suffered untold damage since December. Charlie Lambeth will be unable to make the West Point trip, thus eliminating the sole remaining Sugar Bowl boxer from the team. What's the matter there? What happened to all the rest?. . .The Daily Tar Heel failed to carry the Davidson story yesterday because it came in past the deadline. In fact, the game didn't get started until almost 9:30 in Charlotte.

State Mermen Rated Strong

Three Tank Stars Nucleus of Outfit

Coach Willis Casey will bring one of the strongest swimming aggregations the South has ever seen to Woollen gym Saturday afternoon to meet Carolina's Blue Dolphins in the feature swimming attraction of the 1947 Southern conference swimming card.

The Red Terror team is built around three outstanding performers—Bill Kelly, Bill Ward and Bill Desperes. The big three of the State team have been knocking over loop swimming records all season and sports authorities expect the trio to provide plenty of fireworks against the Tar Heel mermen this weekend.

Kelly is one of the finest all-around swimmers in the nation. A former State student, he attended Carolina as a V-12 man in 1945 and was a top-notch performer for the Tar Heels. Kelly holds the Southern conference breaststroke record and is a member of the State medley and freestyle relay teams.

Ace Sprinter

Ward is also another former State student and Carolina V-12 athlete, where he starred as Casey's ace sprinter. He has tied or bettered the conference 50 and 100 records this year, besides being a vital member of the freestyle relay team.

Desperes, a newcomer, is a standout in the 220 and backstroke. His only defeat this season was to Johnny Hiles of Georgia in the 220. Desperes is rated a strong swimmer and will be favored in both the 220 and backstroke events here Saturday.

Supporting Swimmers

Supporting the Red Terrors' "Terrific Trio" are Captain Reynolds and Gold in the sprints, Tinkey Hayward and Bill Cramer in the diving events, Bill Nufer in the backstroke and Ritchie in the breaststroke.

Locals Seek To Take Over Second Place In Loop Race

Hamilton, Paxton Expected to Pace Scottmen In Their Search For Ninth Conference Win

By Bob Goldwater

Fresh from their six and eight point victories over South Carolina and Davidson, the White Phantoms perform in their third tussle of the week tonight when they journey to Wake Forest for a return encounter with the Demon Deacons.

The Carolina cagers will be trying to take over undisputed possession of second place in the Southern conference, a position for which they are currently deadlocked with Duke with an 8-2 record. Possessors of a five-game loop winning streak, the Scottmen will be facing the quintet that dumped the league-leading State outfit, 44-39, last week. The Deacons, always hard to beat on their own court, are fighting for a tournament berth and need a triumph to come up from their eighth-place rating.

Same Starters

Never one to change starters amid streaks, Coach Tom Scott will open with the same five that has started every game since the victory skein began. This puts the team's two high scorers, Jim Hamilton and Bob Paxton, at forwards, Nemo Nearman at center, and Norm Kohler and Jim White at the guards. Johnny Dillon, improving of late, Taylor Thorne, Jim Hayworth and Dick Hartley will be the chief reserves. Hamilton, in the two contests at the start of the week, ran his circuit scoring up to 138 points to rank in a tie for fifth in the pointmaking parade.

Starters for Coach Murray Greason are expected to be Jack Gentry, John O'Quinn, Doran Walters, Will Kaylor and Hank Lougee. Walters is right behind Hamilton in scoring with 137 points while Kaylor ranks 12th in the loop.

In the Tuesday clash against the Wildcats of Davidson, the Tar Heels, though hard pressed all the way, registered a 46-38 success with a late spurt providing the margin for victory. Leading by 20-18 at halftime, the Phantoms held a 10-point advantage at one time only to see Davidson whittle it down to three points. Two hooks by Dillon started the Scottmen back on the right road and they went on to capture their second win in two successive nights. Hamilton was high for Carolina with 14 markers.

Jayvees Down Bragg, 54-47

Locals Win 13th As Wagner Stars

By Gil McLeod

Fort Bragg, Feb. 19.—The Carolina jayvee quintet made it 13 in a row last night by downing the Cannoneers of Fort Bragg, 54-47, in a game played in the main post gymnasium.

It was Cat Wagner who kept the Hayworthmen in the gase as he hit for 14 points. Runner-up scoring honers went to Junie Bailey, who was also a star on defense.

The game reached the ten-minute mark with the clubs deadlocked at 16-16, but at this point the Tar Heels really started to find the mark from the outside and ran the lead up to 37-22 at the halftime.

It was a sluggish attempt at basketball by the juniors in the second half and they were outscored and outplayed all the way through the second period.

Box score:

Carolina (54)	Fort Bragg (47)
F—Wagner (14	Berger (11)
F—Fitch (6)	Handlon (15)
C—Bailey (9)	McNaulty (4)
G—Swartzburg (7)	Lloyd
G—Nyimicz (8)	Hussey (9)

Reserves: UNC Weinstein (8), Curtis (2), Nathan.

Fort Bragg: Bingly (4), Stein, Rosenberg.

"I'm a regular Scotsman for thrift. I never throw away anything that I can use again.

"Every year I salvage millions and millions of pounds of metal from what you might call junk.

"I collect all the old telephone equipment, wire and cable no longer useful to the Bell System . . . and all the machine scrap, turnings and rejected parts from the factories where I make Bell Telephone equipment.

"I turn this scrap metal into bars and billets of refined metals and alloys out of which I make new telephone equipment.

"I salvage rubber, textiles and paper, too . . . and anything I can't use again, I sell. Nothing is wasted.

Around'n About Old North State

Charlotte...

Charlotte, Feb. 19—(UP)— Business leaders of Charlotte have decided that a $75,000 merchandise mart could be built in the city and developed into a self-supporting investment.

The conclusion was reached today in a conference between representatives of the Chamber of Commerce, the Merchants Association and the Carolinas-Virginia Fashion Exhibitors Association.

They proposed construction of a five-story, fire-proof, air-conditioned building containing showrooms and offices.

Gail Phillips of Charlotte, executive secretary of the Fashion Exhibitors, says his organization has never had sufficient space for its displays. And C. O. Kuester, executive vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce, says several other organizations have expressed a similar need for space.

Raleigh...

Raleigh, Feb. 19. — (UP) — The North Carolina anti-closed shop proposal ran into heavy opposition this afternoon in a house committee hearing. President Frank Graham of the Greater University of North Carolina said the state should not take away the rights of labor and management to contract for closed shops if they want them.

However, Graham said he would support any move to restrict the power of hat he called tyrannical union leaders. But he says this bill goes about it the wrong way. Graham was once a member of the War Labor board.

Hudson's Band Will Play For Mid-Winters Opener

Tonight's Dance Will Launch Gala Weekend; Dunham's Orchestra to Appear Here Tomorrow

By Sam Whitehall

With music furnished by Dean Hudson and his orchestra, the first dance of the German Mid-winter set will get underway at 9 o'clock this evening in Woollen gymnasium. Hudson's band will give forth at a concert beginning at 4 o'clock this afternoon in Memorial hall. Carroll Tomlinson, president of the German club, said that plenty of seats should be available for the concert.

Although not a "big time" band, Hudson's regulation outfit plays what authorities call "good, danceable" music. He fronts an orchestra consisting of the usual amount of horns, woodwinds, and rhythm instruments plus a female vocalist.

Native Floridian

A native of Lake Worth, Florida, Hudson formed his band in the academic surroundings of the University of Florida at Gainesville. After leaving 'Gatorland, Hudson's band, under the name of the Florida Clubmen got started by playing at many college dances up and down the eastern seaboard.

Primarily a specialist in college affairs the handsome bandleader has taken his group to many top-flight night spots in metropolitan centers throughout the country.

Tomorrow night's dance on the Woollen hardwoods will wind up the Mid-winter weekend. Sonny Durham and his "subdued swing" will play for the affair, splitting feature billing with Paula Kelly and the Modernaires.

Come Early for Concert

Dunham and the Modernaires will give a concert tomorrow afternoon in Memorial hall at 2 o'clock. German club officials emphasized that since Memorial hall holds only 1,800, ticketholders should come early to get seats.

Navy Veteran Describes Scene Of Explosion in Los Angeles

Scott Shudders when Telling Woeful Tale Of Pulling Burned Bodies from Wreckage

Los Angeles, Feb. 20.—(UP)—Twenty-one-year-old Norman Scott, a former sailor, was one of the first to reach the scene of the terrific Los Angeles explosion. His is a story of heroism—mixed with disaster and tragedy.

Scott says: "I thought I was back at war when I was almost knocked to the ground while walking along the street today. The blast was like a 12-inch shell going off. The ground rocked, glass showered from buildings, and a big mushroom cloud of smoke shot up in the air."

Near Scene

The Navy veteran continued: "I was less than three blocks from the scene of the explosion, but the shock was so strong I thought something across the street had blown up. It took only a few minutes for me to run to the place where the explosion occurred. As I climbed over the wreckage, I could hear the moans of people trapped under the remains of the building." Scott told how he began pulling people out. Some were badly hurt and bleeding. Two of them were dead.

The former sailor said: "I saw a switchboard operator still sitting in her swivel chair. She was covered with bricks. I was carrying out another victim, so I could not stop to see if she was dead or alive. When I came back, she was gone. I still don't know if she was alive or not. There were hands sticking out from blackened timbers, but it took lots of time and work to remove the junk so we could get at them."

Clothes Burned Off

Scott said: "Some of the victims had all their clothes burned off, and their bodies were colored green from dye or acid, or whatever it was that blew up."

The young sailor shuddered as he told United Press correspondents: "It was the worst thing I ever saw—even worse than the war."

Church Heads To Give Talks In Classrooms

Professors of over 100 University classes have requested Religion in Life speakers to address their groups sometime during the special week which begins this Sunday. Classroom appointments for the 15 outstanding religious leaders who will lead the conference range all the way from psychology and physics to literature.

In connection with the week, the Religion in Life committee has requested Chancellor House to ask professors to recognize the fact that many students will be busy participating in the many scheduled activities of the week. They have asked that only tests felt to be essential to the class work be scheduled.

Last-Minute Plans

Last-minute plans for the week, which will officially begin with an address by D. Elton Trueblood Sunday night, are now being made. The first speakers, including Stanley H. Martin, director of the week, will arrive tomorrow.

While the speakers are on campus they will have special student guides taken from a hospitality committee headed by Vivian Parks and Carlisle Cashion.

See Shropshire for Speakers

Any professor who wishes to make arrangements for a Religion in Life speaker for his classes is asked to contact Don Shropshire, chairman of the committee, or J. C. Herrin, adult member.

Any club, sorority or fraternity who wishes a special speaker may schedule one through Dewey Dorsett or the Rev. Charles Jones.

Georgia Sawmill Owner Rids Mill of Sabotage By Army Mine Detector

Loganville, Ga., Feb. 20.—(UP)—J. T. Mitchell has cleared up all the trouble at his sawmill with a mine detector.

It's not a usual piece of equipment for a sawmill. But for Mitchell it's a life-saver. And he's grateful to the War Assets administration for rounding the war-time device up. It has kept his job for him.

Mitchell operates a sawmill at Loganville for the J. T. Byrd Gin company. Big pine logs are sent tumbling down a skid to power-driven saws at the mill.

Recently some dirty work began to turn up in the woods. Somebody was driving steel spikes deep into the logs—driving them out of sight into the wood.

This brand of sabotage brought on some nasty accidents. The workmen were getting jittery after one saw disintegrated into flying razor-sharp pieces. It seemed that the mill might have to close when Mitchell thought of a mine detector.

The War Assets administration agreed, and cut away red tape to get a surplus detector in record time. The device will be rigged so logs pass beneath it before hitting the skid-path to the saw. When a spiked log passes, the detector will buzz, and the sabotaged log will be sidetracked.

World Day of Prayer To Be Observed Today

Campus Assembly Gives Go Ahead Sign To Form Freshman, Sophomore Class

Condemning Ed Lanier's new registration system as "regimented education," a recommendation for the administration to modify the system was unanimously passed by the Student Legislature at last night's meeting in Gerrard hall.

The recommendation which specifies that students should be given their choice as to professors and courses was incorporated in a substitute resolution introduced by Bill Miller's Ways and Means committee. The original bill provided for the inclusion of professor's names on the class schedules.

Freshman-Sophomore

Previous to the registration resolution, the assembly debated the freshman-sophomore organization bill which provides for lower class elections to be held under the auspices of the Board of Elections. The measure was amended to include the stipulation that a nominating date be set by the Board of Elections and that six days later after due publicity has been accorded the candidates, an election shall be held by secret ballot.

The bill, as amended was passed unanimously by the legislators.

Most of the debate during the evening was centered around a bill to give the student body president power to appoint students to vacated student government offices.

An increase in student publications fees was recommended to the legislature by Publications Board President Bob Morrison, who appeared under the requirements of a recently passed bill which states that certain student activities must submit a periodical report.

Surplus Not Adequate

Morrison stated that the present surplus of $8,000 is not adequate in the face of present economic conditions, especially since the surplus has not been cut in to annually for the past few years to meet deficits incurred by publications. Morrison cited the $5,000 loss the Yack will suffer this year, and pointed out that a fairly large surplus is necessary in order to do business with various printing concerns.

Calls for Impeachment

A bill calling for the impeachment of student government officers who fail to comply with the Constitution was reported unfavorably by the committee. Miller stated that the bill was too general, and that there was actually no need for such action because the present constitution calls for a recall of any officer so indicted.

The committee, after a hearing concerning campus publications, recommended by 4-1 vote that there should be less political opinion, and more local news presented. It feels that the editor should present both sides of each question handled by the publication, pointing out that such newspapers and magazines are student-owned, not city-run. Present at the publications hearing were all major leaders in this activity.

Frost to Give Talk Tuesday

English Department Will Present Poet

By Raney Stanford

Robert Frost, distinguished American poet and three-times winner of the Pulitzer Prize, will give a public lecture in Memorial hall next Tuesday evening at 8:30, under the auspices of the English department.

In announcing the poet's special appearance at the University, Dr. Lyman Cotten of the English department said that Frost never announces the subject of his talks beforehand, but that he has many interests besides his poetry.

"In recent years," said Dr. Cotten, "He has given much of his time to college students; speaking to and with them at the various schools throughout the nation that he wishes to visit." Frost comes to Chapel Hill from his winter home in Florida, and will also make a talk at Duke university while he is in the state.

"His discussions are always informal, and few men have been so influential as he in making colleges more stimulating places for the student," emphasized Dr. Cotten.

Frost, who has been called by critics "the most characteristically New England of all the poets," is now 72 years old, and has been retired from active public life since his resignation from the Amherst English department in 1938.

Characteristically New England

Living in New England the first 37 years of his life, his verse never received recognition until he moved to England in 1911. His first two volumes of poetry were published there, and were warmly praised by British critics. On his return to the United States in 1915, he found his fame had travelled ahead of him, culminating in his winning of the Pulitzer poetry prize three times within the last 25 years.

Despite Frost's announced retirement, he has continued to write with a vigor of a man one-third his age. He is currently engaged in writing a poetical dialogue entitled "The Masque of Mercy," based on the Book of Jonah, and a companion piece to his "Masque of Reason," which was greatly praised on its publication two years ago.

This will be the second time Frost has visited the University, as he spoke under the sponsorship of the English department on a similar occasion in 1943.

Definitely a Character...

Jinx Says She Was Hooked By Picture of Bell Tower

By Dave Owens

After meticulous research covering the campus from Woollen gymnasium to fraternity row and from Graham Memorial to the infirmary, 3,942 students out of 3,942 agree that Jinx Helm is a character, and one much easier to talk with, than about. And no other campus character can make that statement.

Jinx, the 5'9" blue-eyed lass, shown at the right, is the type you'd expect to see leading 5,000 students in wild cheers. She is definitely the extrovert type. And yet, she is also the type you'd find keeping two or three classmates in stitches right under the prof's nose. Her wit and repartee can be rated tops, both in quality and in quantity. Jinx Helm is never without a word (or a hundred words) and each one is a funny one.

Chimes Get Her

Mary Jeanne Helm, as she was handled at birth, had no idea of coming to Carolina. Someone mentioned it as having a good journalism school so she wrote for information. Dean Stacy sent her a circular featuring Bell Tower photo, and that did

Story with a Moral

It was a very small incident—rated only seven lines at the bottom of the front page of the Daily Tar Heel. But it had dire possibilities.

This is the way it happened. The students in Quonset hut 19 were holding a quiet bull session Wednesday evening. A few were studying. Suddenly, one of them noticed the wallboard smouldering by the stovepipe. Flames broke out around the pipe.

Since no fire extinguishers were around, the alert students rushed over to a nearby dormitory and summoned the fire department. Others set to work with buckets and makeshift water containers to extinguish the blaze, carrying water from the latrine three buildings away.

When the fire truck arrived approximately 10 minutes later, the whole lower quadrangle and over 300 quonset hut inhabitants had put a damper on the small blaze. One of the firemen walked down to the hut, looked at the damage, and went back.

Then the usual post-fire talkfest started. A number of battle-hardened veterans joked about the incident, and the slowness of the fire department. But some others didn't joke about it. They asked about fire extinguishers and were told, "the buildings department might put some in next week." They complained about the "one-horse fire department" and started swapping fire stories.

And that's the story. It is not a new one. It has been repeated constantly in Chapel Hill for two decades. Apparently it is destined to continue indefinitely, until a fire drastic enough to arouse public sentiment occurs.

Twenty-six wooden army constructions are due to start arriving on the campus tomorrow. Anyone who has been around an army camp at all knows the constant danger of fire that exists, and the strict rules observed in regard to fire discipline.

But unless fire discipline is improved in Chapel Hill, one of these highly inflammatory auxiliary wooden structures may be the setting for a tragic fire. And steps should be taken to prevent such a possibility.

The story of the quonset hut fire merely serves to illustrate one of the many little oversights in fire prevention around Chapel Hill. These small oversights might some day result in a holocaust. Fire calls this year have jumped tremendously over last year. Fire, always a danger, has become more of a threat with the increase in population and living quarters.

Fire prevention must rest with the people, the fire department, and the administration. It's up to all of them. It's worthy of sober thought.

A Cold Breath

What started out as the first breath of Spring on Tuesday developed into the most vicious swing old man winter has taken at the Carolina campus this year with yesterday's downpour of rain, sleet, and ice.

Just as Carolina students started humming "It Might as Well Be Spring," Carolina coeds started blossoming forth in their newest spring finery, and student couples started strolling the campus hand-in-hand in the first display that spring, if not here, was just around the corner, the weather man turned mean and cured our case of spring fever in its early phase with a low, cold blow.

Yesterday's surprising turn of events coated the campus in what appeared, to the indoor observer, to be a beautiful wintry landscape transformed from the pages of some art magazine. But to the students trudging drearily to and fro in the wet and cold with visions of Mid-Winters being just what the name implies, the scene was anything but beautiful and the weather anything but.

Cars with ice-covered windshields wound their ways cautiously in and around the village, while student drivers shivered behind the wheel. Some practical character went driving down Franklin street with a candle burning brightly in his front window. And there was humor in the situation for some.

But the humor of the situation escaped most disgruntled students as imports started wiring plane cancellations and plans for a wonderful weekend started to go awry.

DTH Music Review

London String Quartet Is Up to All Advance Notices

By R. H. Hamilton

The department of music, Wednesday night, brought an extraordinarily fine musical group to the campus when they presented the London String Quartet in a concert in Hill hall. The quartet was one of the few things, in my estimation, to completely live up to its advance Chapel Hill publicity.

Not once during the two hour program did the audience's attention or appreciation waver from the sterling performance. The precision, musicianship, discipline and tone quality displayed by the foursome was the subject of unvarying high comment from those in attendance. Incidentally, if anyone doubts the "drawing power" of good, serious music let it be reported that Hill hall was filled to overflowing, and folding chairs had to be brought out to accommodate the crowd—on a cold, threatening night.

Starting with Mozart's Quartet in C Major, K. V. 465 the London String Quartet immediately proved their mastery of the quartet form. Handling the intricately scored Mozart with a rare deftness and ability, the group thrilled the listeners.

Next followed a Quartet in G Minor by Debussy. John Pennington, first violin; Laurent Halleux, second violin; Cecil Bonvalot, viola; and Warwick Evans, violoncello, who comprise the quartet, gave a particularly feelingful and expressive performance.

Beethoven's Quartet in F Minor, Op. 95 was the final number on the regular program. It was during the playing of the first movement (Allegro con brio) that a rare event in concert-going occurred. Second Violinist Laurent Halleux popped a string, and the audience good-naturedly waited while he retired from the stage to repair the broken string.

Responding to the demand for an encore, the quartet returned to Mozart and played one of his more familiar minuettes to conclude the program.

Congress Threatens to Resurrect Barriers Against Foreign Trade

By Bill Armstrong

There is growing danger of a retreat in American economic foreign policy. The new, Republican-controlled Congress is threatening to resurrect the high tariff barriers that barred much foreign trade from our shores for the past century.

Outwardly, the United States may claim to be a wholehearted participator in world affairs. But, if Congress discourages foreign commerce again, we will be talking world cooperation in the United Nations while our policy makers in Washington isolate us. The U. N. organization is powerless to prevent Congress from clamping a prohibitive tariff on imports.

What are the economic, moral and practical reasons for abolishing high tariffs?

Our thirteen infant colonies at first existed as sovereign states surrounded by impregnable tariff walls. To avert economic disaster, the Constitution forced the colonies to establish free trade. America interstate commerce stands today as a living example of free trade in practice.

Many economists explain that a nation, no matter how self-sufficient, whose imports are low, tends toward economic stagnation. This, in turn, depresses the economy of the entire world.

For example, in 1929, other nations were unable to sell their goods here. Consequently, these nations lost their buying power and lost their ability to continue payments on war debts and on loans from American investors. The international circulation of capital bogged down and the great world financial collapse resulted.

Along moral lines, the cause of practically all great wars can be traced back, beyond incidental Hitlers, Kaisers and Bonapartes, to economic conditions. The people of an ynation, floundering in a financial quagmire, are persuaded easily to grab some of their neighbor's bounty.

In this atomic age, war has lost all vestige of sport. If the whole world were well-off economically, there would be no need for fighting.

Cordell Hull inaugurated the reciprocal trade agreements in 1933. These pacts bind the United States and other cooperating nations to mutual reduction of tariffs on certain goods. Both countries benefit. The reciprocal trade program was a great step in the right direction.

The State department now is planning negotiations with 18 nations for new and renewed two-year reciprocal trade agreements. We also will participate in building a world trade organization at the Geneva conference opening on April 8.

The approval of Congress is essential for America's full participation in these programs. Will that approval be given? Or will the cry of "protect American industry" beat down attempts at economic cooperation? Will America erect a new iron curtain of tariffs?

Republican Arthur Vandenberg, a Senate foreign policy leader, has given the go-ahead sign on the world trade program, subject however to Congressional reservations. Thus, a ray of hope is shed.

The United States must lead the way toward international free trade. In the One World of the future, free trade will play an integral part.

Very Unique

Personally, I think that the new plan for registration is very unique.

To insure perfect fairness why not set up roulette and roll for the subjects they will take as well as for the time of the course and the instructor. As a final touch the cashier might toss everyone, double or nothing, for their bills. A bar might be set up in one end of the foyer in Memorial Hall to enable everyone to get in the spirit of things.

As a further attraction a burlesque show might be put on in Memorial Hall to keep anyone from being bored while waiting.

White Phantoms Whip Demon Deacons, 54-46

SPORT SPINS - -

IRWIN SMALLWOOD

NEEDLESS TO SAY, our spring weather was still mysteriously in absence yesterday, and our new office cat, Goldie, remained curled up on the desk, too sensible to venture out into the cold, cold world for information. However, that didn't keep us from finding out a few sporting facts and make a few more observations as the Southern conference basketball tournament drew ever-nearer.

They were still talking about the rousing defeat State handed Duke—that score again, 83-57—and talking more in speculation about how this whole muddle was going to turn out March 7-8-9 in Durham.

Before competition last night, Carolina and Duke were tied for second place in the race with an 8-2 record, just behind the high-flying Red Terrors, who sport a record of 19-2 in league games. But that's no reason to believe that the race will end that way. Far from it, for the positions have been fluctuating from game to game all the way.

State, whose team is being praised more and more every day—and rightly, too—looks like the rightful team to maintain that position, but Carolina and Duke are still good choices to slip into first place by the end of hostilities next week. For Carolina, it will take a win over Duke and State, and for Duke it will take a win over Carolina plus a Tar Heel victory over State.

This all means one thing. You are more confused than before you started reading. Nevertheless, it does show that the race is the closest in many years, and three good teams are definitely in the running to end in first place—and go on to win the tournament, which decides the final conference championship winner anyway.

It's never safe to prognosticate on basketball—not that it is safe to predict anything—but we believe that the fast improving White Phantoms have a better than fighting chance to come out on top, both in the final standings and in the tourney.

One big thing that hasn't been brought to light much yet, is the fact that the team this year that wins the conference championship will almost assuredly get the bid from the third district to the NCAA tournament in New York the latter part of March.

Two of the three top teams in the loop have defeated NYU once, and the third has given them a double overtime game. This makes all three noteworthy in the eyes of the intersectional observers, and makes any one of the three a good bet for the playoffs. The fact that Kentucky, the only team in the district rated much higher that Duke, Carolina and State, will defend its National Invitation crown makes the way even clearer for the SC champion to pull up the national tournament.

True, this speculation may be a little premature and without too much basis. Still it proves one thing—that Carolina may be back defending its Eastern NCAA championship come the last of March. There is a tough road ahead, but continued improvement and some good breaks could put Carolina's popular Phantoms back into the city of Gotham for the big tournament.

There's Duke, State and all the rest ahead, first, though.

STRAIGHT FROM GOLDIE: Johnny Dillon, the All-American hooker from last season, pulled the Phants out in front in a crucial moment against Davidson—and we do mean moment, 60 seconds to be exact. During the space of one minute, with the Wildcats within four points of the Tar Heels, Dillon sank three straight of his famous hooks to put the Phantoms back in the lead. . .And the Tar Heel basketballers made good 16 for 19 free shots to guarantee the victory. . .Free shots seem to be a deciding factor more than once these days. Ben Carnevale's team at Navy hit 15 for 15 against Penn [illegible] to grab the 12th win in a row.

Carolina Wrestlers Leave This Morning For Annapolis And Match With Middies

Carolina's grunt and groaners take to the road at 8:30 o'clock this morning for Annapolis, Md., where they will meet the powerful Naval Academy wrestlers there tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The Tar Heel grapplers went through lengthy drills yesterday afternoon in final preparation for the toughest meet of the nearly-completed season. Coaches Chuck Quinlan and Hobie McKeever of the local undefeated wrestlers gave the Tar Heels one of their hardest practice sessions of the season in order to have the locals in top shape for the Middies.

Navy will be a heavy favorite against the Carolina men of the mats on the basis of a team composed of several eastern intercollegiate champs. However, the Tar Heels are back at full strength with Laurie Hooper ready to go at heavyweight, and two other line-up changes give Carolina at least a fighting chance against the Middie grapplers.

Tar Heels Move Into Second Place

By Bob Goldwater

Wake Forest, Feb. 20.—After trailing at the end of the opening five minutes of play, the Carolina White Phantoms came roaring back on three consecutive field goals by Bob Paxton and then went on to defeat Wake Forest 54-46 in a Southern conference basketball game here tonight. The victory sent Carolina into undisputed second place in the loop standing.

It was the Phantoms' sixth league triumph in a row and their conference record now reads 9-2, just behind State's Red Terrors, who are out in front with a 10-2 mark.

The lead swapped hands many times during the first half, but at the 15-minute mark Carolina really began pulling ahead and left the floor at intermission with a 26-18 lead. Nemo Nearman and Jim Hamilton paced that last five-minute drive in the first half that gave the Tar Heels an eight-point lead at the half.

When the second half got underway, Carolina pulled steadily away from the Deacons, and the courtmen of Coach Tom Scott held a 31-20 advantage at the end of the first three minutes. The Phantoms made it 35-22 by the five-minute mark, when Norm "Kokey" Kohler and Hamilton began hitting set shots from the outside.

Paxton, who was an outstanding floor man and the defensive star, fouled out after 11 minutes of the second half, and little Dick Hartley finished the game in his place. Hamilton was high man for the Tar Heel quint with 16 points, and Paxton and Kohler tied for second with 11 each.

Jayvees Meet W and M Tankmen in Prelim; Varsity Seeks Conference Dual Meet Crown

Carolina's Blue Dolphins, under the direction of Coach Dick Jamerson, made final plans yesterday for the climaxing dual meet of the season—the water encounter with Willis Casey's State College swimmers in Bowman Gray pool tomorrow afternoon.

The jayvee tankmen are scheduled to meet the William and Mary Norfolk branch mermen in a preliminary meet to the main contest.

Carolina will be out to cinch the dual meet championship over a potent State squad. The meet tomorrow will serve as a preview of the 14th annual Southern conference event, slated to be run off March 7-8.

Coach Jamerson has a well-rounded squad of swimmers this year, who have extended the Tar Heel victory skein in Conference meets to 26-straight. The Carolina tankmen are rated especially strong in the diving and relay events.

Buddy Crone and Norman Sper provide the Blue Dolphins' one-two punch on the diving board. The two boardmen climaxed a fine season by taking first and second places in the meet against Navy. Sper also took second place in the 150-yard backstroke at Annapolis.

Warren Ficklen has been outstanding all year in the 220-yard free-style event. Jesse Greenbaum has paced the Tar Heels in the sprint events, heading the local talent in the 50 and 100-yard free style.

Other outstanding Carolina mermen this season who are expected to give the State team a rough afternoon include Dan Breedon in the medley relay; Sam McCauley and Bob Hutton in the 220; Jerry Cook and Pete Hexner in the 200 breaststroke; McCoy in the 150 backstroke; and Norwood in the 440.

Tar Heel Mittmen Go to West Point

Planning to leave Chapel Hill at six o'clock tonight, Coach Mike Ronman's Tar Heel mittmen will embark on their journey to West Point for their scheduled clash with the potent Army squad on Saturday afternoon.

The Blue Bombers will be out to snap their current streak of tough breaks and capture a well-deserved second victory. This will be their sixth encounter of the season.

The Cadets have piled up an impressive record against strong opposition this year and they'll be the toughest foes the Tar Heels expect to face all season. Several of the Army squad are returning lettermen and can boast of an enviable amount of experience in the ring, while the Ronmanmen have few scrappers who have fought more than two or three times.

This will be a tremendous handicap; but the game Tar Heels, who have completed a week of diligent work, are expected to make a good showing.

Chapel Hill High Meets Greensboro Here Today

Chapel Hill High will encounter Greensboro High in a swimming meet in Bowman Gray Memorial pool here this afternoon. Starting time for the meet is 4 o'clock.

The meet here today will be one of the first dual high school swimming meets held in North Carolina in several years. Coach Dick Jamerson announced yesterday.

Simmons, Burnham, Morrow Pace Drill

The Carolina trackmen finished their next to last tune up for the Indoor Games next Saturday by turning in fine performances in the sprints, hurdles and distance events yesterday afternoon.

Especially noteworthy were the marks left by the hurdlers who, paced by Chunk Simmons, set a torrid pace. Simmons was clocked in 8.7 for the 70 yard high hurdles followed closely by Hunter Heggie, Dick Taylor and Bob Morrow, who all hit the tape in 9.1. Johnny Jones was timed in 9.3. Other boys that are coming along well are Fred Saunders and Don Ahern.

In the 70 yard low hurdle event Simmons nosed out Ted Shultz running in 7.8 while Shultz was finishing in 7.9. Bob Morrow posted an 8.1 mark for his attempt with Heggie, Taylor and Jones all being under 8.5. Bill Crosswell and Ted Haigler are others who will be right on the heels of the leaders with a little more work.

The 60-yard dash showed Carolina having Chunk Simmons, Ted Schultz and Dick Preyer all crossing the finish in 6.6. Bucky Horton, Cliff Frazier, Bynum Hunter, Jim Rones, Al Lynn and Buddy Bell have all hit the 6.8 mark. Max Edney, Ed Thorne and Crosswell are also working in the event and are showing steady improvement with each session.

107 Schools Enter Debating Contest

Registration for the 35th annual high school debating contest is now completed, Harry F. Comer, director of the contest for the University Extension division said, and 107 schools have entered from 60 different counties.

The query for the 1947 contest, chosen by the 25 colleges who yearly sponsor the debates through their extension divisions or departments of speech, is: Resolved: That the Federal Government should provide a system of complete medical care, available to all citizens at public cost.

The dual or triangular meets will be held at the various participating schools from March 31 to April 5, and six district run-off contests will be held April 14 to 18. The two top winners in each district will come to Chapel Hill May 1-2 to compete in the state finals.

Eleven Cabbies Sign Statements Regarding Lynching of S.C. Negro

Greenville, S. C., Feb. 20.—(UP)—Authorities in Greenville have rounded up 20 persons, most of them taxi-drivers, in connection with the lynching of a Negro near Pickens, last Monday. They report that 11 cab drivers have signed confessions. Other suspects are reported being brought in tonight.

Solicitor Robert P. Ashmore is keeping close secrecy on the contents of the confessions.

Willie Earle's body, slashed and blasted with a shotgun, was found just inside Greenville county scarcely an hour after 25 or 30 men spirited him away from the Pickens county jail early Monday. The Negro had been arrested for critically wounding a Greenville cab driver, T. W. Brown, Saturday night. Brown died a few hours after Earle was lynched.

"There's a certain fascination about the place . . . something you can't put your finger on . . . gets in your blood . . ." and Jinx Helm rattled on. And on.

Tri Delt Helm's greatest ambition at present: "I want to get to my 9 o'clock journalism class on time so that I can be calm, cool and coatless when Messrs. Morrison and Sechriest start teaching. And I'm tired of stepping over others to get to my typewriter. What? No, they are NOT on the floor. It's just the way the typewriters are arranged!"

Time out for breath.

Irish Setter Passion

Jinx "has a passion" for Irish Setters, skiing in the wintertime and sailing in the summer. An 18-footer awaits her sailing touch in Grand Rapids, Mich., the old home town. This is her last quarter at UNC. Then? Back to Grand Rapids to work at a radio station, listen to the Warsaw Concerto, read Shelley and walk through the woods with her Irish Setter.

One would never think of Jinx Helm as a poetess. But the fact is, she has a book of the stuff all ready for publication. She's just waiting for a publisher.

"But I'll keep trying! Just look me up in any old attic. I'll be squeezing blood from my wrinkled palm to use for ink and writing with a quill—turkey, that is," pseudo-wept the merry Jinx.

Someone mentioned a "reader's fee" of $170 from a publishing house for reading and criticizing her poetry.

Jinx gulped. "What? That much? Fergit it, pal. I'll read it myself."

Party Leaders Split on Issue Of Nomination

Opinions Differ On Atomic Energy Head

Washington, Feb. 21—(UP)— The Republican party is splitting right down the middle over the nomination of David Lilienthal as chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission. Ohio's Senator Taft came out this evening with a blistering attack on Lilienthal as an alleged bureaucrat who is too soft with communists and with Russia. That put Taft in direct opposition to Senate President Vandenberg of Michigan, who went on record earlier today as a Lilienthal supporter.

Stassen Supports

Now the only avowed Republican candidate for president in '48, Harold Stassen of Minnesota, has given his backing to the former TVA head. Stassen told a news conference that on the basis of evidence so far taken by the Senate Atomic committee, he would support the Lilienthal nomination. Furthermore, he predicts that the nomination would be confirmed despite the powerful opposition of such men as Taft, Republican party whip Wherry of Nebraska, and Republican Senate Leader White of Maine.

Russians Complete Demobilization Plan

Berlin, Feb. 21—(UP)—The Russians have told General Joseph McNarney they have completed their partial demobilization program inside Germany. Reliable observers estimate there now are less than 200,000 Soviet troops in the Russian occupation zone, about as many troops as the United States has policing its area.

Senator Says Russia To Receive Machinery

Washington, Feb. 21—(UP)— Republican Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire says we're about to send machinery for refining aviation gasoline to Russia. Bridges claims the machinery is part of a 25 million dollar lend-lease shipment to the Soviet Union.

U. S. Sugar Ration Gets Increase for New Year

New York, Feb. 21—(UP)— The United States has been allotted some 6,800,000 tons of the 1947 world sugar supply—enough to increase the per capita consumption of sugar in this country from 73 to 95 pounds. The decision of the International Emergency Food Council is expected to increase the housewife's ration for the year to 35 pounds.

English Snowdrifts Stop Coal Shipments

London, Feb. 21—(UP)— Snowdrifts 20 feet deep are piling up in fuel-starved England tonight, forcing a disastrous new halt in coal shipments. The worst blizzard of the storm-bound winter has isolated a number of towns, suspended air service and stopped shipping. The weatherman predicts no let-up in the blizzard.

Superintendent Names Mental Hospital Head

Durham, Feb. 21—(UP)—The general superintendent of state hospitals, Dr. David A. Young, has announced in Durham that a director has been named for the Camp Butner hospital, which the state will take over soon as a mental hospital.

Dr. Young says the director, at least temporarily, will be Dr. Allen Burke of the Mary State hospital at Sykesville, Md. He adds that somebody from the present State Hospital system may be named permanent director.

WEATHER TODAY

Fair and Slightly Warmer

Stanley H. Martin, director of religious activities at Boston university, will act as dean of Religion week and coordinator of speaker's activities in sessions beginning tomorrow.

Martin to Talk Religion Week

Seminar Discussions Will Begin Tomorrow

Carolina students will have an opportunity to discuss some of the age's perennial problems with men and women whose lives have been devoted to a search for adequate answers, during seminar periods every afternoon from 4 to 5 o'clock next week. The seminars are an important part of Religion in Life week which begins tomorrow.

There will be five different subjects. Personal Religious Living will be lead by Stanley H. Martin, director of religious activities at Boston university. Martin will also act as dean of the week and coordinator for the activities of the other fourteen speakers. He will lead a final meeting of the Protestant Council, one of the conference planning groups, tonight at 6 o'clock at the Methodist church.

Ramsay on "Social Justice"

John G. Ramsay, community relations representative of the CIO and a vice-chairman of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, is in charge of the group discussing Social Justice, A Christian Goal. Science and Religion will be the topic of the seminar led by Dr. Raymond Seeger, famed physicist who was present at the Bikini atom bomb test.

Mrs. Sherwood Eddy will direct the seminar studying Christian marriage.

Representatives of the three major faiths, Father Edmond Denard, Rabbi Abraham Feinstein, and Dr. Clyde Milner, will be in charge of the students registered for the discussion of the kinship between Judaism and Christianity.

University Laundry Increases Rates As Legislature Approves Wage Hike

Solons Finish Busiest Week Of Legislature

Raleigh, Feb. 21—(UP)—Most of North Carolina's General Assemblymen are on their way home this afternoon after the busiest week so far of the 1947 session. Both houses will hold local bill sessions tomorrow morning, but the major business is finished for the week.

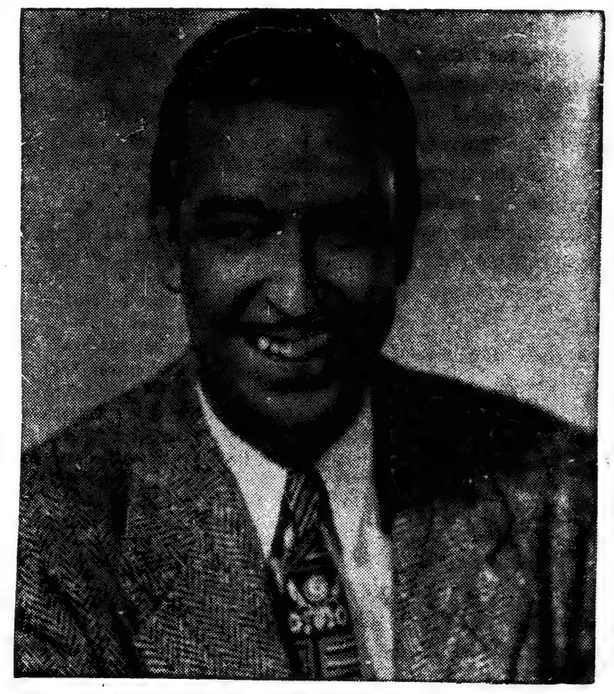
Next week the lawmakers will face several other controversial issues, chief among them the bill to outlaw the closed shop. This measure is on the House calendar for Monday night, but no debate is expected until Tuesday.

New Art, History Museum

The state Senate today passed a bill authorizing the state to accept a bequest from the late Mrs. Minnie Stowe Puett to build a state museum of art and history in Raleigh. The museum would be supervised by the North Carolina Art society, and would be paid for by the income from a trust fund left by Mrs. Puett.

The House passed a bill to set up a nine-member State Board of Correction to supervise correctional institutions for children. The proposed new board would take over many duties now distributed among separate boards.

Another bill passed by the House would give the state Attorney General another full assistant, to make a total of five. Two of these would be assigned to the state revenue department.



There also was considerable action on local bills today.

The House passed one to outlaw the use of profane language on the public roads and highways in Orange county. The bill now becomes law because the Senate had already approved it.

Margery Alexander of Charlotte, speaking for the South Piedmont teacher pay schedule, says the steering committee of teachers which has fought the teacher pay issue across the state will meet next week to determine their future actions.

LABORATORY THEATER MEETS

The Laboratory theater will meet tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in room 111 Murphey hall, to read "Six Characters in Search of an Author," a play by Luigi Pirandello. The reading is open to the public.

Sonny Dunham and his orchestra, with Paula Kelly and the Modernaires will be presented by the German club in a concert this afternoon at 2 o'clock and in a formal dance tonight from 8 to 12. Concert ticket holders are requested to come early to assure themselves of good seats.

Graham Advocates Authority To Control Atom Manufacture

President Backs Baruch-Acheson-Lilienthal Report in Address before Asheville Groups

The world needs an international authority in line with the Baruch-Acheson-Lilienthal report for inspection and control of the sources and manufacture of atomic power, President Frank P. Graham of the University said in an Asheville address last evening before the Americans United for World Government and the State organization of World Federalists.

The address was a feature of the observance of Brotherhood week.

"The one world needs a world court with jurisdiction over the crimes of individuals against the United Nations subject to the guarantee of an international bill of rights," he declared. "The world needs an international police force responsible not to separate nations but to the United Nations. It needs to shift legislative power from the Security council to Assembly of all the United Nations weighted for representation."

Bomb Greatest Threat

President Graham emphasized that the atomic bomb "in the hands of the absolute state is the greatest threat which has come to man . . .

"It is now imperative that all groups, all races and all nations, whatever be their differences, make their first concern the strengthening of world government through the United Nations for the international control and the humane use of atomic power.

"As the home of the atomic bomb, America has a great moral responsibility," he said. "America, for the sake of her own soul, must take the lead in putting the atomic bomb under the control and ban of world government. America must, with the rise safeguards of an international authority under the United Nations, share the knowledge and use of atomic power and with all peoples, for research and humane causes, for full production and fair distribution within the nations, and for justice and peace among the nations."

Way to Enlightened Faith

"The cross and the stake reveal, and the synagogue and the church carry on, the unconquerable aspiration of the human spirit for a freer and better world. Idealism does not cringe before force. Repression is the way of frightened power. Freedom is the way of enlightened faith.

"With all our efforts for human understanding and goodwill, without a sense of human brotherhood and the sacred worth of human personality, 'They labor in vain who build the house.' Our great religious communions search us through with their faith and ideals."

Welfare Members Term New Level Warranted Rise

By Ed Joyner

Customers of the University laundry will be paying approximately 30 per cent more for their laundry work next month following a rate increase which will go into effect March 1, a week from today.

The decision to make the increase was made after the matter was presented to the executive committee of the Student Welfare board by J. S. Bennett, supervisor of operations. The committee, which consists of Dewey Dorsett, Charlie Warren, and Iran Golden as student members and J. S. Bennett, C. P. Spruill, and E. L. Mackie as faculty members, agreed unanimously that the increase would be warranted.

Immediate cause of the increase as given by administration sources is a 20 per cent plus pay boost for the laundry workers authorized by the State Legislature in its bonus bill for state employees. This increase is paid by the state in cases of non self-supporting departments such as teaching, but self-supporting departments such as the laundry must take care of the increase from incoming revenue.

Another factor in the rate jump is the fact that the income of the laundry has failed to meet expenses since the Navy pre-flight school closed in the fall of 1945. With the new pay rate in effect and at the present laundry rate, J. S. Bennett, supervisor of operations, estimates that the laundry would lose a possible $1,000 per week.

Even at the increased rates, the University laundry charges will remain an average of 3 per cent less than the lowest rates charged in the Chapel Hill area. At present they are 33 per cent lower than other laundry rates in Chapel Hill.

Almost Same at 1921

With the exception of a straight 10 per cent increase made six years ago, the present rates are the same as they were when the University started its first laundry in 1921.

One expected result of increased pay for the laundry workers is the probability of getting more and better labor and consequently more efficient laundry work.

Duz Does It Again. . .

Rameses Will Plug for Duz This Evening All Because of Bath for Duke-UNC Game

By Sigsbee Miller

Rameses, Carolina's horned hero of the gridiron, will butt in on the radio air waves from coast to coast this evening, all because of an autumn bath and a box of soap powders.

It all started last fall when the Daily Tar Heel editors, taking note of the depressing gray hue of Rameses' shaggy coat, demanded that the Tar Heel mascot be given a bath. The boys over in the athletic department agreed that the job had been left undone too long and they approached Rameses on the matter.

Rameses, accustomed to being the goat of worse jokes than this one, submitted to the operation with only mild protests. So Rameses got his bath and came out all sparkling white for the Duke-Carolina brawl game. And that, everybody thought, ended that. What they had failed to note was that the suds for Rameses' now-memorable bath had been generated by a big box of Duz, the wonder soap that writes under water or something like that.

Hogan 'Duz' Everything

An enterprising Carolina student, Glenn Hogan, did the rest. To "Truth or Consequences," the half-hour radio show put on by Duz every Saturday evening at 8:30, Hogan sent the clipping from the Daily Tar Heel telling of Rameses' bath. As a result, Rameses will go plugging for Duz tonight.

Rameses won't be on the program in person. He's much too comfortable over at Hogan's lake, where he resides between football games. And, modest soul that he is, he probably won't even be listening in over WPTF in Raleigh (or any other NBC station) when his "Duzzin'" becomes the top commercial of the evening.

Rameses, Carolina's horned mascot, will appear by proxy tonight on the Duz program, 'Truth or Consequences,' over NBC at 8:30, as the result of a much-needed bath given him by the Athletic department prior to the Carolina-Duke football game last fall.

ADPi House to Be Open For Summer Residents

The Alpha Delta Pi House will be open for living quarters for summer school students with an official housemother who will operate the dining room, serving three meals a day.

Applications can be accepted only from members of national sororities, or women who have been through an official rushing period here, due to local Panhellenic rulings. All interested persons should contact Virginia Wilson at the Alpha Delta Pi house, either by telephone (F-3071) or by mail.

More Than 200 Cabbies Face Police Questions In S. C. Lynching Case

Greenville, S. C., Feb. 21—(UP)—Every taxicab driver in Greenville has been rounded up in a final drive to complete the case against the white mob that lynched Willie Earle, near Pickens last Monday, leaving not a cab on the Greenville streets. Sheriff R. H. Bearden has rounded up some 200 drivers for screening and questioning and already has 27 detailed confessions from white men, most of them cabbies, who admit being in the party that dragged the 25-year-old Negro from the Pickens county jail in the gloom before Monday's dawn.

The sheriff says he already knows who fired the shot that killed Earle on a back road near Pickens, and he adds that the man who fired the fatal shot is a cab-driver. The bulk of the lynching party was made up of cabbies who wanted revenge for the crime of which Earle was accused. The Negro was held for the stabbing and robbery last Saturday night of cab-driver T. W. Brown.

Two others, identified merely as "prominent" Greenville residents, also are being held. But the names of all suspects are being withheld until additional suspects are questioned.

Authorities have been helped out in their probe by statements from jailor Ed Gilstrap, who was forced to open Earle's jail cell, as well as by statements from his daughter who watched the raid from her upstairs apartment.

No One's Fault

The history-making bonus measure passed recently by the State legislature is a credit to North Carolina and to the men who passed it. Nearly all state employees are better off today because of the bonus voted them for the last eight months of the present fiscal year. The legislators who listened to the people instead of the administration have the admiration of all the state employees as well as most of the other voters. We wish to commend the state senators and representatives for adopting the report of the conference committee that made the bonus possible. The measure says, in effect, here is the money you have earned. The last appropriation was not sufficient. This bonus is our way of making up the deficiency.

In checking with the comptroller of the University, we learned that the bonus is granted to all state employees with the exception of one group. Mr. Carmichael says that according to his present information, the bonus will not be granted to the part-time, self-help students who work here in the University. This means that those students who serve us in the library, in the cafeteria, at the book exchange and in other jobs on the campus will not benefit by the measure. If the final interpretation of the measure denies some bonus to these self-help students, we believe that the legislature has made an unfortunate oversight in preparing the bill.

Certainly no group of state employees need some sort of bonus more than these part-time workers. In many cases they are veterans who have obligations that cannot be covered by their G.I. allotment. In other cases, they are students who depend on this part-time work to help them get through school. The usual hourly wage of these workers is 50 cents an hour, and they usually work about two hours a day. A few years ago this dollar a day would have taken care of their meals, but now it does not. The average food expense now is nearer to $1.50 a day. These students would not be working if they did not need the money. They have been victims of the same inflation that has hurt all others in the fixed-income group.

These students do not have the same free market for their labor that many other state employees have. Since they want first to get an education, they must sell their labor in the immediate vicinity of the institution they attend. Probably nowhere else in the state could such workers be obtained at 50 cents an hour as in Chapel Hill.

There can be little doubt that these workers are rowing their own boat. They are doing the same work in the book-exchange and in the cafeteria that brings 75 cents an hour in other parts of the state. It would be difficult to imagine the work of the University being carried on without the work of these students.

We believe that the aim of the bonus measure is to help put state employees on an equal footing with other employees in buying in the inflated market that now exists. We believe that the proponents of the measure would recognize that the self-help students are also the victims of this inflation, and need the bonus as badly as the other state employees. We believe that the measure, as it is now interpreted, does an injustice to this group of part-time workers.

There is no need to say that this is a deliberate injustice. The noteworthy way in which the legislators have handled the measure precludes any such charge. It has merely been an oversight on the part of men who have tone tremendous work in the past weeks. Compared to the vast payroll of state employees, the wages of this little group of self-help students are insignificant. Yet even a small addition to their small salaries would be of great importance to them.

The oversight has been no one's fault. It can be remedied by the legislature, or perhaps by the administrators with very little trouble. We would like to see the self-help students get an even break.—J.M.

Dan the Dog Accuses Scribe Of Taking 'Dive' in Contest

By Jud Kinberg

I was just observing that my tongue tasted like the fuzzy side of a canine's ear, when Dan the Dog dropped up to the office for a brief chat.

Dan is usually most compassionate, so I was startled when he put his paw menacingly under his coat and snarled, "The boys do not like what happened Thursday night, Kinberg."

"You mean about the Carolina Magazine dropping a close one to the DTHoochsters in the beer-guzzling contest?"

"That is just what I mean, bright boy. There is some talk roundand-about that you personally take a dive!"

"Oh that, I just got under the table for a gag picture, Dan. I was not in the least affected."

"Can the wise talk, bright boy. The boys are saying that you dump this little game after you tell them to bet heavy on the Magsters."

"Nothing of the sort, Dan. I will admit that I noised it around we could take the local yellow journalists with a beer bottle tied behind our backs, but I never advised anyone to wager hard cash on the outcome."

"Stop weasling, bright boy! Assorted gamblers are placing money all over town Thursday afternoon on your say-so. Now they are hinting that maybe you encourage this in order to make a killing by backing the DTH yourself."

"Horrors, Dan," I exclaimed. "Does that sound like the sort of thing I would do?"

Again Dan's lips curled and he barked, "Are you kidding? Why it is generally noised about that you one time turn in your grandmother to Federal peepers for her using cancelled postage stamps on her mail. The gamblers are more than somewhat perturbed, Kinberg."

"I can explain everything. It was a series of unlucky breaks and skullduggery that brought the sad decision."

"Start talking, columnist!"

"Our first mistake was to leave all preparations to the Daily Tar Heel. But then, how was I to know?"

"Know what?"

"That Woestendiek would get Schlitz when he knows I drink nothing but Budweiser."

"What sort of fairy story is this concerning brand?"

"It is very important. My aesthetic sense was so outraged by the Schlitz label that my concentration was greatly impaired. On the third round of the contest, I had the cup to my lips for three seconds before I realized it was empty."

"Are you certain that this lack of concentration is not being brought on by advanced intoxication, columnist?"

"On three beers, Dan? You know my Guzzlers Club of America handicap is four of the filled brown bottles. But this wasn't the only trick the unscrupulous Daily Blatz boys pull."

"This is sounding like a pretty nasty accusation."

"You wouldn't believe the lengths the DTH went to in order to nose us out. When we came to the gaming table, I found that all our cups had been ruthlessly sandpapered. The rough edges cut my men's lips to ribbons, blood flowed. None the less we continued the struggle."

Dan sat there, dumbfounded by the magnitude of DTH culpability. Slowly, he shook his mane, handed me a friendly paw and said, "I am carrying this tale back to my gay dog friends. Your name is cleared."

It was a touching farewell as my pal padded from the office. He turned and called back, "What part is this Schaap ringer of the Tar Heel's playing in our defeat?"

"He is pretty fast, Dan. But for my money he is nothing but a burp in the pan. I am grooming a chap by the name of Kaufmann who will take him by next quarter."

"Do you plan any coming meets for the Mag team?"

"Next quarter we hope to meet the Duke Archive staff in a home-and-home series."

"Do you have any advice as to what side we put the money on?"

"You can win back all you lost on Thursday's bout by judiciously spreading money about supporting the Carolina Magazine."

"What is making you so certain?"

"We are insisting that their editor drink in the match."

"How does that. . .?"

"It's a woman!"

Carolina Merry-Go-Round

By Bob Jones and Bill Robertson

At the present time there exists a plan adopted by our state legislature for the improvement of the health facilities of the people of North Carolina. This plan, known as the North Carolina Good Health Plan, has received the support of liberal and progressive groups throughout the state, including our leading campus organizations.

However, parts of this plan, which in our opinion contain its essence, are not in operation. These parts concern the Hospital and Health Center Construction Program, and the expanded Medical School for training more doctors, nurses, technicians, and other necessary personnel. It is obvious that without the necessary tools and without the necessary trained human beings to handle these tools no plan can be a success.

Concretely, a study made by the Medical Care Commission appointed by Governor Cherry has revealed that there is a need for at least 1,300 more doctors in the state. In addition, the study has revealed that the medical facilities at Duke and Bowman Gray are not sufficient for our needs.

Now we all know that the successful operation of a plan does not depend solely upon the appropriation of the necessary funds for its realization. However, it must be admitted that this is the first, unavoidable step. In this connection, it appears that the most effective method in approaching the state legislature is that of group action. The elected officers of our campus organizations will be able to obtain copies of a Summary of the Good Health Plan from Blount Stewart. This summary is concise, and for our purposes, complete.

It is well to remember that campus organizations develop on the basis of practical activities in such situations as this—which reveal to individual students their real intentions and purposes.—B. R.

Dance Company Gives Performance

By R. H. Hamilton

They tell me that we're not supposed to say nice things about Duke, in Chapel Hill. But, this morning I can't keep from congratulating the Dukesters on their presentation of Martha Graham and her dance company in Page auditorium on Thursday night. Modern dance enthusiasts can drag out every complimentary adjective in the book to describe the performance and they would all fit. Both Miss Graham and her exceptionally competent troupe danced with skill, precision, and a rare artistry as they went through the program of three of the best modern ballets.

The initial offering was "Appalachian Spring" based on the musical suite by Aaron Copland. The several years which have passed since Miss Graham first started dancing this selection have not dimmed its brilliance, freshness and simplicity.

Secondly, was the more abstract "Letter to the World," a fantasy on the legend of the life of Emily Dickinson. Although this dance is impressionistic and almost the ultimate in the modern dance category, it was well received; due in no small part to the excellent dancing of May O'Donnel as "Ancestress," Erick Hawkins, and Mark Ryder.

The final dance of the night was the gay, amusing and sometimes poignant "Every Soul Is a Circus." A satire on the life of a shallow and silly woman the body movements and dance situations brought forth approving laughter from the audience.

All in all, it was an excellent program and an evening well spent. Now that the football season is over, may be we should pay more attention to what goes on at the Durham campus

Letters To The Editor

The Shackles of Pride

Dear Sir:

A fundamental note was struck in yesterday's letter from Mr. Bernard Flemmons. "A matter of pride" reveals a basic attitude which is retarding brotherhood and understanding not only in North Carolina but in the world. Pride or as Webster defines it, "inordinate self-esteem" is the obvious malady from which all discrimination and intolerance proceed. "Lofty self-respect, arrogance, and disdain" are not the things which noted men of our state sought to establish. Instead they visualized a progressive North Carolina which would rise above the prejudice that is fostered by ignorance—and yet how startling to find in the midst of our own educational set-up, so nobly dedicated to liberty and enlightenment, those who would keep us chained in the shackles of intolerance which are antithetical to everything we profess to obtain from a liberal education. Before us is placed the chivalric reason, "a matter of pride."

The matter of interracial education goes much deeper than merely wanting equality of educational facilities which is actually a right of citizenship and no noble concession. From the meeting of the races in the classroom and as students would grow the understanding which inevitably must come if we are to ever achieve even a verisimilitude of true democracy in the United States or peace in the world.

Have we more pride than foresight? Have we more pride than brotherhood? Have we more pride than the ability to see beyond our narrow prejudice? If so then do we deserve our place in a society dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal?

MARY LELA SPARKS.

Further Suggestion

Dear Sir,

My letter of last Friday has raised considerable comment since its publication. To shortly summarize, the following conclusion had been drawn with respect to the new registration system: it prevents students' choice of professors and class hours and it has not diminished registration lines to any great extent. Neither Mr. Woestendiek, in his editorials on the subject, nor I have ever questioned the sincerity of Mr. Lanier and the board of registrars.

We must share freedom and responsibility alike. Our legislature has proven that it can and does represent us when the need arises, in this case to initiate proper action and consideration to iron out obvious difficulties from which both faculty and students suffer during registration time. In addition to the resolution passed last night by the assembly I would like to suggest that the president of the student body appoint a special committee to sponsor meetings between Mr. Lanier and his staff and the students' representatives so that all sides of this important question may be aired and to help find a way, in cooperation with the faculty who I am certain will gladly accept any assistance, so that registration procedure in the future may be based on intelligent compromise of open minds.

In conclusion, I would like to say for myself and the majority of students that we are hoping for an early amelioration of the situation. It is, of course, to be expected that all intelligent and clear-think people will condemn the radical proposal by C. B. Farrell in Tuesday's column, in which he not only advocates but urges the use of the "strike" as a solution to the present problem.

Sincerely yours,

PETER H. GERNS.

Matmen Risk Perfect Slate At Annapolis

Navy Favored To End Streak

Tar Heels Seeking Seventh Win in Row

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 21.— The league-leading North Carolina wrestling team, undefeated in six consecutive Southern conference matches this season, arrived here late tonight for the intersectional contest here tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock with the potent Navy mat crew.

Carolina and Navy will weigh-in in the morning at 11 o'clock and then square off tomorrow afternoon in the Navy gym. The power-laden Navy crew is rated a heavy favorite to turn back the strong Southern contenders, but the Tar Heels are expected to give Navy one of its biggest tests of the nearly-completed season.

Revamped Lineup

The Tar Heel lineup is slightly revamped for the meet here tomorrow, Co-Captain Tommy Hearn having been brought down to the 128-pound division and Demont Roseman, a letterman from last season, inserted in the 136-pound spot. Tom Urquhart, who has won five out of six matches for Carolina at 128 this season, didn't make the trip because of a rib injury.

Also, Laurie Hooper, 1944 captain of the Tar Heels, will be back in action in his heavyweight spot, the stellar Carolinian having been injured since an early meet with Davidson in Chapel Hill. Hooper is expected to be one of Carolina's aces in the hole in its attempt to stop the Middies.

Undefeated Records

Three undefeated Tar Heel records go on the block in this meet with Navy, the 6-0 records of Co-Captains Hearn and Dick Seaver and Oscar Gupton, the 165-pounder from Carolina. The complete Tar Heel lineup will have Doug Thompson at the 121-pound position, Hearn at 128, Roseman at 136, Seaver at 145, Irv Zirpel at 155, Gupton at 165, Bill Kemp at 175 and Hooper at heavyweight.

Both teams are reported to be in top physical shape for the match. Like the Tar Heels, the Middies are unbeaten this season and have several Eastern intercollegiate runners-up in their lineup, including Chuck Hathaway at 175 and Newbold Smith in the heavy group. Other stars include Don Tardiff at 155, Wayne Smith at 136, and Bob Wishard at 165.

Tar Heel Ringmen Oppose Cadets Today In Final Dual Encounter of Campaign

Jayvees Finish Slate During Coming Week

The contest between Carolina's unbeaten junior varsity cagers and the Fourth Signal Batallion quintet of Fort Bragg, originally slated for tonight, has been postponed and the two teams will clash instead next Wednesday.

Sporting a perfect record of 13 straight successes, Coach Lew Hayworth's charges will complete their schedule during the coming week. On Tuesday they face the Presbyterian Junior College five in Woollen gym and battle the Army team Wednesday in the season's finale. The latter game, a return tussle, will be at Fort Bragg.

Dolphinettes Meet Norfolk Indians

The Carolina jayvee mermen will be out to take their first victory of the season when they encounter the Norfolk division of William & Mary in Bowman Gray pool today at 2 o'clock.

In the sprint events Bill Herr, Warren Perry, Bob Elliott and Carnes will represent Carolina.

The distance events will have Frazier, Tom Scheinman, Horton and Henry McLain swimming for Coach Jamerson.

The backstroke features Larry Johnson and Bob MacKenzie.

Swimming the breaststroke for the Tar Heels will be Allison Pell and Stan Cohen.

Diving for the Blue Dolphinettes are Dick Swigart and Doug Whichard.

The relay teams will be made up of MacKenzie, Pell and Bill Truitt in the medley, with Beam, Dietzel, Hangell and Barth swimming the 400-meter event.

Track Tickets on Sale

Tickets are now on sale for the Fifth Annual Southern Invitation Games at Woollen Gym on March 1. All seats are reserved and the cost covering both afternoon and evening events is 75 cents for University students and $1.50 for all others.

Four New Mittmen Selected to Start In Carolina Lineup

By Roy Holsten

Mike "Houdini" Ronman reached deep in his bag of tricks this week and came up with four new scrappers to augment his depleted Tar Heel ring squad which clashes with the Army Cadets this afternoon at West Point.

Of late, Mike has been working his "vanishing boxer" trick with an amazing degree of success. In fact, since the onset of the current season, over eight have disappeared. This has been somewhat disconcerting to the fiery little mentor but he has managed to replace them with fighters who, despite their lack of experience, at least possess an abundance of spirit.

Hit by Injuries

Earlier this week, Coach Ronman was confronted with a list of four proposed starters who had developed minor ailments and injuries. Undaunted, he has rapidly whipped into shape four substitute starters who will accompany the boxers to West Point for their last dual meet of the season.

In the 165-pound division, Mike has been grooming Charlie Higgison for a starting berth. Charlie boxed in intramurals this fall and looked impressive as he went through his workouts yesterday.

The other new men include P. A. Lee, in the 125-pound division, Tony Payne, 145 pounder, and Glade Flake in the 175-pound bracket. This will be the first fight for all four.

Cadets Have Strong Squad

The Cadets have a strong outfit, this season and have lost only one match. Maryland was the victor in the lone defeat by a score of 4½ to 3½. Carolina was taken into camp by the Old Liners in a 6-2 setback.

The only other team which both squads have faced in Syracuse. The Black Knights mittmen held Syracuse to a tie while the Tar Heels were set down 5½-2½ in the Sugar Bowl sports carnival last December.

The Ronmanmen will be gunning for their second win in this, their sixth encounter of the season. The Cadets are out for their fifth victory in seven starts, including the one tie.

Coach Ronman, aided by Assistant Coach Bob Farris, will start heavy workouts next week in preparation for the Southern conference tourney which is scheduled for March 7 and 8 at Maryland.

Phants Take Time Out Before Crucial Games

As a reward for their three victories during the past week, the Carolina cagers received a two-day rest from Coach Tom Scott yesterday and today and will begin practice sessions for the two remaining clashes with light drills tomorrow afternoon.

The Phantoms face two severe tests in their quest for the conference leadership in their journeys to State Tuesday evening and Duke Friday night. The Red Terrors are currently in possession of the top rung in the circuit, with a 10-2 record, followed closely by Carolina with 9-2. Duke is also a contender with 8-2 and two games coming up this weekend.

In the individual scoring, Jim Hamilton has pulled up among the conference leaders with a total of 154 points in 11 games.

The two battles this week wind up regular season play. The Conference tourney gets under way in Durham on March 6.

Cottingham, Stratford Lead In Mural Grail Award Race

Intramural stars Walter Cottingham of the Grads and Tom Stratford of the Phi Gams have taken mid-year leads in the annual Grail cup presentation race, according to the standings released this week by mural director Walter Rabb.

The Grail cups are given each year to the leading mural participant in both the dormitory and fraternity league and are awarded on a point basis.

Neither leader has by any means "sewed up" the award in his division with Cottingham holding a narrow 15-point advantage over Jim Poole, also of the Grads, in the dorm loop, and Stratford sporting nothing more than a scant one-point margin over Jack Folger of Kappa Sigma in the frat race. The top ten men in each division are as follows:

Dormitory — Cottingham (Grads) 71; Poole (Grads) 56; Smith (Grads) 51; Skakle (Lewis) 51; Taylor (Lewis) 47; Bland (Med School) 47; Phillips (Grads) 46; Moseley (Med School) 43; Couch (Stacy) 43; Walker (Med School) 41.

Fraternity—Stratford (Phi Gam) 81; Folger (Kap Sig) 80; Langley (Sig Chi) 79; Campbell (DKE) 79; Johnson (Sig Chi) 73; Nixon (Sig Chi) 70; Nisbet (Phi Gam) 64; Rice (Phi Gam) 64; Davis (Sig Chi) 63; Fox (Pi Lam) 62.

The above totals include participation in touch football, volleyball, boxing, table tennis, wrestling, and basketball. Only Boo Walker of the Med School has the distinction of having competed in all six sports.

Intramural Sports still remaining during the present school year include swimming, tennis, softball, track, water polo and horseshoes.

Besides the two player cups, the Grail also awards each year another pair of trophies given to the two mural managers, who in the opinion of the department have done the most to further intramural activity in their organization. All four awards will be made at the end of the spring quarter.

Tankmen Seek to Maintain Eight-Year Victory String

West Raleigh Natators Heavily Favored; Ficklen, Sper Expected to Spark Locals

By Bob Goldwater

Unbeaten in Southern conference dual meet competition for the past eight years, Carolina's Blue Dolphins face the most serious threat to that streak since its start in 1939 when they oppose N. C. State's flashy swimmers in Bowman Gray pool this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

FORMER CAROLINA swimming mentor Willis Casey returns to Chapel Hill this afternoon as coach of the N. C. State tank team. His Red Terrors are favored to put an end to the long Blue Dolphin streak in conference competition.

The Red Terrors, coached by former Tar Heel mentor Willis Casey, are heavily favored to put a halt to the Carolina string of 26 consecutive circuit victories. Led by three Bills, Kelly, Ward and Desperes, the Raleigh team has rolled through seven straight tilts and copped the Carolinas AAU meet two weeks ago. The Dolphins have a 2-0 record in loop competition.

Hopes for Victory

Banking his hopes for victory on a majority of second and third places plus several top positions, Coach Dick Jamerson will call on his two stars, Norm Sper and Co-Captain Warren Ficklen, in the maximum of three events. Ficklen will go in the medley and 100-meter free-style events with Sper performing in the diving and backstroke. Both are slated for relay duty.

Other swimmers on whom Coach Jamerson is counting to annex points against the strong opposition include Jesse Greenbaum in both sprints, Buddy Crone in the diving Pete Hexner and Jerry Cook in the breaststroke, and Sam McCauley in the distance events.

State Stars

Coach Casey will also use his three aces in the full quota of three races. All three are expected to swim the relay, with Kelly going in the medley and breaststroke, Ward in the two sprints, and Desperes in the 150-meter backstroke and 220. Other outstanding Terrors include Captain Bob Reynolds, in the sprints, backstroker Bill Nufer and divers Bill Cramer and Tinker Heyward.

Ironically, two of State's stars helped build up the Carolina record. Both Kelly and Ward were Tar Heel standouts during the war, being enrolled in the V-12 program.

Distance Runners Pace Time Trials

Coach Dale Ranson was well pleased at the end of the mile and a half time trials yesterday afternoon as for the first time in his long coaching career he had four boys break 7:02.

The trial yesterday saw Jimmy Miller and Sam Magill hit the finish together in 7:02 to add their times to the 7:01 posted by Jack Milne, Alvin Smith and Miller in earlier tests.

Carolina Ranked Fifth

The White Phantastics are ranked fifth among Southern Schools, according to the current weekly Dunkel ratings. State is ninth with Duke rated 11.

The sports center will be dedicated as a memorial to Lieutenant Allen Sims, fighter plane pilot who has shot down and killed off the China coast. The gift was presented by Brown Wilson, past Commander of the Gaston county American Legion post.

It is expected that a baseball field, gridiron, and a field house will be constructed on the plot, and it has been suggested that the field might be used as a location for the annual Gaston county fair.

S.C. White Primary Bill To Be Tested in Court

Columbia, S. C., Feb. 21—(UP)—A Columbia Negro has entered a suit in Federal District court testing the state's white primary law.

The South Carolina law was the model for the Georgia white primary act adopted this week which takes the Democratic primary out of state control and gives all control to the Party, which acts as a private club.

A Columbia Negro businessman, George Elmore, has asked the court to declare the law unconstitutional, claiming the Democratic party has denied him his constitutional right to vote.

Elmore says that even though the party operates as a private club, it still performs an essential function of government in running the election. For proof he points to the fact that the Democratic party furnishes ballots for South Carolina general elections.

Whiskey Dealers State High Prices to Remain

The elbow-benders are finding that abstinence may make the thirst grow stronger, but it apparently will not bring down the price of liquor.

The liquor industry admits that consumer resistance against high prices has brought retail sales down at least 25 per cent since January 1.

However, the dealers make it clear that they have no plans for a return to pre-war levels. Rather than cut the price of Scotch and bonded whiskeys, producers say they will put larger volumes of lower quality merchandise on the market.

Vanderbilt Professor Surveys Dating Habits

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 21—(UP)—The pretty-boys in American colleges have the most dates, that's a matter of record. But a Vanderbilt professor at Nashville, says they don't get married any faster than their less handsome brothers.

Among other things, he says, men don't put off getting married because they have too little money, or have to support their parents.

Beer Bowl Battle...

Schaap Leads DTH Tipplers In Win Over Mag Imbibers

By Sam Whitehall

"Brew's Who" of the campus literati went into executive session Thursday evening, and when the foam had dispersed the DTH's rubber-throated chugaluggers had trounced an outglassed Carolina Mag Schlitz sextet in the first Beer Bowl battle.

Whisking over the case-long course in creditable 4.46 time, the newspaper entry left Coach Kinberg's challengers in their cups from the opening gulp and their beer was never headed. The Mag did not finish after being lapped on the final round.

Title on the Line

Flushed with victory, Coach Wild Wally Woestenburp of the DTH put his club's newly-won title on the line against any campus opposition. He hinted that such would be a tuneup for planned intercollegiate competition, possibly starting against the staff of the Duke Chronicle.

Number one man for the winners was brewsing Mort (Chug-Chug) Schaap, who later bested the Mag's Al (pretzels) Kauffman for singles honors. The DTH made a clean sweep when Editor Woestenburp defeated Chief Jacobson of the opposition in a special match.

In the main event the DTH paced itself to a fast 0:40 first quarter, only slightly hampered by the ailing esophagus of Foo (The Gulp) Giduz. Referee Ed (Gabe) Joyner timed the Mag's first sprint at 30 seconds slower, and they never regained the lost ground.

No Knockdowns

There were no knockdowns in the rout, but the DTH's little boy brew, Earl Heffner, slipped in the fourth round and was momentarily on the floor. He recovered, however, and Woestenburp, Sam (Satchmo') Daniels and Giduz came across the line without mishap. Number two DTHer, letterman Ed (Quart-A-Minute) Allen teamed with Schaap to give the winners their constant lead.

The Mag lineup read: Jacobson, Perlmutter, Croner, Kinberg, Conrad and Kaufman.

As the DTH coach said after the fiasco:

"Is the Mag still in the league?"

Lucky Luciano Held in Cuba

American Gangster Awaits Deportation

Havana, Feb. 22—(UP)—Cuban authorities have arrested American gangster Charles "Lucky" Luciano. They say he will be deported, as he was deported from the United States to his native Italy last year.

Officials of the federal narcotics bureau say they're very pleased at the news that Luciano will be run out of Cuba. The bureau had banned all American drug shipments to Cuba as long as the notorious dope-smuggler remained there.

Sinatra Is Angry

Crooner Frank Sinatra says he's angry and surprised. Some of the reports about Luciano's gay social whirl in Havana said that the gangster had been seen "fraternizing" with various movie stars, including Sinatra. Sinatra calls that "a vicious lie."

He says that someone brought Lucky to his table in a Havana night club and introduced him. Sinatra shook hands, which he says is hardly fraternizing. "I was brought up," he said angrily, "to shake a man's hand when I'm introduced without first investigating his past."

SALUTATORY

The growing demands of the University have shown the need of a weekly paper. The University Athletic Association in regarding itself as the means by which such a need could be supplied, at a stated meeting elected a board of editors (chief and five subs) and a business manager.

With this apology only, the first issue of the first volume of the TAR HEEL makes its appearance.

This new venture is necessarily entered upon by the present board with no little trepidation, nevertheless with a determination, to make a success which can only be done through the indulgence and assistance of our faculty and fellow-students. Therefore we invite honest criticism and aid in the advancement of [illegible] project will be thankfully appreciated.

THE LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE VISIT THE UNIVERSITY.

The following members of the legislature composing the visitation committee arrived at the University on a special train Friday morning, February 3rd:

Messrs. Battle, chairman; Cheek Aycoke, James, Pou, of the senate; and Messrs. Holt (chairman) Ease, Parker, Starnes, Walker, Ward, of the house.

After breakfasting, the regular chapel exercises were attended, then visits were made to the reading room, libraries and various lecture rooms where classes were assembled. The numerous laboratories were inspected as well as some of the students' rooms. In the afternoon meetings of both the societies were held and the gentlemen who were not alumni were made honorary members. Just after prayers the boys called repeatedly for speeches from our visitors, a majority of whom responded most felicitously and gave words of encouragement for the future outlook of the university, from a legislative appropriation standpoint. All saw the need of a sufficient appropriation to fully equip, this the most useful and important of all the State [illegible], and gave to a university whose past brilliant record and glorious future prospects are such as will make any State in the Union proud to be the possessor of such an heritage to hand to posterity, a sufficient appropriation to put it the university on a financial basis equal to its rapid expansion and growth. When asked if the committee expressed their deep regret at not having had an opportunity of receiving an education in their youth, we could not but feel that it was a duty that it was owed to future generations, and which has been due to those that have passed away, that the supreme law making power in the State, ought to make tuition at the university free to North Carolinians as is done at the University of Virginia to Virginians and the only way to do this is to appropriate a sufficient amount to keep the university up, until resources from outside States and the technical courses shall make itself sustaining, and, too, we could not but think what a shame and loss it was to North Carolina, that it had failed to open the doors of the university, in the past to such sterling manhood as represented the legislature on the committee. The body of the students were well pleased with our friends, if they are fair sample of our legislators this year. North Carolina is in good hands. They know the needs of the University.

Fifty-four years ago today Volume I Number I of the Tar Heel hit the campus. Quite a contrast with the present Daily Tar Heel, the first issues were printed completely by hand set type in a bright blue ink. One of the main features of the first issues were the accounts of sports events—only 20 days late.

The lead article of the first edition, topped by a grammatically incorrect headline, told of the visit of the University legislative committee visiting the campus. The article states that the members were greatly impressed with the University's needs for more appropriations. A picture of the seven editors of the first publication is shown on page two.

Carried Flashes of Sport Events—Only 20 Days Late....

Daily Tar Heel Got Its Start 54 Years Ago With Publication of Campus Sports Events

By Barron Mills

Fifty-four years of continuous publication of the Daily Tar Heel have seen the publication's slogan change from the "Only College Daily in the South" to the "Oldest College Daily in the South" and then to its present slogan, "The Only College Daily in the Southeast."

Celebrating its 54th anniversary today, the Tar Heel, as the news sheet was first called, has not once missed a deadline during the academic years.

The Athletic association takes all the credit for the first issues of the publication since it was originally printed to give an account of the athletic events on campus. It was nothing unusual in the diaper days of the paper to wait a full two weeks to read the much-talked-about Carolina-Trinity college games. Walter "Pete" Murphy and Charles Baskerville were the first editors of the sports sheet—which was printed with handset type in bright blue ink—Baskerville served as editor-in-chief and Murphy, managing editor.

Many of the names that once stood out in the masthead of the publication have been transplanted into mastheads of metropolitan dailies as well as in "Who's Who in America." Frank P. Graham, president of the University; Thomas Wolfe, famous author of "Look Homeward Angel," and Jonathan Daniels, prominent North Carolina author-lecturer and former editor of the News and Observer are among its former staff members.

One of the Tar Heel's main crusades during the years has been the paving of the muddy walks on campus. In February 1893 the publication blasted forth with its first editorial advocating the paving of the campus walks. From time to time during the years the matter has spotlighted the edit pages of the Tar Heel, but it was not until the past fall that the Board of Trustees consented to do away with the muddy walk tradition. It took the publication 54 years to realize this goal, but the Tar Heel is generally credited with the victory.

From Rags to Riches

Considerable progress has been made from its feeble beginning in a delapidated storeroom next to the old Methodist church, until now the publication covers five fairly large rooms besides maintaining its night offices in the Orange printshop.

The original ten-man staff of the Tar Heel has been increased nearly six times its number. The office is equipped with a full-time United Press wire service—one of the few collegiate newspapers to have a teletype. The little news sheet advanced from its sports sheet weekly to a full-fledged semi-weekly in 1920. In 1928 the Tar Heel slipped "Daily" before its name and got into competition with the other dailies in the state.

The war years played havoc with the staff of the DTH as well as to the student body of the University. Due to the reduction in staff members and the shortage of newsprint the daily publication was sliced back to a semi-weekly.

With the return of the veterans to the campus DTH circulation soared to the 6,500 mark, where it has been stabilized because of the newsprint shortage. However, just as soon as newsprint becomes more plentiful at least 8,000 copies will be printed to fill the student and mail circulation lists.

Under the present editorship of Bill Woestendiek, senior from Saugerties, N. Y., the DTH is rapidly gaining the reputation of a lively small town daily.

Managing Editor Roland Giduz of Chapel Hill and his assistant, Desk Editor Barron Mills from Laurinburg take charge of the coverage of state, campus, national and international news briefs. They are assisted by Night Editors Bookie Jabine of Baltimore, Md., Lawrence Clements of Roanoke Rapids, and Charles Hauser of Fort Bragg. Irwin Smallwood, Greensboro, serves as sports editor.

Nose for News

Staff members of the Daily Tar Heel pride themselves with certain scoops that the publication has had in its 54 years. In 1941 the DTH was the only newspaper south of Washington to carry complete election returns and in 1939 was the only paper in the state to carry the flash of the German invasion of Belgium. In 1945 the publication printed a special edition on the death of President Roosevelt and another special on the ending of the war.

Renowned Poet Frost, Pulitzer Prize Winner, Coming Here Tuesday

Robert Frost, world-renowned portrayer of New England life in verse, who speaks in Memorial hall Tuesday evening at 8:30, said on his last visit here in 1943, that Chapel Hill holds a great interest for him. It is a place of poetical drama. Frost said, because of the number of writers and creative artists who have lived here and have been influenced by the atmosphere.

Winning the Pulitzer prize in poetry in the years 1924, 1931 and 1937, the noted poet was also awarded the Loines prize in 1931, the Mark Twain medal in 1937, the American Academy of Arts and Letters medal in 1938, and the Poetry Society of America prize in 1941.

Frost uses an indirect approach in the great majority of his work, using character sketches, anecdotes and incidents to imply and suggest his underlying themes.

'Hear the Hammers Ringing' Is Latest Playmakers' Show

Over 25 Cast in Premiere Production; Play Studies Southern Racial Problems

Over twenty-five people have been cast in the Carolina Playmakers' coming premiere production of a new original play by Cid Ricketts Sumner, "Hear the Hammers Ringing," under the direction of Kai Jurgensen, to be presented in the Playmakers theatre March 5, 6, 7 and 8.

"Hear the Hammers Ringing" will be the Carolina Playmakers' 21st annual premiere production of an original full-length play written by a student in the dramatic art department at Carolina. The play is a stirring drama of Mississippi life, based on Mrs. Sumner's latest novel, "Quality," recently published by Bobbs-Merrill, and tells the story of a Negro girl who is educated in the north, and returning home, has to make adjustment to conditions in the south.

Cast for the Play

Eileen Smith is cast in the leading role of Pinkey, the light-skinned Negro girl who has come back to Mississippi. Her grandmother is Lillian Prince. Porter Van Zandt plays Arch Naughton, an impudent northern Negro journalist. Jane Hutson is Miss Em, a lady of the old south.

Fred Johnson is cast as Judge Walker, a police court judge; Eleanor Rimer is Mrs. Melba Wooley, a pompous old woman; Rue Guthrie is Rozelia, her maid; Winford Logan is Stanley, a prosecuting attorney; Madeline Cooley is Miss Sue Ann Walker, the town librarian; Robert Armstrong is John, an irresponsible Negro; Sidney Shertzer is Frank Canady, a Negro doctor.

Others in the cast are Robert Epstein, W. P. Covington, III, James Warren, Mary Jo Cain, Harry Thomas, Gordon Bennett, Martin Jacobs, Claude Rayborn and Churchill Womble.

Commendable Program

When a nation finds itself enmeshed in Mars' arms of war, the people invariably turn to religion in their hour of need. But when the crisis passes, these people—not all, but some—have a tendency to return to their normal way of life in which religion hangs merely on life's periphery of interest.

Following World War I, this swing from religious emphasis to worldly interests occurred with increasing acceleration. Whether history shall repeat itself only time can determine.

Fortunately, there are those people sincerely and honestly working against such a repetition.

Today Religion in Life Week presented by the Council for Religion in Life begins. The week runs through February 28. The purpose of this commendable program is best described by CRIL President Benjamin Perlmutter.

"In presenting the Religion in Life Week to the University campus, the Council for Religion in Life is attempting to deepen and sharpen the sense of interdependence among all groups, whether religious or secular, moral or political, who share our common heritage.

"We hope that our program will increase the consciousness and understanding of religious forces among the student body, and that it will help promote understanding, cooperation and appreciation in the relations among religious faiths both in the University community and in the universal community.

"The design of the seminars and lectures is to throw light on the subjects of intolerance and suspicion which can prevent our working together as a team to win the victories of peace. Implied in this is the expectation that every person while loyal to his own group and conviction will respect and work with those of other groups.

"We are meeting in the acknowledgment of the principal that the chief aim of religion is to teach the will of God and through his teaching to bring into clearer perspective the everyday problems of international affairs, of labor, of industry, and of politics. This is religion in life."

Anniversary Waltz

Today an inconspicuous little college weekly that advanced to such a state that it was recognized by a Harvard University professor as ". . . the best, brightest, newsiest college weekly in the South . . ." waltzes into its 54th anniversary. Since then this same ambitious little newspaper has become "The Only College Daily in the Southeast" and owns an "A" rating among All-American college dailies.

Not only has this paper, the Daily Tar Heel, trained many men who were to become leaders in the outside world of journalism, but it also has been the laboratory for the present heads of the University journalism department, O. J. "Skipper" Coffin and Walter Spearman.

Twice during its long life, the Daily Tar Heel has been guided by women editors contrary to the male's disparing cry against "women in journalism." The first of these coed editors was Kat Hill, elected to the post in 1943. Again in 1944 a woman took over the Ivory Tower when the PU Board appointed Muriel Richter to finish the uncompleted term of Horace Carter.

Now a thriving four-page daily, the Daily Tar Heel is hoping for even greater successes. In the not too distant future, the staff hopes for an eight-page daily presenting more news and features.

The greatest qualities of a race, after all, are those of a man, not those of a gentleman, and neither North nor South needs colleges to learn them.—Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr.

Liberation of Palestine Threat to British Empire

By Manny Margolis

Minorities is an ugly term. But unfortunately, such groups are still very much in existence in our heterogeneous world. Still, the war against Fascism has taught us a dynamic lesson about minority groups, and that is that the world is no healthier than its most oppressed minority. Moreover, we have learned that when majorities fail to deal equitably with weak groups, they plant the seeds of their own destruction.

Take the so-called Jewish problem, for example. Some 5,700,000 of them "disappeared" during the reign of Nazism. The remnants of Europe's Jewry are continuing this disappearing act. This human residue from the Hitlerian crematoria are now conducting a mass exodus from Europe which is making their exodus from Egyptian slavery appear like child's play by comparison.

They are on their way to this place called Palestine, which we are told can absorb 4,000,000 additional persons. They are "illegal immigrants." Dr. W. T. Stace, writing in last month's Atlantic Monthly, refers to this mass movement to the Holy Land as a form of "aggression" and "conquest." Other writers warn us that, after all, "the Arabs live there, too."

What are the relative merits of the Arab and Jewish claims? The facts speak for themselves.

1. The political promises made to the Arabs during World War I have been proved not to refer to Palestine. The political promises (the Balfour Declaration) and treaties (the Mandate for Palestine made to the Jews) definitely do.

2. The Arabs have lived in Palestine as a majority group for hundreds of years. Who plans to dispossess them? Nobody. Moreover, Palestine is only one of a number of countries wherein Arabs can create a life of their own. As a matter of fact, most of the other Arab countries are underpopulated and in need of settlers. The Jews, a completely displaced PEOPLE, have no such country.

3. The benefits of Jewish colonization in Palestine speaks for itself.

4. Most of the Arabs fought for the Turks during the First World War and were connivingly neutral in this one. The Jewish contribution to both World Wars will also speak for itself.

Surely, the moral and legal position of the Zionist and non-Zionist groups, who ask merely for the fulfillment of Articles 2, 6, 26, and 27 in the Mandate Treaty, is well nigh air-tight. But unfortunately it isn't "oil-tight," and there's the rub. It is the key to British policy in Palestine—a completely "illegal" one—over the past thirty years.

The key to today's imperial kingdom is oil. The entire Middle East is a gigantic Anglo-American oil well. Palestine forms the terminus of oil pipe-lines extending from surrounding Arab countries. War Correspondent John Osborne writes in February's Harper's Magazine that "British forces and British diplomacy are now protecting that oil and those rights for Americans as well as Britons."

It is at this point that the anti-Zionists are barking up an almost nonexistent tree. The issue here, as far as the big powers are concerned — and this includes the U.S.S.R. as well—is not the Jews. They are not concerned with moral or legal questions. They are concerned with political and economic questions. In the eyes of the British and American governments (Truman's "requests" notwithstanding) the Arabs must be appeased if our oil concessions are not to be endangered.

The Soviet Union also has a deep interest in the oil of the Arab countries. She has a stake also in encouraging the overthrow of British- controlled feudalism in these countries and the establishment of governments more in line with her social program.

Could Britain possibly risk the liberation of a progressive Palestine and still hope to retain her subtle empire in the Middle East? Preposterous! Sheer imperialistic Suez-cide!

In this light, one is better able to understand the somewhat unexpected decision of Ernest Bevin this week to turn the Palestine question over to the U. N. Assembly. (Note: The ASSEMBLY, not the Council). It is in the Assembly that the Arab (read British) states are overwhelmingly well-represented.

Don't the Jews live there, too??

THE CPU ROUNDTABLE

Anti-Trust Legislation

By Josephine Fishel

The need of anti-trust legislation arose during the era following the [illegible] War; this period was known for the trust form of ownership and for its peak in production. Thurman Arnold, former assistant attorney general says that at this time specialized techniques made "bigness" essential for producing goods in large quantities and at low prices; but "bigness" was regarded as a curse because it led to monopoly and interferred with operation of the laws of supply and demand. In order to control the monopolistic practices anti-trust laws appeared. As a result of the legalization of large combinations and the lack of sufficient control, the unjust monopolistic practices continued.

The following is the basic legislation in effect today: 1. Sherman Anti-trust Law of 1890, made combination in restraint of trade illegal; 2. The Clayton Act of 1914 forbade discrimination in price between different purchasers of commodities; 3. The Federal Trade Commission was formed to enforce provisions of law covering fair trade practices; 4. The Interstate Commerce Commission was instituted in 1887 to establish equal treatment to shippers and reasonable rates between communities, with subsequent powers added in other acts; 5. The Robinson-Patman Act of 1936 had the objective of placing the independent dealer on the same footing as the large chain store; 6. The Miller-Tyding Act of 1937 legalized the making of contracts concerning resale price maintenance.

As stated before these laws were not enforced properly, thereby causing the increased development of combinations. Reasons for this lack of effectiveness probably were ignorance of the laws on the part of the business men and lack of funds to put through an effective program.

In 1933 a serious project was begun in the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice to make these laws effective. The assistant attorney-general was in charge of this anti-trust division, and during the administrations of Harold Stephens, John Dickinson, and Robert H. Jackson the division added personnel and funds with which to begin its attack on the trusts.

In 1938 Thurman Arnold took over the job and by 1943, when he left the department, he had instituted 44 per cent of the total proceedings made in the 53-year history of the Sherman Act.

He began an anti-trust enforcement with new techniques by instigating studies and attacks upon five different fields: a. attack against use of patents as a means of evading anti-trust laws; b. an investigation of housing and building industry; c. program dealing with cost of food distribution; d. a project concerning artificial costs n transportation field, and e. a program attacking international cartels. Putting these objectives into practice was hindered by the war so the future still holds great possibilities for them.

Appointed in Arnold's place was Windell Berge, who has continued with the far-reaching program of his predecessor. Berge has been faced with the problems of (1) labor unions conspiring with business firms to effect monopolies, raise prices, restrict production or bar the introduction of labor-saving techniques, and (2) the problem of the small business man. Berge said: "there are three fundamental reasons why anti-trust laws must be vigorously enforced: (1) the tremendous increase in the concentration of economic power occurring during the war years; (2) the large number of mergers since the end of the war; and (3) the serious need for policing price-fixing agreements which will inevitably occur as a result of relaxation of OPA controls."

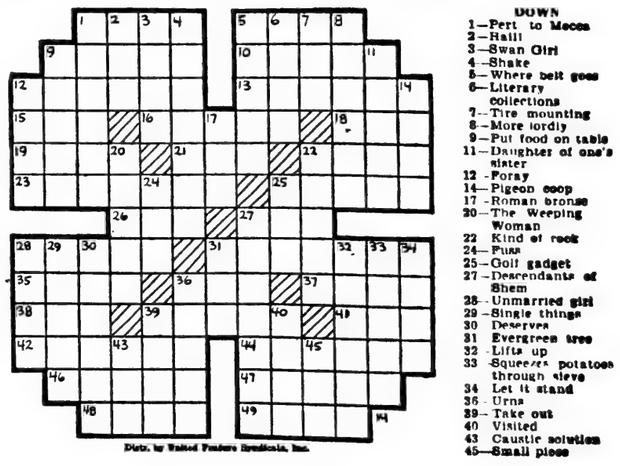
No 'Blaze of Glory' Endings

Students residing in quonset huts may no longer fear ending their academic careers in a literal "blaze of glory" since, according to Operations Supervisor J. S. Bennett who yesterday told the Daily Tar Heel that fire extinguishers were placed in all huts on Friday.

Also, according to Mr. Bennett, under the supervision of F. J. LeClair, professional botanist, 11 men have been working in Victory Village for the last six weeks to improve the scenic setting.

These men have been digging shrubs along Mason Farm road for spring transplanting. On order also are 2500 pounds of grass seed.



Unfortunately, the task is so difficult that officials do not see much prospect of completion this spring.

Carolina Grapplers' Unbeaten Streak Ended By Navy, 28-6

Blue Dolphins Gain Win Over Terrors by Forfeit

Carolina Dual Meet Streak Stays Intact When State Tank Squad Fails to Appear

The eight-year victory streak of the Blue Dolphins in Southern conference dual meet competition remained intact yesterday afternoon when N. C. State's swimmers failed to show up in Bowman Gray pool for a scheduled circuit clash and Dr. Arthur Jensen, official referee and starter, declared the meet forfeited to Carolina.

The official forfeit announcement came at 4:02 p.m., two minutes after the meet was slated to start. The Carolina tankmen were dressed for competition and spectators had gathered when Referee Jensen made his announcement. "The State swimmers were not in the building," the official stated later, "and after conferring with University officials I declared Carolina winner by default."

Published reports originating in Raleigh appeared in papers throughout the state this morning to the effect that Carolina had agreed to a postponement. This was vigorously denied by Coach Dick Jamerson, who admitted, however, that State Coach Willis Casey had requested a postponement on the grounds that several of his mermen were indisposed, and Bill Desperes, star backstroker, was unavailable for the meet because of the serious illness of his mother.

"This was unfortunate for State," Coach Dick Jamerson declared, "but to have postponed the meet because the State team was not at full strength would have been an unprecedented action, in my opinion."

The State team had been favored to win the meet and end Carolina's long conference dual meet streak of 26 straight. The Dolphins have two more dual clashes remaining on the schedule, with Virginia and Duke, before defending their Southern conference title March 7 and 8 in the local pool.

Jayvee Mermen Swamp Norfolk Tribe, 48-27

The jayvee mermen scored their first victory of the season yesterday by outsplashing the Norfolk Division of William and Mary, 48-27, in Bowman Gray pool.

The juniors captured seven of the nine events with Bob Mackenzie and Allison Pell pacing the way.

Mackenzie won the backstroke and swam a leg on the medley relay. Pell copped the 200-meter backstroke and also was on the winning medley relay.

The dive was captured by Dick Swigart and Duke Horton waltzed off with the 400-meter free-style.

Ted Scheinman showed fine form in romping off with the 200-meter free-style and Bob Elliott added five more points to the Carolina total by winning the 100-meter free-style.

Ray Cooke took the only individual victory for William & Mary by winning the 50-meter free-style. The Indian 400-meter relay team took the Tar Heels measure by about five yards.

Other fine performances for Carolina were turned in by the Whichard brothers, Tom and Dave, Warren Perry and Bill Truitt.

Ringmen Drop Finale to Army

Strong Cadet Team Defeats Tar Heels By Shutout Score

(Special to Daily Tar Heel)

West Point, N. Y., Feb. 22—An inexperienced but game Tar Heel boxing team went down to defeat, 7-0, at the hands of the powerful Army ringmen.

The defeat, the fifth out of six meets, ended a dismal season of dual competition for the men of Ronman.

Bill Spiegal, fighting heavyweight for the Tar Heels, had his undefeated string broken by Paul Waver, who took the decision.

Only Herb McKeithan and Charlie Norton were able to get as much as a loss by decision against the potent Black Knights of the Hudson.

The ringmen in other classes were not so lucky as P. A. Lee, Dick Weintraub and Glade Flake all were dropped by their future officer opponents.

The next appearance of some of the boxers will be in the Southern Conference Tourney at College Park on March 6 and 7.

Summary:

125-lb.: Vernon Quarstein (A) TKO P. A. Lee 1:35 of second round.

130-lb.: Stickley (A) decisioned McKeithan.

135-lb.: Bill Heistand (A) TKO Weintraub 1:42 of second round.

145-lb.: Ralph Puckett (A) decisioned Norton.

165-lb.: Harry Ball (A) won by forfeit from Higgelson.

Colonials Upset Duke

Washington, Feb. 22.—Duke's pennant-winning cage hopes were dealt a severe blow here this afternoon when George Washington upset the heavily-favored Blue Devils, 51-49.

The loss was the third in conference play for Duke and drops the Blue Devils out of a second-place tie with North Carolina. Duke has a circuit record of 9-3, while the Phantoms sport a 9-2 slate.

Navy Enters 24 Tracksters In Indoor Classic Saturday

Nineteen Colleges to Appear in Meet; Freshman and Scholastic Fields Full

One of the largest teams in the Southern Invitation indoor games here next Saturday night will represent the United States Naval Academy, 24 Middies having registered to participate in the glittering 13-event college program.

The Navy's late entry boosted the star-studded college field to 19 teams, which together with the many entries for the scholastic and freshman divisions, assures some of the most spirited and highest class track competition in the history of Southern track.

"Pistol Pete" Williams, the football star, and Dick Ambrogi are a pair of Middies who figure to be bad news for opponents in the dash events, while Charlie Dean, Jim Oberholtzer, Nick Smusyn and Francis Carlen are among the other highly regarded Navy speedsters who will help to make the Middies one of the favored teams.

North Carolina's Tar Heels, with an exceptionally promising team this year, will defend the title they won last year in a 12-team field.

College teams entered are North Carolina, N. C. State, Duke, Davidson, South Carolina, Maryland, V. P. I., Tennessee, Mississippi, Florida, Georgia, Georgia Tech, Mercer, Virginia, Bridgewater, Catholic University, Westchester State Teachers College, Rollins, and Navy.

Mural Basketball Championship Tilts Begin This Week

Championship playoffs in intramural basketball competition will start tomorrow afternoon when six fraternity teams, three from each of two leagues, battle to see which two will represent their respective circuits in the final playoffs.

SAE No. 1, Phi Gam No. 1 and Kappa Sig No. 1 will compete for the fraternity league two crown, while Zeta Psi No. 1, ATO No. 1, and Phi Gam No. 2 will battle it out in league five. All six finished the regular season with 6-1 records.

In other fraternity loops, Chi Phi No. 2, Phi Delt No. 2 and Sigma Chi No. 1 walked off with the titles in leagues one, four and six, respectively, all turning in perfect 7-0 slates. Beta No. 1 was high in circuit four with 6-1.

In the dormitory division, the Grads and Everett were undefeated in loops one and three, respectively, with 6-0 records. The Independents downed Stacy to capture the league two crown with 6-1, and the Emanons trimmed the Med School for the championship of circuit four.

The fraternity league winners will compete in a round-robin tourney to decide the fraternity champion, while the dorm playoffs will be conducted on a double-elimination basis.

Mural Director Walter Rabb has also announced that qualifying preliminaries in all individual swimming events, except diving, will be held each afternoon of this week except Wednesday from 4 to 6 o'clock each day.

Since little is known about the strength of the different teams, DKE, 1946 champs, rule as favorites on the basis of last year's showing. The Marines copped the title in the dorm bracket last year but will not be around to defend their title this season.

Middies Extend Winning Ways

Hearn, Gupton Win For Seventh Time

(Special to Daily Tar Heel)

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 22 — North Carolina's mat crew, unbeaten in Southern conference dual meet competition, ran up against the number one wrestling team in the nation here today and suffered their initial setback at the hands of a powerful Navy outfit by a 28-6 score.

The triumph extended the Middies' winning streak to a phenomenal 37 in a row over a four-year period and ended the Tar Heel string for this season at six straight.

For one Carolina grappler it was also the end of an undefeated record, Co-Captain Dick Seaver dropping his first encounter in seven tilts.

The other two Tar Heels with perfect slates both turned in their seventh victories of the campaign. Co-Captain Tommy Hearn, at 128, and Oscar Gupton, at 175, both won via the decision route.

In one of the best matches of the day, Seaver, Carolina's 145-pound representative, was pinned by the Navy captain, Johnny Fletcher, after eight minutes, 16 seconds. Fletcher is unbeaten in the last two years of competition.

Demont Roseman, Irv Zirpel, and Bill Kemp also were pinned. The heavyweight bout went to Navy by a forfeit.

The summary:

121: McIver (N) decisioned Thompson.
128: Hearn (C) decisioned Chandler.
136: Smith (N) pinned Roseman.
145: Fletcher (N) pinned Seaver.
155: Tardiff (N) pinned Zirpel.
165: Wisherd (N) pinned Kemp.
175: Gupton (C) decisioned Septle.

CPU Discussion Topic To Be American Trusts

The trusts in America will be the discussion topic at the Carolina Political union roundtable at 8 o'clock this evening in the Grail room, Graham Memorial. Jo Fishel will deliver the introductory report, following which the floor will be open for the views and facts of both Union members and visitors.

The problem of the trusts has for half a century been the source of much discussion, and was in the limelight recently when Senator Langer (R.-N. D.) quizzed Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge at a senate committee hearing. Berge testified that no violators of U. S. antitrust statutes has been jailed in the half century that the laws have been on the books. Several days later Attorney General Tom Clark announced that Mr. Berge would leave the department on May 1.

Daring Rescue Saves Airmen In Greenland

Young Pilot Employs Rockets in Takeoff

New York, Feb. 24—(UP)—Eleven American airmen were snatched today from the icy wastes of Greenland by a daring 22-year-old air transport pilot.

The pilot, First Lieutenant Bobbie Joe Cavnar, dropped his big transport plane beside their wrecked B-29 superfort, loaded the men aboard, and took off with the aid of rockets.

Off Its Course

Air force experts are unable to explain how the plane got so far off its course as to be forced down in Greenland. There is some speculation that the magnetic pole threw the plane's navigational instruments out of order.

All 11 men were uninjured. They were flown first to Thule, Greenland, and are to be brought on to Westover Field, Massachusetts.

Poet Robert Frost Speaks this Evening

ROBERT FROST

Celebrated Author To Give Address In Memorial Hall

The celebrated American poet, Robert Frost, arrives in Chapel Hill this afternoon as the special guest of the English department. The highlight of Frost's visit to the University campus will be an informal talk, given by him in Memorial hall this evening at 8:30. Dr. Clifford P. Lyons, head of the English department, will introduce the poet, and the public is cordially invited to attend the lecture.

Frost will also hold several discussions with creative writing and comparative literature classes during his short stay here.

Dr. Lyman Cotten, teacher of modern poetry in the University, said of the noted New Englander: "No poet writing in English today has been so widely and warmly admired. He is unique in this time of irreconcilable attitudes and judgments in having won praise of all types of readers, from the most hypercritical reviewer to the simplest and least demanding reader."

Retired from a long and varied career as farmer, newspaperman, and English teacher since 1938, Frost has spent much of his time in recent years speaking to various schools that are favorites of his, discussing his poetry and letting his mind dwell on any number of subjects that interest him.

SP Is Divided On Procedure

Executive Committee To Probe Candidates

A split on the question of executive committee recommendations on nominations punctuated the Student party meeting Sunday. After sharp discussion of the original policy of initiating all action on nominations in regular meetings of the party, members voted to put responsibility for preliminary investigation of potential candidates on the executive committee.

The committee would then report its findings to the regular meetings of the party, where final action on candidates will be taken.

The executive committee consists of the officers of the party, four members elected at large, and the publicity chairman appointed by the party chairman.

Violated Tradition

One group opposed the new procedure on the grounds that it violated the party's tradition of "open decisions openly arrived at." One opponent, Ed Walker, declared that "the Student Party was organized to allow independent students a voice in campus politics." Walker said, "This new idea is incompatible with that tradition."

Proponents of the measure, however, pointed out that under the motion, presented by presidential candidate Tom Eller, the executive group would merely seek out possible nominees, study their qualifications, and find out whether they would run. The committee's reports would be in no way binding, and said party chairman Bill Mockie, "Nominations from the floor would be as in order as ever."

Place in Effect

On assurance from the chairman that there would be no restriction on open consideration of candidates, the students at the meeting voted to place the procedure in effect immediately.

Following slow discussion of candidates for the post of secretary-treasurer of the student body, it was determined to defer a decision until further consideration had been completed by the executive committee. Similar action was taken on candidates for editor of the Magazine and Yackety-Yack.

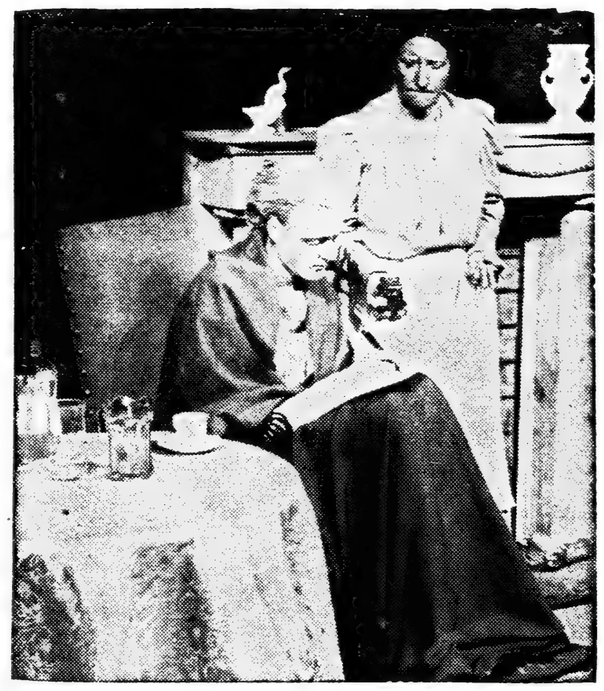
Groups Must Submit Fiscal Year Budgets

All organizations which have received funds from student fees in the past must submit their budgets for the fiscal year 1947-48 to the Budget committee on or before March 1, 1947, as the Budget committee will submit the campus budget for the fiscal year 1947-48 to the Student Legislature on or before March 5.

The constitution requires that the campus budget must be prepared and adopted by April 1 of the preceeding school year.

HENDERSON CLUB

There will be a meeting of the Henderson club tonight at 7 o'clock in the Baby lounge of Graham Memorial. All members are urged to attend.



Officials to Discuss New Registration In Phi Hall Tonight

New light will be shed on the registration problem when administration officials present their side of the case before the Philanthropic assembly tonight at 7 o'clock in Phi hall. The bill to be introduced by John Giles, chairman of the Ways and Means committee, will condemn the new system as unfair and unjust to the students.

Dean D. D. Carroll and Dr. E. C. Markham have been invited to speak, and several other prominent members of the administration staff who worked out the new system of registration are expected to be on hand. A South building official stated, "This will be the first oportunity that the administration has had to outline its side of the highly controversial issue, and administration authorities on registration welcome this opportunity to give their views to the student body."

The new registration system, violently opposed by most student leaders and by over 90 per cent of the student body according to a Daily Tar Heel poll, is expected to be hotly debated before the Assembly.

A number of campus leaders have been invited to speak on the issue and present the student view including Jack Booraem, Dan MacFarland, Al Lowenstein, and Dewey Dorsett, student body president.

Two of the leading characters in a new original play by Cid Ricketts Sumner, "Hear the Hammers Ringing," to be given by the Carolina Playmakers in their theatre at Chapel Hill March 5, 6, 7, 8, are Miss Em, a lady of the old South (seated in chair), played by Jane Hutson, Winston-Salem, and her aged servant, portrayed by Lillian Prince, Chapel Hill.

Idaho Senator Will Appear As CPU Speaker on March 6

Glen Taylor Introduced Anti-Bilbo Measure; Morse, Kennedy to Come Here this Spring

By Sam Whitehall

Senator Glen H. Taylor, progressive Democratic solon from Idaho, will speak from the Carolina Political union's non-partisan platform in Memorial hall on March 6, Jerry Davidoff, CPU chairman, announced yesterday afternoon. The senator, who crooned and clowned his way into a seat in the nation's highest lawmaking body, thoroughly amazed observers when, after playing his banjo on the Capitol steps upon his arrival, emphasizing the housing shortage with his own version of "Home on the Range," he settled down to become one of Washington's hardest working leaders. He has been in constant demand as a dinner and mass meeting speaker since shortly after his arrival in Washington in January 1945.

Bilbo Resolution

It was Senator Taylor who introduced the resolution which would have denied Mississippi's T. G. Bilbo's claim to a seat in the Senate. The Idaho senator's speech on the issue was straight to the point and much applauded throughout liberal circles.

Davidoff announced that indications were that the senator would make monopolics his subject, but that the final decision had not as yet been reached.

Senator Wayne Morse, Republican from Oregon, who has twice been postponed in his scheduled speaking engagements here, should appear here in early April, and Representative John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts will be here shortly after spring vacation. No word was forthcoming as to the possibilities of Elizabeth Gurley Flynn's speaking here. Miss Flynn, one of the leaders of the U. S. Communist party, was to be here in January, when illness cancelled her trip at the last minute.

Lehmann to Give Convocation Talk

Dr. Paul L. Lehmann, noted religious teacher and editor will deliver the quarterly convocation address tomorrow noon in Memorial hall.

All 12 o'clock classes will be suspended to permit students and faculty to attend the program.

A graduate of Ohio State university, Dr. Lehmann took his Bachelor of Divinity degree at the Union Theological seminary in New York in 1930.

At present a visiting lecturer in social science in Princeton university theological seminary, he has formerly taught at Union, Elmhurst college, and Wellesley.

Chancellor Robert B. House will introduce Dr. Lehmann.

University Orchestra To Play Monday Night

The second annual concert by the University symphony orchestra, under the direction of Prof. Earl Slocum, will be given next Monday night at 8:30 in Hill hall.

The program will include "Four Norwegian Moods" by Igor Stravinsky and "An American Tragedy" by William S. Newman of the music faculty.

Thirty-seven army surplus buildings, the first of which was to arrive here last Friday, are weather-bound at their point of departure in Camp Forrest, Tullahoma, Tenn., and will not begin arriving here before the end of this week, J. C. Stone, superintendent here in charge of construction for the J. A. Jones construction company, said yesterday.

In a long distance telephone conversation between Stone and S. E. Black, who is supervising demolition of the buildings in Tullahoma, Black reported that snow in the Tennessee area had slowed demolition work last week. Although snow was falling again yesterday, work loading the dismantled buildings on trucks for transportation here was in progress.

Standstill Since Wednesday

Bad weather in Chapel Hill also has been holding up preparatory work for the buildings, and operations have been at a stand still since last Wednesday. Extreme cold has prevented the laying of foundation blocks, but excavation for the footings is going on.

Excavation work has been completed for six buildings so far. These include two public health buildings near the medical school, one of the library additions on the west side of the main library, the law library back of Manning, and two buildings behind Caldwell and Bynum Halls—one for history and one for the English and romance language departments.

Stone estimated that the first building should be finished within ten days after its arrival.

AVC Will Consider Current Legislation At Meeting Tonight

Consideration of current veterans legislation now before congress will be the main business at this evening's meeting of the American Veterans committee at 7:30 in the Presbyterian church.

Most important to local veterans is proposed legislation to raise the amount of GI subsistence. There will also be further consideration of the new army court-martial bill. Action was deferred at the last meeting because interference by the Duke basketball game.

"Inasmuch as this may be the last meeting of the winter quarter we urge all members to turn out for tonight's meeting. Non-member guests are also very welcome at all times," said chairman Ben Rouzie.

The UVA club will hold open house tonight for the members of Chi Omega, Alpha Delta Pi, and Alpha Gamma Delta sororities. Ben Douglas will act as master of ceremonies for the floor show, which will consist of Phyllis Isenhour, Happy Clark, and Mary Murphy singing, Joe O'Ryan in a monologue, and Jack Burney at the piano.

Duke Sorority Coeds To Be Feted Tonight

The Monogram club will entertain the Duke chapter of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority at a meeting tonight at 7:30, president Jim Camp said yesterday. Coach Bob Fetzer will give a talk on athletic awards.

LEGISLATURE MEETS WED.

Barnhart to Give Religion Address Tonight

Martin Will Lead Group Discussions

By Darley Lochner

"Can I Get Away With It?" will be the question Dr. W. R. Barnhart, head of the department of religion at Hood college, will attempt to answer at the Religion in Life meeting tonight at 7:30 in Hill hall.

"Are there any unimpeachable moral laws in terms of which life must be lived?" is the second question Dr. Barnhart will discuss in his address. In addition to his activities at Hood college, Dr. Barnhart is a member of many important religious research groups. He was executive secretary of the Federation of Churches in 1941.

Churches Prayer Period

In connection with Religion in Life week all Chapel Hill churches will be open for prayer and meditation every afternoon at 5:30. One of the fifteen religious leaders here for the week will broadcast over station WRAL every afternoon during the week at 5:15.

DR. W. R. BARNHART

Churches Now Open For Evening Prayer

Seminars under the direction of five team members are now being held every afternoon at 4 o'clock. Dr. Stanley A. Martin leads the groups discussing "Personal Religious Living," meeting in Caldwell hall.

Mrs. Sherwood Eddy directs the "Christianity and Marriage" group meeting in Bingham.

The meeting place of the seminar led by Dr. Clyde Milner, Rabbi Abraham Feinstein, and Father Edmond D. Benard on the topic of the "Spiritual Kinship Between Judaism and Christianity" has been changed from Phillips hall to the Dialectic senate hall.

The "Science and Religion" seminar led by Dr. Raymond Seeger will meet in Phillips.

Better Service Now

Before any unifirmed students start yelling "wolf" because of the announced increase in laundry rates, it will behoove them to stop and consider the whys and wherefores of the announced rate increase.

Careful consideration of the facts involved would lead any such students to feel, as we do, that the increase is justified. It is true that laundry service, in the past, has not always been good and has been the butt of much student abuse. Students have long been campaigning against working and wage conditions at the laundry. Now, with an increase in pay for laundry workers authorized by the state legislature, the increased wages should bring to a halt the loud cries that the laundry couldn't get help because it didn't pay a satisfactory wage.

And as a result of the wage hike, more and better labor should be available to the laundry. With more and better labor, quicker and more efficient laundry service should be forthcoming. We feel that all students will be only too willing to pay slightly more for their laundry in return for the knowledge that they are getting quicker and better service.

The decision to increase the rates was not made until after a consultation with the executive committee of the student welfare board, all of whom agreed that the raise was warranted. Unless the present rate is increased, the laundry would lose $1,000 weekly trying to meet the new wage scale. An increased rate will prevent such a loss.

And even with the rates increased, Mr. J. S. Bennett announced that the University laundry charges will still be an average of three per cent less than the lowest rates charged in this area.

All of which seems logical enough when we are considering the necessity for increasing laundry rates. Faster and better service alone is adequate reason for the students accepting the increase. There should not be much griping because of it.

Feed the Birds

Although the recent storms of ice and snow and the general cold wave prevailing have proved a source of discomfort to the average Carolina student, the so-called hardships we have had to suffer because of the weather are mild compared to the current hardships confronting the many birds flitting about the campus.

Our feathered friends are chirping a sad tune as they carry on a fruitless quest for food. With everything frozen, the birds are experiencing great difficulty in finding anything to eat.

Students and townspeople alike can do much to help the birds weather the current crisis. Certain townspeople already do a great deal towards providing food and shelter for the birds.

Many students on the campus are fanatical advocates of the "midnight snack." These students usually always have food of some kind on hand in their rooms. If every student were merely to scatter some bread crumbs or crackers on his windowsill or throw them out the window, the birds would benefit greatly.

We are apt to forget and neglect the happy little carriers of beauty and cheer these days. But they are suffering from lack of food. A little assistance from all of us will tide them through the brief Chapel Hill winter.

Well-Chosen Words

We notice that the state legislature has passed a bill forbidding the use of profanity on the highways of Orange county.

While mere passage of such a bill will probably not cut down the excessive usage of bad language current today, it does serve to remind us that profanity is becoming more widespread daily.

And it would be a good idea for all of us to attempt to stop using it as much as we do. Men coming out of the service with a well-stocked vocabulary are wont to let it flow freely in their rooms and on the campus. They all say, "I've got to stop swearing so much," but few of them do.

An individual, personalized "Stop Profanity" campaign would do no one any harm.

I'd Rather Be Right

Vets Overlook Importance Of UVA as Remedy for Ills

By Earl Heffner

This little globe of ours is far from perfect. Mother Nature cloaks part of with icy beauty; then exposes other portions to Apollo's withering glances.

While Mother Nature plays with her weathering garments, Dame Fate interestedly views Man's overt efforts at establishing himself in the most advantageous position for continuance of his life on Earth.

Verbal denunciations, emotional dissatisfaction, physical warrings form an integral part of the chaotic life tolerated by nations. The Russians harbor suspicions of the British and Americans. Americans seek to penetrate the "Iron Curtain," ad infinatum.

While this international discord is the most dangerous factor to our happy existence, local factors also creep into discussions wherever and whenever students gather.

The registration systems—either of them, take your pick—come in for denunciation. The cost of living is too high. Smoking isn't permitted in some classes. Lethargy prevails in some branches of our student government. Leadership is poor. These are some of the chronic complaints.

Most students fail to consider the possible remedy to at least some of their ills. Failure of students to take an active interest indicates that the lethargy is at both ends of the student body scale, primarily perhaps at the supporting end.

An amazing fact is that many—not all, but a goodly portion—of the veterans, the men on whose mature shoulders leadership should fall, show disgusting disinterest in participation in a campus activity especially created to give them voice.

I refer to the University Veterans Association, an active organization led by conscientious individuals seeking the betterment of the veterans' role.

This organization has sponsored Fourth of July and Armistice Day celebrations in our town. It has actively endorsed and strove for retention of dormitory rent scales, for increased teacher wages, for more secondary schools in the state.

Yet, a review of its membership role shows that a large number of campus veterans are not members of this organization. Also, whenever the UVA calls a meeting of club members to discuss an important issue, the turnout is dishearteningly small. Regular meetings are avoided by this organization so members will not find their membership a time-dissolving proposition.

In spite of this consideration shown them, many members remain away from meetings when the agenda contains items of interest to the welfare of all veterans on campus. Unfortunately, this stay-away-from-meetings and I'll-not-be-a-joiner attitude handicaps the association and leaves the way open for a small section of the veterans to dominate the association. Should this latter occur, veterans will have only themselves to blame that the organization will no longer be their true representative.

It is true that education is the reason all veterans have returned to school. What some obviously fail to see is that a University education must be well rounded, cannot come entirely from books.

I have heard statements that non-cooperative veterans probably feel that they did their share by sitting at the tail gun of a B-29 or with an M-1 in a foxhole.

This is not a true picture of veterans' thoughts. Rather I feel that many have failed to consider the additional responsibility that is theirs in being a veteran, have not realized the part they can play in improving their lot and the lot of every student by actively participating in campus affairs.

Since approximately five out of every seven male students on this campus are veterans, they share a proportionate duty. Through active membership in the UVA, these veterans can increase the potential of that organization so that it can become a focal point of campus leadership.

Its present leaders are exerting themselves to their best efforts. Their results can be magnified by active support of present passive members and their nonmember cohorts.

Educational 'Field Day'

Dear Bill:

The Daily Tar Heel may render an important service to the student body and faculty by giving the greatest prominence to the lectures scheduled this week through the University Christian Mission. Through this program we have the opportunity this week to engage our primary purpose in coming to the University in a most intense and beneficial way.

The educational significance of these addresses surpasses by far the usual offerings of our campus life. These eminent speakers on science and philosophy and a broad range of other subjects combine preeminence in their special fields with exceptional religious competence and resourcefulness. They will speak in classes every morning, in seminars every afternoon from 4:00 to 5:00, and from platforms every evening. Also, they are available for forums and individual interviews by arrangement through the YMCA.

It is almost certain that of our seven thousand students and three hundred faculty members a very small number will take full advantage of this significant opportunity. Nevertheless, the Tar Heel can help to enlarge the number by pointing out that here this week we may have, truly, a "field day" in our main business of education.

Sincerely yours,
FRED H. WEAVER,
Dean of Men.

Prejudice Punctured

Dear Sir:

With what part of Mr. Al Lowenstein's column did Mr. Bernard Plemmons mean to disagree? He seemed to take Mr. Lowenstein to task for advocating interracial education. Many of us would like to criticize the latter also for not advocating equal education of this type. Understand, I am in thorough agreement with Mr. Lowenstein's plea for equality in civil liberties, but, so, I am sure is Mr. Plemmons.

Yes, equal opportunities are guaranteed to Negroes by the State Constitution; so are many other equal privileges—in fact, the same ones which Mr. Plemmons can claim through no virtue of his own! Why aren't these opportunities more available to all citizens? How can Mr. Plemmons reconcile the facts with our words and theories?

Although one out of three citizens of North Carolina is colored, from the most recent report on "The Negro Population of North Carolina," published by the N. C. State Board of Charities (by John Larkins, 1944), we find these disgraceful facts:

	For Whites	For Negroes
Average value of property per school child	$171.30	$57.42
Accredited elementary schools	586	26
Public and private libraries	1304	66
Ownership of books per pupil	2.9	1.9
Teachers of Adult Education	107	18
Small, outmoded, delapidated 1-3 room schools		1600

Students desiring to study engineering, public health, medicine, or public health nursing must go elsewhere to receive such training although the need is desperate for them to assist in raising the standards of living for their own people.

How can we allow students from 18 other countries and races to study at our beloved (and for some—isolated) University? In answer to Mr. Plemmons' question re a liberal education, I maintain that one must be willing to attend school with any other human in order to receive such an education—or does liberal really mean free, unrestricted, generous, abundant? Fortunately, more Southerners have less "false" pride all the time. Increasingly, they are questioning the justice and advisibility of discriminating against any race in economics, education, civil liberties—or any other field.

It seems so convenient to blame everything on the Negro; maybe, nearer the truth, is the fact that most of the ills of our fair land (could be fairer!) can be blamed upon our attitudes and treatment with regards to the colored. These are the "beliefs in life" of some favored and so-called "better" people.

It will hardly be contested that Mr. Plemmons will agree with the above stated fact. Whether he will change his mind is yet another question. Oliver Wendell Holmes has said "The great thing in this world is not where we stand but in what direction we are standing."

BALL SEES LABOR BIAS IN CHOICE OF WITNESSES; STALIN LEARNS THAT EVEN A ROOSEVELT HAS TROUBLE; HANNEGAN BACK IN DEMOCRATIC SADDLE AGAIN

Washington.—You've got to hand it to young Senator Joe Ball that he always says what he thinks, regardless of whom it hits. However, the Minnesota Republican is heading for trouble if he continues to bar certain important winesses friendly to labor who he fears might testify against his bill prohibiting the closed shop.

At a secret session of a Senate Labor subcommittee, Ball sharply objected to a roster of witnesses submitted by Democratic Senator James Murray of Montana, including such well-known figures as William H. Davis, former Chairman of the War Labor Board, and Dr. Frank Porter Graham, president of North Carolina University.

"There's no sense in calling people like that," declared Ball. "Everybody knows their views on labor questions."

"Well, whom do you plan to call?" asked Senator Murray. "Don't you want to hear all sides?"

Senators Wayne Morse of Oregon and Irving Ives of New York, both Republicans, supported the Montana Senator. They said that the proposed witnesses should be classified as public, rather than labor spokesmen. Morse pointed out that another on Murray's list, Rev. Jerome Toner of Lacey, Washington, a Catholic priest prominent in west coast conciliation circles, was an outstanding authority who should be heard.

But even this plea to raise objections and, as chairman of a subcommittee charged with selecting witnesses, will be in a strong position to veto any or all of Murray's candidates. If this happens, however, the fighting Montanan plans a showdown battle before Senator Taft, who is Chairman of the Full Labor Committee.

STALIN AND ANNA BOETTIGER

Here is one brief interlude in the Elliott Roosevelt-Joseph Stalin conversation which never leaked out.

During their talk, Stalin asked young Roosevelt about his sister Anna—Mrs. John Boettiger, whose husband was former publisher of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

"Anna's publishing a newspaper in Arizona," Elliott replied.

"I know where that is," Stalin said.

"What kind of a newspaper is it?"

"It's a liberal newspaper," replied Elliott, "but she's having a hard time getting newsprint enough to put it out on a daily basis."

"You mean even a Roosevelt has trouble?" inquired Stalin, with a hearty laugh.

GOOD NEWS FOR NEWSPAPERS

Here is good news for American newspapers now hard put for lack of newsprint.

Secretary of the Interior "Cap" Krug isn't saying much publicly, but he has just made an extensive survey of the Alaskan newsprint situation. This is what he found.

1. Alaska can provide the United States with a million tons of newsprint annually and in perpetuity.

2. Five areas in the warmer part of Alaska have ample power to produce newsprint at the low cost of from three to three and one-half mills per kilowatt hour.

3. East of these areas can be operated twelve months a year.

4. Development of Alaska's newsprint potential on a million tons a year basis will provide jobs in each area for 3,500 people. This means that five new cities, each with a total population in excess of 12,000 people, can be profitably operated in Alaska. Each of these communities would be larger than any now functioning in the territory. This also means that about 40,000 veterans and their families could be employed profitably in Alaskan newsprint production.

Krug has experts working on long-term contracts for the use of government timber, and estimates that American publishers would only have to put up thirty million dollars to get the program going.

Phants To Battle State In Raleigh Tonight

Sport--Spins

—with—

Irwin Smallwood

THE BASKETBALL game at Raleigh tonight between the improved White Phantoms of Coach Tom Scott and the Red Terrors of Coach Everett Case will be viewed with keen interest. Interest, that is, for the reason that all onlookers of Tar Heelia are anxious to see what the Phants will be able to do against the white-hot State quint that completely run away from Duke in their last meeting.

By the same token, the ever-viewing eyes will be anxious to see what the tight defensive combine of Coach Scott will be able to do against the Terror attack.

In their first meeting of the season, State beat the Tar Heel five in a hard-fought overtime contest here in Woollen gym, and there will be a particular interest on the part of the Tar Heels to stop the potent State court combination.

A big question in the minds of ardent Phantom followers is "What will be Johnny Dillon's role in the game?" Dillon, you remember, has not been in the starting lineup for seven straight ball games, and only in the Davidson game has he done anything from a scoring angle to speak of.

His substitute, Nemo Nearman, has been doing a remarkable job at the pivot position on defense, and on two occasions on the offense. But the fact remains that when he is hitting, Dillon is one of the biggest scoring threats in basketball. This means what? Probably nothing, except that again Nearman will start at center, with Dillon being held as an ace in the hole if the formations break in his favor. Dillon could easily be the man to bring Carolina through to a Southern conference championship, with a good offensive streak like he had against Maryland and Navy. And tonight could be the night he breaks through.

All speculation, it is, but makings for good thought. A lot will be indicated tonight toward how the conference tourney will go, and the regular season loop leadership is at stake. Should Carolina defeat the strong State club, and we're in favor of it, it would mean that an even closer fight than is now anticipated will be the case when the tournament gets going March 14th.

Let's hope. Beat State!

Carolina-State means basketball, basketball means gymnasium, and gymnasium reminds us that Saturday will see the biggest indoor track meet in the history of Carolina here in Chapel Hill. In fact, there is talk that it is the biggest track classic ever held in the South.

Twenty colleges, 20 high and prep schools means athletes galore, and the more athletes the better the competition. Competition is just the word for the meet, too, for from all indications, the men in the fold to compete represent the best trackdom has to offer in all the states in Dixie.

Tennessee Cancels At Last Minute; Total Of 20 Colleges Set To Compete

Two weekend additions and one cancellation completed the field for the fifth annual Southern Invitational Indoor games yesterday, and a total of 20 collegiate teams are now in the fold for what promises to be the biggest classic in the history of the event.

Wake Forest and Guilford were added as last minute entries and Tennessee cancelled [illegible] reasons undisclosed to round out the picture.

Twenty-one high and prep schools, 10 of them Virginia institutions, have filed entries in the scholastic division, while six colleges will have competitors in the freshman division.

The mammoth track carnival, which begins with preliminaries at 1:30 p. m. and lasts until late Saturday night, will offer a total of 23 events, 10 of them in the college sector, and the anticipated sell-out gallery of nearly 9,000 spectators will be treated to a continuous three-ring circus.

One of the strongest teams is sure to be Virginia, coached by Archie Hahn, with three members of the Penn relay shuttle championship team of 1940 among its representatives. This trio consists of Bill Miller, Bartlett Todd and Baylor Capers. Miller was on the Duke track team as a V-12 student during the war and was one of the best hurdlers ever to represent [illegible].

Walter Gilliford, the cosmopolitan Big Six champion, who was at V. M. I. before the war, at Carolina as a navy student and now at Virginia, is a brilliant dash man. Bob Roller, [illegible] vaulter, Don Warner and George Tracchel are other Virginia entries.

Large Group Answers Initial Diamond Call

[illegible] candidates reported to Coach Walt Robbins yesterday afternoon in response to the initial call for candidates for the 1947 edition of the Tar Heel diamond crew.

The group included 20 pitchers, eight catchers and the remainder infielders and outfielders. The battery men will hold indoor workouts the rest of this week, commencing at 3 o'clock this afternoon in Woollen gym.

Track Meeting

There will be a meeting of all members of the freshmen and varsity track teams Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock in Woollen gym.

It is especially urgent that all men scheduled to compete in the meet Saturday attend to discuss all the details of the meet.

Zetes, Kap Sig Take Playoffs

Mural Cage Tourneys Get Underway Today

Zeta Psi No. 1 and Kappa Sigma No. 3 emerged victorious yesterday afternoon in the playoffs of the triple ties in leagues two and five of the mural flat cage circuit, and joined four other loop winners in the round robin tourney slated to get underway this afternoon.

The Zetes won their title the hard way as they turned in the ironman stunt, taking ATO No. 1, 35-28, and then lacing Phi Gam No. 2, 34-20—all in the course of an afternoon.

The Kappa Sigs, on the other hand, had a slightly easier time of it, as they trimmed somewhat weary Phi Gam No. 1, 22-17. The losers showed the effects of an earlier hard-fought win over SAE No. 1, 39-25.

The four finalists in the dorm championship were idle during the day, but will swing into action this afternoon. The dorm playoff will be a double elimination affair with play continuing the rest of the week until a winner emerges. The four winners on the other hand will be round robin affair with each of the six teams playing each other once. In case of a tie at the end of the games further contests will be scheduled.

Mural Meetings

There will be two important intramural meetings today. Basketball officials will gather in the mural office at 3:45 in full working apparel, khaki shorts if possible, to have their pictures made. At 7:30 tonight the mural managers will meet in room 301-A of the Union. All are requested to be on hand.

Mural Schedule

Tar Heels Seeking Revenge For Earlier Overtime Loss

Encounter May Determine Top-Seeded Team In Southern Conference Tourney Next Week

By Bob Goldwater

The clash that might decide which of three teams gains the top-seeded rating in the Southern conference tourney nine days hence takes the cage spotlight this evening when Carolina's surging White Phantoms seek revenge against N. C. State's towering Red Terrors in Frank Thompson gym in Raleigh. The opening jump is set for 8 o'clock.

A triumph tonight for the Phants postpones the first-place issue until the Carolina-Duke battle Friday night, while the Terrors, present occupants of the top position, clinch that spot in case of victory. In league competition, both teams have lost twice while State has won 11 games, two more than the underdog Carolina quintet.

Holding fast to the same opening five that has been successful in the last seven outings, Coach Tom Scott will send Bob Paxton, Jim Hamilton, Nemo Nearman, Norm Kohler and Jim White to their usual starting berths. Johnny Dillon, who gave definite signs of last season's form against Davidson last week, is also slated to see plenty of action at center, with Jim Hayworth, Dick Hartley and Taylor Thorne leading the reserves. Nearman has opened every game since the streak began, and should add defensive strength to the quintet that dropped a 48-46 overtime tilt to the Terrors earlier this month.

Different Lineup

State will [illegible] a slightly different lineup [illegible] that started the first tussle. Jack McComas has earned a starting berth at one of the forward posts and will open with Dick Dickey, Ed Bartels, Captain Leo Katkaveck and Bob Negley. Substitutes will include Warren Cartier, Bob Hahn, Charlie Sine and Norm Sloan.

The battle also features an individual duel for scoring honors, one player from each team ranking among the top seven conference pointmakers.

Pugilists Getting Set For Tourney

Back in Chapel Hill after a trimming at the hands of the powerful Army cadets in West Point Saturday, Mike Ronman's Tar Heel boxers settled down to a week of diligent practicing with the Southern conference tournament scheduled for this weekend.

Coach Ronman plans to enter just four boxers in the tourney this season. They will be Bill Sumas, 125-pound division starter, Charles Lamseth, 145-pounder, Tony Payne, 135-pounder, and Newton Wren, who is slated to represent Carolina in the 145-pound division.

Sorely missed will be Charlie Norton, who made an excellent showing in West Point last Saturday. Norton was forced to resign from the squad due to an old nose injury which bothered him in his recent bout.

Heavyweight Bill Speigel will also not make the trip to College Park, Maryland, due to a heavy schedule of classes. Coach Ronman praised Speigel's work of late as being very much improved. He especially mentioned his potent left jab which almost gained [illegible] for him on Saturday.

Voutian Double-Talk Originated at Tulane

New Orleans (UP)—What is being done to the English language on the college campus today would make Webster roll in his grave.

The newest slang craze is called Voutian, now being bandied over coke glasses at Tulane University.

This Voutian development is difficult to dig. Nayo hoss, you have to be hep.

For instance, William Lutenbacher, one of Tulane's pioneer Vouts, explained that a formal greeting goes like this:

"Root, scoot, volto! Mello-reeny! Lay me five 'n' latch onto this this one."

Voutian, said Charles Swain, another Vout, is here to stay. He said it allegedly was traceable to a West Coast hot trumpet player, Slim Gaylord, who has even compiled a dictionary—pardon, Voutiary—of words and phrases for his disciples.

Swain said if you asked a fellow-Vout what subjects he planned to take, his only proper answer would be "Maca-reeny, MacSkivney. Little chemist-reeny, little psychovolty," providing, of course, he had decided on chemistry and psychology.

How far this latest cement-mixer version of our language would reach nobody at Tulane dare predict.

Much of Voutian is lost in translation, of course. But it appears fairly flexible.

"Meca-reeny," for instance, means anything at all. "Routie-voutie" and "viddle-vop," each mean good-looking girl. "Malto-reeny" obviously means malted milk, and "hamburger-reeny" gets you a hamburger from any "hipster."

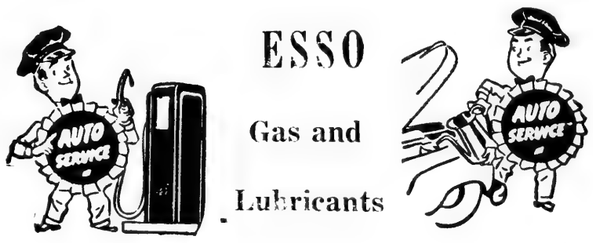
Legislators Call Charlotte Bootleg Center

Charlotte, Feb. 24—(UP)—State Legislators from Mecklenburg county have charged that Charlotte is the center of one of the most vicious bootlegging rings in the state.

Representatives Frank Sims and Harvey Morris have told the county commissioners that some 26-hundred bootleggers are operating in the county. The add that some 250 speakeasies in the city of Charlotte are selling illegal whiskey by the drink to all comers.

According to them, an intricate network has been set up that makes it as easy for the consumer to order whiskey delivered to his home or office as it would be for him to order ice cream, and they charge that the consumer can order the brand he wants in either pints, fifths or gallons.



Representative Sims told the commissioners that the bill he is preparing to present to the Legislature would end all that. Sims is preparing a measure that will permit citizens of the county to vote on the question of establishing ABC stores. He says that if legal liquor stores are established in the county they will "run the bootleggers out of business."

Sims says ABC stores will have a double-barrelled action against the rumrunners. In the first place, says Sims, the lower price of the legal beverage will knock out profits that keep the racket thriving, and in the second place revenue from the ABC stores will pay for special investigators to hunt down bootleggers.

General Is Credited With Running Russia

Washington, Feb. 25—(UP)—A report by the Moscow radio tonight announces that General Aandrei Zhdanov has resigned as president of the council of the union—one of the two Russian Houses of Parliament. Zhdanov has frequently been mentioned as the possible successor to Stalin and generally is credited with running Russia.

In making the announcement all Moscow would say is that the pressure of other work forced the leader to resign. The position of president of the council of the union is ceremonial rather than executive observers in London point out that it actually would be a strain for Zhdanov to take time out from his other pressing duties to preside over the council, which is in session at the present titme.

Leaders Begin Preparations To Reform Campus Cabinet

Modeled on Lines of Pre-War Organization Group Will Act Only in Advisory Capacity

By Barron Mills

A somewhat enlarged Campus cabinet began its first preparations for a comeback to the University with a meeting of all leaders of Student Government organizations Monday afternoon in the Grail room.

Modeling its lines along the same ones of the pre-war Cabinet, the members of the organization will meet again next Tuesday and at least once every two weeks thereafter.

According to Dewey Dorsett, president of the student body, also organizer of the meeting, the Cabinet "will not have any delegated authority . . . only advisory." The main idea for organizing such a group is to bring about more coordination between the various phases of student government.

Help Orient, Adjust

Dorsett pointed out that on many occasions members of one of the Councils do not even know what is going on at the other Council meetings and the Cabinet will help to adjust this.

It is the plan of the Cabinet to get the group working along "smoothly" within the next few weeks so that all of the difficulties will be ironed out before the new campus officers take over after spring elections. Dorsett stated that all candidates for office in the spring elections will be extended an invitation to attend several Cabinet meetings so that they will an iorstnd i its functions before they take office.

The new Cabinet will consist of: president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer of student government; chairman of Publications board, Student council, Men's council, Women's council, Interfraternity council, Pan-Hellenic council, Interdormitory council, Orientation committees, Student Audit board, Election board, campus political parties; editors of all campus publications and Class officers as soon as they have been elected.

Anonymous Group Ready to Consider Student Criticism

The anonymous student committee to consider constructive criticism of professors and classes of the University have already carried through several "worthwhile projects" and are still open for additional talks, according to a recent committee report submitted to Dewey Dorsett, who is assisting the group so that it will continue to remain anonymous.

The committee came into being several weeks ago at the request of Chancellor Robert B. House, who asked the student boday president to organize such a group so that the students "would have some outlet for their constructive criticisms" in regard to classes and also to professors. The group considers complaints against professors, teaching methods, text books and anything pertinent to the course and the teaching if it.

Dorsett said that a typical example of the committee's work took place several days ago. "The group received a well-written criticism of a professor. The letter was read and discussed by the committee members and they appointed two members of the group to take up the matter with the head of the department in which the professor taught. In turn after a careful and constructive talk with the head of the department, the letter, without the student's name, was turned over to the professor in question."

All additional constructive criticisms may be submitted in letter form to Dewey Dorsett at the ATO house who will deliver the letter to the committee for action.

Frost Talk Postponed Until Friday Evening

Robert Frost, originally scheduled to speak in Memorial hall last evening, will deliver his address in the hall Friday evening at 7:30. Dr. Clifford Lyons, head of the English department announced. The celebrated New England poet was unable to appear last evening due to transportation difficulties, Dr. Lyons explained.

Chubb to Talk Tonight To Physics Fraternity

Alpha Chi Sigma will sponsor a talk by T. A. Chubb of the Physics department at 7:30 this evening in room 206 Venable. Chubb will speak on "Mass Spectograph."

French House May Not Open Due to Housing Difficulties

University Extension Director Russell Grumman announced yesterday that the French house, established two years ago for advanced students of French in the summer school, will not be operated this summer unless suitable housing quarters are secured within the next two weeks. And prospects of procuring quarters, Grumman said, are slim.

Working with Professor Hugo Giduz, director of the French house, Grumman said he had exhausted all possible facilities for housing the group next summer. A sorority house was used last summer but investigation has revealed that the sororities, along with most other campus organizations, are planning to continue operation through the summer terms.

Final Changes In Constitution To Be Debated

Assembly Will Meet In Session Tonight

Meeting in special session in Phi hall at 7 o'clock this evening, the Student Legislature will discuss the two remaining constitutional amendments drawn up by the revision committee.

Speaker Charlie Warren stated that the proposed change in the Student council set-up would probably be taken off the table and discussed. The amendment would eliminate the appellate power of the student council and reduce its membership from nine to five.

The time of this evening's legislature meeting has been changed from 8 until 7 o'clock, stated Speaker Charlie Warren.

Chief opposition to the amendment is expected to come in the form of a compromise to retain the council's appelate power in honor code cases but throw it out in campus code violations.

Legislature Power

The assembly is also expected to discuss the amendment concerning the legislature's power to determine offenses against the student body. The change would eliminate the power of the legislature to categorize violations and dictate the penalty to the judiciary.

Warren also invited all interested students to attend tonight's session, particularly campus leaders interested in the honor code. The speaker said that the floor would be extended to visitors "who might have any light to throw on the situation."

Representatives Vote Overwhelming Outlaw Of All 'Closed Shops'

Raleigh, Feb. 25—(UP)— The North Carolina House of Representatives has voted to outlaw the closed shop.

After more than three hours of bitter debate, the lawmakers have passed and send to the Senate the bill by Representative Leroy Scott of Beaufort county, and two other representatives. The measure passed overwhelmingly by a voice vote.

The representatives refused a proposed amendment which would have submitted the issue to the people in the 1948 general election.

During the debate, Scott criticized Editor Josephus Daniels of the Raleigh News and Observer. Daniels—a former secretary of the navy—had opposed the bill in committee hearings. Scott charged that Daniels was unfair in refusing beer advertisements for his paper, and publishing a large part of the Communist party.

The ad, appearing in several North Carolina papers, called for the defeat of all anti-labor legislation.

Chancellor Robert B. House will introduce the speaker and the Rev. J. C. Herrin, student pastor of the Baptist church, will give the invocation and benediction.

Hill Hall Blaze Quelled As Late-Study Student Calls Fire Department

A late-working music-student's nose and quick action by Chapel Hill firemen and police officers stopped a potentially serious blaze in Hill hall early yesterday morning.

The unidentified student, who was studying in the building when he smelled smoke shortly after 2 a.m., notified the police department, and officers and firemen found a burning trash container in the building. Smoke from the burning trash, which apparently had been smoldering some time, had nearly filled the building.

Officer A. L. Pendergrass said a lighted cigarette carelessly thrown in the trash apparently was the cause of the blaze. It was extinguished before any damage was done.

The Florida club will meet this afternoon at 5 o'clock in Roland Parker Lounge. All members are urged to be present as plans for a party will be announced.

WNC Club to Entertain Florida Group Tonight

University Party Will Hold Dormitory Primary Tomorrow

By Chuck Hauser

Tomorrow the University party opens the spring election program with primary elections to be held in Manly, Mangum, Lewis, Steele, Old West, Battle-Vance-Pettigrew, and Miller dormitories for student legislature nominations.

Through today men in dormitories may make out petitions to put nominees on the primary ballots, each to have at least 10 signatures of residents of that dormitory, stated Alex Davis, University party chairman.

Polling places in each building will be open from 7 until 11 o'clock in the evening in order to permit every man to cast a ballot and only those living in each particular dormitory will be allowed to vote.

According to Davis, the polling time was changed from noon until 11 o'clock to 7-11 o'clock in the evening, as most students are in their rooms at this time, and can thus better watch the conducting of the balloting and the counting of the votes to insure a fair election.

Issue Includes Stories by Newcomers. . .

New Carolina Mag, Featuring Photo Essay, Will Be Distributed over Campus Tomorrow

By Helen Highwater

Beating production difficulties and even the short month, the February Carolina Magazine will go into full circulation tomorrow afternoon.

Outstanding new feature in the latest Magazine is the Photographic Essay titled "Chapel Hill 10:10." Working with photographers Stan Croner and Gerald Conrad, managing editor Jud Kinberg has attempted to capture the mood of a Chapel Hill evening in a three-page series of pictures. Photographs range from one of Dr. Frank P. Graham to a dancing couple at the UVA hut; and include meetings, entertainments and many other nocturnal activities of the University and its student body.

First of Series

This is the first of a continuing series of photographic essays which will mirror various activities. About subsequent ones already in production, the Magazine managing editor said. "We're trying to plan well in advance so that we can pick our shots carefully to get the best effects."

Reflecting the greater interest by the student body in the literary side of the Magazine, several new members are added to well-known standbys in the fiction section. They include Nina Lide whose "The Sparklers" in a sensitive portrayal of the psychology of a small Chinese girl, and Ralph Hyde's "The First Law" which mirrors the subtle relationship of men "on the road."

Dorothy Dashiell's "The Little People" adds the name of another Magazine newcomer, while literary editor Dick Seaver and well-known writers Dick Stern and Julia Ross are also represented in a Fiction section that is larger and better balanced than in any previous issue.

It Could Happen Here

The news that the February issue of the Texas Ranger, humor magazine at the University of Texas, has been held up by censorship furnishes us with the most modern and up-to-date example of what freedom of the press can or cannot mean.

Reasons for the magazine's being censored seem to vary, according to reports in the Daily Texan, Texas' excellent student newspaper. But whether it be a matter of politics or because some of the material was judged too crude in nature, the fact remains that it was censored.

Considered one of the best magazines of its kind in the country, the Ranger recently created a furore on the Texas campus when Life magazine reprinted its story on cheating in the classrooms. This story was frowned on heavily by the administration and steps were taken to prove it untrue. For the February issue, the Editorial propriety board turned down a story because it had "Political implications."

The Ranger's humor has been on a higher plane than most other collegiate humor magazines, but the editor has been under pressure from campus groups wanting less "literature" and more humor. According to the Daily Texan, the editor is now looking for some good, clean, understanding articles to fill up the condemned space.

All of which shows what could happen when anyone starts abridging freedom of the press. Fortunately, the publications on this campus do not suffer from the heavy hand of the censor. The mere thought of censorship, as has been suggested by some students in the past, is incomprehensible. A college publication struggling to keep afloat in a sea of censorship will never survive as a live, vital organ of student thoughts and actions.

While You May

As a rule students on this campus are only too willing to take advantage of the many opportunities offered them.

But they are failing to take advantage this week of a chance to listen to a host of intelligent, excellent speakers and absorb knowledge of all types.

Religion in Life week offers students a wonderful opportunity —an opportunity to listen, to learn, and to understand the relations among religious faiths in this community and in the nation.

A superb array of scholars and speakers has been brought to Chapel Hill by the people in charge of the program. These men, learned in numerous fields, are speaking in classrooms, daily afternoon seminars, at fraternities and sororities and various other groups.

Speakers like Dr. Raymond Seegar, naval atomic bomb scientist, Dr. D. Elton Trueblood, professor of philosophy at Earlham college, Dr. Kenneth J. Foreman, professor of Bible and philosophy at Davidson, and many others are well worth hearing and their talks are informative and thought provoking.

Too many people have come to connect any religious program with dry, dull lectures and sermons. Such is decidedly not the case on this campus this week. All of the men whom we have heard thus far have been excellent speakers who have kept their all-too-small audiences alertly interested.

The quarterly convocation address today is part of this fine program. All 12 o'clock classes are being suspended so that students may hear Dr. Paul L. Lehmann, noted religious teacher and editor speak in Memorial hall.

The opportunity is yours. Take advantage of it while you may. Chances like the one offered by Religion in Life week do not come often. These men are worth hearing.

Censorship Rears Ugly Head Among College Publications

By Jud Kinberg

Our green eye-shades are off to the Publications Board. For long years the PU Board has been the whipping boy of editors who resented what the considered insidious censorship through the power of the moneybag. Well, the Board group can move over now. The Ways and Means Committee of the Legislature has taken over as the boogeyman of publications.

It all started some ten days ago when Bill Miller asked the heads of Daily Tar Heel and Carolina Magazine to a meeting of his Ways and Means Committee. Seems that certain campus personalities had levelled vague charges against the Daily Tar Heel, and possibly the Mag. The editors and members of their staff came and sat and argued while the Ways and Means Committee attempted to caution them about future policy.

Ways and Meaners took prime offense to the pot-shotting of various DTH columnists against the Legislature and assorted campus organizations. This blubber-ball was thrown back and forth, finally settled in a truce.

But no amount of talking, no amount of explaining could keep the Ways and Means Committee from taking at least one public swipe at the Daily Tar Heel. Although censorship of student publications has always been sedulously avoided—with the relatively recent exception of the ill-advised Buccaneer-burning—the W & Mers saw fit to recommend to the Legislature that there be "less political opinion, and more local news presented." It also felt that "the editor should present both sides of each question handled by the publication."

I don't know what all this sounds like to you, but to a victim of wartime Army censorship it is the first stage of that very prevalent disease. The only true power of censorship should rest with the student body and be expressed through their votes at election time. Once an editor is in, he should be unhampered in carrying out his plans and policies—partisan or not.

If this Ways and Means Committee habit isn't checked, next year or the year after we may see the Legislature sitting in executive session on the publications. Censorship has a pernicious way of spreading and choking off the virility of all it encompasses.

The latest move (edit opposite) of the Life-scared people down Texas way is the end-product of creeping censorship. They have taken what is without doubt the cleverest college magazine in the nation and cut the heart out of it.

At another Southern college, Mississippi, censorship is also on its high horse. "The Rebel," that University's magazine seems to have succumbed to too-much editorial blood-letting for it is far from even collegiate standards of excellence.

These recent developments at colleges in the same thought-belt as our own point to the great harm that can come from imposed censorship. I don't think some members of the Legislature quite realize the delayed-action bomb it can set off under publications if it fosters further action in the Ways and Means Committee manner.

Investigations to tell an editor what to print and not print are witch-hunts of the lowest type, fringed with disaster for the freedom of the publications involved. Two other schools in the Solid South have found that out. It would be unfortunate, in light of the liberal tradition of UNC, if our turn were next.

Letters To The Editor

Discrepancies

Dear Sir:

Strangely reminiscent of the 1928 election rumors of munitions dumps in every Catholic Church, was the I.R.C. forum article by John Bristow and Stuart Lucas in the Feb. 14th issue of the Daily Tar Heel. Because it is such a short step from an attack upon the Catholic Church in Europe and an attack upon the Catholic Church, and upon Catholics, in this country, the Aquinas Club feels obliged to point out a few of the many discrepancies in the I.R.C. forum article, which gave no sources.

. The fundamental guiding order of the Vatican is not, as the article maintained, that the extinction of Catholicism would be the world's greatest disaster. The prime principle of the Roman Catholic Church is that the Church will last until the end of time and Catholics seldom worry about the extinction of the Church. The fundamental guiding order of the Vatican and the Church is the dignity of the individual soul.

Bristow and Lucas might obtain copies of Monsignor Fulton Sheen's addresses on the Catholic Hour (a radio program) and learn what the aim of Catholics are.

It would be interesting to know in how many concordats, signed between the Vatican and various nations in the last twenty years that the Church has demanded liberal property privileges and tax exemptions as suggested in the article if Messers Bristow and Lucas read the encyclical on the Christian state they may learn that neither Portugal or Spain are defined as the model Christian State.

To imply as this article did that the Church stands beside reaction and dictatorship, is to ignore completely the encyclicals of the Popes from Leo XIII to Pius XII, especially Revum Norarum and Quadragesimo Anno; it is to ignore the Pastoral Letter of the Spanish Bishop written during the Spanish Civil War; it is to ignore the fact that as far back as 1934 the Church, through the Pope and various Cardinals was condemning vigorously the policies of the Hitler government; and it is to ignore the many democratic governments (including our own) which the Church repeatedly praises.

Of course there are some three hundred million Roman Catholics in the world and among these, Messers Bristow and Lucas will unqoubtedly find some reactionaries, Democrats (the New Deal type too), prohibitionists, and what have you. Each one does not constitute the official voice of the Church.

Carolina Merry-Go-Round

By Bob Jones and Bill Robertson

Although everyone has heard for some years that the Latin American field is "wide-open," many who might well be interested are a little puzzled about where they can find specific information concerning the future possibilities in this field of activity, and how they can prepare for it.

A brief glance at the facilities offered in this country for such training shows that we at Chapel Hill must be among the blessed, for in our own back yard exists perhaps one of the most substantial, effective and respected programs of preparation in the nation.

For some time, and almost unnoticed by the rest of us, men and women have completed their training here and have gone to the other American republics to work in the various fields of diplomacy, commerce, education, culture and research. Because of this and the evidence of the high quality of work done by these people and the reputation of those directing and teaching the program, the University has become widely recognized as a source of trained people for positions of every kind in Latin America.

The program, which is now being expanded, has and will continue to prepare those who plan to enter the US Foreign Service. The new program also provides up-to-date training for those interested in working with trade and industrial firms in Latin America. A survey of American firms is now in progress to determine current needs and approach to the matter of training and providing the personnel that is desired. Reports indicate that the demand is for those who have a background of conversational ability, a knowledge of the culture and institutions of the United States as well as of Latin America and an ability to adjust and understand the peoples, culture and problems of the other Americas. This seems to be more desirable than a specific knowledge of technical matters. This emphasizes the advantages of the wide scope of courses offered in both the graduate and undergraduate majors in Latin American Studies.

One of the more interesting developments in the field of inter-American affairs is the establishment of some thirty cultural institutes throughout Latin America in which English is taught as well as the cultural heritage, and institutions of the U. S. are described and interpreted. These institutes are staffed by Americans appointed by the Department of State and several of these appointments have been given to men at our university.

ply does not meet the demand for trained personnel. A graduate major in Latin American Studies is being set up and a special program can be arranged for all those who are interested. It will be well worth the time to drop by 214 Caldwell and talk to Dr. Frederico Gil, who can present have as their goal similar appointments to these Institutes and the sup-

What Do YOU Say?

By Harry Snowden

Today's Question

Have you any suggestion for the Student Entertainment Series?

Answers

We think there should be more artists like Alec Templeton, whether at piano, violin, or what. So far the series has been very good and there always seems to be a good crowd.—"Zeus" Gibbs, Charlotte, and Howard Valentine, Winston-Salem.

I think that the series so far has been excellent, and believe that if the same types of entertainment are presented in the future, nothing better could be asked for.—Edwin Danziger, Chapel Hill.

I would like to see more symphony orchestras, and musical programs, such as the one presented by the National Symphony. — Paul Gordon, Bronxville, N. Y.

More symphony and a little ballet for those of the long hair group, and more Tex Beneke or Sonny Dunham for the short hair group. Try and please them all.—John Clampitt, St. Petersburg, Fla.

I think the series of musical entertainment has been particularly good, although and it is unfortunate that so many students are restricted from enjoying this type of entertainment because of studies.—Johnny Baker, Charlotte.

I have attended only one of the series but I think the program this year was very good. I would like to see singers such as Richard Crooks be on the program next year.—Ann Murphy, Warsaw, Va.

I believe the student entertainment committee should bring more individual concert stars to the campus, such as James Melton.—William C. Brown, Stocksville.

I believe that the student entertainment series as an over-all program is still on the same high level that it was prior to the war; however I do wish that perhaps a more varied program be offered to the student body than this year's series has endeavored to do.—A. E. Westover III, Merchantville, N. J.

Sigma Chi No. 1, Kappa Sig No. 3 and Phi Delt No. 2 took mural cage victories in Woollen gym yesterday afternoon to take early leads in the mural fraternity basketball round robin tournament.

The Grads and Emanons copped wins in the dormitory championship play to pace the dorm division in the double elimination playoffs.

In each of the two divisions, one contest was won by the close margin of one point. Kappa Sig No. 3 edged ous Zeta Psi No. 1, 24-23, in the fraternity bracket, while the Emanons eased by Everett, 29-28, in the dormitory group.

Other Winners

Sgima Chi No. 1 downed Chi Phi No. 2 by a 26-19 score, while the Phi Delt No. 2 five defeated Beta, 26-19, to round out the fraternity games on the mural courts.

The second game in the dormitory division saw the Grads overwhelm the Independents, 34-20.

In handball competition, Aycock will meet the Med School this afternoon in a rematch for the dormitory crown.

A Med School protest following a clash between the two teams earlier this month was upheld by the protest committee, leading to today's tussle. The winners will oppose the Phi Delt outfit, winner of the fraternity division, for the campus title.

Carolina Clowns Grab Cage Crown

The Carolina Clowns, amateur basketball team playing out of the local intramural department, won the Junior division championship in the Carolinas AAU basketball tournament in Winston-Salem by defeating Robert's Esso of that city, 46-35, Monday night.

Buster Stevenson paced the Clowns with 11 markers, and All-Southern football star Charlie Justice and Dick Donnan added nine apiece to the Carolina aggregate. Jim Camp, Joe Wright and Max Spurlin also participated for the Clowns in the game that saw the losers lead 21-14 at halftime.

In addition to winning the championship, three Clowns, Stevenson, Burt Nesbit and Randy Brown, were placed on the All-Tournament team.

Jayvees to Play At Bragg Tonight

The high-flying Junior Varsity cagers play their final game of the season tonight when they travel to Fort Bragg for a return engagement with the 4th Signal Battalion quint. The locals won the first encounter, 51-43.

The service five, having just returned from Atlanta where it reached the semi-finals of the Southeastern A. A. U. tournament, is a greatly improved outfit and the game tonight should be much closer than the first one.

Coach Lew Hayworth, who has guided the Jayvees through a streak of 13 consecutive triumphs, will have as his starting lineup Fred Swartzburg, and Ed "Cat" Wagner at the forward posts, Junie Bailey at center, and Jack Fitch and Dan Nyimicz at the guard positions.

Backing up the starting five will be Harvey Weinstein, Paul von Bramer, Ken Curtis, Marx Nathan, and William Henson.

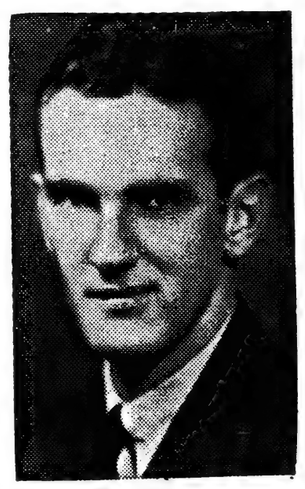
Tankmen Seek Fifth Victory

Dolphins Favored To Down Visitors

By Roy Holsten

Facing the Virginia Cavaliers in the last home dual meet of the season, Coach Dick Jamerson's Blue Dolphins will be out to garner their fifth victory in seven starts at 8 o'clock tonight in Bowman Gray pool.



Except for the Southern conference meet, which is slated for the seventh and eighth of March, this will be the last meet in the local pool for four of the Tar Heel squad. Seniors Warren Ficklen, Bill Herr, Pete Hexner and Bob Johnson will all graduate this year.

The Virginia mermen have a strong squad but they will be slight underdogs in tonight's encounter. Having lost to Duke and State earlier in the season, the Cavaliers have improved steadily and since then have defeated V. M. I. and V. P. I. handily. Nucleus of the Virginia team are breaststroker Harry Staz, sprinter Jack Walton, and 200-meter freestyler Bill Williams.

The Dolphins have one more encounter after tonight, facing Duke in Durham on March 5.

Carolina's probable lineup:

300 medely: McCoy, Pell and Sper.
200 freestyle: Ficklen and Hutton.
50 freestyle: Greenbaum and Herr.
Diving: Crone and Erle.
100 freestyle: Bultman and McCauley.
150 backstroke: Jenkins and Johnson or McKenzie.
200 breaststroke: Cook and Breeden or Hexner.
400 freestyle: Norwood and Scheinman.
400 relay: Undecided.

Mile Record May Be Broken Here Saturday Night

One Indoor game record that will likely fall in competition Saturday is the mile, and that feature event of the classic Invitational meet will be run off at 8 o'clock with no less than a dozen stars scheduled to run.

The mark was lowered to 4:24.4 by Harris Ross of Little Creek last winter, but dopesters figure that even the new figure will not stand up under the pounding of the brilliant field registered for the 1947 jogging.

Jim Corridon, a Georgia Tech entry, ran a 4:24. mile in winning the Indiana state high school title, and he is sure to be one of the favorites. Bill McKenna of Georgia, Nick Smussen of Navy, and Lindy Kehoe of Maryland are other outstanding mile runners who will be on the boards here.

Carolina's Tar Heels, the meet's defending champions, will be represented in the mile jaunt by Julian Mackenzie, who won the event in 1943, and possibly Alvin Smith and Mark Burnham. Burnham was second in last winter's running. Jim Ellsworth of Duke, a fourth placer in 1946, is back for another whack at it.

The two-mile run, hurdles and relays are other events which always create excitement in the Indoor games and this year will be no exception. There will be brilliant talent for all of them. Ten teams will compete in the mile relay.

Firemen Refuse to Permit Game in Overcrowded Gym

Surging Crowd of Students Crash Arena To Halt Important Conference Battle

By Irwin Smallwood

RALEIGH, Feb. 25,—You win some, you lose some, and some are crowded out. The latter was the case here tonight, and it all happened when a mob of students rushed Frank Thompson gymnasium, broke down the door and over-crowded the balcony of the ancient field house structure on the West Raleigh campus of State college.

The result was the cancellation of the scheduled Southern conference basketball game between State's Red Terrors and the White Phantoms of Carolina. There was no indication tonight as to whether the game would be played at another date.

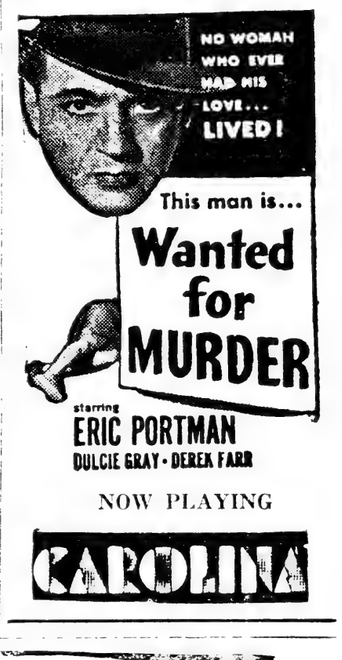
Fire Chief W. R. Butts of Raleigh refused to take responsibility for the over-crowded conditions in the State gym, and the game was subsequently called off, leaving an enraged and screaming mob of some 3,500 fans without a ball game.

Carolina's White Phantoms never reached the playing floor even to take warming-up drills, and State's Terrors, who were on the floor for about five minutes, were ushered back to their dressing rooms where they sat ready to play for several minutes in hopes that the crowd would thin out and the game could go on.

Students only were to be admitted to the important battle here tonight on a first come, first served basis, and when the gym was filled to capacity, the doors were to be locked and no additional admittance allowed. This took place shortly before 7 o'clock tonight, but the minute the doors were locked, the large crowd outside seeking admittance to the game broke down the outer door and rushed into the gym to fill the balcony to overflowing.

Spectators, who were chiefly State students, were literally hanging from the rafters in the unstable old athletic construction when the fire chief first said that the teams could not play under those circumstances. Chief Butts issued a statement at approximately 7:15 o'clock to the effect that unless those fans who were not occupying regular seats cleared the gym in 15 minutes that the game could not go on.

No one budged, and at about 7:30 o'clock the game was officially called off.



"I'm very sorry the game could not be played," said Coach Everett Case of the State team tonight. "But there was nothing else to do and we had to just call off the game. The fire chief refused to allow the game under the over-crowded conditions."

At Chapel Hill, athletic officials indicated that they had nothing to say until further investigation was made of the unfortunate incident. There had been talk of a forfeit, but this was soon killed due to the unusual circumstances.

It was one of the worst incidents ever to come out of Southern conference basketball circles, and it will undoubtedly be talked of for years to come.

That score again, Carolina 0, State 0

Wrestlers Begin Workouts For Finale With Virginia

Carolina's wrestling team, generally rated as the best in the South, got back down to hard work yesterday afternoon in view of the season finale with Virginia here next Monday night and the Southern conference tournament slated for March 7 and 8.

"I thought the boys did a good job Saturday against the powerful Navy team," said Coach Chuck Quinlan of his grapplers as he began drills again yesterday after a one-day layoff. "I was especially proud of the way Co-Captain Tommy Hearn and Oscar Gupton came through with victories to remain undefeated in seven matches this season."

The Tar Heel grunt and groaners, who, according to sports writers and fans around Annapolis, gave Navy its toughest battle of the season, fought a much closer fight than the 28-6 score indicated and the match could have easily gone the other way had some good breaks materialized early in the meet.

Seaver Loses First

Navy was probably strongest in the 136-pound and 145-pound positions, but even in these divisions the Tar Heels put up hard fights before going down in defeat. Co-Captain Dick Seaver, who had won six straight matches prior to the Middie encounter, went into the match shortly after having suffered an upset stomach, but nevertheless he fought the No. 1 Navy man closely before falling in the last minute into a pin.

Another heart-breaking battle was in the 155-pound class, where Irving Zirpel fell into a pin while leading his opponent on points. Zirpel was giving one of his best performances of the season when he was caught in the pinning hold. Doug Thompson, at 121, was just decisioned by a close score, and the mite freshman was very much in the running until the final bell.

Bill Kemp, outstanding letterman 165-pounder, fell before one of the best members of the Annapolis crew, and Laurie Hooper forfeited in the heavyweight berth to keep his ankle intact for the Virginia and conference matches.

Truman Reply Denies Charge Made By Bevin

White House Claims Charges Misleading

Washington, Feb. 26 — (UP) — President Truman has issued a blunt denial of charges made by Britain's foreign secretary on the Palestine question. Secretary Bevin charged yesterday that Mr. Truman had wrecked the October Palestine negotiations by politically-inspired statements. Tonight, the White House replies that the British charges have conveyed a "most unfortunate and misleading" impression.

The formal White House statement says President Truman's plea for the immediate admission of 100,000 Jews into Palestine was merely a reaffirmation of the attitude we've maintained consistently since the summer of 1945.

Reply Is Formal

The President's reply to Bevin is formal, couched in diplomatic language. Not so formal, not so restrained are denunciations of Bevin coming from both Democratic and Republican congressmen.

The Democratic leader in the senate, Alben Barkley, says that in view of Bevin's campaign record, he's almost astonished that the burley Britisher should have accused Mr. Truman of playing politics with the Holy Land question.

To Chairman Taft of the senate's GOP policy committee, Bevin and the British government appear to have "repudiated the whole basis on which they were negotiating with the Jewish agency."

The President will hold a news conference Friday and may elaborate on tonight's statement.

Cornell Asks Talmadge To Crown Beauty Queen

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 26.—(UP)—Georgia Governor Herman Talmadge has picked up some new supporters in the North.

Talmadge has received a letter asking him to crown a Cornell university beauty queen if Mrs. Talmadge doesn't object, that is.

The invitation comes from the Ag-Domecon council, a student agricultural group at Cornell. They also ask Talmadge to speak at Cornell's Farm and Home week, scheduled late in April.

Talmadge says he doesn't know whether he'll be able to get away from his office.

Bill Proposed to Deny Free Use of Air Waves

Washington, Feb. 26.—(UP)—A bill has been introduced in the house to prevent the use of radio "for the dissemination of views contrary to the Constitution."

The author, Democrat Thomas Lane of Massachusetts, wants to deny the use of the airwaves "to those who preach doctrines calculated to undermine the American form of government." Lane's bill would require the Federal Communications commission to set up a series of what he calls "freedom" regulations for radio stations to operate under.

Mount Etna Volcano Erupts With Violence

Catania, Sicily, Feb. 26.—(UP)—An eruption of the Mount Etna volcano has thrown a six-mile river of molten lava down the mountain slope. At last word, the lava was within a mile and a half of the village of Passo Piscario.

Lack of Quorum Stalls Legislature

Assembly Plans to Discuss New Amendments At Regular Session in Gerrard Hall Tonight

Due to lack of a quorum at last night's scheduled special session, the Student Legislature postponed its important discussion of the proposed constitutional amendment until tonight.

In place of a formal meeting, the assembly heard from both factions concerning the amendment to revamp the present judiciary set-up. The present amendment would remove all appellate power from the Student council leaving that body to decide only cases of constitutionality. The change proposed by Dewey Dorsett's committee on revision would also reduce the number of students serving on the court from nine to five.

Lowenstein's Plan

In opposition to the amendment, newly-appointed legislator Al Lowenstein presented a compromise which probably will come on the floor at tonight's session. The Lowenstein plan, not without support in the assembly, would divide campus code and honor code cases, denying appeal to the Student council in campus code violations and granting it in cases involving the honor code.

Lowenstein and three others were appointed by Dewey Dorsett to fill vacancies in the legislature which occurred when four members were dropped from the roll. Wylie Long and Terrell Webster were appointed from the UP, while Ann Morris and Lowenstein were named from the SP.

Speaker Charlie Warren announced that the time of this evening's Legislature meeting has been advanced from 7:30 to 7 o'clock. The assembly will meet in Gerrard hall.

Webster is a past speaker of the legislature, and Long, active in politics before the war, once ran for that office.

Also on the agenda this evening is the amendment to revoke the legislature's power to categorize offenses against the student body. By the constitution, the lawmakers may specify just what type of sentence shall be meted out by the courts in honor and campus code cases. The amendment would thus take away any legislative control of the judiciary's decisions.

Under regular business tonight, the assembly will debate a number of bills which are due to come out of committee, hear a report from Chuck Heath's fact-finding board which many feel will bring some "startling" developments to light, and reports from other student activity groups.

The Ways and Means committee will report on a bill which would give student government officials five credit hours of university work.

FPHA Denies Co-op Grocery Use of Building in Village

By Ed Joyner

Plans of the student cooperative association to set up a grocery store in Victory village were scotched yesterday by a letter from the Federal Public Housing agency in Atlanta denying use of an FPHA supplied building to the Co-op.

The letter was in answer to a request made by J. S. Bennett, Superintendent of Utilities, for free use of two Victory village units as a store for the cooperative and a laundry pick-up and distribution station. The cooperative project had previously been approved by the University board of trustees.

Quote from Letter

The FPHA letter said in part:

"Aside from two units now being used for management and maintenance, this office will not be in position to concur in your request that additional units be used for purposes other than dwelling purposes. This results from basic legislation and policy that money appropriated for veterans housing should be utilized to achieve maximum veteran housing results.

"We concur heartily with your statement that a project of this size should have a central management and service building where adequate space would be provided for all non-dwelling activities. However, a building of this type would have to be provided by the University, in view of the limited funds provided under the Mead-Lanham Act.

Colorful Display Of Publications Now Being Shown

A colorful exhibit of post-war French publications is now on display in the main lobby of the University library featuring all types of periodicals and magazines published in France. The exhibit is a gift of the French Embassy.

Only a small section of the material received from the Embassy is now on display, but library plans call for more of the publications to be presented in the near future and the exhibit will be continued for some time.

All fields of activity in modern-day France are represented in the publications display, which is an attempt to show what France is doing today. Learned journals, fashion magazines, picture magazines, economic bulletins, and other varieties of books and periodicals will furnish interested students with a cross-section of up-to-date France.

The magazines, which inclue "Le Monde Illustre," a counterpart to Life, "Science et Vie," a scientific study of world events, and numerous others are printed on excellent paper and are very colorful, featuring good make-up and attractive photographs. The advertisements also are very attractive and interesting to the modern American student.

Coed Senate Votes to Conduct Special Balloting on April 8

Speaker of Woman's Assembly, WAA Officers To Be Elected in Emergency Coed Election

By Bettie Washburn

The Coed Senate Tuesday evening voted to hold a special balloting on April 8 for the purpose of electing a new speaker of the Senate and the four officers of the Woman's Athletic association. The Senate had formerly petitioned the Legislature for permission to hold a special election of all coed officers the third week in February since many offices will be vacated in March by graduating coeds. Such an election would have necessitated a constitutional amendment ratified by the Legislature and the student body, and would have consumed much valuable time.

As elections committees of the Senate and Legislature have declared it impossible to hold campus-wide elections the first week of April, the Senate has resorted to holding this special election for the speaker of the coed legislative body and the WAA officers. Other coed officers will be elected in the general elections in May.

March Mass Meeting

Nominations for the candidates in the special election will be made at a mass meeting of coeds in Gerrard Hall on Thursday, March 27.

It is necessary that coed officers graduating in March fill out a resignation blank and submit it immediately to Dewey Dorsett. If the coed vacating the office was elected on a party ticket, the resignation must be signed by the chairman of the party; or if elected as an independent, the blank should be signed by the person who nominated her. As soon as the presidential appointments are made, there will be a special meeting of the Senate to approve or disapprove them.

The Senate also voted Tuesday night to send a recommendation to Dean of Women Katherine Carmichael that she inform graduate students, professional students, married coeds and special students of the rules which govern coed social life.

Outstanding Baptist Leader To Speak Here this Evening

Dr. J. M. Dawson, who will be the Religion in Life speaker on "Can Christianity Save the Church?", tonight at 8:30 in Hill hall, is one of the outstanding Baptists in the country. In his position as public relations secretary of the Baptists of the United States with headquarters in Washington, he frequently advises national leaders, including President Truman, on legislation which will affect churches.

DR. J. M. DAWSON

Dr. Dawson most recently has taken part in the nationally publicized case before the Supreme Court in which the state of New Jersey passed a law paying bus fares to children who attended a parochial school.

Dawson, who was pastor of the First Baptist church of Waco, Texas, for 31 years, represented the Baptists of the nation at the San Francisco conference of the United Nations.

"I don't know what side the Baptists would take if two Baptists were running for the presidency in the next election," Dawson said, referring to Stassen and Truman.

NOTICE

All students previously contacted by President Dewey Dorsett and Charlie Long concerning the University Appropriations bill are asked to meet tonight at 9 o'clock in the Di hall, third floor, New West. This is a matter of great urgency.

Elected Candidates to Be Placed On UP Ticket in Spring Elections

By Chuck Hauser

The University Party goes into full swing on its spring election program today by holding primaries for dormitory representatives to the student legislature in Manly, Mangum, Lewis, Steele, Old West, and Battle-Vance-Pettigrew dormitories. Balloting will go on this evening from 7 to 11 o'clock on the first floor of the dormitories listed. Ballot boxes will be placed near the telephones in the center section of each building.

Nominations by Petition

Nominations have been going on through the past week by petition. Ten signatures on a nominating petition assure a man's name of being printed on the primary ballot. Those winning the primaries will be placed on the University party ticket for student legislature representatives in the May campus elections.

Men already nominated as of early yesterday afternoon are: Carroll O. Money and Dick Owen of Old West, Pete Gerns of Mangum, and Russell G. Baldwin of Battle-Vance-Pettigrew.

Statement by Davis

Alex Davis, UP chairman, stated, "These men are picked by and represent their dormitories, and the University party will welcome their endorsement, either individually or as a whole, by the Student party."

Davis went on to say that the men elected will be under no obligation whatsoever to the UP.

Primary elections were postponed in Miller and Nash halls by request of students living there, as many men will be moving to other locations in the spring. It was felt that anyone picked now to represent the dormitory would not be representative of that group next quarter.

According to Chairman Davis, anyone in the dormitories interested in watching the ballot boxes or assisting in the counting of ballots will be welcomed.

Write-in votes will be counted in the elections, and results will be posted as soon as votes are tabulated and figures can be released.

CHARLIE DONNELL

Donnell Heads Senior Groups

Palmer Appointees Plan June Events

Plans for this year's graduation began to take shape today with the appointment of the executive and general class committees by Dotson Palmer, Senior class president.

An innovation in this year's organization is the appointment of Charles Donnell as class administrator. Donnell will act as an ex officio member of all committees and serve as the coordinating officer for their activities.

Other executive committee members are the class officers, Judy Swain, vice president; Janet Johnston, secretary, and Bill Halsey, treasurer. Appointed members include Charlie Tietjen, social committee chairman; Alex Veazey, dance committee chairman, and Bill Woestendiek, publicity committee chairman.

Serving on the finance committee under the chairmanship of Halsey are George Stenhouse, Jabie Heyward, Flo Ann Roberts, Bill Miller and Gloria Robbins.

Members of the social committee include Elizabeth Eaddy, Sandy Sanders, Laurie Hooper and Griff Holland. Doris Nunn, Ellie Rodd, Gene Nash and Barbara Bransford are dance committee members. On the publicity committee are Margaret Whitney, Mickey Derieux, Darley Lochner and Bettie Washburn.

Tentative plans for a class dance are now being made by the executive committee.

VA Stops Payment Of 550 Allowances

Notice from the Winston-Salem Veterans administration office shows that the subsistence allowance of nearly 550 veterans in attendance at the University has been suspended due to the non-receipt of Form 7-1963, Report of Compensation from Productive Labor.

Veterans in training under the provisions of Public Law 346 who have not filed the above report, or who have received a letter from Winston-Salem in regard to the suspension of subsistence allowance should see Elliott G. Bourne, training officer at 111 Peabody.

Bucket Brigade Aids Firemen In Extinguishing Local Blaze

Hard-working bucket-carriers enabled the Chapel Hill Fire department to check a fire yesterday which completely destroyed one frame house occupied by a colored family of eight and seriously threatened to envelop adjoining homes. It was the department's tenth call this month.

Just outside the city limits, the wooden structure was far out of reach of the town fire hydrants, and neighbors manned bucket brigades to replenish the water supply in the fire engine's booster tank.

Late yesterday afternoon firemen were called to a third blaze. In the Westwood area, it was caused by a defective chimney at the home of Prof. H. F. Comer. Firemen said the blaze, the twelfth in February, caused no damage.

Firemen, who fought intense heat more than forty-five minutes, said that even with a proper supply of water it would have been impossible to save the all-wooden structure, home of Ed Cotten and his family.

The house was completely enveloped by flames when fire-fighters arrived, and intense heat and acrid smoke prevented them from using the single hose line effectively for many minutes. The trickle of water furnished by neighbors' faucets by the bucket carriers was barely sufficient to stop flames which several times broke out in the walls of another home just twelve feet from the one destroyed. A third house was threatened but did not catch fire.

Cotten's home, owned by Brady McLendan, was burned to the ground, with all possessions of the occupants a total loss. A pile of coal over 20 feet from the house was ignited by the heat.

Less than fifteen minutes after the fire department returned from the blaze, it was called to a trash fire at 516 E. Rosemary which got out of control. No damage was reported.

These Four Words

Good luck—in the form of an unusually industrious music student—was all that prevented what might have become a major campus disaster early Tuesday morning, when firemen and police officers, summoned by a late-studying musician, extinguished a burning can of trash in Hill hall.

Chief J. S. Boone of the Chapel Hill Fire Department, says the cause of the fire was, in all probability, a "cigarette carelessly thrown away."

Those four words—"cigarette carelessly thrown away"—have become the LS/MFT of fire-borne tragedy. National Safety council figures show that the innocent cigarette is top cause of death and damage by fire in the United States today.

Loss by blaze of Hill hall, or any campus building, would be a major loss today, with facilities jammed to the breaking point and building materials so critically short. A minimum of judgment—such as some smoker in Hill hall didn't use—will prevent such disaster.

Regretful

The announcement yesterday that the French house, a traditional and popular summer feature of the University, will be dropped this summer unless some place is found immediately in which to conduct it, is most regretful.

The extension division was forced to drop its plans for holding the French house because no suitable place has been located to hold it. In past years, the French house has been held in different fraternity and sorority houses, but no house will be empty this summer.

Which leaves the French department with a popular and much in demand feature but without a place in which to hold it. Under the guidance of various members of the French department, French students from all over the country have attended past summer sessions at the University at which they lived, ate, and talked French for a period of six weeks. The fame and the excellence of the feature has been widespread.

This year over 100 students had already applied for admission to the French house—the best and most popular method of learning the language that can be offered. Students from other schools had written requesting permission to attend the French house at UNC this summer.

Now these people will have to be disappointed unless something happens in a hurry. It is tragic that one of the University's most alive features must die a sudden and very unpopular death. Unfortunately, we have no remedy to offer, but urge that everything possible be done to keep what has come to be, in a few short years, one of Carolina's best-liked courses.

Library Display

Since we're on the subject of French, we might insert here a brief suggestion to those students interested in France, its language and customs, to stop and glance at the current exhibition of French publications on display in the library.

For a brief, worthwhile, intelligent insight into modern France and its present life and fashions the gifts on display from the French embassy are tops.

As are most of the displays constantly on display in our library about our own country and others. Many students probably walk by these displays daily without looking at them. They are always worthy of your time and study—and usually are most interesting.

Lilienthal Case Is Display Of Grasping Pressure Groups

By Jimmy Wallace

I think that the following two statements are, in the main, true ones:

1. Ninety per cent of the people of this country are either pleased with, jubilant over, confident because of, or don't give a damn about, the appointment of David Lilienthal as the chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission.

2. The remaining ten per cent is composed of: a) nine per cent who don't care, and b) one per cent composed of frustrated, patronizing, doddering, senile bigots and red-baiters, at least one of whom is a member of the United States Senate; alleged public servants who are actually more interested in representing private power combines, and who fear that with the advent of atomic energy development the source of their support will be abruptly cut off; and those atavistic creatures who desire to transport the nation back to the days of Harding-Coolidge-Hoover "normalcy" without any regard for the current drastically altered world situation.

The scientists who really know about Atomic Energy have endorsed Lilienthal. Great administrators such as James B. Conant; great scientists, such as Einstein, Urey, Oppenheimer, the Comptons; the members of the Cabinet; all of these have said that Lilienthal is their choice.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has stated that it has no proof against Mr. Lilienthal. It has never investigated Mr. Lilienthal, nor has it been asked to investigate the TVA.

There is not one scrap of evidence of Communism, nor of fellow-traveling, nor of being "soft" toward Communists, in all the quagmire of contradictory opinionating that has been issuing from the vicinage of the Senate Chamber pot.

This is a clear, lucid, and plain example of a situation wherein the government does not represent the people. It is a clear example of small, grasping pressure groups who wish to retard the development of the greatest force yet discovered by man, a force which could be used to help many people lead better lives.

The power companies realize very well that they are on the verge of becoming obsolete. I hope that their employees will be able to find new jobs. BuBt the fact that power companies will become obsolete when Atomic Energy is developed, is no reason for the people of this country to allow the welfare of everyone to be endangered in order that power companies might continue to reap profits from the inventions of Tesla and Edison.

Them's harsh words, I know. But time's a-wasting. Other nations are hot on the trail of Atomic Bombs. Some may already have manufactured their first. The scientists say that time is very short. It is essential to the continued survival of what we call civilization that we place all Atomic Energy development under international control. But what do we do?

We wait. We sit. We argue about moonbeams. We devour red herrings. And while we do this, the rest of the world makes hay while the power companies' bulbs shine.

Standing South

Can Miss Martha Aiken be serious? Or is she just attempting to hire a cook?

She advocates interracial education. She would like to go to school with Negroes. Would she also like to sit beside them in the movies and dance with them? If so, then maybe she should live up north; she will never live to see these changes come to the South.

Miss Aiken quotes Oliver Wendell Holmes: "The great thing in this world is not where we stand but in what direction we are standing." I am standing South, Miss Aiken, due South.

The two people are different. The Negro will never become socially equal simply by declaring himself so, or by having someone else declare him so. The Negro has progressed greatly since he was brought to this country—he still has a long way to go.

Discrimination and segregation are logical and necessary, and the prejudice involved is basically a quite healthy aversion to the mixing of white and colored stock.

You can relish the thought that the Negro is your equal if you wish—but he is not mine.

DONALD B. BARNES

Where Credit Is Due

In Wednesday's Daily Tar Heel you ran an article about the donation of several hundred books to the Negro Community Center library in Carrboro. It might be interesting to the readers of the Daily Tar Heel and to other parties connected with the community center that it is located at least three blocks within the city limits of Chapel Hill, and is in no way connected with Carrboro. And the Orange County Training School is also located in Chapel Hill.

The community center was erected, donated to, and supported by Chapel Hill residents only; Carrboro contributed nothing toward it. In fact, the original construction was directed by the efforts of Colonel Pratt with the aid of W.P.A. funds. The facts may be verified by a visit to the Chapel Hill City Hall.

I am just as interested in improveing race relations as any other person may be, but I think credit should be given where credit is due.

Sincerely,
JACK R. WHITE.

Starving Mongrels

During my last few odysseys to Lenoir in search of food of sorts, it has come to my attention in one way and another that the canine component of our campus has become altogether too presumptuous in their quest for nourishment. Time and again it has been necessary for the more timorous students to eat standing on the tables while hordes of starving mongrels slashed at their ankles and feet. In the past one-half of your meat would be enough to stave off disaster, but with meals being what they are, the dogs as well as the students are becoming dissatisfied.

The fact that we're all going to pot is bad enough in itself but future results, too, must be considered. A few of the more lackadaisical pups, having spurned snapping in mid-air, as has been the custom heretofore, have begun to shadow fast eaters and clobber the remaining morsels as soon as the table is abandoned. The perils of this practice can be seen immediately. Unless the dishes are sluiced in a warm solution of hydrochloric acid and two parts of carbolic acid our rate of hydrophobia will increase alarmingly. Imagine walking in the Y court and having frothy-mouthed coeds snapping and gnashing their teeth at every piece of meat in sight. Instead of the "Hey how U's" there would only be polite growls and maybe an occasional sniff. Instead of the cross-word puzzles and knitting in class, there would be a constant hullabulloo about the latest cures for rabies or mange. Gone would be the old days of football and the like; the only sport left to us would be that of trying to get a can off our tails.

Things may not come to such a pretty pass but at present there is a very definite trend in that direction. I am not an inherent dog-hater nor do I represent any political faction or part thereof, but I honestly and truly believe the time for action has come. To employ drastic action at first may not only prove detrimental to our cause but may at once rouse the canines into such a state of hysteria that they would prove too much for our campus parties, committees, subcommittees, councils, legislatures, et al, to cope with.

I would like to suggest, without incurring hatred, working hardships, or overtaxing many already overtaxed brains, that we segregate the animals in Lenoir according to their preference. If this doesn't prove expedient it might be wise to send a delegate to the State Legislature to state our case. In either case let us all be gentlemen of the old school in every sense and make Carolina forever proud of the breed she has spawned.

JAMES H. SHUMAKER.

Orchids

I would like to take this opportunity to praise the efficiency of the circulation of the Daily Tar Heel this quarter. As a town student, it was a rare occasion when the paper fell into my possession prior to this term; I now receive it without fail in my post office box. Orchids to the department that makes this possible.

A grateful Daily Tar Heel receiver.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

HOUSE, SENATE REPUBLICANS DIFFER WIDELY ON CUTS IN MILITARY BUDGET; VANDENBERG AGAINST DEEP SLASHES; TRUMAN KNOWS HOW TO PROTECT SELF WHEN HANDSHAKING

Washington.—Republican leaders held two closed-door meetings on the budget last week which were as different as day and night. One was a meeting of Senate Republicans which went on record against any sharp budget cuts for the Army and Navy. The other was a meeting of House Republicans which voted overwhelmingly to cut the Army and Navy.

At the secret session of House GOP leaders there was only one dissenting voice, that of absent Congressman Ham Andrews of Buffalo, N. Y., who was ill, but whose letter against Army-Navy cuts was read by Congressman Les Arends of Illinois.

In the Senate, however, it was different. Senator Styles Bridges, Chairman of the powerful Senate Appropriations Committee and a vigorous budget-cutter, first took the floor to remind his colleagues of their pledge to prune.

"This question of how far to cut the budget is a definite challenge to each and every one of you," said Bridges, bluntly.

"Budget cuts are going to hurt," he continued. "They will mean squawks and protests and resentment. Some of your friends are going to be hurt, and some of your political supporters. You've got to be prepared for that. What you must decide is whether you are willing to go ahead with a job you know needs to be done even though it will be unpopular."

This brought an immediate reply from Army-Navy champions led by Armed Services Chairman Chan Gurney of South Dakota. "The proposed cuts in the Army and Navy cannot be made," Gurney shouted. "If they are made, ours will be a second-rate power, militarily speaking."

Senator Arthur Vandenberg, ever the diplomat, took a different tack. He began by complimenting the Budget Committee on its job, and commending its courage. But, he concluded, it has recommended too deep a cut. A reduction of six billion dollars will mean sending Secretary Marshall to the Moscow Peace Conference "with both arms in slings."

Senator Bob Taft of Ohio supported Vandenberg, after which Finance Committee Chairman Eugene Millikin of Colorado argued that it would be better to cut too little this year than too much.

"Where we find we have cut too little we can rectify our mistakes next year," Millikin suggested. "But if we cut too much we might destroy some vital function of the Government."

In the end the holdouts for the six-billion-dollar cut mustered 19 votes while those desiring a smaller cut got 22. Not many of the 19 rigid economizers got up to champion their viewpoint, but among those who did were Senator Harry Cain of Washington, in whose state navy yard and reclamation funds would be cut off, and James Kem of Missouri.

Senator George Aiken of Vermont, one of the outstanding lawmakers of either party, then questioned Bridges about specific reductions which would have to be made. He asked about such things as Rural Electrification, the Department of Agriculture and the Interior Department, in each case drawing admissions that the cuts would be substantial but not crippling. They would "slow up" the work, Bridges said in each case.

Bridges did not put before his colleagues a breakdown which he and other Republican members of the Joint Committee had had prepared, showing just where the budget cuts would be made. This breakdown includes the following significant figures.

1. The War Department's military budget would be cut by $1,200,000,000, its civil functions by more than $500,000,000.

2. The Navy cut would be $680,000,000.

3. The $947,000,000 sought for the Department of Agriculture would be cut by $257,000,000.

4. The $307,000,000 asked for the State Department would be cut by $95,000,000.

5. The $1,048,000,000 for the RFC and other Government corporations would be scaled by $228,000,000. And one cut the Republicans chuckle over, but may find difficult is $200,000,000 in the over-all $352,679,250 budget of Bob Hannegan's Post Office Department. They proposed cutting him by over 50 per cent.

ACCORDING TO ALL press reports, State college's Red Terrors have completed their regular basketball season, and there will be no replay of the Carolina-State game which was forced into cancellation Tuesday night when a surging crowd broke down the entrance to Frank Thompson gymnasium and overloaded the galleries.

This event, an unfortunate incident, should not be allowed to subside with no action whatsoever. It is something that has never occurred before in the history of the Southern conference, and for that reason there is no provision for a solution of the problem. Nevertheless, the same thing might easily happen again, and if this thing is let go with no action at all, there will surely be no way to cope with the problem should it come up again—and when more is at stake.

In this case, there is not a great deal at stake, except the seedings in the conference tournament coming up. But this is enough to merit the Southern conference or the parties concerned to make a precedent of the affair.

Up to the time the Daily Tar Heel went to press, State had made no effort to compensate for the loss of the important game. In fact, Athletic Director Bob Fetzer had not been contacted at all by the brother institution at Raleigh on any aspect of the situation. And Carolina, not being at fault in the remotest, is not in a position to institute a move in any degree of sportsmanship.

State had been warned after the Duke game by the fire chief that another game could not be played under similar conditions. Still there were more tickets out than seats in the gym. The only thing that was to be done was to shut the doors of the gym when a capacity crowd was reached. And there were a total of six policemen allotted to take care of three front and two side doors of the old West Raleigh field house.

The rules of the game clearly state that the home team is responsible for the conduct of the crowds at the game, and since Carolina was there ready to play, it was wholly the responsibility of State to see that the game could be played. But adequate provisions were obviously not made, and as a result the game was not played. And now they are letting the whole thing go with no action at all, not even as much as an apology.

We are not especially in favor of a forfeit, bearing in mind the unfortunate swimming incident of last week, but we do feel that some arrangement should be made to make amends for the blunder, which, we also realize, was not the fault of Coach Case, the State team or the student body at large. They all had tickets, and when they could not get in, they resorted to the sole remaining tactic—mob force.

What we believe is that a precedent must be set, for the problem will be the same until larger gyms are provided. The Raleigh fire chief was completely within his rights, and made a wise decision, but the damage was already done before drastic steps were taken.

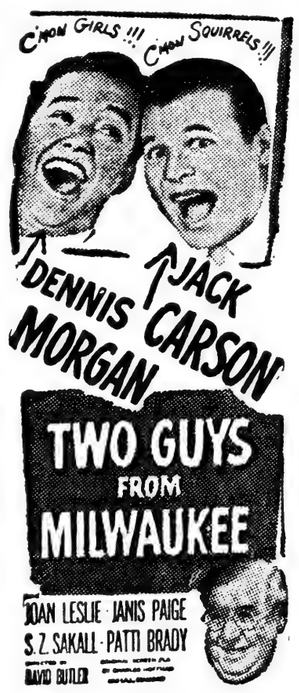
No matter what the outcome of this incident may be, we want to see something done to make sure that it never happens again. For as we said before, it could easily occur when something more important were at stake. There must be some sort of action taken, and the whole situation clarified!

Coach Tom Scott said last night that he never did agree to the complete cancellation of the game but that he was informed that his team could not take the floor, and Coach Case expressed his regrets and sorrow that the game could not be staged as scheduled.

The evident throwing out of the State-UNC tilt gives State undisputed top-seeded position in the tourney, and leaves Carolina and Duke to battle it out tomorrow night for the second-seeded spot.

Tar Heel Ringmen Continue Drills For League Tourney

Continuing their drive to smooth out the wrinkles in preparation for the Southern conference tournament, which is scheduled for Friday and Saturday of this week, the Tar Heel ringmen doubled their efforts with the coming meet only two days off.



Coach Mike Ronman ran the squad through an afternoon of strenuous workouts as he strove to get the men in top shape for this all-important encounter.

Only four men have been slated to represent the Blue and White in this year's championship bouts, the rest of the squad having been forced to resign because of injuries or crowded schedules.

In the 125-pound class, flashy Bill Sunas will carry the Tar Heel colors. In the 135-pound bracket it will be Charlie Lambeth. Newton Winn will be the 155-pound starter and Tony Payne has been given the nod in the 145-pound division.

The Old Liners from Maryland and the Citadel Cadets, both of which hold victories over the Tar Heels during the season, are the favorites in the weekend clash. Maryland will be considerably weakened, however, by the loss of Quattrochi, their star scrapper, who is out with a broken nose.

Approximately thirty boxers have entered the championship bouts and five different colleges will be represented when the first bell rings in Ritchie stadium tomorrow night. Fifteen preliminary and semi-final bouts will be held on Friday evening, four semi-finals on Saturday afternoon and the eight finals scheduled for Saturday night.

Grads, Kap Sig CopMuralWins

Sig Chis Also Grab Victory In Playoffs

Kappa Sig No. 3 and Sigma Chi No. 1 scored their second successive wins in a like number of days to take the lead in the frat division of the mural cage playoffs yesterday afternoon while the Grads were also turning in their second straight win to pace the field in the dorm loop.

The Kappa Sigs took a 29-23 win over Beta No. 1 as the Sigma Chis were downing Phi Delt No. 2, 47-35. The Grads showed that they were still the dorm team to beat as they defeated Emanons, 30-15.

In other playoff tilts, Zeta Psi No. 1 bounced back into the win column by edging out Chi Phi No. 2, 22-21, while Everett was eliminating Independent, 24-21 in another close ball game.

The results of the day's play left only three survivors in the dorm tourney with the Grads leading the way with two wins against no defeats, and Everett and Emanons boasting records of 1-1. The latter teams will meet this afternoon to determine who will face the current leaders for the title.

The situation in the frat division is slightly different since the playoff is a round robin affair and will continue until each team has played the other five finalists.

The current standings are: Kappa Sig (2-0); Sigma Chi (2-0); Phi Delt (1-1); Zeta Psi (1-1); Chi Phi (0-2); Beta (0-2).

Swimming Trials

Mural swimming time trials will be completed today and tomorrow with the final competition set for next week. Entries in the event thus far have been fairly large and an even larger turnout is expected this afternoon.

Mural Schedule

4:00—Woman's Gym: Chi Phi No. 2 vs. Phi Delt No. 2; Main floor, Tin Can: Zete No. 1 vs. Beta No. 1.

5:00—Woman's Gym: Sigma Chi No. 1 vs. Kappa Sig No. 3. Main floor, Tin Can: Everett vs. Emanons.

Directors Chosen For Monogramers; Social Planned

A board of directors for the Monogram club was selected at the Tuesday night meeting, President Jim Camp announced yesterday. Main functions of the board are to act in an advisory capacity for the club and to serve as a link between the organization and each team fielded by the University.

Two members of each varsity team, in addition to the club's officers, make up the board. Team members selected are: football, Sid Varney and Bill Smith; basketball, Taylor Thorne and John Dillon; baseball, Rip Ryan and Bob Fahey; track, Sam Magill and Dick Hollander; tennis, Dick Swigart and Don Paley; swimming, Bob Hutton and Mike Morrow; boxing, Jimmy Richardson and Ed McGee; wrestling, Dick Seaver and Corky Bleuthenthal; golf, Dan Nyimicz.

Swiftly regaining its pre-war level of major campus importance, the Monogram club is planning to sponsor many social functions for members and guests throughout the remainder of the school year.

Camp also announced that the letter-winners will entertain the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority of Duke next Sunday afternoon at the Monogram club house on Country Club road.

The main cog in the club's social wheel will be a varsity dance and picnic, now still in the blueprint stage. Tentative plans have placed it on the second weekend of the Spring quarter.

Track Stars Return To Southern Games

Many New Faces To Appear Here Saturday; Hansen, Matthews, Ausbon Out For Records

With all entries for the fifth annual Southern Invitational Indoor games turned in to the Athletic association offices, the field indicates that a lot of stars from past seasons of Southern intercollegiate track will be on hand for the starting gun in Woollen gym Saturday night.

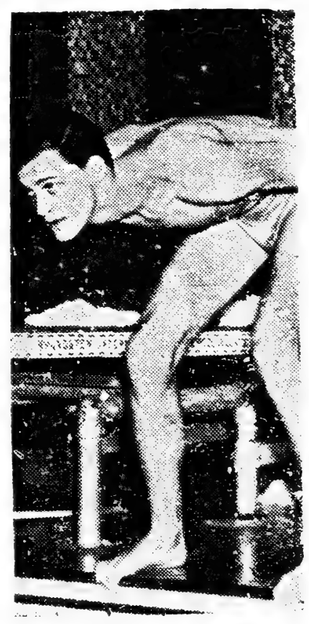
Along with the old men, there will be many new faces in the lineup, trying to snatch loop records away from such trackmen as Don Hansen of Rollins, Ed Matthews of Maryland, and Doug Ausbon of Duke. Hansen ran for a victory in the 60-yard dash for the Cherry Point Marines last year. Matthews turned in a time of 0:52.8 to cop the 440, while Ausbon took the broad jump at 21.4 feet.

Florida's Gardner, entered in the high jump, holds the Southeastern Conference AAU record, set in 1941 at 6'4".

Twelve others who placed in the 1946 Indoor Games will be in the competition again, this group including Wake Forest's Appenzeller; South Carolina's Spurr; North Carolina's Haigler, Burnham and McLeod; Maryland's Devlin and Kurz; Duke's Ellsworth; N. C. State's Pickett; and Virginia Tech's McLear.

No less than 32 of the contestants who placed in the Southern Conference outdoor meet last spring also will engage in this week's indoor hostilities, including five of the outdoor winners.

Duke's Ausbon cleaned up in the broad jump, high jump and 220-yard dash in the sunshine. He plans to compete in only the jump events in the Indoor Games. Carolina's Burnham (mile), Maryland's Matthews (440), Duke's Neighoorgall (880) and Carolina's McLeod (pole vault) are the other 1946 conference outdoor winners who will test their skill this week on the boards and under the lights.



Chairman R. A. Fetzer, founder of the Indoor Games originally as a Southern Conference feature back in 1930, believes the field this year may turn out to be the fastest in history.

Indications point to a capacity crowd of between 2,500 and 3,000. However, plenty of seats are still available. They are priced at $1.50 each and may be obtained at the athletic offices here.

Gridders End Drills With Weekend Session

Grid workouts for the winter quarter will be concluded this week when the gridders hold an informal scrimmage Saturday morning.

The winter drills have been going on several weeks and spring practice is slated to start during the first or second week of next quarter.

Phantoms Prepare For Duke Friday

Returning to the drill court following the cancellation of the State tussle Tuesday evening, the White Phantoms held a lengthy scrimmage yesterday afternoon in preparation for their regular-season finale tomorrow evening against Duke.

The starting quintet of Bob Paxton, Jim Hamilton, Nemo Nearman, Jim White and Norm Kohler formed one of the scrimmage teams, with Roger Scholbe, Dick Hartley, Johnny Dillon, Taylor Thorne and Jim Hayworth composing the other. Nearman, in particular, performed well, tapping in a good number of rebounds and showing up well on defense.

A much closer contest than the 49-28 trimming that the Tar Heels handed the Blue Devils in their outing earlier this month looms for tomorrow's clash. A hot-and-cold club in their last five encounters, the Blue Devils indicated that they were moving in the hot direction Tuesday when they outclassed Wake Forest by 57-37. The Phantoms downed the Deacons last week, 54-46.

SwimmersGain 47-28 Victory

Co-Captain Breaks Three Tank Records

By Roy Holsten

Swimming their best meet of the season, Coach Dick Jamerson's Blue Dolphins submerged the Virginia Cavaliers by a score of 47-28 in Bowman Gray pool last night with six records falling by the way.

Co-Captain Warren Ficklen turned in the most sensational performance of the evening as he shattered three and tied one record, swimming the 200-meter freestyle in the amazing time of 2:25. This broke the existing dual meet, Southern conference, and University records and tied a long-standing pool mark.

In the 300-meter medley relay, a team composed of Allison Pell, McCoy and Norman Sper, all swimming their first year of competition, broke the dual meet record as they splashed home in 3:48.

Another dual-meet mark toppled as Dan Breeden turned in a 3:10.2 200-meter breaststroke in his first win of the season. Breeden led the whole race and finished well ahead of the second-place Cavalier, Stratton.

In the diving it was Buddy Crone of UNC who stole the show as he amassed 118.7 points. Teammate Mac Erle placed second.

For Coach Ray Heildors' Cavaliers, Tiff Williams starred as he broke the other dual meet record when he swam a 5:33.4 400-meter freestyle. Williams took the individual honors.

The next event to be held in Bowman pool will be the fourteenth annual Southern conference tournament scheduled for March 7 and 8. Seven teams will be represented, the standouts being Carolina, State, and William and Mary.

The summary:

300 medley: Carolina (McCoy, Pell and Sper); 3:48.

200 freestyle: Ficklen (C), T. Williams (V), Hutton (C); 2:25. (New dual meet record).

50 freestyle: Greenbaum (C), Perry (C), Wolton (V); 0:27.8.

Lehmann Says Colleges Must Stay on Front

Religious Leader Gives Convocation

"Two things, at least, must happen if the university is to stay on the frontier," Dr. Paul L. Lehmann, well-known religious teacher and editor, at present visiting lecturer in social science in Princeton university's Theological seminary, declared in an address yesterday.

Speaking at the regular quarterly convocation of faculty, students and townspeople in Memorial hall, Dr. Lehmann asserted that "first, the presuppositions of thinking in the university must be modified in the direction of a more serious recognition of the place of Christianity in the formation and the transformation of culture, and that, secondly, the university must be a community and not merely a center of learning.

No Religious Monopoly

"Certainly the place of Christianity in the university cannot imply a religious monopoly, or that any creedal commitment shall be exacted of members of faculties, or of students upon graduation. Quite simply, the place of Christianity in the university is required and defined by the positive bearing of Christianity upon the basic faith and freedom of the university itself," said Dr. Lehmann who is associate religious book editor of the Westminster Press.

Dr. Lehmann's address was an outstanding feature of Religion in Life Week which has been in progress at the University since Sunday under the sponsorship of the Student Council for Religion in Life.

Phi Proposes Measure To Study Registration

The new registration plan met strong opposition Tuesday night as the members of the Philanthropic Literary society convened in regular session. A resolution, introduced by John Giles, stating that the new plan is unfair in that it takes away the student's choice of instructors and class hours, caused much discussion.

After comments pro and con by both students and faculty, the bill was amended to the effect that the student body president appoint three students to consult with the registration committee and to make known student regards. The amended bill passed the assembly by a vote of 8 to 4 and the entire delegation by a vote of 20 to 8.

Council Amendment Gets Hot Reception

Legislature Passes Recommendation For Trial Issue of Humor Magazine

By Bookie Jabine

Moving through the first part of the evening's business with lightning-like rapidity, the Student Legislature came a cropper on the proposed amendment to the Student council system, and late last night were still debating the measure.

Johnny Jones, secretary-treasurer of the student body and manager of the Candlelight room of Graham Memorial, was elected chairman of the Student party yesterday afternoon in a special reorganization meeting following the resignation of former Chairman Bill Mackie and members of the steering committee. Jones, a junior from High Point, has been active in the Student party since his return on campus.

Among the more important resolutions passed by the assembly in the early stages of the Gerrard hall meeting was a recommendation to the Publications board to make plans for publishing a trial issue of a campus humor magazine.

According to the recommendation, introduced by Bill Miller's Ways and Means committee, $400 would be allotted to issue a magazine which would be sold under the name, "The Buccaneer."

Kenneth Linebach's appointment to the Elections board was ratified unanimously. Linebach was named by Dewey Dorsett to fill the position vacated by Jean Huske last week.

Three other presidential appointments were approved last night. Wiley Long, Terrell Webster, and Al Lowenstein were passed and sworn in as official members of the legislature.

The Student Legislature late last night passed an amendment revamping the present Student Council setup by a vote of 19 to 16. In effect, this amendment eliminates the appellate power of the Student Council.

After the appointees were sworn in, the body heard the reports of the standing committees. Johnny Clampitt, head of the Elections committee, pointed out that nothing had been done in connection with the lower class elections, and urged that the matter be investigated.

The question of the Student council amendment was debated for over an hour, the Legislature hearing from Pete Pulley, member of the Men's Honor council who favored the amendment.

At one time during the proceedings the measure came to a vote, and the amendment passed by an 18-17 count, Speaker Charlie Warren breaking the tie. But a motion to reconsider the bill passed and at press time was still being debated.

Tookie Hodgson, Publications board member, pointed out to the legislature that there would be no objections of the board to the trial issue, and that "there is a possibility that the Mag will make $100."

The legislature unanimously passed the resolution.

Bills were also passed creating a committee to publish a handbook explaining the student constitution, and a recommendation to the administration to enclose the wrestling pavillion near Emerson field for use as a recreation center for men students.

Assembly Gets Request Advocating State Vote On Question of Liquor

Raleigh, Feb. 27.—(UP)—The North Carolina General Assembly has received two more bills calling for statewide votes on the liquor question. Senator Chaffin of Linnington has introduced a measure calling for a referendum November 4 — if the bill gets past the legislature. In the House, Representative Dan Tompkins of Jackson county has sent in a similiar measure for a vote on prohibiting all liquor, beer and wine containing more than one half of one per cent alchol.

The Senate finance committee already has scheduled a public hearing next Tuesday and Wednesday on a bill by Senator Penny of Greensboro which would call for a vote of all intoxicants except beer and light domestic wines.

Today's bills also would prohibit beer, but Chaffin's proposal would allow persons who grew their own fruits and berries to make light wines with no more alcohol than natural fermentation will produce.

The University Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Earl Slocum, will present its second concert of the year Monday evening at 8:30 in Hill hall.

The program will open with the playing of Igor Stravinsky's "Four Norwegian Moods," written in 1942 and recently a presentation of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra over N.B.C., directed by composer Stravinsky. The four movements of Haydn's familiar "Clock Symphony" will also be presented.

Lovers of German romantic opera will be able to hear the "Die Freischutz" overture by C. M. Von Weber, depicting the struggle of the forces of good and evil.

Willis Gates, a graduate assistant in the music department, will be concert master for the performance.

The GM travel agency will be open with its complete stock of travel literature. Agent Bob Watson will be on hand to take requests for reservations for spring holidays trips, saving potential travelers a later stop by the office.

Record Program

A Zenith record player will be auditioned by a staff member in the second floor music room all evening. The newest albums of popular and classical records will be played and other albums for the room may be checked out by the students.

Couples desiring photographs in the photo service room ready to take their pictures. Quick delivery of prints will be offered.

Refreshments will be served in the Horace Williams lounge throughout the evening.

Urge All to Attend

Martha Rice, director of Graham Memorial, urges all students to attend the open house and especially those who are unfamiliar with the Student union.

"Due to limited dance space, the couples will have to be limited accordingly," said Miss Rice. "That is why I urge the students to get their free bids from our office today, rather than to wait until tonight."

Carolina Student Exhibits Paintings

By Dee Sweat

An inspiration to other young art aspirants is Ben Williams, student at the University, who is exhibiting a painting in the North Carolina Artists exhibit at Person hall. His painting, "From My Studio," is done in oil, showing a series of receding buildings and snow-covered roof-tops and a remarkable inter-relation of forms.

Williams, from Lumberton, has formerly attended the National School of Commercial Art, Corcoran School of Fine Art, George Washington university.

Several distinctions and prizes have been awarded this young artist who started exhibiting only one year ago. He won First Prize in the Washington Art Fair in 1944, and both the Ronsheim Memorial Award in 1945 and the Life Painting Prize in 1946 at the Corcoran School of Fine Art.

Poet Robert Frost Conducts Classes

Robert Frost arrived in Chapel Hill Wednesday, and conducted several discussion classes in the English department before his talk here tonight at 7:30 in Memorial hall.

Frost spent most of yesterday on the campus of Duke University, giving a talk there last night, and returns to Chapel Hill this evening. Dr. Clifford Lyons, head of the University English department will introduce the noted poet, and the public is cordially invited to attend.

Dormitory Primary Held Last Night

As the Daily Tar Heel went to press last night, votes had not yet been tabulated in the University party dormitory primaries for representatives to the Student Legislature.

Yesterday afternoon nominations stood as follows: Lewis dormitory: Bill Taylor; Old West: Carroll O. Money, Dick Owen; Mangum: Pete Gerns; Battle-Vance-Pettigrew: Russell G. Baldwin.

Write-in ballots are expected to have played an important part in the elections, due to the unexpectedly light nominations. Results have been posted on dormitory bulletin boards, and will be released in the DTH tomorrow.

RABBI FEINSTEIN TO PREACH

Rabbi Abraham Feinstein of Chattanooga, Tennessee, will preach the sermon this evening at Hillel Sabbath services in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial at 7:30.

DR. BENJAMIN MAYS

Religion Week Closes Tonight

Dr. Benjamin Mays Will Give Address

"Christianity and the Christian" is the topic to be discussed by Dr. Benjamin Mays, president of Morehouse college in Atlanta, Ga., in the last of the Religion in Life programs tonight at 8:30 in Hill hall.

Dr. Mays is not only one of the leaders of the Negro race in America today but is a prominent and respected religious leader as well. He is a member of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation as well as a vice-president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America and of the World Student Service Fund.

He came to Morehouse college after serving as dean of the school of religion of Howard university in Washington from 1934 to 1940. Previous to that time he directed a study of Negro churches in the United States under the auspices of the Institute of Social and Religious research. At one time he served as national student YMCA secretary.

Previous to Dr. Mays' address Hillel evening services will be held at 7:30. Rabbi Abraham Feinstein will be the speaker. Father Edmond D. Benard will speak to Catholic students in Gerrard hall at the same time.

Humanities Lecture Series Will Present Samuel Selden

In line with its policy of presenting one faculty member per quarter, the Division of Humanities will sponsor Dr. Samuel Selden, head of the dramatic arts department, in a lecture on "The Art of the Actor," next Tuesday evening at 8:30 in Gerrard hall.

The author of many books on theatre techniques, Dr. Selden is the second speaker in the 1946-47 humanities series of lectures by professors in the literature and arts departments of the University.

For the past six summers Dr. Selden has directed the production of Paul Green's "Lost Colony." Before coming to Chapel Hill in 1927 as technical director of the Playmakers he worked in the New York theatre.

Educated at Yale and Columbia, Selden has been active in summer stock companies, particularly with the famous Provincetown playhouse on Cape Cod.

The Division of Humanities stated that Dr. Selden's talk, and all of the division's lecture series are open to the public.

At Opposite Ends

Most of the students on this campus who take an active interest in local and national affairs seem to align themselves very definitely at the extreme opposite ends of each and every question. Then they begin taking wild verbal swings at each other.

Most recent typical example of this vigorous campus attitude expresses itself in the numerous wild letters this office has received recently on the racial question. We have printed several of these letters in the last few weeks.

Two prime individual examples are the letter that appeared yesterday and the one we are printing in the "Letters" column today. Yesterday's letter expressed a reactionary, bigoted, nonprogressive viewpoint. Today's goes whole hog in the other direction, is extremely radical.

While this newspaper is strongly on record as favoring improved racial relations and equal opportunities for the Negro in education and elsewhere, we feel that such improvements must come about slowly and gradually through a thorough understanding of the problem and its varied aspects. It cannot be done by closing one's mind to the situation. Nor can it be done by suggesting immediate, radical changes that can only create a furore.

One must take cognizance of the fact that all changes in the Negro's status in the south always have been, and will be, made slowly. The nature of the situation is such that it is a ticklish problem. What has become firmly imbedded in the life of the south for over a century cannot be changed overnight. Some letters received from the "due south" group show how narrow-minded their thinking can be.

Only through education and cooperation will any progress be made. What progress we have made so far in the matter has come as a result of that, not from any wild, unintelligent radical campaigns.

We feel that the campus letter-writers who represent both extreme right and left on the matter are accomplishing nothing but make themselves look ridiculous in the eyes of the straight-thinking students on this campus. We hope that those interested in the problem stop writing wild and bigoted letters and start thinking intelligently of a long-term plan for progress. The verbal dynamite many students are playing with will hurt no one but themselves—and the group they are supporting.

No Laughing Matter

Newspapers yesterday carried a picture which showed some students of the strike-bound Buffalo, New York schools standing on the sidelines and watching their teachers as they paraded in a picket line.

It took a lot of courage. The teachers made repeated demands for pay raises. The demands were not met. Delay upon delay began to fray nerves. And so they struck. It is pretty clear that the teachers did not want to strike. They had to strike, and that takes a lot of courage.

The teacher's situation is different from that of the ordinary worker. The teacher cannot submerge himself within the group as easily. His position in the community is theoretically possessed of more dignity. He is supposed to set an example; wear decent clothes, entertain occasionally, contribute to a multitude of charities, participate in every function of the school. The teacher has to put up a good front, a front which is founded upon four years of college or more for the holders of the "A" certificates.

Yet the teacher gets less than the average illiterate hired hand in many cases.

And when a recalcitrant city administration or state administration will not give the requested raises, he has to strike.

And in the middle of the messy process, his students stand on the streets and look at him; the guy who was preaching dignity and honor and social responsibility is parading around and around some crummy building, holding a sign in his hands which says: "The Board of Education of Ersatz is unfair to Teachers."

And there was lots of snow in Buffalo. Noses were cold and watery, and feet were icy, and some of the students laughed.

The Third Part....

Daniels Hits Virginia Tax; Lenoir Hall Going to the Dogs

By Jimmy Wallace

Jonathan Daniels, Executive Editor of the Raleigh News and Observer is currently involved in an interchange with Governor Tuck of Virginia.

Virginians are subject to the poll tax. There is some talk of the abolition of same, and many of the Va. politicians appear opposed to such a radical step toward democracy. Removal of the poll tax in one step would probably precipitate a flood of people at the polls next time. This cannot be tolerated. The change must be gradual; over a period of, say, 100 years.

Mr. Daniels called Virginia "the cradle and the grave of democracy." Mr. Tuck called Mr. Daniels a "frustrated North Carolina politician." Mr. Daniels then answered that he thought Virginians could shoulder the responsibilities of democracy if the Virginia politicians were not afraid to have that happen.

As you know, North Carolina does not have the poll tax as a requirement for voting. There have been no consequences of this benevolence on the part of North Carolina politicoes except that many people vote who otherwise would not. Perhaps the Virginian politicians consider this a bad situation. Apparently, North Carolina politicians do not. At least, the people do not.

The poll tax was originally directly primarily against negroes who might otherwise get up enough interest to vote. Mr. Daniels pointed out that the tax has kept more whites away from the polls than it has negroes. Mr. Daniels talks sense.

Lenoir Hall has many fine features. It has a nice colonial exterior, a nice hallway, pretty paint, excellent facilities for the preparation and serving of food, a competent staff, etc.

One would think, therefore, that it would be a fine eating place. But the place has literally gone to the dogs. In fact, for many years, the place has been noted for its high quota of dogs. We have an abundance of every species in Chapel Hill. Now, understand that I have no objection against dogs as such. In fact, I love dogs.

But, I do object to having some drooling canine closely observing me when I eat. I don't like homo sapiens who do that. Not that I don't like homo sapiens. I love homo sapiens. And it isn't that my manners are so bad either. I'm just self-conscious.

When some poor, mangy K-9 wanders up and wipes his gooey lower jaw on my napkin—well, I lose my appetite. It would seem that the dog catcher of Chapel Hill, if Chapel Hill has a dog catcher, should station himself at Lenoir during meal hours, or else a person should be employed by the establishment for the express purpose of shooing dogs away.

Some enterprising student might capture some of these loose pooches and enter them in a dog show. As I said, we have every breed here. And then some. Due to the rapid breeding between Dachshunds and Great Danes, Blood Hounds and Fox Terriers, Mexican Hairlesses and Russian Wolfhounds, etc., we have many new strains in Chapel Hill which would be the delight of dog lovers everywhere.

This breeding, of course, is not a private affair. And of course, one cannot change the mind of a dog once it is made up. Just as one has a similar difficulty with homo sapiens occasionally. But the latter group is more apt to satisfy its concupiscence without an audience. It can be truly said, therefore, that the University provides a well-rounded education. Especially in the visual department.

Solemn-faced alumni who come to University convocations are given as an added attraction, and to add humor to a very dry speech, the privilege of seeing dogs chase each other down the aisles, across the stage, around the speaker's feet, etc.

Proud parents who come to see their offspring graduate usually hear the mating call of some beagle during the latter half of the invocation. They usually see the logical result of same when some Dean is calling off the names of the A. B. candidates in Journalism.

It's a little-known fact, but Davie was led unerringly to the Poplar which bears his name by his faithful companion Shep, a flea-bitten cur who also had attended the Mecklenburg convention.

Letters To The Editor

All letters must be typewritten, double-spaced, under 300 words in length, and signed by the writer. Writer's name will be withheld on request, but letters must be signed. The Daily Tar Heel reserves the right to present the letters as it wishes and to delete all matter it considers libelous.

Too Much

Dear Sir:

I have sat back and watched the current argument in the DTH letters concerning interracial education long enough, but I can sit back no longer. Mr. Bernard Plemmons' letter of several issues ago was a bad enough example of what ignorance and prejudice has done to the South, but the letter in yesterday's paper from Donald B. Barnes was too much.

Mr. Barnes has the nerve to take such pride in his blind and bigoted stand. "I stand due South," he says—a better phrase would have been, "I stand with my head buried up to the neck in mud."

"The two people are different," says Mr. Barnes. "The Negro will never become socially equal by declaring himself so—." Yes, they are different. Their skin is of a much darker shade than ours. But you can stop there with your differences, because it is scientifically proven, Mr. Barnes, that the intellectual capacity of the Negro is as great as, and sometimes in excess of, that of the white man. But with people such as you in existence, the opportunity for any Negro to make use of his intelligence is practically nil.

"Discrimination and segregation are logical and necessary," you say. But you neglected to say why, Mr. Barnes. Is it because you feel so inferior to everyone that you have to set at least yourself up as better than somebody? Yes, I guess it is logical and necessary for your kind; logical and necessary if your mentality is not to be shown up for what it is—outranked and outgraded by everyone, including all Negroes.

Yes, I would go to school with Negroes and be proud of it. And I would sit beside them in the movies, and dance with them far, far sooner than I would be seen in your company, Mr. Barnes. I do relish the thought that the Negro is my equal and in many cases my superior. But I also relish the thought that you are not worthy enough for any Negro to wipe his feet upon.

JOY BLUMENTHAL.

DTH Review....

Good Writing Is Top Feature Of Current Carolina Magazine

By R. Haskell Hamilton

Seldom does a literary reviewer get a chance to fulfill every journalist's dream of a clear-cut "scoop." But, this morning that ambition is to be fulfilled.

The editors of the Carolina Magazine do not know it, but the February issue now on the campus is a decidedly distinguished issue in the traditional filled history of the Magazine. This will come as a complete surprise to all but a few in Chapel Hill but this reviewer, filled with admiration for the poetry unobtrusively printed on page 20 of the current issue; has ascertained that page 20 contains the printed debut of the talented daughter of one of America's greatest poets, Helga Sandburg Toman; daughter of Carl Sandburg. It is certainly an honor for the Magazine to be the first to publish Helga Sandburg Toman's poetry.

Choosing to present her work strictly on its merits, and not as Carl Sandburg's daughter, Helga Toman's three poems were submitted to the editors of the Carolina Magazine as "poetry of a North Carolina resident. . .a citizen of Flat Rock, N. C." It is a tribute to both the editors and the poet that her work was recognized for what it is; first rate, modern, young American poetry. Thus is launched what may easily be a distinguished career in American letters. It is my opinion that Helga Toman's poetry is forceful, and at times musically expressive.

The three poems, "Words to my Spaniel," "Maybe 15MPH For the Candlestick Maker," and "Whisper," are, of course, somewhat developmental but they represent the promising bud of what may easily flower into a decidedly gifted American poet in the Sandburg tradition.

Skipping the cover of the Mag, about which the less said the better since it is one of the poorest in a long time; and considering the rest of the Mag it's my opinion that the current issue is a powerful promise of what can be done when the editors get the experience to stabilize their magazine. The make-up is attractive and eye-catching; but there's a great gap between making a Magazine and getting the proper photos and illustrations to fit into the make-up. John Davis' drawing is bad, and not worth the price of a two-page cut.

Opening story "Sparklers" by Nina Lide is a well-written brutally realistic story of China. Miss Lide is a newcomer to the campus literary scene, and certainly a welcome one. I, for one, am waiting to read more of her fiction. Ralph Hyde's "The First Law" is a well-drawn short story that could have been turned into a first rate story with a little cutting, careful editing and better choice of words.

Dorothy Dashiell's "The Little People" is an interesting psychological vignette. Certainly, there can be little wrong with Miss Dashiell's approach to her heroine's reaction; but if Phillip Russell's old rule of "throwing away the first third of your story," had been followed it would have improved "The Little People," fifty percent. Suggestion for reading; start at the fifth paragraph and I think you'll find the story much more poignant.

I am surprised at the editors for printing Richard W. Seaver's "And You Too, Martin." At best, it is a pale re-hash of a hackneyed theme that has already been done in the Magazine. It is not suspenseful and not a well-developed story. Suggestion to the editors: check your files for Mike Beam's 1942 story to see how it was written the first time the story appeared in the Carolina Magazine. Such an error is well-nigh inexcuseable.

Art Golby's "Ten Minute Break," completes the unusually fine selection of poetry. I particularly liked the meaningful, poetically expressed thoughts. Maybe that's because millions of us have been in the same reflective mood during a ten minute drill break; and consequently the poetry has reality, for us drill happy ex-soldiers.

"And Agamemnon Dead" by Dick Stern catches the mood and thoughts of a music-listener realistically. I enjoyed Mr. Stern's story, immensely, because of it's good writing and style.

The Traditional Carolina Parade was well-done. The editors are certain to be complimented for this continuously improving feature. This month's is the best of a steadily progressing series. In fact, it couldn't have been done better had Time Magazine's reporters covered the campus scene, during the past month.

Finally, a word of praise for Jud Kinberg's informative, factual Timely Mag Man of the Month article on Earl Wynn.

All in all, the current Magazine fails to live up to the expectations some of us had for the publication. But, there's still enough talent, ability and work reflected in it so as to make us hold on to our original hopes for a top-drawer, all-around monthly campus magazine, someday soon.

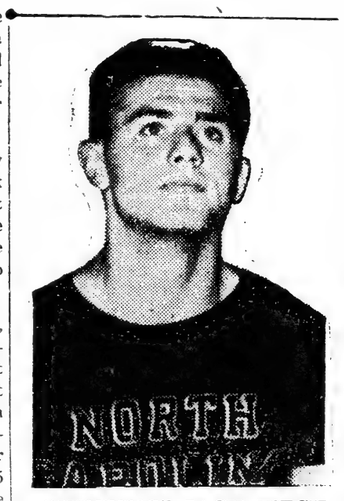
White Phantoms Meet Duke At Durham Tonight



Jayvees Drop First Contest Of Season

Ft. Bragg Quint Stops "B" Cagers 57-55 In Double Overtime Tilt; Fitch Hits 25

By Gil McLeod

Carolina's junior varsity cagers, playing their last game of the season, tasted defeat for the first time this year Wednesday night at Fort Bragg when they bowed to the 4th Signal Battalion quint, 57-55, in a tilt that was not decided until the last 10 seconds of a second overtime period.

Ray Burger, former Indiana State cage star, stripped the net with a long set shot as the minute hand showed nine seconds to go, and the final gun sounded before the Tar Heels had a chance to score again.

"JUMPING" JACK FITCH
... buckets 25 points

The outstanding star of the closely fought encounter was Carolina's Jack Fitch, whose deadly push shots kept the Jayvees on even terms with the service quint until Burger came through with his game-winning two pointer.

In amassing a total of 25 points, Fitch dropped in the last eight Jayvee tallies of the first half, the last nine of the second half, and the last four of the first overtime period. With 30 seconds remaining in the regulation game, he sank the two-pointer that tied the score, 44-44, and with 15 seconds to go in the first overtime period, his long push shot again knotted the count, this time 49 to 49.

High scorer for the Army five was Joe Lowther, with 17 points, and running a close second was Bill Cassing, with 15. Fred Swartzburg came in second for the juniors with a total of 12 tallies, 10 of them coming from foul shots.

The service quint won the game from the free throw line, surpassing the Jayvees' impressive mark of 15 out of 19 foul shots with an even more impressive 17 out of 19 average.

The Hayworthmen entered Wednesday night's game with a record of 13 consecutive triumphs.

The box score:

Jayvees (55)		Fort Bragg (57)
Swartzburg (12)	f	(17) Lowther
Wagner (6)	f	(10) Hinger
Bailey (2)	c	(3) Beyers
Fitch (25)	g	(15) Cassing
Nyimicz (6)	g	(12) Burger

Substitutes: Jayvees — Weinstein (4). Fort Bragg—Handlin.

Halftime score: Jayvees 19, Fort Bragg 26.

Score of regulation game: Jayvees 44, Fort Bragg 44.

First overtime score: Jayvees 49, Fort Bragg 49.

Sprint, Hurdle Events May Out-Shine Distance Contests In Games Tomorrow

By Morty Schaap

The usually interest-drawing distance events may have to take a back seat to the sprint and hurdles when the annual Southern Indoor games get underway here tomorrow, for the numerous stars on hand promise to give thrills galore in the dash and timber-topping contests.

Competition in these speed events is expected to be keen and of the finest college calibre to be found anywhere in the country. These races are of the "swoosh" type as they are finished before the average fan realizes that they are underway.

Don Hansen, now competing for Rollins College, will be on hand to defend the 60-yard dash title he won last year as a member of the Cherry Point Marine outfit and he hopes to be able to better his 0:06.6 time.

Hansen will not be the only shining light in the sprint field as entries have been received from such speed merchants as Dick Ambrogi and "Pistol Pete" Williams of Navy, Ted Shultz and Dick Preyer of Carolina, Charlie Chambers of State, Walter Galliford of Virginia and Herb Appenzeller of Wake Forest, to mention only a few of the starters for this race.

The competition in the hurdles brings together the class of the South with a wide open field. Leading contenders in the high hurdle event are "Chunk" Simmons, Bob Morrow and Dick Taylor of North Carolina, Gordon Highfill of Duke, Bob Ennis, Florida, Jim Radliff and Spurr of South Carolina, Bill Mohler of Virginia and Chambers of State College. It is entirely possible, however, that the winner of this event has not been given mention with this year's crop of hurdlers, heads and shoulders above par anything can happen.

HEIDENNEICH (Tech) and SELIGMAN

The low hurdle event is also wide open with the leading candidate being Simmons, who was last year's winner. Most of the participants in the highs will double back to this event. Outstanding among the contenders are Ted Shultz of Carolina, DeLeon of Georgia, Georgia Tech's Dawles and Faggard of Mississippi.

The field for the Indoor Games this year is star-studded with four of last year's winners back to defend laurels. Along with Simmons and Hansen there are Ed Matthews of Maryland in the 440 and Doug Ausbon of Duke in the broad jump.

Plans have been all completed for this extravaganza, the South's best dressed sports event, with prospects of full stands when the starter calls the first event.

There are still some tickets left, however, and they are on sale at Woollen Gym at 75 cents for students and $1.50 for outsiders.

Second Place To Be Decided

Tar Heels Seeking Tenth Loop Victory

The long awaited return battle between the Duke Blue Devils and the White Phantoms of North Carolina will be held in the huge Duke indoor stadium tonight at 8 o'clock before a packed house of better than 9,000 red-hot basketball fans.

Tonight's contest will not only have the usual fervor that is shown by these two ancient rivals but an added incentive to either team in that the winner will have the honor of being seeded number two in the conference tourney which gets under way next Thursday at Duke.

The rejuvenated Tar Heel quintet will be after its eighth straight conference victory and an overall season loop mark of ten victories as against two losses.

Coach Tom Scott put the Tar Heels through a stiff drill yesterday afternoon to ready them for the revenge-seeking Devils. It was the highly underrated Carolina team which on February 17 in Woollen gym ended the Duke team's undefeated Southern conference string at eight, completely routing the men of Gerry Gerard.

The game was featured by the stellar offensive and defensive play of Nemo Nearman and the fine all-around play of Bob Paxton. Jim Hamilton, Jim White and Norm Kohler, who played all of the game except for the last minute and twenty seconds.

In order to repeat their triumph the Phantoms will have to stop the Duke scoring threat in the form of "Big Hook" Koffenberger, who has broken the Duke all time scoring record by pouring the ball through the hoop so far this season for a total of 390 markers. Other big guns in the Blue Devil attack are Bubber Seward and Garland Loftis, who can make trouble for any team when they get the range of the basket.

Probable starting lineups:

Carolina		Duke
Paxton	F	Koffenberger
Hamilton	F	Seward
Nearman	C	Collins
Kohler	G	Gordon
White	G	Loftis

Ringmen Square off Today In Conference Tournament

Five Colleges Slated to Be Represented As Thirty-Two Scrappers Appear on Card

(Special to Daily Tar Heel)

COLLEGE PARK, MD., Feb. 27—Four of Carolina's boxers arrived here late tonight and will have their first bouts in the Southern conference tournament tomorrow evening. The Tar Heels, who were hard hit by injuries during the season, do not have an entire team in the contest, but their quartet of representatives is given a good chance to upset favored Maryland and The Citadel.

Winn Impressive

Especially impressive of late has been the work of 155-pounder Al Winn who, despite his loss at the hands of experienced Army cadet Jack Dupree last Saturday, put up a terrific scrap, scoring again and again with his potent right hook. Winn will be matched against some well experienced ringmen but he is expected to come up with his usual good performance.

Flashy Bill Sunas, the Tar Heel 125-pounder has also been chosen to start in the Ritchie stadium encounter tomorrow night. Sunas was tabbed by Assistant Coach Bob Farris as one of the most improved men on the squad.

The other two Carolina fighters are Charlie Lambeth, in the 130-pound division, and Tony Payne, in the 145-pound bracket. Both of these boys have shown a tremendous drive which offsets their lack of experience.

Carolina Underdog

Of the five colleges which are represented, the Tar Heel squad has been given the underdog roll because of its none-too-impressive record of one win and five defeats. However, the Blue and White team has really shown a great improvement in the last week of workouts and few will be surprised to see one of the long-shots end up with a conference title.

Wrestlers Working Hard For Contest HereMondayNight

Only two more full-time workouts stand before the once-beaten Carolina wrestlers and their last meet of the regular season, which is slated for Woollen gym Monday night at 8 o'clock with Virginia.

The lineup for the Virginia meet will be the same as it was against Navy, with the possible exception of the 121-pound and heavyweight divisions. The 121-pound berth will go either to Irwin Smallwood or Doug Thompson, and the heavyweight position will be filled by either John Stoioff or Laurie Hooper.

Head Coach Chuck Quinlan sent the Tar Heel matmen through accelerated conditioning drills yesterday and the day before, and the same menu is expected for this afternoon as the Tar Heels get set to defend their position as the No. 1 team in the south.

Virginia, a non-conference team, was defeated by State 17-13 in a match last week, but the Cavaliers turned around and dumped Duke 22-11 the following night. Carolina will be favored to take the contest, but the visitors comprise one of the toughest teams the Tar Heels have faced all year.

Carolina, undefeated in six matches with southern foes, dropped its first meets of the season to Navy last weekend by a 28-6 score, and this match Monday will be the last for the local grapplers until the Southern conference tourney which will be staged in Lexington, Va., March 7-8.

Duke Elevates Lewis To Manager Position

Durham, Feb. 27.—(UP)— Duke university has named a new business manager of athletics. He is Hubert M. (Red) Lewis, who has been a member of the athletic staff since 1937. He will succeed Dayton Dean, who was business manager for 15 years until he resigned last January 1.

Lewis was one of the greatest distance runners ever to attend Duke.

Kappa Sigs Down Sigma Chis To Take Frat Playoff Lead

Everett Eliminates Emanons, 25-11; Zetes, Chi Phis Also Gain Victories

Kappa Sigma No. 3 took an undisputed lead in the frat division of the mural cage playoffs yesterday afternoon as it dumped the powerful Sigma Chi No. 1, 24-22, in a thrill-packed ball game.

It was Big Bill Olsen who paced the victors with nine tallies and played a bangup game on the backboards, while Bob Langley led the way for the losers with 10 points to his credit.

Zeta Psi No. 1 won its second straight game after getting off to a shaky start Tuesday, as it down hapless Beta No. 1, 20-15, while Chi Phi No. 2 was hanging up its first tourney win by downing Phi Delt No. 2, 47-39.

In the dorm finals Everett won the right to face the Grads for the division championship by virtue of a rousing 25-11 win over Emanons with Len Szafrayn turning the top performance. Everett with one playoff loss blotting its record must beat the undefeated Grads in their clash this afternoon and then again Monday to win the tourney. A defeat today would eliminate them and establish the Grads as loop champs.

The frat division still has two more days of play before completion of its round robin tourney with each of the six clubs having a pair of encounters to be reeled off. The current standings, including yesterday's games, are as follows:

Kappa Sigma (3-0); Zeta Psi (2-1); Sigma Chi (2-1); Chi Phi (1-2); Phi Delt (1-2) Beta (0-3).

Final Swim Trials

The mural department announced yesterday that this afternoon will be the last day for time trials in both the dormitory and fraternity divisions of the mural swimming meet which is slated to get underway this coming Monday afternoon.

All managers are asked to get their teams down to qualify if they have not already done so, as no entries will be accepted after today.

Olympics To Stay On Amateur Basis

Chicago, Feb. 27.—(UP)— The United States Olympic association "will never yield" in its stand against the paying of athletes in Olympic competition. This comes from Avery Brundage, president of the association, who says, "If practice of making professionals out of amateurs goes far enough, I think all the amateurs will get together and form their own amateur league."

There have been requests to the Olympic committee for authorization to pay athletes who lose time from their regular jobs while participating in Olympic competition. This is termed, "Broken time" payment. But Brundage says, "I don't believe the international committee will change its rules to permit broken time athletes to compete."

NCAA REPRESENTATIVE

Hartford, Conn., Feb. 27—(UP)— Holy Cross college was chosen today as the New England representative to the N.C.A.A. basketball tournament to be held at New York next month. The Crusaders have won 21 games and lost three so far this season.

Dolphins Prepare For Final Meets

With their final dual meet and the Southern conference championship remaining on the slate for next week, the Blue Dolphins settled down to their final week of workouts yesterday following their impressive triumph over Virginia Wednesday night.

Coach Dick Jamerson's charges go after the conference dual meet crown next Wednesday when they journey to Durham to oppose Duke's Devilfish. Unbeaten thus far in three league tilts the Dolphins will be favored over Duke as they strive for their sixth success of the season. The locals have been defeated twice, by Georgia Tech and Navy.

Then, on March 7 and 8, the Carolina swimmers play host to the rest of the circuit in the annual conference tank championships held in Bowman Gray pool. N. C. State and Carolina loom as the probable co-favorites for the meet, with William and Mary also rating as a strong contender.

Students Keep on Repeating It's New York Dear Watson

BOB WATSON

By Dave Owens

New York city seems to be the mecca for students and faculty members who leave Chapel Hill on weekends and holidays. That is the way Bob Watson, director of Graham Memorial's travel agency, sums it all up. Since its beginning in October of last year, the agency has secured reservations to the "big town" for almost half the 750 customers it has served since then.

"But there are many calls for other places," said Watson. "Miami and other Florida havens, for instance, are quite popular with travelers."

Unique Service

The Graham Memorial travel agency, giving free service to its customers, is unique to college students all over the nation. "As far as I know, it is the only agency of its type in any college in the country," Bob said.

Loctated in room 211 on the second floor of Graham Memorial, the Student Union agency is a beehive of activity. Watson has his hands full keeping wires busy from 1 until 5 o'clock each afternoon except for a Wednesday lab. From as far south as Miami, as far west as Salt Lake city, and as far east as Stockholm, Watson has either secured reservations or dispensed information concerning travel. His wide personal knowledge of trains and schedules, coupled with endless supplies of printed last-minute timetables, insures prospective travelers of the best possible information.

Quick Approval

Watson's idea for a college travel agency met with a quick approval from Martha Rice and the Graham Memorial directors last October. The students or faculty members wishing to make a trip merely tell Bob when they wish to go and by what mode of transportation. Watson takes care of all arrangements, leaving the traveler free to divert his thoughts to other things until laying the cash on the line when he picks up his ticket and reservation.

"If students would get their prospective spring holidays trips lined up now it would be much better for all concerned," said the amiable agent. "Reservations will be much easier to get now than two days before train or plane time."

Two Miles and 360 Years Away . . . .

New 'Lost Colony' Established in Barracks For Actors from Paul Green Dramatization

By Sigsbee Miller

Roanoke island, which immortalized itself by losing a colony, bag and baggage, back in 1587, now has another one—about two miles and 360 years removed from the sixteenth century effect of Sir Walter Raleigh.

Carolina's Playmakers, about 75 of them, account for over half of the new colony's population, and their director, Samuel Selden (who, by no coincidence, is also director of Paul Green's symphonic drama, "The Lost Colony") is the modern Sir Walter. The rest of the inhabitants are Broadway professionals and members of the Westminister College choir, who complete the cast of the Green drama.

Up until last summer the 200-odd non-native members of "The Lost Colony" cast and technical staff had lived in Manteo, two miles from the waterside amphitheater where the play is presented each summer. With resumption of the play last summer after a four-year lapse, Selden was faced with a twentieth century colonization problem brought on by the housing shortage. The Manteo Naval Air station, decommissioned but still in good repairs, was the solution.

The "artists colony" was established early last June. Barracks were converted into single rooms for unmarried players and officers' quarters became commodious family apartments. The new version of Roanoke island colonization had much in common with the Elizabethan effort.

"We employed a sort of regimentation to keep our colony going," Selden recalls. "The company was divided into details and there were various services, such as supply and operation. Each small unit had its squad leader."

Artistic talent was rampant and soon began to evidence itself in various forms. One staff member, of more than ordinary proficiency with the brush and pallette, relieved the drab Navy walls with murals. Dancing classes were started and were closely followed by classes in dramatics and voice as the "exchange of talents" idea grew.

"I sit through every performance," he says, "and jot down criticisms in my little black book. They usually aren't very important."

Beginning July 1, the play will be presented five nights a week and will continue through Labor Day. Several changes in the script have been under discussion but they will remain in the tentative stage until some time next month, when Selden and Green will get together to iron out the details of the 1947 production.

The proposed changes include a full-scale Indian attack in the first part of the play, and a heavenly lament, to be produced with special sound equipment heretofore unavailable, when the colonists file off the stage to their mysterious fates in the final scene.

Selden is making his first concession to the elements this summer. Although "The Lost Colony" has been rained out only seven times in 275 performances, rain shelters will be erected for the 1947 audiences.

University Faces Communism Inquiry

House Un-American Activities Group To Hold Probe, States Durham Paper

By Ed Joyner

The House Un-American Activities committee has drawn a bead on the University as the target for an investigation of Communistic activities, according to a news article printed in the Durham Herald yesterday.

Written by Roulhac Hamilton of the Herald Washington bureau, the report said the information was "learned reliably in Washington Thursday afternoon."

Begin in Several Weeks

Hamilton reported that the committee is planning to investigate allegations of Communistic activity at the University but that there was no indication when the investigation would begin or how broad its scope might be. It was believed that it would probably be several weeks at least before the probe would get underway.

No comment concerning the report was immediately available from officials of the University yesterday as President Frank Graham had been called to Charlotte to serve as a pallbearer in the funeral of the late Duncan Tillett, well known banker of that city. Controller W. D. Carmichael, Jr., was in Raleigh for the day.

Investigated Twice Before

Unofficial sources in South building recalled that the University had twice before been the scene of investigations for alleged Communistic activities. Both investigations, conducted by the Dies committee in 1941 and 1942, failed to turn up any evidence in support of the allegations.

Roulhac Hamilton, the newsman who uncovered the investigation plans in Washington, is the son of J. G. Hamilton, director of the Southern Historical collection of the University.

Red Cross Fund To Start Drive

Solicitors to Ask Campus Donations

Today marks the opening of the annual fund-raising campaign of the American Red Cross.

The drive on the campus will be under the direction of Johnnie Clampitt and Nonnie Morris. Clampitt stated that chairmen for each dormitory and fraternity have been appointed, and in addition a solicitor has been named for each dormitory floor.

Simultaneously with the campus canvass town residents will have an opportunity to give to the fund. Merchants of Chapel Hill have already indicated their desire to get behind the campaign.

No Contribution Booths

Campus contributions will be handled only through Clampitt's solicitors. There will be no booths on University grounds.

Said Clampitt, "Once a student has been approached for a contribution, he can rest assured that is all that will be asked of him."

For the benefit of students not reached by the committee's solicitors, there will be cans in the Y and the two Scuttlebutts where small change may be deposited.

This year's campaign will begin today and last until next Saturday, March 8.

Plan Now Being Considered To Pick Up All Stray Dogs

By Bill Sexton

City-wide elimination of stray dogs may be instituted in an effort to prevent any possible spread of rabies, it was learned yesterday evening. The elimination campaign, expected to be carried out by the Chapel Hill Police department, is being considered by town officials following the discovery that a dog owned by Prof. W. E. Caldwell of 412 E. Rosemary had died of hydrophobia.

Under a plan recommended by Dr. S. A. Nathan, Chapel Hill veterinarian, any dog found roaming city streets would be caught and quarantined for a period of four days. If at the end of the four-day wait no one had claimed the dog as a pet, it would be destroyed. The plan has not yet been approved.

Inoculation Clinic

A definite measure against rabies, an emergency inoculation clinic for pets, will be held in the high school building next Saturday at 2 p.m. Cost of anti-rabies immunization, $1.50, will be shared by dog owners participating and the county health board.

Caldwell's dog died Thursday night after five days' observation by Dr. Nathan, and examination of the dog's head yesterday afternoon by state health authorities in Raleigh confirmed the infection.

It is not believed that any persons had been bitten by the pet, but Caldwell's family is undergoing treatment as a precautionary measure. A far more serious threat, according to Dr. Nathan, is the possibility that other dogs had been infected. One animal is definitely known to have been bitten by Caldwell's dog, and is now under quarantine.

The State Board of Health announced yesterday that a black and tan campus mongrel which had bitten at least five cycle-riding students was not infected by rabies. After many complaints, the dog was killed a week ago by police and sent to Raleigh for examination. There was no trace of hydrophobia.

STRALEY SPEAKS TOMORROW

Dr. Joseph W. Straley will lead a forum discussion tomorrow morning on the subject, "Is World Federalism the Answer to One World or None?" Sponsored by a group of students interested in "the Christian implications of the Atomic Age," the panel will be held in the Baptist church at 9:45.

Frame Building Construction Work Starts Beside Library

Construction of the first of the temporary frame buildings to be erected on the campus got under way yesterday as workmen laid down the floor for the reading room addition to the library on the west side of the main library building.

Five truck loads of the dismantled army structures had made the two-day trip from Camp Forrest in Tullahoma, Tenn., yesterday afternoon. The first load arrived Wednesday with two more coming in Thursday and another two today.

Parts of Others Included

Parts of two other units besides the library adjunct were included in the first loads. These sections were parts of the second library building and of the Naval Science building to be set up near the NROTC armory.

C. J. Anderson, construction foreman for the J. A. Jones construction company, said that the first building might be completed by the end of next week. Wall sections of the library unit which could have been erected yesterday were left off for fear winds over the week-end would blow them down, Anderson said.

Twenty-two men are now at work on the project and more are expected to report for work next week. The entire project will be completed in six months.

University Party Announces Results of Primary Polling

Gerns, Taylor, Owen, McCurnin, Hamilton, Sink Nominated for Student Legislature

By Chuck Hauser

Much spirit was shown in the election activities of several of the dormitories participating in the University Party's primary for student legislature representative held last Thursday evening in Manly, Mangum, Lewis, Steele, Old West, and Battle-Vance-Pettigrew dormitories.

Mangum dormitory led the list with 72 votes being cast. Forty-six went to Pete Gerns, who took an easy victory over his closest opponent, Floyd Jones. Gerns is a junior from Canton, Ohio.

Taylor Wins in Lewis

Winners in other dormitories:

Manly: Leo Patrick McCurnin, sophomore from New Orleans, 30 votes out of 47; Battle-Vance-Pettigrew: Jack Hamilton, sophomore from Smithfield, 33 votes out of 58; Steele: Bill Sink, sophomore from Thomasville, 19 votes out of 35.

The winners in each of the six dormitories will be placed on the University party ticket for representatives to the Student Legislature to be voted on in the student body elections to be conducted in May, stated Alex Davis, University party chairman.

VETERANS OPEN HOUSE

Members of the Pi Beta Phi and Delta Delta Delta sororities and all the town girls will be entertained by the Veterans club Tuesday night in their last open house of the quarter.

Candlelight Room Holds Open House

The Candlelight room of Graham Memorial will play host to all students and visitors at an open house this evening from 8:30 until 12. All students are invited without restrictions and a special invitation is extended to the out-of-town spectators to the Annual Southern Indoor games in Woollen Gymnasium.

The Room will feature the Stardusters, a combo of campus musicians who will furnish music for dancing.

Room Reservations

Yesterday's announcement in the Daily Tar Heel concerning room reservations for the summer term was applicable to women students only. After today women student's rooms cannot be guaranteed, but this does not mean that no more room reservations can be made for the summer term. If a woman student wants preference as to dormitory space, she must have made the reservation before today.

Any woman students desiring further information concerning room reservations should contact the dean's office without delay.

Duke Sorority To Be Guests of Monogram Club

The Monogram club will entertain the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority of Duke university here tomorrow afternoon between 2:30 and 5 o'clock, President Jim Camp announced yesterday.

Barter Theater to Appear Here Again

Virginia Group Returns March 10

By Harry Snowden

The Barter Theatre of Virginia, only professional stage organization in the entire South, will make a return engagement in Memorial hall on March 10 under the sponsorship of the Carolina Dames club. Under the direction of Robert Porterfield the group will present George Bernard Shaw's brilliant satire on war, "Arms and The Man." Tickets for the production go on sale this morning in the YWCA and Ledbetter-Pickard's.

Written more than half a century ago, "Arms and The Man" was last seen of Broadway in 1908 with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fountanne in the leading roles. It is considered one of the classic comedies of the modern theatre.

Concerns Swiss Soldiers

The story concerns a Swiss professional soldier, temporarily engaged by the Serbians in a war with Bulgaria. A fugitive, he seeks refuge in the Petkoff home, falls in love with Raina, affianced to a Bulgarian officer, Serguis.

Glamour girl of the Barter players is Chaucy Horsley, featured actress in their coming production, "Arms and the Man."

To Give Shaw Play, 'Arms and the Man'

It is the story of the professional soldier as compared to the temporary or war-time soldier and its barbed lines are more apropos today than when written.

Vegetarian George Bernard Shaw is reputed to be the only playwright to refuse a Virginia ham as royalty payment from the Barter Theater in return for permission to include the satire in the Barter repertory schedule.

Carolinians will remember the Theatre for its excellent production of "Much Ado About Nothing" in January. Chaucy Horsley, Herbert Nelson, and Tom McDermott will star in this new production.

Not Without Fault

Following the controversial "Cheat Compleat" picture story reprinted from the Texas University Ranger in a recent issue of Life, the AVC on the Texas campus conducted a poll in order to see how many students cheated on examinations.

The results of the poll, taken at a university with a student body of over 15,000, showed that 53 per cent of the students cheat. The types of cheating were broken down as follows:

The cheating on homework, 50 per cent; on hour quizzes 45 per cent; on 10-minute quizzes, 38 per cent; on final exams, 28 per cent; and of term papers, 13 per cent.

The majority of students questioned gave "unfair quizzes" and "incompetent teaching" as the two main reasons for their cheating. But gave no indication as to who was the judge of the unfairness and incompetnence.

Which would indicate that college students across the nation today are not averse to cheating, regardless of their reasons. If one were able to examine the situation more closely, we believe the results would show that those students who cheat through a college education are the ones who would be unable to pass ordinarily, the poor students who cannot adapt themselves to college and have to resort to unethical means of doing passing work.

Although we believe that less cheating takes place at those schools employing the honor system than at others continuing to use the system of proctors, we are sure that a similar survey honestly taken on our own campus, would prove most startling.

Cheating takes place at Carolina today—in spite of our honor system. While the percentage of students who cheat here is undoubtedly considerably less than 50 per cent, it is still too high.

As Dr. Painter, Texas' president stated after the survey, "If 10 per cent of the students were to take a pledge to report to the proper authorities all cases of cheating seen by them, none but the most skillful miscreants would escape after one semester."

Students at Carolina take such a pledge. They are on their honor not to cheat and to report all cases of cheating. The system works, but not well enough. Only when all of us realize that the success of such a system depends on the integrity and honor of each individual student, only when we outlaw cheating as a disgraceful, dishonorable act and cease overlooking it as "none-of-our-business"—then and only then will cheating be completely eliminated.

For Future Reference

It has become increasingly apparent this winter that basketball, one of America's fastest growing sports, has become too big for its pre-war pants.

Basketball games are drawing overflowing crowds all over the country. In many instances, many college students are unable to see their team play all of its games because the gymnasiums are too small to seat all of the students.

The result of trying to put too many students in too small a gym reached its ultimate climax last week when a section of bleachers in the Purdue university field house collapsed, killing two students and injuring nearly 200.

The accident at Purdue could have happened in any one of a number of college gymnasiums and could have been much more tragic. The fact that it did happen should be ample warning to other schools. Which is one of the main reasons the Carolina-State game was cancelled last week.

The bleachers in our own gymnasium are comparatively safe, but cheers which involve students stamping their feet in unison should be outlawed immediately.

Our present home basketball season is over but we would like to respectfully suggest to the Athletic association that right now is not too early to start considering the seating and other problems that will unquestionably arise next year when the student body will be larger than it is now.

Early Political Action Is Good

Regardless of Party Disputes

By Eddie Allen

It is a foregone conclusion that the average Carolina student is a firm adherent of the two-party system, i.t., one Friday night and one Saturday night. They carry that conviction over into their politics, too, with the result that recent party schisms in campus campaigns have been uniformly ill-fated.

The latest major split, of two elections back, saw a disgruntled UP group dismantle their soapbox and give birth to a third party. Other than its intriguing and oft-corrupted name, the UCP, it was singularly unsuccessful. Last spring there were several minor examples of traces being leaped, with more threat than deed, but the only impression made was a more tedious array of candidates.

All of which should serve as a sober warning to the Student Party that its internal grumblings should be given a Alka-Seltzer in the time fortunately left before the election sap rises in May. Otherwise the golden opportunity for organization presented to them by the flood of new students may turn to brass—and the University Party, whose wins always can be traced to their solid fraternity phalanx, may again take away their play.

Thursday's SP meeting, with both disputing forces represented, left something to be desired in co-ordination although it was impressive in turnout. Chairman Johnny Jones, a capable oiler of the campus political wheel, would do well to sand off that wheel's square corners in his party.

While the SP was writhing in its own family spat, they might have cast a worried eye at the UP's firm thrust into enemy territory by holding primaries in dorms Thursday. Such a move could be likened to a Republican move into the Solid South, to which the SP's usual dominance of the dorms can be compared. Just as a Southern swing to the GOP would be unheard of, the University party can hardly hope to tie up the non-frat group. But any support they can gain there is so much gravy, gravy which can pore over the bacon they will bring home in May if the SP's lines remain ragged.

All in all this unprecedentedly early action on the campus political front can only be regarded as a good sign, whatever the outcome of the elections. All too often, as has often been pointed out on these pages, students have found themselves roped into ballot by last-minute back-pounding in which real party differences, if any, were obscured.

Now, with the pot boiling full blast in February, not one student in the 7,000 can complain about not having a chance to know the score long before the time for him to mark down his X—on the ballot, that is.

Actions of World Federalists Confusing Many Americans

By Ed York

Agitation by the World Federalists and other organizations is confusing many Americans. The World Federalists demand immediate revision of the United Nations Charter. Without such revision, these pressure groups see no hope for the world.

Academic discussion is a sign of progress. But, these organizations have abandoned discussion. World Federalist propaganda of the type which has appeared in newspaper ads, spells "danger."

Our task is not revision of the U. N. Charter. Instead, we must make the Charter a living reality. Under the existing set-up, the door is wide open for movement toward real world government.

Revision of the Charter is not the central issue in the atomic energy wrangle. The Charter does not prevent the adoption of an international bill of rights.

If nations must wait for Charter revisions, every time they wish to achieve collective security, reduction of armaments or economic and social cooperation, the cause of world peace is lost. The hour is late. There is no time to waste on the sincere but unconstructive fault-finding of World Federalists.

Whether or not we like all the provisions of the Charter, we must use it now as an instrument to achieve our first objectives. It is true, for instance, that the big-power veto someday must be considerably softened. However, at this moment, Russia and many other nations still are unwilling to agree on doing away with the veto. An argument now on revision of the Charter might threaten the success of the United Nations.

The U. N. is not static. It should be an organization of dynamic action. It can be a real United Nations, if we support it.

What must we do to back up our United Nations? We should support progressive policies in the organization, such as:

1. A real international army now.

2. A string of strategic world "police stations" under Security Council control.

3. Immediate control of atomic energy along the lines of the Baruch proposals.

4. Trusteeship for dependent peoples.

5. An international bill of rights immediately.

6. Action by the U. N. economic and social council.

7. Action by the International Trade organization, the World Bank and Monetary Fund, the Food and Agriculture committee, to relieve world economic chaos.

Do we need to revise the U. N. Charter in order to take action on these fundamental issues; of course not. Courageous leadership by world leaders is the first step. However, the real answer lies in action by you and me—by the people all over the world. for peace in the world, where the problems are even greater, unless we have a government of the states of the world?

RUSSELL G. BALDWIN

Letters To The Editor

A New Idea

Dear Sir:

A new idea has come to our campus. With it has come a great opportunity as well as a grave responsibility. The idea of world government is not actually new since it was conceived some time ago, but this time it comes to us as a necessity, not as the dream it once was.

Did you know that a chapter of World Federalists was established on this campus recently. Do you know what World Federalists is? Whether your answer is yes or no to either of those questions, you need to know more about World Federalists. World Federalists, U.S.A. is a national organization which is advocating world government. On its Executive Council it has such men as Mark Van Doren and Stuart Haydon; for Honorary Directors it has Albert Einstein, Congressmen Chas. M. LaFollette and H. Jerry Voorhis, Senator Glen H. Taylor, and others; and, on the Advisory Board are Charles G. Bolte, Louis Bromfield, Thomas Mann, Emery Reves, Mary Roberts Rhinehart, Justice Owen J. Roberts, and many others. On the Advisory Board of World Federalists of N. C., we have our own Dr. Frank Graham, J. Melville Broughton, Dr. Clarence A. Poe, and Hon. John J. Parker.

The above list of believers should remove any doubts you may have had as to the qualification and the intent of World Federalists. It is an organization of selfish people who want to live until a natural death claims them. It is an organization of benevolent people who want others to have that same right to a natural death. It is aware, as are most of the intelligent people in the world, that the United Nations Organization will not, indeed, cannot, achieve world peace. U. N., in spite of what men think and hope, is just another League of Nations with a different name. True, it is an improvement over the old League of the first World War, but it has no chance of achieving world peace unless it is changed into a world government. Ask yourself this question, "If the thirteen original colonies had not united but remained independent nations, what kind of country would this be? No one can say for sure, but it is certain that we wouldn't have our present high standard of living and there would have been more than just one Civil War. Then, how can we hope

Investigating Committee Casts Conservative Eyes at Carolina

By Jud Kinberg

The pussy-footers and stand-patters have a new brickbat to wield over the head of liberal students at the University. During a break in their usually intensive witch-hunting expeditions, the members of the House Un-American Investigating Committee knocked their heads together and came up with the not too unique idea of investigating the University of North Carolina.

"So-called liberal thought, if not actual Communism," is what the committee hopes to find here, according to an unidentified Congressional member of the Un-Americaners. I think that the spy-boys won't even need a good dose of communism, just a pinch of liberalism will do for the investigators.

This interest in the University of North Carolina on the part of Washington solons is no sudden one. For as long as the school held any reputation for liberalism, the reactionaries in Congress were determined to purge it of teachers whose ideas had advanced beyond the Adam Smith-laissez faire stage. In the past, the legislators found very little to carp about. They will find even less this time.

For the truth is that most thinking at UNC would please the most critical conservative. We are still rolling along on the liberal reputation which was amassed during the exhilarating days of the New Deal. Then it was a popular thing this liberalism. Even a pink taint only made a man "interesting."

Today, the values have changed, and liberalism takes a man of courage. Roosevelt and the bright young men have been dispersed from Washington and in their stead we have the purile Trumanism and the spreading old-line Republicanism. And unfortunately, that has been reflected in our own administration.

The investigators are going to feel rather silly when they come down and meet the solid men who sit behind the solid desks at South Building. With the exception of a very few, notably Dr. Frank Graham, the South Building solons could probably give the Washington imports a few pointers on weeding out procedure.

As for the student body, it too will prove disappointing to the junketing Representatives if and when they come down. Probably the greatest resentment at this latest descent of the gods of reaction upon academic freedom will come from the Legislature. The local lawmakers probably feel that they could do the job as well as the Congressional ones. It's poaching on territory that the Ways and Means Committee seemed very prone to take over. Let's hope that the two groups don't get into a tussle about it, because we've started searching parties beating the hinterlands for that red man we saw last summer. After all we can't disappoint Washington.

Today's Question

Do you think the UVA fulfills a definite need for the veterans on the campus?

Answers

Yes. I consider the UVA a very good organization. It serves the veterans well, both socially and politically.—Moke Williams, Jr., Monroe.

Yes. I believe the UVA has successfully fulfilled its purpose. However, if the veterans would display a greater amount of interest the future capabilities of the organization would be unlimited.—George W. Sibold, Roanoke, Va.

Yes, if only in the way of social functions.—J. C. Brown, Waynesville.

Yes, I do think the UVA serves a very definite function on the campus in that it brings together a group whose ideas are more nearly parallel than some of the larger, more general veterans association.—Bruce D. Sapp, Rich Square.

Yes, it gives the veterans a feeling of security to know that they are together. It is also possible that we can get many benefits from it if we all stick together. The recreation hall that has been established is an example of some of the good things the club can do.—Frank W. Winfrie, Summerfield.

On a campus as large as the one here at Carolina a common meeting place is essential for the veterans. The UVA offers this and more. It sponsors dances and gives many non-fraternity men a chance to cultivate friends who make college the desired institution it is.—Jack Allen, Beaufort.

Yes. The UVA is a good organization for a person not in a fraternity.—Bill Penny, Nutley, N. J.

White Phantoms Dump Blue Devils Again, 57-47

Sport--Spins

THE FRONT OFFICE of Woollen gymnasium had almost reached a point of serenity late yesterday afternoon. Atheltic Director Bob Fetzer could even be found smiling, for his Southern Indoor games were fast approaching the kinetic stage. Only the final coaches' meetings and drawings remained and the annual classic would be under way.

"It looks like the highest class field we have ever had," Fetzer said cheerfully. "We have some awfully good men entering the races. And speaking of the boys entering the meet, I would like to extend a cordial and hearty welcome to all visiting athletes. We hope that they will enjoy their stay here."

There are something over 500 athletes in all scheduled to take part in the mammoth affair, and Coach Fetzer and all concerned have indicated that they expect it to be the best meet in the history of the Indoor games.

And as an added attraction, the victory ceremony for the college events will be revived, with Kingham Scott, noted WPTF organist, furnishing the musical refrains. Scotty, a well-known radio personage in Chapel Hill, will play the various school songs. Governor R. Gregg Cherry will be the honorary referee, and his secretary and several other members of the official party will be on hand for the gala track spectacle.

Coach Dale Ranson, the quiet director of Carolina runners, echoed Fetzer's opinion that it would likely be the best meet in history, and the genial Ranson thinks that his Tar Heels have about as good a chance as any to finish the winner.

"There are a lot of former winners back in several divisions," Ranson pointed out yesterday between breaths. "There will be especially good battles in the hurdles, sprints and one-mile run. However," said Ranson, "it is really hard to say which division will have better competition, for they will all be good. In fact, I don't think there will be a slack part of the collegiate slate."

Thus is the story for the biggest track event in the South. Circus day never had anything on the Indoor games here, and today is no exception. We join in the athletic department in extending a hearty welcome to all the visiting athletes.

Professor Carl Snavely will hold early examinations this morning, meaning of course that scrimmage session scheduled for Kenan stadium this morning. Snavely, the Silver Fox, has been working with new and old Tar Heels alike during the past few weeks and this morning will get a look at the progress.

A full-time scrimmage is planned, and the mock game will wind up football activity for the quarter. Snavely plans to get the ball rolling the first week of the spring term, however, with more new men out to try for positions on the 1947 Carolina grid club. Weather has hampered operations considerably during the winter drills, and for that reason the ever-improving Tar Heels will need all the time possible in the spring to get set for the toughest schedule in years which lies ahead for next fall.

Some of the best events of the meet are slated for the afternoon session, contrary to the practice of previous meets. The shot put, high jump, and broad jump events are arranged to be run off during the first part of the games.

The night meeting will be highlighted by a flag ceremony scheduled for 8:45 o'clock. Features of the evening meet include the pole vault, the ¾ mile run, 1000-yard run, one mile run, 60-yard dash, one mile relay, 440-yard run, 70-yard high hurdles, two mile run, sprint medley, 880-yard run and 70-yard low hurdles.

Individual entries in the college division begin with the shot put event, which brings some outstanding field men to Woollen gym. Jim Gardinier of Duke, Bobby Davis of Georgia Tech, Joe Bartos of Navy, Bob Seligman of Carolina, Bobby Byler of State, Jim Kurz of Maryland, and Bob Leonetti of Wake Forest will be among the top heavers in the meet opener.

Colleges in the division include Bridgewater, Catholic University, Davidson, Duke, Florida, Georgia, Georgia Tech, Mercer, Mississippi, Navy, Carolina, State, Rollins, South Carolina, Guilford, Virginia, VPI, West Chester State, Maryland, Wake Forest.

Paxton, Hamilton Pace Team Tossing in 15 Points Each

Tar Heels Lead at Half by 31-25 Count; Nearman Nets Eleven Points for Locals

By Irwin Smallwood

Duke Indoor stadium, Durham—Feb. 28—Carolina's White Phantoms took the Blue Devils over the hurdles here tonight 57-47 to give the Tar Heel cagers their eighth straight conference win.

Paxton, Hamilton and Nearman led the Tar Heels' first half offensive that gave the visitors a 31-25 intermission lead. Carolina's greatest lead during the first period was 27-19. Duke held a 16-14 lead at one point in the seesawing first period.

Carolina started off very fast and built up 10 points during the first two minutes, with Paxton engineering the attack. Nearman, Paxton, and White combined to give the Tar Heels a 11-7 lead after five minutes of play.

Duke came back to take the lead at 12-11 and pushed its advantage up to 16-12. Then the Blue and White courtmen got hot again. The score was tied at 18-18 at 12:20 and Nearman dumped in a layup to make it 20-18 at 12:58.

The Carolina five moved out into a 27-19 lead at the 16 minute marker. Ed Koffenberger dropped in two free tosses to make the count 27-25 at 18:45 of the first period. Then Paxton and Hamilton tallied for the Tar Heels and the half ended shortly afterward.

Bob Paxton and Jim Hamilton paced the Tar Heels with 15 points apiece. Ed Koffenberger led the Duke quintet with 14 markers.

For the Carolinians it was their tenth victory against two losses. Carolina moves into the tournament rated second behind N. C. State.

Duke Leads

Duke pulled into a lead early in the second period and at 9:15 the count was 40-35 in favor of the Blue Devils. Then Norm Kohler hooked one in and it was 40-37, Duke.

Hamilton laid one up to make it 43-42, Carolina at 12:35. Then lanky Jim shot a free throw and the count was 44-42, Carolina.

At 16:35 Ed Koffenberger shot a foul and it was 48-47, in favor of the Tar Heels. White laid one up at 18:00 to give Carolina a 50-47 advantage and from then on it was all Carolina.

Ends Season

The game closed the regular season for the Tar Heels as a crowd of 9,000 fans watched the battle here tonight as Carolina wound up in a blaze of glory.

Aldermen to Ask Legislature To Permit Poll on Extension

Election Would Decide Boundary Question; Umstead to Be Asked to Introduce Measure

The Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen, at a special meeting this week, voted unanimously to ask the State Legislature to pass an enabling act to permit the Board to call an election within the next two years on the question of extending the town's limits.

Representative John W. Umstead will be asked to introduce such a bill at an early date. The bill would leave the date of the election within the discretion of the Aldermen and would provide for a vote by all citizens in the areas proposed for annexation as well as those in the present corporate limits. A majority of the total vote cast would decide the question.

Proposed New Boundaries

The proposed new boundaries run parallel to the present town lines and would include the sections known as Westwood and Forest hills, Victory village, Laurel Hill road, Davie circle, and Knollwood. The original plans to include Greenwood, too, have been abandoned for the present on account of the expenditure involved.

The northern boundary would be 600 to 700 feet beyond the existing line and would run parallel to it. The new line would then come directly south to include Davie Circle, thence southeast to the intersection of the Mason farm and Laurel Hill roads, thence directly west to a point where the Pittsboro road crosses Morgan creek, thence north to the Carrboro line, and straight ahead to the northern boundary.

After making a study of the proposed new limits, Business Manager Claude Teague and Supervisor of Operations John S. Bennett have informed the Aldermen that the University would be prepared to begin installing six-inch water mains and lighting by the time the new residents, if they come in, would begin paying their town taxes.

Plans Ready

The town has already drawn up plans for a new sewage disposal plant, to be located below the Mason farm, and for an additional sewage system that would serve much of the territory considered for annexation.

The Aldermen have had extension plans under consideration for several years and recently received from the State Planning board a report that contained many valuable recommendations.

Publications Board Will Meet Tuesday In Graham Memorial

The Publications board will meet next Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Grail Room of Graham Memorial. Students and staff members wishing to bring matters of business before the Board at this time should contact Robert Morrison, Board president, in care of Graham Memorial or the DTH office.

William Pugh, manager of the Orange printshop, will appear before the Board at 4 o'clock. Other persons to be called in for interviews are Bill Selig, DTH business manager; Burton Myers, DTH circulation manager; and Fred Jacobson, Carolina Mag Editor.

Further discussion of printshop difficulties and proposals will follow Pugh's report. It is reported that new data will be presented which will change the Board's course of planning on the printshop question.

Oslo Educator CompletesTour Of University

Arn Halvorsen Visits Here for Three Days

Mr. Arn Halvorsen, Secretary of the Faculties of the University of Oslo, Norway, yesterday completed a three day inspection tour of the University and will leave today for the University of Florida where he will continue his research into the administration and organization of American colleges.

Traveling on a Rockefeller Foundation grant, Halvorsen has visited universities in Canada and throughout the United States in the last eight months to get ideas on administrations and organizations to take back to the University of Oslo.

Impressed by the friendliness and cooperation of Americans in general, Halvorson felt that he has learned much from his observation that will help to strengthen and enlarge administration at the University of Oslo.

Struck by Balance

He was particularly struct with the balance between faculty and administration at this university and at other large colleges in the U. S. Oslo University is run on the European plan, being faculty governed with the president and deans elected from the faculty instead of appointed.

In the 14 remaining days he will spend in the United States, Halvorsen plans to visit the University of Florida, Johns Hopkins, Princeton and Swarthmore. He also hopes to stop off at Duke on his way up from Florida and to visit one of the outstanding Negro colleges.

On leaving the U. S. Halverson will spend two months inspecting schools in Great Britain and one month in France before returning to Norway.

Taylor Recalls Old Definition of Love

New Yorker Prints Professor's Letter

By Ed Long

If you're in love, and you want a good definition of what it is you're in, the current issue of the magazine New Yorker has the answer.

Dr. George Coffin Taylor, professor of English at the University, after reading Walter de la Mare's "Love," remembered that he had seen but one definition of the affection called love. That definition was in the 1842 edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica, a set of which belonged to one of his relatives.

"As it provides the best instance I know of, in recorded history, of something written in deadly earnest now preposterously ridiculous, I want to make it available to all. And, as it genies mentality to the feminine sex, I dedicate it to the Career Women of America, trusting, of course, that some of them were born with the gift of laughter and the sense that man is mad," he wrote New Yorker editors, who promptly published Dr. Taylor's letter and the Britannica article in the "Love is a Wonderful Thing Department."

Love Defined

The article is a long exposé of this thing called love, written in flowery English, and begins by saying, "Love . . . may be defined, 'that affection which, being compounded of animal desire, esteem, and benevolence, becomes the bond of attachment and union between individuals of the different sexes, and makes them enjoy in the society of each other a species of happiness which they experience nowhere else.'"

"Mere animal desire has nothing in view but the species and the sex of its object," it continues, "and before it makes a selection, it must be combined with sentiments very different from itself. . .It is not. . .to be denied that there is something irresistible in female beauty. . .But this prepossession, even when combined with animal desire, does not constitute the whole of that affection which is called love . . .Love can subsist only between individuals of the different sexes."

Man Is Protector

The article then proceeds to explain the difference between the sexes, that the man is the protector, the woman the protected, and "with respect to the ultimate end of love, it is the privilege of the male, superior and protector, to make a choice; the female preferred has no privilege but barely to consent or to refuse." It concludes with "a small auxiliary article, from the same edition of the Britannica, on the symptoms and effects of the disease."

Obtained Passage From Encyclopedia

Dr. Taylor is Kenan Professor of English. A graduate of the University of South Carolina, he received the Ph.D. degree from the University of Colorado, where for some time he was head of the English department. After an interval of residence in Columbia, S. C., where he practiced law, Dr. Taylor returned to teaching in 1925. He is a member of the Mediaeval Academy of America and is the author of several books.

Palestine Hit By New Wave Of Violence

Holy Land Suffers In Latest Outbreak

Palestine, March 1.—(UP)—Palestine is in the grip of the worst wave of violence since the bombing of the King David hotel. It is the first time that the underground has struck during the Jewish Sabbath.

The continuing outbreaks, spread throughout the Holy Land, already have led to 19 deaths. The country-wide strikes evidently are in retaliation for yesterday's deportation of some 1,300 Jewish illegal immigrants.

Bombed Club

Rescue workers still are digging in the ruins of the bombed British Officers' club in Jerusalem where at least 26 were killed and 17 injured, three critically.

Two British soldiers were killed and three others wounded when their jeeps were blown up by mines near Haifa. A third soldier was killed in an attack on a military camp between Haifa and Tel Aviv.

Other attacks are reported all along the road from Haifa to Tel Aviv and at towns south of Tel Aviv. The British army announces a total of six other attacks. But so far it has given out no details.

Havana Court Accepts Luciano Writ Petition

Havana, March 1.—(UP)—The criminal branch of the Havana lower court has accepted a petition for a writ of habeas corpus on behalf of Charles "Lucky" Luciano. It has ordered the immigration director to produce the former vice overlord at 9 o'clock Monday morning for a review of his case.

Report Says Attaches Captured by Chinese

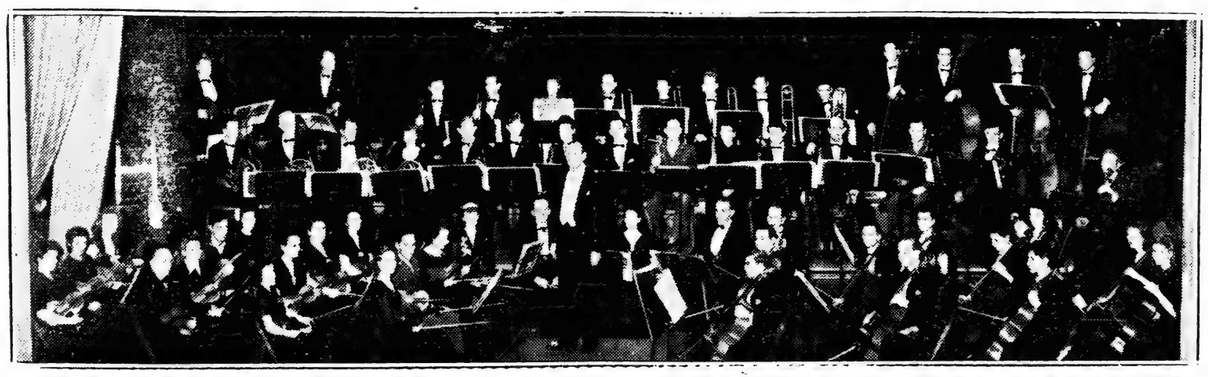
Washington, March 1.—(UP)—The War Department says American officials in China report that two of our military attaches, Major Robert Rigg and Captain J. W. Collins, have been "captured" by Chinese communists. No details of the reported "capture" were immediately available.

U.S. State Department Replies to British

Washington, March 1.—(UP)—The State Department has replied to the British request that we take over the support of the Greek royalist government. Unofficial but reliable sources say that our diplomatic note urges Britain not to withdraw its troops from Greece, and promises that we will "consider" taking over the British financial burden in Greece.

Discrepancies Found In Georgia Elections

Atlanta, Ga., March 1.—(UP)—An Atlanta newspaper (the Journal) claims it has found discrepancies in last November's Georgia governorship race in Telfair county.



This is the same county whose write-in ballots swung Herman Talmadge into a dramatic last-minute lead the night the general assembly elected him governor.

President to Report On Selective Service

Washington, March 1.—(UP)—White House sources say President Truman will send his recommendations on the draft to congress early next week. However, his proposals on universal military training will not be made before late spring.

Dr. Winston's appearance here is being sponsored by the coed vocational office of the University, headed by Miss Kathryn Cook.

A native of Swain county, Dr. Winston received her Ph.D. from the University of Chicago and since that time has held various positions with federal agencies, the National Economic and Social Planning association, and the Carnegie Corporation of New York.

She headed the department of sociology and economics at Meredith college for four years preceding her appointment as Commissioner of Public Welfare in June 1944.

There will be a booth in the Y to take orders for graduation invitations from 9 to 1 and 2 to 5 o'clock tomorrow. This service is under the sponsorship of the Order of the Grail.

IRC Will Discuss Imperialism Issue

International Relations club members and guests will discuss "Colonial Imperialism in the Atomic Age" in Graham Memorial's Roland Parker lounge at 7:30 tomorrow evening. Bill Patterson will open the informal discussion with a special report on colonial power in the Far East.

At last week's IRC meeting, members unanimously approved a new constitution. President Betty Anne Green called the action "a step toward greater democracy" in running the club's activities.

Under the new constitution, committee chairmen will be elected instead of appointed and IRC presidents will serve for one-half school year. John Bristow headed the committee which revised the constitution.

Meanwhile, membership chairman James Burwell reports that a few vacancies still remain and prospective members may obtain application blanks at tomorrow's meeting. Six new members have been accepted by the club this term.

Senator Glen H. Taylor To Talk Thursday Night

Singing Congressman Had Varied Career; Dubbed 'Crooning Cowboy' by Colleagues

By Sam Whitehall

Enjoying a peculiarly novel and yet typically American story of success, Senator Glen H. Taylor, who will speak from the Memorial hall platform of the Carolina Political union on Thursday evening, has had a varied career. The senator, dubbed the "crooning cowboy" because of his campaign strategy, was born in 1904, the son of a minister, on a farm outside of Kooskie, Idaho. His early life was spent in show business, and the clear-cut baritone delivery which has dragged speech-bored old-timers in the Senate out of the cloakrooms when he rises, attests to a strong dramatic training.

Twice Defeated

Although he was defeated twice for the Senate, Taylor was successful in gaining a seat in that august body in 1944. His policies have been strongly internationalist and in favor of a free enterprise system which will allow all to benefit from a free economy. His activities have included extensive work for the Small Business committee under the direction of Senator Murray, and enthusiastic and vocal support of legislation of an anti-monopoly nature. In the last named bill he is co-author with Senator Wayne Morse, (R-Oreg.), who will be a CPU speaker in April.

His interest in the United Nations has been great since its inception, and he is the author of a resolution instructing the United States UN delegates to work for the strengthening of that organization into a world republic. He was recently limelighted when he introduced a resolution barring Theodore G. Bilbo from a seat in the Senate. Much impressed with the TVA he hopes someday to see a Missouri Valley Authority, and, importantly to him, a Columbia River Authority which will benefit the northwestern portion of the nation which is his home and blood.

Although the Senator has not revealed the topic of his talk it is strongly suspected by members of the Union that it will be on a question vital to the economic democracy in the United States.

Jerry Davidoff, CPU chairman, announced that Wilkins P. Horton of Pittsboro, North Carolina member of the Democratic National committee, had been invited by the Union to introduce the Senator, and Josephus Daniels had been invited as the CPU's special guest at the pre-speech banquet honoring Senator Taylor.

Dr. Harold Hotelling Will Speak Tomorrow

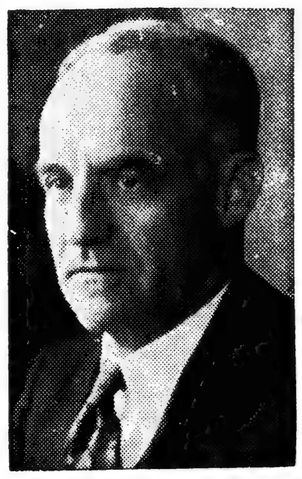
Dr. Harold Hotelling, professor and head of the graduate department of mathematical statistics, will speak on "Statistical Frontiers for Social Science" at the winter meeting of the North Carolina chapter of the American Statistical association to be held here tomorrow evening.

The meeting, scheduled for 8 o'clock in the auditorium of the Alumni building, will be jointly participated in by members of Alpha Kappa Delta, sociology honor fraternity.

'Any Investigation Is Welcome' Says Graham In Reply to Rumors of Congressional Probe

Graham, House Hold Same View on Issue

By Ed Joyner



Interviewed in regard to a possible congressional investigation into alleged Communistic activities at the University, President Frank Graham said yesterday that he had no formal statement to make, but both he and Chancellor House made almost identical remarks:

"We will welcome any investigation on any subject at any time."

Referring to the well known fact that this university has long been considered a center of progressive ideas, Graham commented that some people mistake progressive democracy for communism.

In Bill of Rights

"The position of this University is well stated in the American Bill of Rights, in John Milton's 'Areopagitica,' in Thomas Jefferson's principles of the freedom of the human mind, and in the position of the presidents of this and other universities throughout the long history of such institutions," Graham said.

DR. FRANK GRAHAM

Chancellor House agreed with the president in this statement and remarked, "That is the fundamental

President Restates Policy of University stuff of the life and spirit of the university."

"Totalitarian dictatorship and the Bill of Rights don't mix," Graham continued. "The Bill of Rights is one of the most precious parts of the American heritage, and we believe that in a free and fair open world forum it will win the peoples of the world to the ways of freedom and democracy against totalitarian dictatorships, whether of the right or of the left."

Reiteration of Inaugural

Graham's remarks were simply a reiteration of the policy he avowed in his inaugural address of November 11, 1931. At that time he gave the following definition of freedom of and within the University.

"Freedom of the university means the freedom to study not only the biological implications of the physical structure of a fish but also the

Sumner Drama To Emphasize Negro Problem

'Hear the Hammers' Will Open Wednesday

By Brooksie Popkins

Cid Ricketts Sumner's new play, "Hear the Hammers Ringing," opens in the Playmakers theatre Wednesday evening at 8:30 for a four-day run as the Carolina Playmakers' 21st premiere production of a student full length script.

"Hear the Hammers Ringing," which is based on Mrs. Sumner's latest novel "Quality" recently published by Bobbs-Merrill Co., has a long history of patient work and constant rewriting behind it. Laid in Mrs. Sumner's native state, Mississippi, "Hear the Hammers Ringing" is the story of a light-skinned Negro girl who is educated in the North, and returning home has to make an adjustment to the conditions in the South.

Heard of Similar Situation

Years ago Mrs. Sumner heard of a similar situation in which the Negro girl killed herself over the failure to make an adjustment. But Mrs. Sumner felt the girl would have been able to work out her problems. And thinking about the character for a long time, she got to know the girl in her mind.

Ten years ago Mrs. Sumner wrote the story into a one-act play. Six years later she rewrote it into a long short story which appeared as a novelette in the December 1945 Ladies' Home Journal. Since the story has been published as the novel "Quality," Mrs. Sumner wrote the full length play while she was studying playwriting with the Carolina Playmakers last spring.

Mrs. Sumner left her home in Duxbury, Mass., to come to Carolina because she had heard of the outstanding work done in playwriting by the Carolina Playmakers, and she was interested in writing "Quality" into a three-act play. Her advice to young writers is to "dig deeper and know characters better."

CPU Will Discuss Trust Legislation

The problem of trusts and anti-trust legislation will be the topic for discussion at the Carolina Political union's roundtable this evening at 8 o'clock.

Jo Fishel, of Vaughan, will deliver the introductory report, which will be followed by the opening of the floor for a free discussion of the issues involved.

The topic, held over from last week when the Union adjourned to hear Dr. Elton Trueblood, is of vital importance on the national scene. Since the passage of the Sherman anti-trust act in 1890 combinations in restraint of trade have been much discussed, lambasted and upheld as a bulwark of the free enterprise system of the United States.

Tickets for 'Henry V' Now Being Sold Here

"The movies have produced one of their rare great works of art," says Time magazine of "Henry V." Tickets for this technicolor production in its North Carolina premiere in Durham, will be on sale at 20 per cent of the original cost in the office of Graham Memorial from 1 until 3 o'clock from tomorrow through Friday. All seats are reserved and the show will run until March 17.

Tickets being sold at the student union office are for week-day matinees only, no Saturday or Sunday seats being available at the student reduction price. These seats sell at $1.44 instead of the regular $1.80.

According to present plans this will be the only advance showing of "Henry V" in North Carolina.

For Increased Subsistence

Increased subsistence for veterans attending colleges today under the GI Bill of Rights is a vital necessity and should be placed in the "immediate" classification of legislation concerning veterans' beenfits.

From college groups the nation over have come earnest pleas for an amendment to the GI bill which would give struggling ex-servicemen a chance to continue the education they have started. In some cases, this will prove impossible unless the subsistence allowance is increased.

The UVA and the AVC chapter on this campus are strongly in back of a move to increase the subsistence amount. The AVC has already introduced a bill in Congress to raise the amount to 100 dollars for single veterans and 125 dollars for married veterans, with 10 additional dollars for each child.

Before this bill was introduced, a careful survey was taken of the needs and expenses of student veterans. The study indicated that basic expenses such as food, clothing, and rent alone far exceeded the average veteran's income.

As AVC's national chairman, Charles G. Bolte, expressed the situation:

"The loss to the nation of those veterans who either have been or will be forced to leave school is irreparable. The greatest single advantage of the GI Bill is undoubtedly the education benefits . . . a good measure of the America of tomorrow is being developed today among the million and one-half veterans who are studying on the nation's campuses . . . any curtailment of the veterans' educational program under the GI bill is a blow to the future leadership of our country and world."

Students here have agreed that it is impossible for them to get along without help from some source other than the GI allowance. This is particularly true in the case of the many married veterans, especially those with children, for whom the present situation is even more acute.

We believe an increase in the subsistence allowance more vital and necessary than future bonuses. By increasing his subsistence allowance and giving the veteran a chance to continue his education, the government will be doing more for him than by giving him a bonus in the future.

All campus organizations and individual students who want to help keep their fellow student veterans in school should support the bill now in Congress. Only if the students and organizations make known their feelings and need for the bill will it be passed.

A Slap in the Face

Swinging doors are no respectors of rank, and students, janitors and professors alike often receive unexpected slaps in the face whenever they attempt to enter the various buildings on the University campus. Black eyes, skinned knuckles, crushed bones and bruised shins are an everyday occurrence, and it's no longer a joke when someone explains, "I ran into a door." Those who aspire to higher learning are beginning to wonder, "Is it worth all this?"

There are approximately 18 sets of swinging doors in most of the campus buildings, and from four to six of these are entirely unnecessary. Only the outside doors contain transparent glass. The inside doors are either of solid wood or of smoky, thick, wired-glass, so that doors are pushed simultaneously from both sides; then a battle of strength ensues to see who goes through first. One student reported that he'd knocked his professor down three times via swinging portals.

The University might eliminate wasted time, frazzled nerves and excess costs for medical supplies by either dispensing with the swinging doors or by putting transparent glass in all of them.

Until officials can take action, however, students might remedy the situation by applying three simple rules: (1) keep to the right in a single line; (2) push doors gently just in case someone is on the other side; and (3) be sure no one is behind you before you release the door.

World Affairs

Sudden Turn of Events Finds Two Great Powers in Accord

By Manny Margolis

Like so many other things in this world, left and right are purely relative. And, as relatives will, they are sometimes distant, oftentimes very close. For example, in modern-day international relations, the U. S. will invariably do what it deems to be "right"; the Soviet Union, on the other hand, will consistently act according to those principles which it considers to be "left." And yet, the twain often meet.

Take the case of the Japanese-mandated Pacific islands, an issue on which the U. S. and the U.S.S.R. seemed hopelessly divided. A sudden turn of events this past week welded the positions of these two great powers into one of almost complete unity on this vital question.

Andrei Gromyko, the Soviet Security Councilor, had only three minor amendments to make to the U. S. proposals, and these reservations appeared likely to be accepted. They were:

(1) To amend Article 3 (of the American proposals) so as to eliminate the phrase "an integral part of the United States."

(2) To amend Article 6 so as to add the word "independence" to the mere expression of "self-government."

(3) To amend Article 15—on amending or terminating the agreement—taking this power out of the hands of the U. S. and placing it in the hands of the Security Council.

To the Durham Morning Herald of last Thursday, this Soviet "about-face" was further evidence of the fact that "Russia remains the most enigmatic of all nations." Our Slavic brother remains a mystery. And yet, an enigma by any other name spells distrust.

New York Times' editorial writer Thomas J. Hamilton apparently saw no enigma in the Soviet action whatever. He remarked, in Thursday's column:

"The Soviet Union had the choice of vetoing it or accepting it on the basis of our heavy sacrifices in the Pacific. . ."

Carrying this one step further, Thursday's Greensboro Daily News added: "Russia's generous approval of the U. S. plan to attach the 623 Pacific islands. . .puts us on a spot which we inadvertently asked for. The Soviet Union is careful to point out that we are entitled to the islands because WE CONQUERED THEM. . ."

At this point the Soviet position leaves the realm of enigma and enters the sphere of political logic. (Some will call it "Russian realism.") The U.S.S.R.'s position with regard to the Baltic states and Eastern Poland has been strengthened, particularly in view of the fact that these territories originally belonged to her.

Warren Austin, U. S. delegate to the Security Council, has labelled the Marshalls, the Marianas, and the Carolines as a "springboard for aggression" against the U.S.A. As such, he has characterized all of them as vital to U. S. security. What, then, will be Secretary Marshall's reply to Foreign Minister Molotov at Moscow, when the latter reminds him of the manner in which Poland, the Balkans, and Finland were used as a gigantic "springboard" against the U.S.S.R.?

As for the tenet that "sacrifices" are to be one of the measures of a nation's title to recompense and security, certainly the Soviet case in Europe is open-and-shut. If indeed this is to be accepted by all the nations as a guiding principle, then the Soviet position regarding Germany, Austria, the Balkans, the Dardanelles, etc., has been immeasurably strengthened.

But, to return to the "enigma." This same issue of the Durham Herald, in trying to unravel it, does manage to offer a conclusion which is profound in its very simplicity. It states:

"It would be fine if those of us in this country could give Russia credit for sincerity in this latest gesture. That would make living in the world with Russia a much more tolerable and possible relationship. . ."

"It's Top a Leafy Green. . ."

Frost, The Man and The Poet Enchants Huge UNC Audience

"Soon it will stund, entirely white its bark,
And nothing but its top a leafy green . . ."
—A Young Birch

By Eddie Allen

There may still be those even of conventional literary tastes who are left cold by Robert Frost, the Poet. But few if any of a large, receptive audience in Memorial Hall Friday night could have escaped being moved by the warmth and the deeply human qualities of Robert Frost, the Man.

Reading verse of the sort which three times won him the Pulitzer Prize, dispensing his own poignant philosophies as they came into his silver-shocked head, the grand, old Vermonter who remains among the active giants of American Literature at 72, scored a marked success in his rambling, soft asides-studded talk.

"I'm not here to explain my poems," Mr. Frost observed at the outset, after an eloquent introduction by Professor Clifford P. Lyons, his Chapel Hill host and head of the UNC English department. Later he said with a smile, "If I'd wanted you to know, I'd have told you in the poems."

Actually, however, the Poet must have earned a score of new converts to the millions who already cherish his work. In addition to reading such old favorites as The Mending Wall and Alone In The Woods on A Snowy Night, he gave his rapt listeners a preview of his newest collection, Steeple Bush, which he recited from the book's proof sheets.

As much as the audience murmured happily and chuckled at the worldly, often cynical closing twists to his brilliant later works, they probably enjoyed as much Mr. Frost's impromptu preliminary ramblings. Mr. Frost does not orate. He talks, as if from an armchair, but his words carry the force of a great man who can dispense great thoughts in simple, homely language. In that rests the appeal of his poems, and in that also was his appeal here.

Styling himself as a "ragged individualist" and a humanist ("I'm supposed to be a humanist, so I'm supposed to be mad with science"), Mr Frost set forth understanding and form as his two paramount interests in life. Mentioning his new poetic play, now in progress, he said, "What I mean is courage in the heart, but fear in the soul. The fear of God is the fear in the soul. That's where my play comes out."

That fear, he said, was, "that your offering won't be found acceptable in His sight." He differentiated it from the better known freedom from fear of the Atlantic Charter, which he defined as not wanting "anyone in here on top of us telling us what to do."

The Poet was elaborating on the subject when one of Chapel Hill's ever-present dogs began to ramble up onto the stage. He stopped thus: "The worst fear of all is. . .Here comes a dog. . .Poor little fellow, he hasn't any father." With such an ordinary yet appealing observation, so typical of his entire talk, he secured a grip on his listeners which he never relaxed.

Going into his poems, he rippled the audience with such closing lines as the ones from his Etherealizing: "May the tide be soon enough at high, To Keep our abstract verse from being dry."

From an earlier work, A Young Birch, an excerpt from which prefaces this article, the Poet actually characterized himself. Although his bark is white with the snow of 72 winters, still within that noble top flourishes genius of a leafy green.

Bilbonic Plague

Dear Sir:

Mr. Barnes wants to know whether Miss Aiken can be serious. I should like to know whether Mr. Barnes can be serious. Just what are Mr. Barnes's objections to socializing with Negroes if Negroes fulfill one's personal requirements in social partners? Perhaps he is right and equality will not come during the lifetime of the present generation. Eventually, however, it will come and the economy of the nation will be improved. I have lived in the South since birth and have been exposed to as much prejudice and hatred as the next man. I try, however, to maintain a certain amount of capacity to reason things out for myself and if Mr. Barnes voices the consensus of the South, I am not proud to be a Southerner.

Proof of the logic and necessity of discrimination and segregation is requested. That is a strong statement and, in my estimation, entirely without basis. We need reminding that mixture of the two bloods has been present since before George Washington drove his black offspring to school. I am not aware of any particularly dire results.

The BILBONIC PLAGUE spreads. If Mr. Barnes can furnish proof of his superiority to the average Negro, the same evidence will prove him superior to the average white. We can have neither democracy nor Christianity as long as we remain unwilling to face the results of these two.

Mr. Barnes faces South. I look to the day when the governor of Georgia can look out over the population of his state and see a million people—not one-third million whites and two-thirds million blacks. The same will be true in other states. I do not attempt to conjecture as to the color or colors of these people but all will be people.

Sincerely yours,
W. MANCE BOGEY.

Tar Heels Engage in Final Dual Encounter; Matmen Seek Seventh Triumph of Campaign

[illegible] Woollen gym tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock when a strong Virginia team provides the opposition for Coach Chuck Quinlan's mat crew.

A non-league encounter, the match will serve as the final tuneup for the Tar Heels before the Southern conference tournament this coming weekend. Carolina ranks as the favorite to down the Cavaliers and thus gain its seventh success of the campaign, as against one setback to Navy's power-laden wrestling outfit.

Two Tar Heels will seek their eighth straight win tomorrow, Co-Captain Tommy Hearn performing in the 128-pound bracket and Oscar Gupton in the 165-pound division. Co-Captain Dick Seaver, whose only loss came last week at Navy, is the likely 145-pound entry, although Coach Quinlan may rest his ace in favor of Dave Beecher.

In two weights, Coach Quinlan is still uncertain about his starters. Either Doug Thompson or Irwin Smallwood will handle the 121-pound assignment, while the heavyweight berth lies between Laurie Hooper and John Stoioff.

In the remaining weights, Demon Roseman will open in the 136-pound group, Irv Zirpel will be at 155 pounds, and Bill Kemp will occupy the 175-pound bracket.

Outstanding among the Virginia matmen are Whilhoit at 121 and Verney at 145.

The two teams are scheduled to weigh in at the gym tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock.

In the 125-pound class, Bill Sunas punched out a decision over Al Salkowsk of Maryland to fight his way into the finals. Another Carolina entry, Newton Winn, was stopped by South Carolina's Ray Avant in a semi-final bout in the 145-pound group.

Maryland, the host team, led the way for team honors by placing six men in the finals. The defending champion, Citadel, placed only one man [illegible] and was out of contention [illegible] title.

The White Phantoms will enter the event in the midst of an eight-game winning streak, including seven circuit encounters. Carolina finished second in the league standings with a [illegible] record, closely behind N. C. State with an 11-2 slate.

Drawings for the tourney pairings will take place today when representatives of the teams entered will meet in Raleigh with the conference basketball committee. Only two teams will be seeded, State and Carolina rating the favored spots in opposite ends of the draw.

Duke, George Washington, Richmond, Maryland, South Carolina and Washington & Lee are the other probable teams entered in the tourney.

Gridders End Winter Drills

The Tar Heel gridders yesterday ended a spirited three-week winter football practice session which Coach Carl Snavely described as "very satisfactory" despite considerable bad weather.

A morning scrimmage marked the windup of work in which 75 athletes went the distance, following an original turnout of more than 100. The main off-season drill will be held in the spring, beginning March 20, when all candidates except those out for varsity spring sports will be requested to report. "We always get our best work done in the spring because the weather is more settled," Coach Snavely pointed out.

Among the outstanding developments of the winter work were the return of several lettermen who were here before or during the war. These included Bill "Earthquake" Smith, giant tackle, Fred Bauer, a fast 180-pound end, and Bill Pritchard, another end.

Several switches in positions among the old hands also held a major share of interest. End George Sparger was converted into a blocking back and impressed the coaching staff in his new role, although he may yet return to flank duties. Backs Bill Dorat and Joe Kosinski were turned into centers and looked good. And big Jim Hendrick performed better at guard than he did previously at tackle.

Charlie Justice and Walt Pupa, two of the brightest stars on the 1946 team, have concentrated on passing during the winter work and both have shown considerable improvement in this department.

Farmer or Teacher, but. . .

Poet Robert Frost Dislikes Being Classified as Writer

By Raney Stanford

"I guess you can call Vermont my home," said Robert Frost from the depths of his arm-chair, "but as to what to call me; well, maybe farmer or maybe teacher—I don't like the term 'writer.' I think of a writer as one who writes every day, with a certain schedule to follow. My poetry doesn't come like that. For years I've been shy of this word 'poet,' but so many people call me that now, I've grown rather used to it."

ROBERT FROST

The noted New England poet likes to be "in, out, or around" the teaching profession.

"It's fun being on top of what I used to be underneath," he said, his eyes twinkling.

Still with Dartmouth

Although he does not teach actively any more, Frost is still connected with Dartmouth college and is there for certain periods of time, about twice a year, meeting classes and conducting literature forums.

"A sort of a 'Fellow of the Humanities' is the way the title could be put. I give my classes something to do through the winter, then come back in later on to see if they've done it."

In connection with American colleges today, Frost said all the educators he had talked to agreed as to how "keyed up" the students and their classes were. Perhaps a lot of people, he explained, thought the returning veterans would be tired, burned out, and would want to ease back and let things move by them for awhile, but:

"They aren't a bit slack, they're eager for learning. Perhaps there are a few who are in school just to let the government take care of them, but they will drop by the wayside."

From Chanel Hill, Frost will go to the University of Georgia and to Agnes Scott college in Atlanta, then to his home in Cambridge, Mass. In two weeks he will be in California, the state of his birth, for a celebration of his birthday on the 26th of this month. In his early days, he mused, he lived a fairly stationary life in New England and England, but now he "moves around quite a bit."

Stay Home in Summer

"The longest I stay at one time is in the summer on my farm in Vermont. I don't do much farming, but it's nice to look at and to wander ov-

The university lectures the famous poet gives, like the talk he made in Memorial hall Friday evening, are generally given during his travels.

"Vermont, though," he added dryly, "hardly knows I'm away."

Truman Asks Draft To Be Taken Off

Washington, March 3. — (UP) — The War Department says it is going to discharge all draftees by July 1. The number of draftees now in service total about 100,000.

The official order for the discharge of all men outside the regular army was announced on the heels of a request by President Truman to congress that the draft law be permitted to die on March 31.

Voluntary Enlistments

Mr. Truman told Congress that the Army and Navy hope to maintain their authorized strength for the next fiscal year with voluntary enlistments. He reserved the right, however, to ask for a new draft law later if an insufficient number of men volunteer.

The army has already notified all commands to get discharge plans under way. All draftees have already been discharged from the Navy and Marines—with a few scattered exceptions.

Pay Hike Campaign Begun By AVC, UVA

Local Veterans Organizations Push Measure to Boost GI Subsistence

By Earl Heffner

Cognizant of the financial difficulties facing many veterans because of the increasing costs of living, the Chapel Hill chapter of the American Veterans committee and the University Veterans association this morning are opening a campaign in support of H. R. 870, a bill now with the Veterans Affairs committee of the House of Representatives calling for increased subsistence for veterans studying under P.L. 346, the "GI Bill of Rights."

First step in the joint drive is an intensive survey of living costs for veterans at the University. Presidents Roy Moose and Ben Rouzie of the UVA and AVC, respectively, issued a statement explaining the survey.

Survey Statement

"Unless veterans can secure an increase in their present subsistence allowances to meet the increased cost of living, many of them will have to drop out of school. We believe that every veteran should have his opportunity to get the education provided by the GI bill to fit him for his future work.

"For this reason, the UVA and the AVC on the campus are making a survey to determine the average living costs for veterans. We plan to send the results of this survey to our congressmen to illustrate the inadequacies of present allowances."

Survey questionnaires are to be available in the "Y" from 9 this morning until 3 o'clock this afternoon and at Lenoir dining hall at noon today and tomorrow.

Must Be in Friday

All questionnaires are to be filled in and returned by Friday. They may be returned today and tomorrow to the distribution booths. After tomorrow they may be returned in a ballot box in the "Y" or may be mailed to the UVA, Box 427, or AVC, Box 891.

Results of the survey will be tabulated during the weekend and will be released next Tuesday morning.

The AVC and UVA plan to have results of the survey mimeographed. Copies will then be sent to Congressmen, to other schools, and will be made available to veterans desiring to use the information in writing letters to their congressmen in support of the new bill.

Send to other Schools

Copies are to be sent to veterans organizations at other schools in the hope that the information will be beneficial to those organizations in conducting a similar survey to support passage of the bill. The local drive in support of H. R. 870 is similar to campaigns at a number of other schools.

At present the American Veterans committee is the only national veterans organization supporting the increased subsistence. Both the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars have aligned themselves against the bill.

Investigation Called Rumor By Committee

'Communism' Probe Denied in Capitol

Washington, March 3. — (UP) — Members of the House un-American Affairs committee in Washington deny that they plan to investigate charges of Communism at the University of North Carolina.

The rumor got started again in Washington last week. But the committee investigator says he knows nothing about it. And although he says investigation of Communism in colleges is part of the committee's program, there are no specific schools in mind.

No Comment

At Chapel Hill, Dr. Frank Graham, president of the University, says he has no specific comment. However, Graham says he'll welcome any investigation of any subject at any time.

Representative Bonner of North Carolina, a member of the committee, has told the United Press he knows of no plans to investigate the University. And he says he does not plan to request any such inquiry. Bonner says further he has heard of no charges of Communism at Chapel Hill.

Other members of the committee, such as Representatives Mundt of South Dakota and Rankin of Mississippi, also deny the reports.

YWCA Will Select Officers Thursday

The election of the YWCA officers for the coming year will be held on Thursday evening in Alderman dormitory. The nominations have been announced as follows: President, Jo Fishel, Gray Simpson; secretary, Lola Mustard, Julia Ross; treasurer, Emily von Borries, Marshall Spears; membership chairman, Sally Lee, Joyce Peterson.

Only those YWCA members who registered at the membership meeting on February 24 will be eligible to vote in the elections and new Cabinet members will be selected by the incoming officers at the beginning of the spring quarter. Installation service for the new Cabinet will be held April 7 in the Presbyterian church.

Ex-WAC Eileen Smith Cast For Lead In Playmaker Show

By Brooksie Popkins

Eileen Smith is cast in the leading role of Pinkey, a light-skinned Negro girl, in the Carolina Playmakers' premiere production of Cid Ricketts Sumner's new play, "Hear the Hammers Ringing," directed by Kai Jurgensen, which opens tomorrow evening at 8:30 in the Playmakers theatre for a four-day run.

Eileen has a long career of dramatic art work behind her. After graduating from Lee Edwards high school in Asheville, she entered Biltmore Junior college. There she was business manager of the dramatic art club her first year and president the next. Her most outstanding performance at the college was that of Ma Fisher in George Kelly's "The Show Off."

Work With Playmakers

After being graduated from Biltmore in 1940, Eileen came to Carolina to study with the Playmakers. Here she did technical work for a number of plays, had roles in experimental productions and appeared in two Gilbert and Sullivan operettas. She says, "I had my first chance at playing a mulatto in Paul Green's 'The House of Connelly,' which the Playmakers took on tour."

In October 1942 she joined the WAC, and as a first lieutenant did cryptography in air corps communications. Just before she was separated from the army at Fort Bragg, Eileen was made company officer which, she says, "was a dirty trick because then I had to set an example for the others." The last night of performance of "Hear the Hammers Ringing" will be her first anniversary of getting out of the army.

Freshmen, Sophomores Meet For Class Nominations Today

Dr. Samuel Selden, who will speak on "Art and the Actor" at the Humanities lecture this evening is caught above looking at a model of the proposed Koch Memorial theatre.

Samuel Selden Will Deliver Humanities Lecture Tonight

Head of Dramatic Art Department to Talk On 'Art of the Actor' in Gerrard Hall

Professor Samuel Selden, head of the dramatic art department and director of the Carolina Playmakers, will speak on "The Art of the Actor" as this quarter's Humanities lecture at 8:30 tonight in Gerrard hall. As author of many books on theatre techniques, Dr. Selden was selected to deliver one of the three lectures sponsored each year by the Division of Humanities.

Professor Selden was educated at Yale and Columbia university, and for five years, before coming to Chapel Hill in 1927 as technical director of the Playmakers, he worked in New York theatres. He also worked in the Provincetown playhouse at the time it was presenting Eugene O'Neill's early plays. It was during these summer years that he worked in a number of stock companies, including the Cape Playhouse.

Not Flexible Enough

In looking back over some of his experiences Dr. Selden recalls with amusement a tour one season with a Chautauqua group and of spending some weeks in an old-time repertory company. Of this last experience he said: "I was then twenty-seven years old. One of the persons I had to act opposite on the stage was an old burlesque queen, aged seventy. I was supposed to be her husband. Mr. Swaford, the manager, fired me before the summer was over, explaining that I wasn't 'flexible' enough."

For the past six summers he has directed Paul Green's "The Lost Colony" before audiences totalling 250,000.

Selden is also a member of the National Theatre conference, the American National Theatre and Academy, the American Educational Theatre association and many other professional societies. He is one of the editors of the "International Review of the Theatre."

Daumier Display Opens Tomorrow

An exhibition of forty lithographic prints by Honore Daumier will open in Person hall art gallery tomorrow. A gallery talk on the exhibit will be given by John V. Allcott at 4:15 next Sunday afternoon.

A native of Marseilles, Daumier was, during his lifetime, famed as a caricaturist and lithographer, but since his death his status as a painter has been increasingly recognized. He was noted for the audacity of his satirical drawings illustrating the incompetence of the French government and the corruption and follies of the law courts of the nineteenth century. He produced over 4000 such lithographs during his lifetime.

Daumier's influence is seen in the works of such prominent artists as Picasso, Rouault, and Toulouse-Lautrec.

Cornwell, Schnable Visit U.S. Navy Flattop

Oliver K. Cornwell of the University's Physical Education department and Commander A. G. Schnable of the NROTC, were guests of the Navy last week aboard the new aircraft carrier Saipan. Commander Schnable headed a group of North Carolina educators, newspapermen and legislators, accompanied by Cornwell and the group spent two days aboard the new ship in the Gulf, observing naval aerial warfare training and tactics.

Ellen Winston Talk Postponed until April

Dr. Ellen Winston, state commissioner of public welfare, who was to speak this afternoon at 4:30 in Graham Memorial, has postponed her talk until next month due to illness.

WAR CREDIT GROUP

Dean D. D. Carroll, chairman of the committee on Emergency War Credits, stated that the committee is up to date with its work and all veterans who have made applications for credit should call at 316 South building.

Re-Election Date Set Next Tuesday For Eight Officers

By Chuck Hauser

Wheels will start turning today toward the long-awaited repeat performance of the freshman and sophomore class elections at class meetings to be held this afternoon in Memorial hall, freshmen meeting at 2:30 and sophomores at 3:15. Nominating committees will be elected at this time to present recommendations for class officers.

The last elections of the two classes, held January 30, were declared void by the Student Legislature on grounds of unconstitutionality. The claim was made that six days were not allowed to elapse between the time of nominations and the elections, as provided for by the constitution.

Elections Tuesday

Actual elections will take place next Tuesday, one week from today, announced Jabie Heyward, chairman of the Elections board, who will conduct both meetings today.

A bill to hold the elections was passed by the Student Legislature February 20, as recommended to the body by the legislature elections committee, headed by Johnny Clampitt. From there it was referred to Jabie Heyward's student body elections board, which has just completed arrangements for the balloting.

Former Officers

In the ill-fated elections of January 30, class officers were elected as follows:

Sophomores: Curt Youngblood, president; Bob Lee, vice-president; Earl Summers, secretary-treasurer; Jerry Pence, social chairman.

Freshmen: Steve Nimocks, president; Ralph Lee, vice-president; Stuart Bondurant, secretary; Paul Baschon, treasurer.

Red Cross Canvass Will End Saturday

Sparked by the leadership of co-chairmen Johnnie Clampitt and Nonnie Morris, the annual campus Red Cross fund-raising campaign got underway today, to last until Saturday.

Clampitt and Morris have appointed solicitors on each dormitory floor, and in fraternity and sorority houses. Organizations may give either as a group or through individual contributions of members.

Campus contributions will be handled only through solicitors appointed by fund leaders. There will be no booths on University property.

Said Clampitt, "No quota has been set, but we wish to make a good showing for a good cause. For one dollar, anyone can become a member of the National Red Cross."

He emphasized that the campaign will close Saturday and all students "should get their donations in early."

W. L. Wiley to Speak To Philological Club

The Philological club will meet this evening at 7:30 in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial. Dr. W. L. Wiley will present a paper on the subject: "A Day in Renaissance France; Two Sides of the Picture."

Town Women, Two Sororities To Be Feted by UVA Tonight

The University Veterans' association will hold its last open house of the winter quarter this evening at 8:30 when the coeds of Delta Delta Delta and Pi Beta Phi sororities and town women will be entertained.

Feature of the evening's entertainment will be a floor show entitled "Corn's a Poppin'" starring club members Pinky Barnes, A. B. Coleman, Ed Pendland, Charlie Cross, and Ben Douglas.

A yet unnamed "Swami" will also appear in the show. Piano accompaniment for the production will be provided by Art Soybel.

The escort committee has been requested to be at the club at 8:15 this evening in order that they may call for the coeds by 8:30 o'clock.

President Roy Moose has urged all veterans to attend the affair.

Worthy of Support

The annual Red Cross drive, which is underway all over the country this week, has also begun on the Carolina campus. Individual solicitors, all of whom are volunteers, are covering every dormitory floor and all fraternities and sororities. This will keep students from being asked for a contribution more than once during the week.

Last year, North Carolina became the first state in history to go over its established Red Cross campaign quota. This year those in charge of the drive in this state are hopeful of a repeat performance. Certainly, on this campus, response to the drive should be much greater than last year. More students are in attendance at the University now, some of whom know and have received some of the many benefits of the American Red Cross.

Fifty-eight per cent of the money received locally this year will be used for local needs. Such items as housing for veterans rate on the top rung of local ARC activities. Forty-two per cent of the money will go to the national organization for its use in this country and abroad to help American troops. The ARC is still maintaining clubs and personnel overseas wherever American forces are stationed.

During the war, the ARC was active around the globe. Anyone who has ever suffered in or seen the suffering resulting from floods, fires, and hurricanes in this country knows how great has been the help given by the Red Cross in these instances.

To keep up its great work, the Red Cross needs money. You will have your chance to contribute this week. All of us can afford to give up some minor luxury this week and donate the money to the Red Cross. The American Red Cross has helped many of us. Some day it may help others of us in time of need. It needs our support now.

On Witch Hunters

It is interesting to note that Chapel Hill, the alleged stronghold of southern liberalism, is again the target of the All-American witch-hunters. Last Friday morning it was reported from Washington that the House Un-American Activities committee, headed by the Honorable J. Parnell Thomas, New Jersey Republican, would for the third time in less than a decade journey down to the University to uncover a nest of Communists said to be here.

Echoing the immediate statement of our great president, and champion of progressive ideas, Dr. Frank Graham, we say let them come, and look as long and hard as they desire. As Dr. Graham said yesterday in regard to the probe, "We will welcome any investigation at any time."

Perhaps we're also seeing too many witches but we wonder if Chapel Hill hasn't been the recipient of an unusually large number of smear charges in the last few months—on race and Communist issues. And we wonder if the proposed four-year medical school for Carolina fits into the picture anywhere? Perhaps not, but we would like to pose the possibility that some of these charges are being brought up at this strategic time, more in an effort to hurt the good name of the University, and keep the Legislature from establishing the medical school here, than in an effort to make this country more safe for good Americans—and Republicans and white folks!

We will neither deny nor affirm the presence of students and faculty here whom we might consider hold unhealthy attitudes on these two issues, but we urge everyone to watch for this ulterior anti-medical school-smear motive in the recent allegations and pending investigations. Things were pretty quiet around the campus for eighteen months preceding the January session of the General Assembly. But it looks as if during these past few weeks, while the state legislature has been considering University appropriations and, especially, the Good Health bill which provides for a four-year medical school and hospital in Chapel Hill, the foes of the University have all jumped on the same smear wagon in an effort to defeat, through any means, any gains for the University.

We do not state this as a fact or counter charge, but we do ask that you look for this possibility when these Communism charges and any future allegations are leveled towards Chapel Hill.

Many Veterans Face Crisis If Subsistence Bill Fails

By Earl Heffner

Food for the soul may be more important than nutrition for the body. Yet, there comes a time for many veterans when the two meals a day routine must be cut to one if the student is to stay in school..

For those veterans facing this inevitable crossroad, the University Veterans Association and the American Veterans Committee are co-operating in an effort to enable the students to make their difficulties known to their Congressional representatives who soon are to consider a bill that would raise subsistence allowances.

These two veterans' organizations are taking the leadership on campus for increase in subsistence. Their function is similar to that of pathfinders for veterans in financial stress. Through an extensive poll, the organizations intend to augment the cost of living figures of the national American Veterans Committee.

However extensive and energetic the efforts of these two organizations may be, they will serve little purpose without the full co-operation of all veterans.

Should the present House bill fail to receive favorable consideration by the representatives, a grave possibility does exist that a mass exodus of veterans from schools may take place as a result of financial embarrassments.

Only last Saturday I received a letter from a friend of mine, a former member of the foxhole fraternity, who was studying at City College of New York under the GI Bill of Rights. I use the past tense since this veteran has found it necessary to leave school and help with family support.

In brief, his $65 a month would not suffice him even though he was living at home.

Unfortunately, it is also true that the tuition allowance of the GI Bill often fails to meet the demands of many institutions. One of these is Columbia University where a veteran must purchase his books out of his own pocket.

The American Veterans Committee and the Veterans Administration possess figures showing that a number of students have been forced to leave school. While various reasons have stimulated this exodus, one of the primary ones has been financial.

Many veterans on this campus alone have confessed that the only way they have been able to stay in school has been to delve into savings or war bonds, borrow money, or go to work. The last possibility is not an ignoble choice. Unfortunately, it has two difficulties.

First, it must be recognized that a town the size of Chapel Hill cannot furnish too many jobs, that with many men seeking part time work there is an inclination to pay the cheapest of wages.

Second, educators agree that energy spent on working detracts from that which could be spent on studying. The obvious conclusion is that the working student cannot learn as much as he would be able to learn were he in position to devote full time to studying.

This joint action of the UVA-AVC, described elsewhere in this issue of the Daily Tar Heel, gives information to veterans that they may add to any letters to Congressmen they may feel inclined to write. It would seem ironic should veterans fail to endeavor to further their own lot especially in the light of the co-operation being rendered them by these two organizations.

Letters To The Editor

All letters must be typewritten, double-spaced, under 300 words in length, and signed by the writer. Writer's name will be withheld on request, but letters must be signed. The Daily Tar Heel reserves the right to present the letters as it wishes and to delete all matter it considers libelous.

Quasi-Liberal

Dear Sir:

Friday, over the name, Blumenthal, was a letter embodying such examples of bad taste, ill-manners, and bigotry that I want to express a fervent hope that we shall never see anything that odious submitted to our school's paper again.

I suspect that Miss Blumenthal's accusations against Donald Barnes could more accurately be leveled at herself. She has picked up the idea that dislikes and their resultant disapprovals are engendered only through the attempt of the person doing the disliking to salve his personal feelings of inferiority. Under that theory as a guide it is self-indicative on the part of Miss Blumenthal that she lapsed into such a wild tirade against Barnes that she lost any sense of propriety.

My estimation is that by setting herself up as a protector of the dispossessed, she is salving her personal longing for attention. By picturing herself a missionary against evil she wages a holy war against admission of her own beguiling inferiorities.

Too many of our screaming quasi-liberals have been turning their "liberal" coats when attacking the more conservative ideas of other students. I can't understand—I can't condone their unvarying practice of arbitrarily discrediting any ideas in opposition to their extremes.

Most of the comparatively conservative students ("ignorant, prejudiced demagogues") have some sound reasons for their views, based on experience, observations of groups of Negroes in the service, or on personal philosophies of traits to be looked for when choosing associates.

For instance, results of intelligence tests proving the Negro race inferior mentally by fifteen to seventeen points below the white Norm I.Q. of one hundred are on record in our library. (Under these tests education is not a factor.)

Concerning manners and morals from the conservative standpoint, the Negro president of the largest Negro business enterprise in the country made a statement several years ago to the effect that the Negro should not be handed equality, is not ready for it, but must earn it through the process of character and cultural development.

That is a creditable declaration by a man who knew.

Miss Blumenthal flaunts "proven scientifically" as though tests based on quantitative analysis were practical when adjudging the qualities of men. She undoubtedly can display intelligence test results showing the Negro up to par (I have some of them), but those others are still at the library awaiting a conservative's caress; I suggest that she not delete any conditional clauses from the original reports.

The fact remains that the conservative opposition has its respectable points.

Others have erred in her direction; but for perpetrating the biggest quasi-liberal debacle of the year Miss Blumenthal gets the prize comment, a grunt of derision and disgust from the student body.

WALT ARNOLD.

Tedious Problem

With reference to Thursday's letter from Mr. Barnes, I would like to say that perhaps Miss Aiken's approach to a solution of the racial problem is too direct in method and, therefore, will accomplish little other than to stir the temper of the "white supremacy" advocates.

This tedious problem, to be discussed, must be handled with tact, because of the geographic position of the participants; to quote Mr. Barnes, "due South."

I heartily agree with his fourth paragraph, that is, "The two people are different. The Negro will never become socially equal simply by declaring himself so, or by having someone else declare him so. The Negro has progressed greatly since he was brought to this country. . .he still has a long way to go."

However, I violently disagree with his next paragraph, which appears to be a contradiction of a well-stated situation.

Mr. Barnes, you and many others should realize that your own words condemn the colored people to inferiority and form the prison walls to the Negro's intellectual and economic development. As long as they are so treated, everyone can expect a continued racial problem and a continued slow progression.

Unless you give them the same fair chance as your own, there can never be an equal development within the Negro Race.

And, speaking of equality, Mr. Barnes, you must remember that, in the eyes of God and basically, the Negro is your equal, and our's.

EARL H. HARTSELL, JR.

Apology

I hereby extend my sincere, unreserved and unqualified apologies to Manny Margolis for the ill-conceived and unjust verbal attack I made on him in this paper last October.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

CONGRESSMAN COOLEY'S NEPOTISM; TRUMAN BIDS BAPTISTS CRUSADE FOR PEACE; TAFT AND PHIL MURRAY ROW OVER STEEL-STRIKE BLOODSHED

Washington.—Representative Harold Cooley of North Carolina takes great pride in his past efforts to houseclean the old Farm Security Administration of "Reds." More recently he also played a major role in combining Farm Security and the Agriculture Department's crop loan functions into what now is called the Farmers Home Administration.

However, while Congressman Cooley is always ready with press statements about these achievements, he has not been so diligent in telling his constituents about some interesting sleight-of-hand whereby he "streamlined" a relative into a cushy job.

When the Farmers Home Administration was established, who should pop up on the payroll as chief of the Property Management Section but Cooley's very own brother-in-law, Bruce J. Downey.

Most Carolinians would consider $7,100 a year (Downey's salary) sufficient for one family to struggle along on. However, Congressman Cooley is taking no chances that the wolf will ever camp around the Downey's door. Downey's wife, Mabel Cooley Downey, the Congressman's sister, also draws down $6,000 a year as Cooley's chief secretary.

In fairness to Mrs. Downey it should be noted that she is an efficient secretary and has been employed by her brother since he was an Attorney in Nashville, North Carolina, before he was elected to Congress. However, when the Congressman goes further and gets her husband on the payroll, then it's only right that his constituents and the taxpayers know about it.

BAPTIST TRUMAN

Thirty-one Baptist missionaries from all over the world left the White House the other day with a new "mission" from President Truman—to spread the gospel of peace.

Accompanied by Rep. Leonard Allen of Louisiana, the clergymen called on the President—himself a Baptist—in connection with the annual observance of World Mission Week in Washington.

"While you gentlemen are acting as ambassadors of Christ," Truman told his visitors, "you also can perform an outstanding job in these disturbed times spreading peace and good will among nations. That, to my mind, is one of the greatest contributions religion can make. I know you will always think of that while you are spreading the Gospel."

The President added that while God-fearing people prayed for "peace and human understanding," it was still necessary to maintain military protective measures until the world was ready to "accept the philosophy you missionaries preach."

SENATOR TAFT FORGOT

Senator Bob Taft of Ohio tangled with soft-spoken, persistent President Phil Murray of the CIO at a Senate Labor Committee hearing the other day with some interesting resultant fireworks.

Murray, who is head of the United Steelworkers Union, had told the committee that there has been no important strike in the steel industry since 1936—the famous Little Steel strike when, Murray said, "twenty-three men were murdered for trying to establish the right to belong to their union."

"Wasn't there violence on both sides, Mr. Murray?" countered the Senator from Ohio.

Murray in reply referred to the Supreme Court findings on the case which held that the Republic Steel Company, in discharging 5,000 men had violated the Wagner Act.

Again Taft prepared to defend the employers in the "Chicago Memorial Day Massacre," generally considered one of the worst outbreaks of violence in twentieth century labor history. This was too much for Murray. Half rising from his chair, he shook his finger at the suave Senator from Ohio.

Students Will Pick All Stars

Paper Conducts Poll For East-West Tilt

To college students who know their basketball, the New York Herald Tribune is issuing an invitation to participate in the selection of the players for the East-West All-Star basketball game to be played at Madison Square Garden on March 29.

The game, played for the first time last year, proved an outstanding success—the gate receipts were the highest for any basketball game played at Madison Square Garden during the 1945-46 season. Held for the benefit of the Tribune Fresh Air Fund, the 1946 East-West contest made it possible for over 1,000 children from New York's tenements to be sent to the country last summer.

This invitation to college students is being made through the sports editors of over 450 campus newspapers. Each college student is eligible to submit his or her choice of the ten best college players in their section—East or West. Only one of the ten nominations may be made from the student's own campus; nine must be from other schools. All ten must be from one section, in this case—East. The individual ballots are to be sent to: Sports Department, East-West Game, New York Herald Tribune, 230 West 41st Street, New York 18, N. Y.

The nominations by East-West college students will aid the judges in making their decisions as to which players to choose from among athletes with similar records. The sports editors of the Herald Tribune are not interested in the fact that a certain player is the most popular man on the campus. They want to know which players you prefer—as judged by the quality of their playing. Due public recognition will be given to the sports editors and the student bodies turning in the highest mathematical average of the players finally chosen for the East-West game.

Ten players are to be selected by the judges from the West and ten from the East. The teams will typify the best basketball played in these regions. For the purpose of the All-Star game, ideas of where the East ends and the West begins will have to undergo some readjustment. On the suggestion of many of our basketball fans, particularly college students, the boundary for the 1946 All-Star Game (the Alleghenies) has been changed. For the purpose of the 1947 East-West event, the East will have all of the Atlantic Seaboard states to the Alleghenies plus the territory covered by the South and Southeastern Conferences from which to nominate players. The West team will have the rest of the country from which to choose.

Each college student is requested to name his choice of ten players from his section of the country—East or West—on the entry blank.

A deal is reported on the fire involving the Cleveland Indians and Washington Senators. Cleveland owner Bill Veeck and Clark Griffith of the Senators kept the telephone wires humming yesterday. The report is that Veeck is interested in Roger Wolff, Washington right-hander. Veeck is said to have offered $20,000 for Wolff, who won five and lost eight last year. . . . The New York Giants' ballyhoo kid, the fabulous Clint Hartung, has been placed on the first team—temporarily at least. Manager Mel Ott has assigned Hartung to left, with Willard Marshall in right and Whitey Lockman in center . . . Manager Ted Lyons is drilling his entire Chicago pitching staff on the art of the pick-off play. Lyons believes that with enough practice, his White Sox hurlers will be able to pick off at least 50 base-runners during the coming season.

Carolina Ringmen Cop Fourth Place In Title Contest

By Roy Holsten

Placing fourth behind strong Maryland, Clemson, and South Carolina teams in the Southern conference championships on Saturday, Mike Ronman's Blue Bombers returned to Chapel Hill yesterday with a 125-pound division title and a strong second place in the 130-pound bracket.

Pre-tilt underdogs, the Tar Heels pulled a minor upset when they finished well in front of the highly touted Citadel Bulldogs, who were co-favorites with the Maryland Old Liners.

It was Bill Sunas, capable 125-pounder, who reaped the laurels for the Blue and White as he punched his way to a well earned decision over vaunted Clemson Tiger, Johnny Lindsay. Bill took command early in the second round and piled up points rapidly with his flashy left jab.

Charlie Lambeth, 130-pound scrapper was impressive, working his way up to the finals where he drew a tough opponent from the second place Clemson Tigers. Charlie's lack of time in the ring was the deciding factor in the bout. This became apparent early in the second round when the seasoned Clemson pugilist, Jerry Orr, sneaked a fast right hook which ended the tilt with only 1:10 having elapsed.

The other Tar Heel representatives, Al Winn and Tony Payne, failed to reach the finals but showed up comparatively well against their veteran opponents.

For the Old Liners it was their third conference championship. The Clemson Tigers put up the closest competition and the meet was not decided until the last bout which went to Maryland's powerful slugger in the unlimited class, Kenny Malone, who was the outstanding performer of the evening.

Phantoms Drill Hard For Loop Tournament

Preparations for the Southern conference tournament on deck this coming weekend were in full force yesterday afternoon as Coach Tom Scott began pointing his charges for their opening-round tussle with Richmond's cage entry in the annual hardwood classic.

A lengthy scrimmage featuring the regular starting quintet against the reserves and the jayvees took up most of the afternoon's drill and Coach Scott appeared satisfied with the Phantoms' first court activity since the ten-point triumph over Duke Friday evening. Quite a mental task still faces Scott in that he must decide which 10 players, the maximum any team may carry, will represent Carolina in the three-day tourney.

Performing in the feature clash of the opening-day's activities, the Phantoms oppose the team that finished sixth in the final standings of the circuit. The Spiders registered an 8-5 slate in gaining admittance to the eight-team field. The Carolina-Richmond battle is slated to start at 9:15 o'clock, the final game of the day.

In the other first-round tilts, N. C. State's top-seeded Red Terrors meet Maryland, which finished fifth in the standings; fourth-place George Washington engages Washington and Lee, which barely made the list with an eighth-place finish, and third-place Duke runs up against the seventh-place South Carolina Gamecocks.

Kappa Sig Protest Upheld; Tilt To Be Replayed Today

A protest by the Kappa Sigs concerning a defeat they suffered last Friday afternoon at the hands of Phi Delt has been upheld by the mural protest committee, and the game will be replayed this afternoon at 6 o'clock in the Tin Can.

The protest arose after one of the officials had awarded the ball out of bounds to the Phi Delts after the Kappa Sigs had been ruled guilty of violating the back court rule. The former took the ball in, with fifteen seconds to play, and tossed in a long, looping field goal to nose out the latter, 27-26.

The Kappa Sigs immediately filed a protest on the grounds that the back court rule had been suspended by agreement of the mural managers at the start of the season because of the small size of the playing floors.

The protest was aired by the committee yesterday afternoon and the ruling of a replay was handed down. The committee is composed of representatives of both dormitory and fraternity teams and handles all matters such as this case.

A win for the Kappa Sigs would push them back into the lead in the fraternity playoffs with a record of five wins and no defeats against the runner-up Sigma Chis who are sporting a record of three wins and a single defeat.

The final games in the frat tourney will be played Wednesday afternoon with the Kappa Sigs highly favored to con the honors.

Swimming Notes

The mural department has made the following announcements concerning the intramural swim meet: 1) There will be no semi-finals in the diving and the relays; 2) the list of semi-finalists can be found in last Sunday's DTH; 3) finalists are to be notified through the mural office.

Track Team Preps For Cinder Season After Indoor Win

By Morty Schaap

With the Indoor championship under their belts the Tar Heel track team begins work today for the long outdoor season that starts on March 29th with the Florida Relays at Gainesville.

The performances by Carolina runners in the games last Saturday were indeed impressive as they took six first places out of 13 events. Norm McLeod in copping the Pole Vault showed that he was ready to go and take on all comers. Bob Seligman produced plenty of power in what is usually the weakest spot in Carolina track, the shot put. Jack Milne, running in pre-war style, tok better than 10 seconds of the meet record in the two mile and seems marked for a fine year on the cinders.

Alvin Smith demonstrated a terrific kick at the finish to capture the mile, while the last but by far not the least impressive of the individual Tar Heel winners was Chunk Simmons, who cracked meet records in both the high and low hurdles to capture these two important first places.

The team in all shaped up well with Tommy Turner taking second in the 440 and Dick Hollander grabbing third in the 880. The other Blue and White points were earned by Ted Shultz who took third in the low hurdles and fourth in the 60 yard dash; Bob Morrow racked up two markers by finishing third in the high hurdles, while the last point was added to the aggregate by vaulters Leroy Ward and Rusty Russell.

The meet was well run with all events getting off on time and from a spectators viewpoint it filled all the expectations of being a three ring carnival. Much credit should be given to all officials and to the athletes for their cooperation in making the Fifth Annual Southern Invitation Meet the finest that has ever been run south of the Mason-Dixon line.

Dolphins To Encounter Duke Outfit Tomorrow

Carolina's Blue Dolphins will journey to Durham tomorrow afternoon to meet Duke's Devilfish in the season finale for both tank teams.

A victory for the Tar Heel swimmers will mean the dual meet championship for this season. The meet will also serve as a preview of the Southern conference swimming meet, which will be held here Friday and Saturday.

Duke has several swimmers who are expected to furnish strong competition in the encounter tomorrow. Captain Bill Adams is the leader of the Durham outfit, with an undefeated record this year in the 220 and 440.

The Devilfish have a potent one-two punch in the dash events, with Bill Brockney and Dick Bronson set to push the Tar Heel sprint men.

Two co-captains of the 1945 Duke tank outfit, Ken Saturday and Harry Sutton, will carry the Blue Devils' colors in the breaststroke division.

Carolina, led by Captain Warren Ficklen, will be after its 27th consecutive conference victory in the meet tomorrow. The Tar Heel mermen hold wins over Bainbridge, VPI, VMI, State and Virginia in encounters thus far this season. The locals suffered their only losses to Navy and Georgia Tech.

Gupton, Hearn Stay Unbeaten

Tar Heels Annex Seventh Victory

Carolina's outstanding mat combine cemented its position as the No. 1 wrestling team in Dixie yesterday afternoon, trouncing Virginia 29-5 in the concluding match of the regular season for the Tar Heel grunt and groan artists.

Only the Southern conference tournament remains before the Carolina grapplers, and the laus of Coach Chuck Quinlan are co-favorites with Virginia Military Institute to win the first tourney since 1942, when the Cadets of VMI nosed out the Tar Heels by a 32-31 score.

The matches yesterday saw the outclassed Virginia visitors take only one bout, that being the 121-pound scrap. Irwin Smaliwood, wrestling his first meet of the season for Carolina, was pinned by Captain R. F. Loving of Virginia in two minutes and 27 seconds of the second period with a Japanese keylock to give Virginia its lone five markers.

Oscar Gupton and Co-Captain Tommy Hearn of Carolina kept their undefeated records intact, Hearn receiving a forfeit and Gupton decisioning Ian MacConochie in the feature bout of the afternoon. Gupton, who was one of the two Tar Heels to win a match against Navy, had one of his toughest bouts of the season in nosing out the Cavalier grappler by a 11-6 tally. Gupton was just one point in the lead well into the final period, and for a while it appeared as though MacConochie might rally and hand Gupton his first loss. However, Gupton "out-muscled" the Virginian in the crucial clinches to gain his eighth match of the season.

Demont Roseman, fighting for the second time this season at 136, won easily from Virginia's Jim Koontz, and the Tar Heel letterman from last season just missed a fall several times during the bout. He finally emerged the victor by a 6-0 count over the outmanned Cavalier contender.

In the 155-pound class, Irving Zirpel of the Tar Heels rallied under a powerful opening attack to decision Carl Henzie 6-1 and add three more points to the Carolina aggregate. Zirpel, one of the mainstays of the Carolina team all season, fought with precision all the way to win his contest over the strong Virginia challenger.

"Battlin'" Bill Kemp concluded the afternoon's wrestling operations in the 175-pound class, dumping Steve Bendle of Virginia into a pinning hold in two minutes and 15 seconds of the opening round. Kemp, who outclassed his visiting opponent, had Bendle near-pinned several times in that opening round before finally laying him to rest with a double bar, body press maneuver.

Carolina gained a total of 15 points by the forfeit route. Co-Captains Hearn and Dick Seaver receiving "free-gratis" five points in addition to Laurie Hooper, heavyweight contender for Carolina.

Coaches Quinlan and McKeever appeared well pleased with the performance of the Tar Heels, and they will be hard at work for the next two days prepping the Carolinians for the loop tournament, which is slated for Lexington, Va., Friday and Saturday of this week.

Summary

121—Loving (V) pinned Smaliwood (C), 2:27 of second period with Japanese keylock.

128—Hearn (C) won by forfeit.

136—Rosemann (C) decisioned Koontz (V), 6-0.

145—Seaver (C) won by forfeit.

Cabinet Hears Group Leaders

Pully, Golden, York Report at Meeting

A rejuvenated Campus cabinet brushed aside the cobwebs formed by war years inactivity yesterday afternoon and began its series of cooperative chats to iron out difficulties in the various student government activities.

Pete Pully, president of the Men's Honor council, reported to the group that the Council was well pleased with the "more than 60 cases" that it has tried during the year and that the Council has undertaken the task of "overhauling the files of the Council and filing its cases and records in three separate places."

In answer to a question asked by Dewey Dorsett, Pully stated that the Council has had more "trouble with orienting faculty members than students." He said that a mimeographed sheet would be distributed among members of the faculty soon to inform them of the Student council setup.

York Reports

Ed York, president of the Interdormitory council, reported to the Cabinet that the members of the Council felt that dormitory counsellors were not doing their duties properly and that in the near future a meeting would be called of all dormitory presidents to work out a better solution to combat noises in the dormitories during study hours.

At the request of Dorsett the Cabinet voted to look into the possibilities of securing a social center for the residents of the upper and lower quadrangles.

Golden Appears

In a report of the activities of the Woman's Honor council, Fran Golden, president of the group, said that the "Council was at first alarmed at the very few cases into which it has been called to investigate during the year." She said that the Council even appointed a committee to look into the matter and see if the house presidents were not reporting offenses. Golden said that the conclusion of the group was that there has been fewer offenses of the Honor and Campus codes to consider this year because as Chancellor House stated "the coeds this year were hand-picked."

CICA Will Feature Elections Tonight

The Carolina Independent Coed association will meet tonight at 7:30 in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial to elect officers for the coming year and make further plans for the CICA fashion show.

Prior to the business meeting, there will be a meeting of the executive council at 7 o'clock.

Members of the organization who have ordered bracelets are requested to bring $2.75 to the meeting, and all new members or interested coeds are invited to attend.

Wilkins Horton Will Present CPU Speaker Tomorrow Night

By Sam Whitehall

Wilkins P. Horton of Pittsboro, prominent attorney and North Carolina member of the Democratic National committee, has accepted the Carolina Political union's invitation to introduce Senator Glen Taylor on the Memorial Hall platform tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock it was announced today by Jerry Davidoff, CPU chairman.

Taylor, a Democrat from Idaho, has been an active progressive in the Senate, where he has followed many of the New Deal principles laid down by the late President Roosevelt. His special interest is the breaking of monopolies, and has several times sharply attacked the railroads for monopolistic practices. It is expected that he may touch on the controversal Bulwinkle bill, which would exempt common carriers from anti-trust action, in his address Thursday.

Anti-Bilbo Bill

At the meeting of the 80th Congress, Senator Taylor introduced Senate Resolution 1, which would deny a seat to Theodore Bilbo. At the time he made the famous hour long speech which castigated the Mississippi Senator for his attempts to deprive citizens of their right to vote because of color.

Horton, a former Lieutenant Governor, will be a guest of the members of the CPU at a press-speech banquet honoring the Idaho solon. The honorable Josephus Daniels, and two prominent members of the North Carolina fourth estate, W. T. Bost and Lynn Nisbet, have also been invited to attend the banquet as guests of the Union.

A public reception at which students and faculty will have a chance to meet and talk to the Senator will take place in the main lounge at Graham Memorial immediately following Senator Taylor's address. Jo Fishel is chairman of the Union's committee arranging the reception.

Davidoff also anounced that on Sunday evening Warren J. Wicker, Sanford, and Russell G. Baldwin, Leland, were admitted to membership in the CPU.

Carolina Mag Funds Offered by Jacobson

By Sigsbee Miller

The long deoate over a campus humor magazine was settled yesterday by a unique plan proposed by the Carolina Magazine Editor Fred Jacobson. Under the motion, as approved by the Publications Board, the Legislature-recommended experimental publication will take the form of a Carolina Magazine humor issue to be published in May of next quarter.

"The Magazine offers its facilities for the month of May to any guest editor that the Publications board will designate for the purpose of publishing a humor issue," read Jacobson's proposal. Adoption of the plan by the board means that full staff and facilities of the Magazine will be devoted toward giving humor the best possible representation in May.

Hodgson Appointed

Tookie Hodgson, long-time agitator for a humor magazine and himself a member of the board, was the board's unanimous choice for the guest editor. Hodgson said the purpose of the special edition would be "to determine campus reaction to a humor magazine."

Jacobson's proposal was introduced by Chairman Bob Morrison after the board had already started discussion of Hodgson's original request that the board approve publication of a trial issue of a campus magazine, apart from the established Carolina Magazine. Hodgson sponsored the proposal as a motion and it was passed, 3-1.

Jacobson told the board that he feared establishment of a separate magazine would result in a diffusion of advertising that would prove injurious to the Carolina Magazine. He admitted that he thought "the whole experiment is a silly idea" but promised the "complete cooperation" of his staff with the guest editor.

For a few tense minutes of the meeting yesterday, the continued publication of the Daily Tar Heel hung in suspense when W. M. Pugh, manager of the Orange Print Shop, appeared before the board to ask for a long term contract to insure himself against the possibility of the Tar Heel's moving to a self-operated shop.

Pugh told the board that he heard "constant rumors" to the effect that plans were under way for establishment of the Tar Heel's own print shop. The official word from the board was "no comment" and action on the matter was tabled for a special meeting of the board next week. Meanwhile, Pugh has promised to take no further action until the board acts.

Morrison suggested that an ironclad contract could be avoided if the board agreed to make itself liable to purchase Pugh's new press in the event that the Tar Heel moves to its own shop. Pugh said this would be satisfactory with him, and discussion ended with no final action.

Joint UVA-AVC 'Cost of Living' Survey Ends Today

By Earl Heffner

Leaders Are Pleased with Huge Response; Forms to Be Placed in YMCA, Lenoir Hall

Opportunity's double knock to afford veterans a chance to make personal contributions in the fight for increased subsistence ends today when the joint AVC-UVA cost of living survey completes its two-day life.

Questionnaires will be available from 9 this morning until 3 o'clock this afternoon at the "Y" and this noon at Lenoir dining hall. The completed blanks may be turned in today at either place, or tomorrow and Friday in ballot boxes at the "Y", the UVA clubhouse, or may be mailed to AVC, Box 891, or UVA, Box 427. As tallying of the results begins Saturday, all questionnaires must be in by Friday.

A check of yesterday's results by UVA and AVC leaders indicated that a large number of veterans responded to the plea for budget information.

UVA President Roy C. Moose expressed great satisfaction over the way veterans are filling out the questionnaires and indicated that if the rate continues today the survey will be a complete success.

An AVC spokesman reported that the initial 1500 blanks were rapidly being exhausted and that more copies will be run off in order to give all veterans an opportunity to participate in the poll.

Results of the survey are to be published in the Daily Tar Heel next Tuesday morning.

Express Your Need

If University veterans respond to the plea of "Write Your Congressman" in regard to passage of increased subsistence bill H. R. 870 now in the Veterans Affairs committee of the House of Representatives as well as they have responded to the AVC-UVA joint survey to determine average costs, Capitol Hill solons will have ample evidence that their constituents need the proposed increase.

Throughout the nation on university campuses similar surveys are being conducted. One at Columbia University in New York City has revealed an average expense budget of $137 monthly. Similar reports have come from the University of Connecticut.

All of this would seem to indicate that the legislators will be barraged with evidence showing that an increase is in order. Unfortunately, opposition to the bill combined with questionable procedures may nullify this evidence.

The American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars are strongly against a subsistence allowance increase. Some alleged Washington "experts have intimated that a cut in the national budget will necessitate a paring of Veterans Administration funds.

Even worse is the fact that the strongest champion of increasing subsistence, the American Veterans committee, cannot testify at committee hearings. An original reason for this was that only accredited veterans organizations could send representatives to testify. When the AVC was found to be accredited, the next charge was that the organization was Communist controlled. This charge was unsubstantuated. Now the advanced subterfuge is that the AVC is not a strict veterans organization because its membership includes former members of the merchant marine. (Perhaps the merchant marine boys weren't fighting the war as far as these men are concerned.) Ignored is the fact that of a 90,000 membership role, only 400 members served in the merchant marine.

Since the strongest champion of increased subsistence is finding itself exposed to smear sniping, veterans needing additional monies in order to remain in school must contribute to their own cause.

Letters to Congressmen can partially offset this, can show representatives the need for increasing subsistence. Solons certainly will keep a weather eye cocked for the desires of the majority of their voters.

DTH Music Review....

University Symphony Group Offers Fine Musical Program

By R. Haskell Hamilton

Lovers of good music missed a first-rate opportunity if they failed to hear the University Symphony Orchestra in its Monday night's concert in Hill hall. Under the direction of Earl Slocum, the orchestra presented perhaps the most satisfying evening of serious music in Chapel Hill this year. In my opinion, aside from considerations of size, the University Symphony's program was a vastly better one than the National Symphony's performance last month.

Displaying a rare spirit, deftness and love of playing that was reflected in the music, the orchestra went through an extremely well-balanced program. In fact, the choice of selections was entirely satisfying and more enjoyable than many a big-time orchestra's symphonic program.

"Der Freischutz," Overture by C. M. von Weber opened the program. Haydn's Symphony No. 101 (The Clock) completed the initial portion of the program.

Four Norwegian Moods, (Intrada, Song, Wedding Dance and Cortege) by Igor Stravinsky followed the intermission. Herman Sandby's Swedish Folksong was next. This selection was played delicately and with well-disciplined precision by only the strings of the orchestra.

Dr. W. S. Newman's "An American Tragedy," was the piece de resistance of the evening. A light piece of music, Dr. Newman's classical arrangement of the theme of "Franky and Johnny," (she done him wrong) was so well received by the audience that Conductor Slocum chose to play the piece again for his encore. "An American Tragedy" was dedicated by Dr. Newman to "the classic lovers, Francesca and Giovanni." I was particularly impressed with the excellent orchestral development of the theme, and the interesting harmonics created by the composer.

The Third Part....

Great Challenge of Our Time Is Question of Destructive War

By Jimmy Wallace

The following is reprinted from the Williamston Enterprise, a newspaper which comes out twice weekly and is frequently referred to as the "Martin County Bible;" an appellation not without justification:

"Dr. Harold Urey, Nobel prize scientist, says that he would categorically defend the following statements: (1) If Atomic Bombs are made in one country, they will be made in all industrial countries of the world. (2) If this happens, we will spend our days in deadly fear that they will be used, and, in time, they will be. (3) No bombs must be made by or be in the possession of any government. (4) Peacetime applications of atomic energy are of no importance unless the danger of atomic bombs is banished from the Earth. We hope that Maxim Litvinoff's statement to an American in Moscow the day after our second atomic bomb fell on Japan can be defended equally categorically. Said he: "Those are the first two and the last two atomic bombs that will be dropped in war."

I think that Mr. Urey is right and Mr. Litvinoff is wrong. No convincing reason has yet been advanced which would sustain Litvinoff's point of view.

There are many sidelights which seem to be escaping the public's attention. For instance: The first bomb was about one-tenth of one per cent efficient. Bombs are now being developed which are hundreds of times more destructive, each one having the capacity to completely annihilate an area of several hundred square miles. Few seem to be particularly upset over this destructive ability we now possess.

The atomic bomb is, from the scientific standpoint, a crude, almost primitive, application of atomic energy. Wait until the process becomes a bit more refined. Then we'll really see something; if anyone is alive, that is.

Bacteriological warfare is up and coming, and might ultimately wrest first-place from atomic energy. It has advantages over the crude bombs. No fuss, no smoke, no wreckage, no bother. Just nice, quiet, very efficient carnage. Of course, it might be painful, but that will depend upon what type of germ you get.

Prayer for today: O God, let me get a germ which will kill me painlessly and won't be messy.

All this, of course, assumes a war of some sort. Many people think that this will not happen. I'm not so sure. It is significant to note that out of the last 3700 years of recorded history, there have been only 300 years that were free of war. That is to say, someone was fighting, somewhere, during about 11/12 of the last 3700 years.

There does not appear to have been any major change in the human personality during that time. The change has occurred in the destructive capacity of the race. For those who like to think that the weapons have become so terrible that no one would dare use them, it might be answered that, relatively speaking, the crossbow was just as dangerous.

It is well-known that the crossbow was used for several centuries for purposes of war. Of course, the cross-how, unlike the atomic bomb, was not capable of destroying the planet. Whether this factor will be a deterrent to future war is problematical.

Unfortunately, the vast majority of the race possesses a highly developed "show me" attitude. That is to say, the presence of a question frequently demands a practical answer. Thus, the great challenge of our time is to answer the question: Will we go to war despite the fact that war means destruction?

One way to answer or by-pass the question is to create a situation whereby we will not have to answer it. That is, establish a government which will have complete control over such weapons as atomic bombs. This is by no means a guarantee that we will not have a war, but it lessens the probability of having one.

The other way is to wait and see. This seems to be the approach which has the largest following. That is unfortunate, because the approach largely insures the answer. Most people don't seem to be interested in obviating the necessity of answering the question. Questions fascinate people. There seems to be a certain thrill in realizing that a vexatious question has been answered.

It is to be regretted that the thrill will come during the last flicker of consciousness.

Letters To The Editor

Lack of Funds

If a gaunt, sad-eyed dog, or a puppy—thin where he should have been fat, and afraid when he should be friendly, and while sniffing for a handout, dodged hurrying feet, most people would not notice them at all. Only a few would stop long enough to see the misery of fear and loneliness in their eyes. The majority of those who did stop would not know what to do with the dogs themselves. They would, however, know that if they were to call the workers of the Humane society.

For years this organization has sheltered, fed, paid for medical attention and found homes for homeless, injured or sick cats and dogs. Lost pets have been located. Other charges have been mistreated mules, farm animals, a bear, and a horse.

Medication for animals injured on the streets when the owners are unknown, the drug necessary to put the hopelessly hurt to sleep, advertising of cats and dogs which are obviously owned, but temporarily lost; advertising for homes for animals which are deserted or which have become strays; boarding animals for which homes can be found after a little while; even long distance telephoning which is sometimes necessary in the more serious cases involving animal out-of-town cases—all these items must be paid for. But during the war the Humane Society did not ask the people in general for funds. The necessary expenses were borne by the more interested workers, a few thoughtful friends, and the generosity of Drs. Nathan and Vine.

But the animal problem increases with the growing population. The society can no longer get along without funds. It is penniless and actually in debt. Contributions of any amount will be gratefully accepted. Please take or send them to Miss Mable Mallett, 203 South Building. No worker or officer in the Society receives any remuneration whatever.

It may be of interest to note that within the last year the town of Chapel Hill has, at the urgent request of the Humane society, established at Dr. Nathan's hospital, a well-cared for and humanely conducted dog pound. Dogs which are either diseased or too cross or touchy to be made into pets are placed in the pound. If there is the slightest chance that they are owned, the Humane society advertises their whereabouts. The city allows the dogs to be cared for for five days, so that possible owners may claim them. At the end of that time, if not claimed, they are put to sleep. If for any reason they are kept beyond that time, they must be paid for by someone else.

MRS. A. M. JORDAN,
Worker, Chapel Hill Humane society.

P.S.: The society lacks sufficient funds to even pay the national dues of the SPCA. Your help is urgently requested.

Army OK Needed Overseas For Any 'Pregnant Ideas'

By Jud Kinberg

Whenever things get bleak, I always thank the fates for the United States Army. The brass-bottomed laddies who command our proud march boys can always rig up a gay game guaranteed to bring a laugh to every lip, a good soul-satisfying oath to every mind.

Things here at home have been right quiet, what with the Army facing a hostile Congress. But over in remote Germany, the commanding officers of America's occupation forces have really had a time for themselves. The story is datelined Frankfurt Am Main and is headlined, "Americans in Germany Allowed only Authorized Pregnancies."

Thought that would interest you. Well, it seems that the flood of wee ones was becoming so great among the families that have been carted overseas to join their husbands that hospital facilities were taxed beyond capacity of the diaper-washing machine. Firm believers in the power of a directive, the Army forthwith issued Circular No. 37 which did away with the excess in baby population. The provisions of this latest Army excursion into the land of snafu directs "that civilian wives who are not on dependent status (recognized wives of military and civilian personnel) must be evacuated to the United States through Army medical channels."

In other words, War Department female employees in Germany who dare to have "unauthorized pregnancy" will be shipped home as punishment for their unladylike behavior. With true Army fairness, it doesn't matter whether the prospective mother is married or not: she's shipped.

As for those who are not workers but merely the wives (or sweethearts?) of government workers, they'd better find out if hubby (or friend?) is pulling down $4,200 dollars per annum before they go around trying to recreate. For only War Department employees with an income of $4,200 or more can become pregnant and remain in Germany. It is just good, level-headed Army recognition of the economic factor in parenthood.

There's just one flaw, and it was dramatically expounded by an American wife after consultation with a chummy pre-natal clinic. The doctor informed her that she was, as the expression goes, with child and then whipped out United States Army Circular No. 37. "This is a fine time to tell me that," the expecting mother is reported to have commented and in this one whiplash sentence she undoes the plans of who knows how many swivel-chaired Army leaders.

I'm afraid that this is a clear-cut victory for sex over the more laudable theory of moderation propounded by Uncle Sam's military leaders.

It's all right for an Army wife to see the world, but apparently the organization won't countenance any stowaways—unless of course you're pulling down over $4,200.

Another sortie against sex is recorded in the same column of the New York Herald Tribune. It seems that some of the young unmarried women who came overseas as civilians to clerk and typewrite for Military Government have been successful in knocking off the young men who worked with them. You know, those office romances.

Well, the Army doesn't mind these hooked couples working together and even eating together, but it won't have them living together. Uh, uh! There are women's quarters and men's quarters and not even holy wedlock shall make the twain meet.

If such couples attempt to billet and coo together, they are "living in sin" in the eyes of the accommodations officer. "It has come to the attention of this office that you are living with your wife," the billeting office stated in a letter to an American captain recently after his American wife had the effontry to move in with him. "This must cease at once," the letter added righteously.

Comment from Mr. Average Soldier-Sucker about these War Department decrees was quoted as "You mean there's a regulation against that, too?"

Blue Dolphins Swim Dual Meet Finale Today Against Duke

SPORT SPINS - -

IRWIN SMALLWOOD

A CRUCIAL WEEKEND lies ahead of athletic representatives of Carolina. Crucial, we say, because there are three Southern conference titles that the Tar Heels can win or lose, depending on operations tomorrow, Friday and Saturday. The loop basketball tourney is in play all three days and the other two tournaments run two days each.

That's a strong challenge on paper, and one which the Tar Heels can meet and conquer, or meet and fall, all in a matter of an extremely close margin.

Carolina's White Phantoms, who finished second behind State in regular season play in the conference, are currently rated as No. 1 threats to the power of the West Raleigh quint, the wrestlers are co-favorites with Virginia Military academy, and the swimmers are rated about even with State's powerful tank crew.

However important all three of these may be, the one that stands out in front of them all is the basketball crown, for with that lies a possible bid to the National Invitational tourney. (Navy has already received the NCAA bid from this district.) In addition to its national importance, the cage playoffs offer what is likely to be the closest battle in several years.

And with that in mind we make a special plea on the eve of opening game of this important tournament. The plea is for good, sound officiating on the part of the SC officials. And this plea is one that has been sounded by student and teams all over the conference, and more specifically from the studen newspaper of George Washington university of Washington, D. C., one o the dark horse contenders for the title.

The officiating in the Southern conference has been below that of the east and a number of other sections of the country in our opinion and in the opinion of numerous other observers. And we want to see the SC men chosen to work these games come through and show that they are equal to calling a game befitting the calibre of basketball played in North Carolina and elsewhere in the Southern conference.

This tournament is going to be close, we believe, and officiating could easily mean the difference in more games than one. So there should be no ingnts of "tight" and "loose" refereeing. It should be consistent, if nothing else. That constitutes probably the biggest problem, that of not knowing from one game to the next whether it is going to get out of hand, or whether it is going to be called extremely close.

Our officials are capable and forewarned is forearmed as the old saying goes. Let's hope it is the best tournament yet, from an officiating angle as well as a playing angle.

It might be interesting to note, while on the subject of the tournament, that Carolina's opening opponent—Richmond—has two men under six feet who are the stars. Captain of the team is a 5-11 lad named Weenie Miller, and the other standout is Bernie Dolsey, a 5-5 guard set shot artist.

THE SPORTING SCENE: Today is largely one of congratulations from a local angle. We start with the department of Carolina Track, Inc. The Tar Heels indoor runners annexed the title of Southern champs in the fifth annual Invitational games last weekend. . .In connection with this meet Coach Bob Fetzer, Coach Dale Ranson, and new assistant Coach Joe Hilton deserve plenty of praise. And so does Marvin Allen, who was meet manager and who worked for weeks in advance. . .Next is Coach Chuck Quinlan and his crew of mat specialists, who just Monday afternoon trounced Virginia to gain the title of the best in the South. (Incidentally, you can just call yours truly "canvas back" after that Virginia meet.) The Carolina grapplers are out for that conference crown in a big way Friday and Saturday of this week at Lexington, Va. They will be battling VMI as the favorite, and VMI is the team that nosed out Carolina 32-31 in the last tourney held in 1942.

In addition to the 12 Big Four games, all of which count in Southern conference competition, Carolina plays three other circuit clashes. A night encounter at Burlington against one of that city's semi-pro mill teams has been lined up and other tussles against mill outfits may yet be added.

Richmond To Field Top-Flight Quint

The White Phantoms will face tough competition in their opening Southern conference tourney clash tomorrow night when they square off against the sizzling Spiders of Richmond university.

Sporting a 8-5 loop record, the Virginia boys can boast of a pair of wins over George Washington, which currently looms as the tourney dark horse.

Star of the Richmond outfit is Captain Louis (Weenie) Miller, Associated Press All-Virginia guard, who has paced the Spiders all year and finished the regular season's play with 143 points in 13 conference tilts.

Miller will receive able support come Thursday from a little 5-5 forward, Bernie Dolsey, who racked up 22 tallies against Wake Forest last week, and Tony DiServio, a towering lad from Camden, New Jersey, who holds down the pivot slot.

Kappa Sigmas Top Phi Delts

The Kappa Sigmas jumped back into the lead in the intramural fraternity cage tourney as they romped over the Phi Delts, 37-25 in the replay of their Friday's protested defeat.

The game was replayed from the start of the second half at which point the winners were leading 19-9, and from there on, the Kappa Sigs never faltered from their winning stride.

The victory broke the first place tie in the tourney that had stood since last Friday. The Kappa Sigs now holding a 4-0 record can cinch the title this afternoon with a win over Chi Phi, while the best the runners-up, Sigma Chi, can hope for is another tie if they should triumph over the hapless Betas while the league-leaders are being upset.

Mural Swim Meet

Competition in the intramural swim meet continued yesterday and the finals in the event are now scheduled for Friday afternoon. All finalists will be notified in tomorrow morning's Daily Tar Heel.

MURAL SCHEDULE

4:00—court 1: Chi Phi v. Kappa Sigma; court 2: Beta vs. Sigma Chi; court 3: Phi Delt vs. Zeta Psi.

Middies Invited To NCAA Tourney

Chicago, Mar. 4.—(UP)— The NCAA broke precedent today and named the once-beaten Navy basketball team as the representative from the third district to the annual tournament starting in New York March 22.

BADMINTON FINALS

The badminton club will hold the tournament finals tonight in Woollen gym at 7 o'clock. The tourney will serve as a warmup for a return tilt with the Raleigh club that defeated the locals, 16-3, in the last meeting between the two teams.

Local Tankmen Seek Sixth Win

Sper, Ficklen Set For Three Events

By Jim Pharr

Carolina's Blue Dolphins will write the final chapter in their 1947 dual meet schedule this afternoon when they swim against Duke's Devilfish in the Duke pool. The meet is slated to start at 4 o'clock.

Coach Dick Jamerson will send his Tar Heel tankmen after their 27th consecutive loop win today against the Blue Devil swimmers. The local mermen hold a season record of five victories and two losses on their slate thus far this year.

Duke Team

The Duke swimming team, coached by Jack Persons, have had an up-and-down season, climaxed by a close meet with the potent State Red Terrors, which the Raleigh tankmen won, 38-37.

Carolina will be led by Captain Warren Ficklen and Norman Sper, who are both scheduled to swim three events for the Tar Heels.

Duke has several outstanding swimmers including Captain Bill Adams in the 220 and 440; Bob Strickland in the 220; Jim Stockslager in the 440; Paul Gubbins in the backstroke; Bill Brockney and Dick Bronson in the dashes; Ken Saturday and Woody Venable in the medley relay.

Conference Tourney

Following the meet today, the Blue Dolphins will prepare to act as hosts to the Southern Conference swimming tournament here Friday and Saturday.

Grapplers Work Hard For Weekend Tourney

With an impressive record of seven wins and one defeat behind them, the vaunted Tar Heel grapplers settled down to some diligent practice for the Southern conference tourney scheduled for the coming weekend.

The matmen have taken the measure of seven of their conference foes this season with their only setback coming at the hands of the powerful Middies from Annapolis, who are reputed to be one of the strongest squads in the nation.

Gromyko Gives Russian Views On Atom Issue

Red Delegate Fears Home Interference

Lake Success, March 5.—(UP)—Russia's voice in the United Nations Security council, Andrei Gromyko, took the floor today and launched into a 29-page speech on atomic matters. He made clear for the first time one of Russia's main objections to the American control program—the fear that it might permit unjustified interference in Russia's international affairs.

Speaks in English

Gromyko spoke in precise English. He told the council that Russia agrees emphatically with the need for strict international control of atomic energy. But, he said, the United States plan, the "Baruch plan," is designed to give international control agencies "unlimited powers of interference in the internal affairs of states, in their economic life, in industries not connected in any way with atomic energy."

Gromyko accused the Baruch plan of "ignoring the interests of other countries," and of "trying to subordinate the interests of these countries to but one country—the United States of America." He said it can't be denied that the plan "contemplates the interference of the control organs in the most varied fields of the life of a state."

Landslide in Bolivia May Cause Many Deaths

La Paz, Bolivia, March 5.—(UP)—At least 10 persons were known to have been killed and seven injured today by a landslide engulfing a passenger motor bus and two houses on a highway about two miles from La Paz. It was feared that as many as 50 may have been crushed to death.

Police reports said recent torrential rains caused some 350,000 cubic feet of earth to fall on the highway from a bordering hill just as the bus went by.

Four persons were known to have been inside the two crushed houses and several women washing clothes in a nearby stream were said to have been buried alive.

Jewish Underground Strikes at British

Haifa, Palestine, March 5.—(UP) Jewish underground agents struck repeatedly at the British army today. They blew up a military police jeep in Jerusalem and a government tax office in Haifa. One attack backfired. A Jewish civilian was killed and another seriously wounded when a land mine blew up a truck near the city of Rehovoth. The victims were in fancy dress, on the way to a ball celebrating the Jewish feast of Purim. Jerusalem blazed with gunfire when the extremists tossed four handgrenades at the M-P jeep. A British lance corporal was seriously wounded.

Police Arrest Suspect In Black Market Ring

Chicago, March 5.—(UP)—A man believed to be one of the top operators in the nationwide sugar black market was arrested today in Chicago. He is 43-year-old Charles Kohs, an ex-convict, and police say he's charged at Fort Worth, Texas, with possessing 80,000 counterfeit sugar coupons. The arrest came as federal agents checked reports that a leader of the Capone crime syndicate began laying the groundwork for the sugar ring in 1944.

Solons Give Approval To Douglas Nomination

Washington, March 5. — (UP) — The senate approved today the President's choice for America's ambassador to Great Britain. It unanimously confirmed the appointment of Lewis Douglas even though some Democratic forces had charged he was too pro-British.

Enthusiastic Response Noted For Freshman Honor Society

Enthusiastic response met Dean E. H. Mackie's suggestion of organizing a University chapter of Phi Eta Sigma, national freshman scholastic fraternity, Tuesday afternoon in Gerrard hall as the group of freshmen eligible for membership met to discuss the possible petitioning for a local chapter.

Dean Mackie has written national headquarters a letter petitioning for the installation of a chapter of Phi Eta Sigma. He stated that organization would probably occur in April and May.

Others Eligible

Although an effort was made to include all eligible freshmen in the list published in the DTH on Tuesday, Dean Mackie asks that any student who thinks he has filled the membership requirements but whose name was not on the list, to drop by his office in 205 South building.

Membership requirements for Phi Eta Sigma are grades of "A" on at least one-half of a student's courses and "B's" on the remainder. It is possible that a low grade on physical education courses will not disqualify a freshman who has made honor grades.

Interdormitory Council Regulations Are Clarified

Rules Made to Maintain Group's Position 'As Efficient Mode of Student Government'

By Ed Long

The main purpose of the by-laws passed by the Interdormitory council this week is "to promote and maintain in the men's dormitories of the University an efficient system of student government, fraternal relationship among dormitory members and a maximum degree of social life," Ed York, president of the Council has announced.

Passed, also, as an appendix to the by-laws were rules governing conduct in dormitories. "These rules, which definitely are not final, are to be posted in all the dormitories," York said. Any complaints are to be reported to the individual dormitory councils, he pointed out, and if continuous complaints are reported, and no action taken, the complaints may be taken directly to the Interdormitory council.

Rules Listed

Following are the rules:

1. Any willful destruction or damage to University property will be considered conduct unbecoming a gentleman and, therefore, a violation of the Campus code.
2. Shooting or possession of firearms or firecrackers either in the dormitory or in the vicinity thereof will not be permitted.
3. Quiet hours shall be observed from 7:30 p.m. to 8:00 a.m. each week day except Friday and Saturday. The playing of musical instruments, loud talking, loud radio playing and other loud noises are forbidden.
4. All cases which the Interdormitory council considers serious enough to warrant suspension from the University shall be referred to the Men's council for trial.

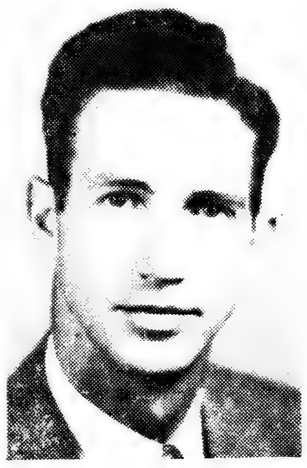
Individual Councils

York explained that the individual dormitory councils are composed of a president, vice-president, secretary-treasurer and administration appointed counselor. The Interdormitory council is made up of the presidents and the counselors of the 20 dormitories and one trailer camp. Judicial matters are taken care of by a seven-man jury elected from the presidents of the dormitories by all members of the Interdormitory council.

The group has several committees in operation at present, among them a dance committee—dormitory dances are planned to begin next quarter—and a merchandise committee, to study laundry prices, dry-cleaning prices and to compare prices in Chapel Hill with those of Durham and other nearby towns. Fifteen telephone booths are to be placed in the dormitories in the near future, and the Council at present is working with administrative officials on plans for dormitory social rooms.

Western North Carolina Club Plans Spring Social Events

By Tomie Cates

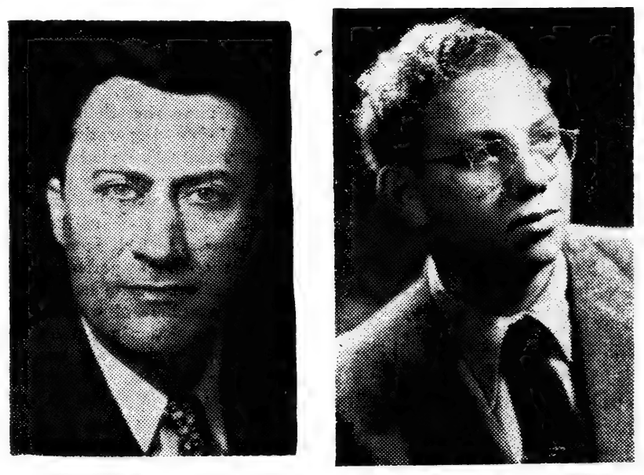


Earl Woodard, one-man chamber of commerce for Western North Carolina and recently elected president of the Western North Carolina club, said yesterday that plans for the group's spring social activities include a series of outdoor parties and a spring dance at the Georgia Vanderbilt hotel in Asheville, March 21.

The WNC club, which meets every other Tuesday evening at 7:30 in 112 New East, was organized about a year ago as an outgrowth of the Asheville club. Now composed of approximately 100 members from that section of the state, it has become one of the most popular clubs of its nature on the campus. Last term it presented a number of square dances, while this term it has entertained various groups on the campus, including the Florida club. The club has also been commended for its excellent job with the March of Dimes project several months ago, receiving one-fourth of all the proceeds that were collected.

From Heart of the West

The new president of the club, now secretary of the German club, a member of the Student Legislature and Interfraternity council, is from Asheville, in the heart of western North Carolina. He came to Carolina in the summer of 1944 and was first known around the campus as the 'hot trumpet player'—holding down the brass section of Freddy Johnson's orchestra. Later he served on the executive committees of both the German club and May Frolics club.



Woodard, who probably knows more people from his section of the country than anyone on the campus, is also familiar with western North Carolina having conducted sight seeing tours of that region during the summer months.

EARL WOODARD

Other newly elected officers of the club include: Ernest "Bud" Reagan, vice-president; George Matthers, treasurer; Frankie Vance, secretary.

Senator Glen Taylor to Speak At CPU Assembly this Evening

Senator Glen Taylor, Idaho Democrat, will speak this evening in Memorial hall at 8 o'clock. Jerry Davidoff (right), is president of the Carolina Political union, sponsoring the event.

Wilkins Horton Will Introduce Idaho Lawmaker

By Sam Whitehall

Senator Glen Taylor, Democrat of Idaho, will speak from the Memorial hall platform at 8 o'clock this evening in the first of this year's speaker presentations by the Carolina Political union.

Following the Senator's address the floor will be thrown open for a free question and discussion period, Jerry Davidoff, CPU chairman, stated, as is the practice with all speakers whom the Union brings to the campus.

Wilkins P. Horton, Pittsboro Attorney and former Lieutenant Governor, now member of the Democratic National committee, will introduce the Senator.

Reception Afterwards

Davidoff also announced that a reception would be held immediately after the Memorial hall presentation in the main lounge of Graham Memorial, at which time students, faculty and guests will have a chance to exchange views and impressions with the Senator in an informal atmosphere.

The Senator, who has distinguished himself as a foe of railroad monopolies and as the sponsor of a resolution denying Mississippi's Theodore G. Bilbo a Senate seat, is known for his lucid and hard-hitting speeches.

The Carolina Political union is a non-partisan student group which has, in its efforts to stimulate intelligent political thought on the campus, brought such outstanding figures as the late President Roosevelt, Harry S. Truman, Robert Taft, Lister Hill, David Lilienthal, Henry Wallace, Earl Browder, the Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, Ellis Arnall and Gene Talmadge to the University campus. The purpose of their speaker presentations is to provide laboratory material for the intelligent understanding of the politics and political ideas of our nation and times.

University Receives Bids To Construct Heat Tunnel

The University, Tuesday afternoon received bids on the construction of a heating tunnel to run from the old power plant to the new dormitories being erected on Raleigh street across from Woollen gymnasium.

The tunnel is to hold steam pipes which will furnish heat for the new dormitories. To be built of concrete, the tunnel will be large enough for workmen to enter and perform maintenance work, and there will be room for addition of more pipes if necessary at a later date.

Of seven companies bidding on the construction job, Thompson, Street and company of Charlotte—the same company wnich is building the new dormitories—turned in the lowest bid of $101,000. Six companies bid on the contract for installing the piping, and the Carolina Engineering Co. submitted the low bid of $64,500.

A University official said yesterday that the bids were quite a bit higher than had been hoped for and none has yet been accepted. The bids will be reviewed by the building committee and action will be taken within 30 days.

Humor Issue Plans Staff Organization At Meeting Today

Organization of the staff for the May humor issue of the Carolina Magazine will begin this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial, according to Tookie Hodgson, recently appointed guest editor for the publication.

"Everyone on the campus who has a sense of humor and is willing to work is more than welcome to join the staff and assist in the work," Hodgson stated. "The staff organization for the issue is not a cut and dried matter and there is room for all interested persons as no commitments have been made for staff positions."

The staff will be a rather loosely organized editorial board of which the guest editor will be chairman, and members of the staff will consider all material submitted for the issue and decide if it contains the desired humor and fits into the theme of the issue.

The proposed theme of the May Carolina Magazine, Hodgson said, is a resume of the past school year and will feature cartoons, verse, fashion columns for both men and women and a "men of distinction" feature. He said that even the advertisers would be asked to include a punch line or humor in their advertisements.

Hodgson stated that especially coeds, cartoonists and humorous verse authors were needed in the staff organization and are urged to attend today's meeting.

Cuban Authorities Say Luciano to Be Deported

Havana, March 5.—(UP)—Charles "Lucky" Luciano will be deported to Italy on March 8 or 9, despite a habeas corpus writ issued by the lower court of Havana. Interior Minister Alfredo Pequeno says arrangements have been made to place the former New York vice overlord aboard the steamer "Bakir," scheduled to sail for Genoa, via the Canary Islands, on the 8th or 9th.

Phi Assembly Retains Incumbent Officials To Serve Spring Term

The Phi assembly's final meeting of the quarter saw the re-election of all officers of the present quarter to serve during the spring term as follows: Bob Morrison, speaker; John Giles, speaker pro-tem; Peter Gerns, parliamentarian; Margaret Jean Tayler, recording clerk; Lester Snead, sergeant-at-arms; Charlie Britt, treasurer, and Margaret Goodman, secretary. Chester Zum Brunnen was elected to the newly-added office of critic.

The following appointments were made by the speaker: Orren Hyman, membership chairman; Peter Gerns, publicity chairman; James Hill, representative to CRIL; Jim McNider, representative to the debate council, and Charles Cowell, page.

A series of reports was presented by the officers to show the part the Phi played on the campus during the winter term: the assembly sponsored a debate over possible institution of a humor magazine on the campus, presented Dr. D. D. Carroll, dean of the school of commerce on "Registration procedure," opened the floor to discussion of the tax and tariff problem, and was medium of expression to a heated debate between Tookie Hodgson and Roland Giduz on misuse of student funds and discrimination by both publication board and DTH.

The following were initiated into the organization: Randall Proctor, James Blount, Charles Cowell, John Webb, Page Harris, and Robert Brooks.

Living Cost Poll Continues Today

The joint UVA-AVC cost-of-living survey which was scheduled to be completed yesterday will be continued through today, it was announced by UVA President Roy C. Moose.

Additional questionnaires have been mimeographed and will be available to all veterans at the "Y" from 9 this morning until 3 o'clock this afternoon. The completed blanks may be deposited today and tomorrow in ballot boxes in the "Y" and the UVA clubhouse, or may be mailed to AVC, Box 891, or UVA, Box 427. As tallying of the results begins Saturday, all questionnaires must be in by Friday.

UVA President Moose and AVC President Ben Rouzie expressed satisfaction with the enthusiasm shown so far by veterans and indicated that if the response today continues with past force, the survey will be a complete success.

Results of the survey will be published in the Daily Tar Heel next Tuesday morning.

Humor Issue

The Publications board and aggressive humorist Matt "Tookie" Hodgson should be quite happy over the temporary compromise-experiment solution to the supposed campus-wide clamor for a humor magazine separate from the Carolina Magazine. In voting to accept Magazine Editor Fred Jacobson's proposal to publish the May issue of that publication as a complete humor issue, the Publications board has saved a needlessly appropriated $400, which was recently granted to publish a special experimental issue of a humor magazine.

It is also a wise move to publish this special issue under the present named Carolina Magazine, instead of the infamous title, "The Buccaneer," which was originally suggested by the student legislature. Old-timers should remember that the Buccaneer, former humor magazine on the campus, was forced by the faculty to suspend publication in 1939 for being too obscene.

Although congratulations are in order to the Board for its saving this $400 expenditure—and to Editor Jacobson for his praiseworthy and gentlemanly proposal—we are still opposed to the whole idea of a separate permanent humor magazine, as such.

Jacobson stated officially to the Board that he felt a humor issue was a "silly idea," but pledged his staff's fullest cooperation to guest editor Hodgson for the special number. And so feel we! Hodgson no doubt hopes that this special issue will prove so popular that the students will clamor increasingly, as he says they are doing now, for a separate all-humor publication. Going along with Hodgson part way, we also sincerely hope the humor issue is a "howling success." We like to laugh too, and would hate to see an issue of our fine literary magazine wasted on unfunny humor—BUT, we cannot at all see, and do not believe, that this trial humor issue will prove the necessity or desirability of establishing a separate humor publication.

Some humor is even included in the present Carolina Magazine, and more might be included but for the laudable desire of the editorial board to accept only top-flight articles in any line.

Very briefly here are the reasons why we believe a separate humor magazine unnecessary. A combined humor-literary magazine, double the present size, can be published for a fraction of the cost of a separate publication. At present $1.05 yearly goes for the Carolina Magazine. An additional $1.20 fee annually would be levied for a humor magazine. By leaving the two combined, harmful advertising friction and competition may be avoided.

Finally, no one has been able to explain why the present Magazine cannot be both a combined literary and humor magazine! In 1942, as a "Baby Esquire" type publication, it was awarded the title of the outstanding college magazine in the country!

So we earnestly solicit everyone to look into this situation deeper. Consider these points, and then ask yourself if you think a separate humor magazine is really necessary!

Questionable Action

We feel, as do many members of the student body, that the Publications board, although acting within its rights in appointing Tookie Hodgson guest editor of the May humor issue of the Carolina Magazine, did not follow what we would consider accepted procedure on such a matter.

Regardless of what Hodgson's qualifications might or might not be, we feel that the board, in appointing a guest editor, should have taken the same action it does in approving a circulation manager for this newspaper.

Usually, in such cases, the position is opened to the student body and applications are received by the board, which considers all of them before making a decision.

For the job of guest editing the Magazine, we feel that, although Hodgson might have received the position even if applications were accepted, for the benefit of all interested students, such a move should have been made. The board places itself in a questionable light by "railroading" one of its own members into the guest editor's position, even though the board members undoubtedly acted in good faith.

The youth, intoxicated with his admiration of a hero, fails to see that it is only a projection of his own soul which he admires.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Letters To The Editor

All letters must be typewritten, double-spaced, under 300 words in length, and signed by the writer. Writer's name will be withheld on request, but letters must be signed. The Daily Tar Heel reserves the right to present the letters as it wishes and to delete all matter it considers libelous.

More Thought, Fewer Words

It begins to look as if nobody will write "30" to the impassioned tirades on interracial controversies which have raged in the DTH for the past fortnight. On Thursday last Mr. Donald Barnes gave voice to his "white supremacy" views. On Friday Miss Joy Blumenthal answered in kind and with violent opposition to the opinions aired by Mr. Barnes. Both, realizing that there was much to be said and that the 300-word limit gave them little space in which to say it, turned trenchant and emotional in the condensed ventings of their respective spleens. In yesterday's DTH Mr. Walter Arnold took up the fiery cross on Mr. Barnes' behalf, and with more rhetoric than reason launched into a vituperative attack on Miss Blumenthal's views, making rather bold conjecture as to her motives and excoriating her presonally on that account. Each of these writers in turn set himself up as ultimate arbiter, therein categorically invalidating whatever opinions he might express, regardless of what powerful emotional conviction might lie behind his conclusions. Only art critics are forced into this channel to earn their livings. The rest of us can well afford to try being circumspect.

As is usually the case in literary rows, the primary issues have gone all out of focus as personal recriminations come to the fore. The writers begin glibly tossing about catch words and pat phrases without pausing to think what they mean to say—or perhaps not meaning much of anything.

Amidst all this wasted newsprint the Tuesday DTH carried a quiet and sensible letter from Mr. Earl Hartsell. It bore the unfortunately forbidding caption "A Tedious Problem," though that is exactly what we face—even if some sophomoric minds believe the whole matter can be settled with a few pithy platitudes. It was also unfortunate that Mr. Hartsell's unpretentious and mature letter took a back seat to Mr. Arnold's petarade of bons mots. It would behoove us all to follow Mr. Hartsell's method of reasoning and to reach conclusions (or at least clarify the issues at hand) by a process of unimpassioned thought.

The saddest part of it is, of course, that the human mind doesn't like to operate that way. It takes training. Brutus immortalized that notion in literature when he appealed to the reason of the multitude while Anthony took a successful poke at their passion.

This current squabble can go on indefinitely, but we will never find a solution for the problem—or a way to avoid wars—or make any of the numerous advancements which need so much to be made until more men and women begin to think ten times before they pass judgment once. And the more thought one gives to any problem, the more reluctant he will find himself to stand in judgment—the more pointedly he will realize his incompetency to do so.

CHARLES BROCKMANN

Common Sense

Miss Aiken, Mr. Barnes, and
Mr. Bogey:

In view of the flamboyant publicity you three (rather, the first two) have loaned yourselves in the archaic question of the Southern Negro, which has proven nothing, have either of you considered that perhaps the Negro might not need, nor appreciate your sympathies? How do you expect to help a people when they are continually reminded of their alleged inferiority? My gosh! If there were such a thing as a racial inferiority complex they would surely have it.

Once I held a position that carried me inside most of the Negro colleges in N. C., S. C., and Ga. I have shaken the hand of a great many of their presidents, deans and professors and talked with them man to man. I was surprised to learn that many of them did not believe widely broadcasted sympathies, lip services, mostly, for the Southern Negro were the least bit helpful. Their general attitude was, "We are progressing; the less the greater masses of more prejudiced Southern whites are reminded of our struggle the less will be the animosity between us."

I can understand Mr. Barnes' attitude. I was reared by a father who was a child through Reconstruction, and I believe his hatred and fear of the Negro and Carpetbagger was justified. Most of our prejudices, like our politics and religion, are passed down from our parents and grandparents. I grew out of mine.

In summation:

1. I do not associate with Negroes because such association renders both myself and the Negro uncomfortable. Most Negroes do not like to fraternize with whites for that reason. I would not desire to be bossed, nor governed by a Negro for the same reason.

2. Very few things have ever been proven by Revolution. Evolution is the great persuader, inexorable and final, and evolution is now taking place in the social structure in the South. Nothing a thousand Bilbos can do will stop it; a thousand Eleanors will not speed it up. The less the two peoples in the South are reminded of their differences, socially, by people prating from ivory towers, the swifter, the more smooth will roll the wheels of evolution-without-conflict.

I am for a status quo, not because of prejudice, but because of plain common sense.

Yours,
JOHN FOSTER WEST.

End of His Rope

Dear Sirs:

I don't recall being particularly irritated when Congress passed the draft law, although it profoundly disorganized my life. However, I think Congress has gone too far in interfering with my love life. I had a letter from my girl recently saying that she had read the Congressional rumor of a Communist at Chapel Hill. Now, my girl has been passionately interested in Communists ever since a maiden aunt of hers ran off with a strike instigator and was last heard from in Russia during the first Five-Year Plan. It has been one of life's most bitter disappointments to my girl that her desire to see a real live Communist has been frustrated until now.

Therefore, she gave me Hail Columbia for not telling her about the Communist here and announced forthwith that she is immediately coming up to see him. So now I am not only faced with the expensive problem of finding a room for her, (she eats like a horse, too), but I have to dig up a Communist for her to see. Careful inquiry among my friends has gotten me nowhere during the last few days, so I am writing this in the hopes that the Communist will see it and get in touch with me. If it so happens that he is hiding out from the Congressional committee, then just send a snapshot or a lock of hair, or an old red flag, or something. Please don't let me down as I am near the end of my rope, and there's a noose on it.

Sincerely yours,
FRANK J. MATTHEWS.

Go Global

Dear Sir:

Perhaps the total range of views re racial justice have been widely aired, in public and in private; with more or less heat and light. Miss Aikens' convictions have been adequately defended by two unknown allies, Joy Blumenthal and Mance Bogey. In addition, I should like to contribute just a few other viewpoints, since I have spent most of my life in South Carolina, where, I understand, M. Aiken has also. All my basic education was received there at the other "Carolina." Because I, too, actually love the South, I hope to see it improve more and more; perhaps we can all help!

North Carolina is recognized by most people as a leading, progressive state in the South and nation; its inequalities look very fair in comparison with statistics from my own and most other Southern states.

After four years of Army life, I, for one, am frankly disgusted with groundless class distinctions, discriminations, and artificial standards controlling our military system still. The performance of Negro soldiers has been often and severely criticized; some people wonder how there were as many good ones even in a White Man's Army. How can they enjoy Selective Service and not all the other privileges of citizenship.

Yes, these "minor" citizens have come far in spite of degarding treatment as a rule; certainly not because of tolerance, brothedhood, or "Man's Humanity to Man!" Won't segregation inevitably degrade the individual so placed in an artificial, inferior category? In such a classification, how can he ever realize his capabilities to the fullest?

It is noteworthy, I believe, that the quoted sentence of Oliver Wendell Holmes should have read: "The great thing in this world is not where we stand, but in what direction we are MOVING!"

Will we ever have less pride in our inherited blessings with which we have had little or nothing to do? Will we practice some skills in living rather than in hating? Can we grow to be more earnest, honest, and sincere about building a better world around us? Can we not produce better men and women—with richer personalities and fewer pedigrees?

Will we demonstrate that our globe has room for every race and people? When will we begin to seek "after truth" beyond our conception of it?

Some isolated citizens seem to operate under a most personal and selfish Constitution! "All men are created FREE and EQUAL" were immortal words uttered—not by Marshal Stalin—but by our own great Founder and Leader of Political Democracy—THOMAS JEFFERSON!

INTERNATIONAL EXPERTS PONDER OVER POLITICAL SIGNIFICANCE OF PRESIDENT'S MISSION TO MEXICO; TRUMAN DISCUSSED VISIT WITH AMB. MONTEROS MONTHS AGO; VETERANS HOUSING PROGRAM ON LAST LEGS

Washington.—Some of the international experts have been trying to figure out the significance of President Truman's mission to Mexico. They wonder whether it means a new spurt in the good-neighbor policy, a new effort to woo Latin friends against Argentina, or what. However, here is the inside story of how the trip originated.

Several months ago the new Mexican Ambassador, Harvard-trained Antonio Spinosa de los Monteros, called at the White House to present his credentials. Truman was taken with the charm of the Mexican diplomat, who is just as familiar with the USA as with his native land. Ambassador Monteros told the President how he had spent a lot of time in New York, had been educated at Harvard, had a wide acquaintanceship in Washington.

"I have never had a real opportunity to visit Mexico," replied Truman, by way of making conversation, "and I would like to some day."

"Well, why don't you do it fairly soon?" said the new Ambassador.

"All right, I will," said Truman, who so frequently acts on the spur of the moment. "How about arranging it? I would like to go during early March."

Monteros assured Truman there would be no trouble at all, and several weeks later the Ambassador returned to the White House to inform the President that he had set up a fancy three-day official visit in the Capital of Mexico. Truman was delighted.

And that is the only political significance behind the President's trip.

Note—Truman and Monteros became such good friends that the President took the unusual step of inviting the Ambassador to accompany him to Mexico City on his private plane, the Sacred Cow, even had him along for the stopover in Kansas City while visiting his mother.

HOUSING PROGRAM VANISHES

It has been just about a year since President Truman summoned Wilson Wyatt, ex-Mayor of Louisville, to Washington and told him to make "no small plans" for veterans' housing. Wyatt was instructed to push housing as we pushed the war. Instead of foxholes, veterans were promised they would soon have roofs over their heads.

Today, however, it looks as if the last feeble attempt to carry out this promise is about to go up in smoke.

Little by little the real-estate and construction lobbies have whittled the program down. Little by little, the puny men around President Truman have yielded. Even the kingmakers of the American Legion, an organization supposed to protect the veterans, have ended up on the side of the real-estate lobby.

Climax came last week when Michigan's Congressman Jesse Wolcott, Republican Chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee, announced that he would move to repeal the Patman Act. This is the basic law which permits the Government to control nonresidential building, allocate materials, and give preference to veterans. If this act is repealed, not one vestige of the original housing program will be left.

Frank Creedon and Ray Foley, the feeble gentlemen appointed by Truman to carry on the housing program, may issue a few statements defending the Patman Act, but they will not stage a real battle.

"I am no crusader," Creedon told his friends last week.

Therefore, unless homeless veterans bombard Congress, particularly Republican leaders, the basic legislation for the housing program will be wiped off the books.

Note—Controls over concrete soil pipe, one of the vital materials for housing, are being removed this week. Soil pipe is still in short supply, and removal of controls simply means that it will be much harder for veterans to build new homes.

ADMIRAL'S WHITEWASH

Last month this column published a series of radio messages exchanged between naval officers regarding the sale of an automobile owned by Adm. C. M. Cooke, Jr., Commander of U. S. Naval Forces in the Western Pacific. Admiral Cooke had his car shipped to Shanghai where autos bring exorbitant prices, and sold it.

Following publication of this column, Admiral Cooke was ordered to Washington and asked for an explanation. All the facts as published in the column were admitted by the Navy, but in the end the old Annapolis tradition of Admiral protects Admiral was too much, and Admiral Nimitz issued a whitewash.

Dolphins Take Loop Dual Title

Greenbaum and Sper Cop Double Victories

By Gil McLeod

Durham, March 5. — Carolina's Blue Dolphins finished their 1947 dual meet schedule with a blaze of glory here this afternoon when they sank the Duke Devilfish, 48-27, to gain their 28th consecutive dual win in the conference, and the loop dual meet championship for this year.

The standout swimmer for the Devilfish was Captain Bill Adams, who easily took first place in the 440 and came in second in the 220.

The contest saw three dual meet records broken. Warren Ficklen's 2:21.6 in the 220-yard freestyle topped George Whitner's old record of 2:25.2; Greenbaum's 56:0 in the 100 broke Whitner's record of 56:6, and Duke's Adams set a new mark in the 440 finishing in 5:22.1.

Coach Jamerson announced that there will be an important meeting of the swimming squad this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the pool.

In the annual Southern Conference tank tournament, to be held in Bowman Gray Memorial pool here Friday and Saturday, Coach Dick Jamerson's swimmers will be seeking their fifth straight conference title.

Matmen Leave For Tourney

The tournament-bound Carolina wrestling team leaves Chapel Hill this morning for Lexington, Va., where the Tar Heel grapplers will work out late this afternoon and enter competition tomorrow.

Head Coach Chuck Quinlan, who has piloted the Carolina matmen to seven victories in eight matches during the regular season, is taking a full squad of eight men to the tournament, and his Tar Heels are rated co-favorites with VMI to cop top honors.

"We are going to try like everything to bring home the hardware," said the subtle Carolina promoter of grunts and groans. "We are facing a tough field, but barring accidents, we have a fair chance to come through."

Assistant Coach Hobie McKeever, who has been working with the Tar Heel mat crew since early fall, will not make the trip. The wrestlers set to compete include Doug Thompson, Co-Captain Tommy Hearn, Demont Roseman, Co-Captain Dick Seaver, Irving Zirpel, Oscar Gupton, Bill Kemp and Laurie Hooper.

Seedings for the tournament have not been released, but it is expected that several of the Tar Heels will get the first round byes. Seaver, Hearn, and Gupton are undefeated in conference competition for the regular season.

Weighing in will take place tomorrow morning, and at the same time pairings will be made for the opening round of wrestling tomorrow afternoon. The matches continue through Saturday night.

Tournament Gets Under Way In Duke Gym This Afternoon

Paxton, Hamilton, Nearman, Kohler And White To Start First Encounter

By Irwin Smallwood

Southern conference basketball tournament time rolls around again this afternoon, the 26th one to be exact, and the No. 2 seeded Carolina White Phantoms will hook up with University of Richmond at 9:15 o'clock tonight in Duke's indoor stadium for their first game of the playoffs. Duke meets South Carolina, State tangles with Maryland, and George Washington tackles Washington and Lee in the three games preceding the Carolina-Richmond skirmish.

The Tar Heels, who won the Big Five championship with six wins and one loss against North Carolina conference competition, are being given a fair chance to emerge with the conference crown—something they lost last year although they were finalists in the NCAA tournament in New York.

State, whose powerful Red Terrors have won all but two games this season against collegiate competition, are heavy favorites to take the tourney, which is being played away from Raleigh for the first time since its transfer from Atlanta 14 years ago. Other top-ranking contenders for the crown include Duke and George Washington, the latter being rated the dark horse of the playoffs.

A sellout crowd of some 9,000 spectators is expected to witness the annual cage classic in Durham today, tomorrow and Saturday. This constitutes the largest potential group of onlookers since the moving of the tourney from Atlanta. Officials for the games are Dick Culler, the Boston Brave shortstop, Ray Waskey of Roanoke, Va., and Arnold Heft of Washington, D. C. Culler is the only referee from the Southern conference association.

Carolina has won three conference titles since its beginning and at the same time has been eliminated from the finals three times, giving them an all-time record of .500 in conference finalist competition. Duke's Blue Devils have a like record in final games, having won five times and lost five times.

Coach Tom Scott, who is in his first year of coaching the Tar Heel quint, is planning to use his same starting five that has won the last eight games in a row. That includes Jim Hamilton and Bob Paxton, forwards, Nemo Nearman, center, and Jim White and Norm Kohler guards. Others making the trip for the tournament games are Johnny Dillon, center, Jim Hayworth and Taylor Thorne, guards, and Dick Hartley and Fred Swartzberg, forwards. Swartzberg has been moved up from up from the Jayvee team for the tourney.

"I have a lot of confidence in the boys," said Coach Scott yesterday afternoon as his team came back from a workout in the Duke gym. "Anything can happen in a tournament, and we are going to be in there trying our best to win."

UNC Debaters Enter Tourney

Six-Man Team Sent To Hickory Session

A Carolina debate squad of six persons will pit its speaking strength against representatives of some 20 colleges and universities at the Southeastern and South Atlantic Speech and Forensic tournament which will be held in Hickory tomorrow and Saturday, Debate council President Maurice Braswell stated yesterday.

The squad, composed of Braswell, Mrs. Aileen Taylor, Robert Andrew, Richard Mottsman, Don Shields, and Blanton Miller, left by bus this morning at 6:45 and are due to arrive in Hickory in time for early afternoon registration required of all participants.

Lenoir-Rhyne Sponsors

Lenoir-Rhyne college is sponsoring the contest, which is scheduled to take place in Hickory's Methodist Educational building. Under the direction of Dr. Albert Kaiser of the Lenoir-Rhyne English department, the event will feature varied speech activities as well as the usual debate.

Braswell declared that the council is sending no debaters to this tournament in order to allow for concentration on other types of public speaking. Mrs. Taylor will take part in standard oratory and a variety of events set up for women, including women's poetry reading; Andrew in radio newscasting and radio extemporaneous speaking; Mottsman in extemporaneous speaking; Shields in situation oratory and address reading; Miller in standard oratory and radio extemporaneous speaking; President Braswell in radio newscasting and impromptu speaking.

The Carolina debaters took eight first places in this important tourney last spring, showing up exceedingly well in relation to the other schools' representatives. Of last year's team, the only members retuning this year are Braswell and Shields, each of whom took two first places before.

Budget Group Vote 30% Hike In Teacher Pay

Cherry Recommends Increase in Salary

Raleigh, March 6. — (UP) — The joint Appropriations committee has voted a 30 per cent salary increase for school teachers and 20 per cent pay raises for other state employees.

The pay increases were recommended by Governor Gregg Cherry, and the committee voted for a $30,000,000 reserve fund to underwrite the appropriation. The committee's action cleans up work on the appropriations and reserve fund bills. And work will start next week on the permanent improvements appropriations bill for the next two years.

Up until today, Cherry had recommended only 20 per cent raises for the teachers. But he sent the joint appropriations committee a letter recommending that $3,000,000 a year be added to the school budget which had been prepared by the Advisory Budget commission.

John L. Lewis Guilty States Supreme Court

Washington, March 6—(UP)—Supreme Court has found John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers union guilty of contempt of court for ignoring an injunction to call off the coal strike last fall. The 7 to 2 verdict of the Supreme Court was handed down at an extraordinary midweek session today. The high court upheld the ten thousand dollar fine imposed on Lewis personally. But it cut the union's fine from three and one-half million dollars to 700 thousand dollars—provided the union complies with the injunction against the strike. That means no coal strike can be called until Federal seizure of the mines ends on June 30th, unless Lewis goes to court again and secures judicial consent to break the union contract with the government.

Joe Byrd Gets SP Nomination For Secretary-Treasurer Post

Party Completes Campus Major Endorsements Except Yackety Yack, Carolina Mag Editors

Culminating more than three weeks of research into qualifications the Student party Wednesday afternoon virtually completed its nominations for all major campus-wide posts except the editors of publications.

Joe Byrd, until recently clerk of the Student Legislature and now a member of the Legislature Ways and Means committee, won the Party's nomination for secretary-treasurer of the student body. He will be a running mate of Tom Eller and Don Shropshire, who received SP approval last month.

Student party candidates for members of the Student council were selected from a list of more than 30 names. Bob Dulin, Marvin Hogan, and Bill Wood were selected as the men's representatives. Nina DeBarry, Nan Guy, and Mimi Massey will be the women's representative candidates. The candidates for members-at-large are Barbara Cashion, Mary Swan, and Al Lowenstein.

It is expected that publications nominations will be made at a meeting Monday at 4 o'clock in the Roland Parker lounge. Party meetings have traditionally been open for all students on campus who are not members of another political party and a motion to expel a member failed by a large margin at Wednesday's meeting.

Commissions Open In Marine Corps To UNC Veterans

Veterans of any branch of the service now attending the University may obtain commissions in the Marine Corps by enlisting in the Corp's newly-launched platoon leader's classes, Capt. R. W. Smith, Jr., USMC, said today.

"Students selected for the program are enlisted in the Marine Corps Reserve (Inactive)," explained Capt. Smith. "As reservists, they are subject to call to active duty only during a state of national emergency, unless they request such assignment. All training is conducted during the summer months, none during the college academic year."

Students enlisted in the program will take their traninig in two summer periods at Quantico, Va., receiving corporal's pay during the first phase and sergeant's during the second. After graduation from the University the trainees will be eligible for appointment to the rank of Second Lieutenant, U. S. Marine Corps Reserve.

All interested applicants are asked to contact Capt. Smith at the Naval Armory, sometime between March 10 and the 22, between the hours of 9:30 and 4:30.

Seniors Must Get Graduation Bids

Dotson Palmer, president of the senior class, has urged all seniors to order graduation invitations from the Grail booth in the YMCA as soon as possible.

Prices are $.35 apiece for leather covered booklets while the paper covered are $.25 each. Personal name cards have to be ordered separately.

The booth in the YMCA will be open between the hours of 9 and 1 and 2 and 5 o'clock daily.

Di Senate Gives Shropshire Award

Meeting Wednesday evening the Dialectic Senate awarded their retiring president for the past two quarters, Don Shropshire, a Certificate of Honor. This award, given for outstanding work and accomplishments in the Di, is the highest honor that can be bestowed upon a member.

Two bills were debated and passed by the Senate in their last session of the winter quarter.

By a vote of 14-0, a bill was passed opposing the actions of the Un-American Activities committee of the United States Congress.

A bill in favor of increasing subsistance allowances of all single veterans attending college to $85 a month and all married veterans allowances to $110 a month was passed over strong opposition led by Dan McFarland. Charlie Long and Dick Owen led the fight for passage of the bill.

A copy of this resolution will be sent to the senators and congressmen from North Carolina.

Two members, Earl Fitzgerald and George Rabil, were initiated into the Senate.

Inauguration ceremonies for the new officers will be held March 26.

Four Students Enter Writing In Arts Forum

Annual Event at WC Set for March 20, 21

The writing of four University of North Carolina students has been singled out for discussion at the Fourth Annual Arts forum to be held at Woman's college in Greensboro on March 20-22.

UNC authors honored by inclusion of their work in this forum of nation-wide interest are Ralph W. Hyde, Edgar Bowers, Paul Ramsey, Jr., and Don Justice. Hyde's contribution is the short story, 'Gabe and the Will of God," while the other men are represented by poetry. Three out of the four writers have had stories and poems published in the Carolina Magazine this year. Ramsey, Bowers, and Justice are members of the Carolina Writers club.

The Arts forum, which has quickly grown into a position of great importance both within the state and cutside, was started as a small scale experiment in 1944. The second year it discussed work only from three colleges, all within the state. In 1946 the Writing forum took on a regional character and was representative of undergraduate work from 10 Southern colleges.

This year, the writing represents undergraduate efforts selected from 159 pieces of verse and 138 of prose submitted from 23 colleges. Such institutions as Kenyon, Bard and Hollins college, the Universities of Oklahoma, Tulane, Virginia, Iowa, Duke and Alabama are among those whose students' work will be discussed at the forum.

The panel of critics for the three-day session is led by Robert Penn Warren, author of the recent best-seller "All the Kings Men" and one of America's outstanding literary critics. Other members on the board include UNC English department men Lyman A. Cotten and Charles E. Eaton, and the Sewanee Review editor, John E. Palmer.

In announcing the Forum officials invited all interested students from UNC to attend the series of lectures, addresses and seminars. Fee for the entire program is one dollar. In addition to the purely literary, there will be the presentation of T. S. Eliot's verse-play "Murder in the Cathedral," an exhibition of student-paintings from colleges throughout the nation.

Taylor Says Recent Bills Tend to Protect Trusts

Idaho Senator Praises Work of Lilienthal In Address Sponsored by CPU Last Evening

"The numerous bills which have been introduced in Congress for the purpose of taking different industries out of the anti-trust laws constitute the greatest threat to anti-trust enforcement today," Glen H. Taylor, Idaho's banjo playing Democratic Senator, declared in a campus address last evening.

Senator Taylor named bills exempting newspapers from the coverage of anti-trust laws, which he said would destroy the effect of the Supreme court's decision in the Associated press case; the bill to exempt insurance companies, "making it possible for them to conspire together to increase premiums and decrease services, and the Bulwinkle bill, which would exempt railroads from the coverage of the anti-trust laws."

The Senator's address given in Memorial hall, was sponsored by the Carolina Political union, non-partisan student organization headed by Jerry Davidoff.

Banquet at Inn

Preceding the address, the Senator, who was accompanied by his wife, was guest of honor at a banquet at the Carolina inn. Introducing him to the Memorial hall audience was Wilkins P. Horton, former lieutenant governor and president North Carolina member of the Democratic National committee, who was also a special guest at the banquet.

Other guests included columnists Lynn Nisbet and W. T. Bost of Raleigh; Harry Ganderson, Greensboro attorney and one of the founders of the CPU, and Bernice Wechsler, president of the Woman's college International Relations club.

Railroad Monopolies

Senator Taylor said "the problem of railroad monopolies is one in which I feel an especial interest here tonight, for it is one of the most dramatic bonds between the west and the south. My part of the country suffers from the same difficulties as yours, and the solution to our problems is quite similar," he declared.

"The south and the west occupy a semi-colonial status, and both of us are producers of raw materials," he said. "We do not even manufacture the finished products we buy in our own retail stores. We grow and mine and we ship our raw materials to other parts of the country to be finished.

"Our economy thus remains unbalanced, and railroad freight rates are among the chief causes of this unfair situation," he asserted.

Senator Taylor said freight rates have been arranged "so as to permit the east to take the raw materials out of the south and the west cheaply and, at the same time, to block any attempt on their part to ship finished products—a neat way of guaranteeing that the south and the west would lose the advantage and profit from processing their own raw materials.

Cheap Electricity

"If we are to develop the west and the south, we need new sources of cheap electricity," Senator Taylor pointed out. "We must continue to develop our rivers, irrigation, flood control and navigation."

Referring to the TVA which he described as "the dream of a small group of determined legislators who zealously dedicated themselves to the public good, bringing cheap electric power to homes and farms throughout the region, Senator Taylor said the operation of TVA, under Davil Lilienthal, is "receiving a brilliant administration along the non-partisan, non-political lines prescribed in the original act.

"But while Mr. Lilienthal received the plaudits of the people of the area, he earned the undying enmity of the political bosses," he declared. "With puritanical inflexibility he refused to compromise with them in any way, rejecting their importunities to load the TVA payroll with political appointees. His eyes and the eyes of his colleagues were fixed on the goal of public service."

Desire to Destroy TVA

Senator Taylor said he believed the

Piano Recital Will Be Given By Groseclose

Frank Groseclose, senior from Atlanta, Ga., will present a piano recital Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock in Hill hall in the fourth of a series of student recitals presented by students in the University Music department.

Groseclose, a pupil of Dr. William S. Newman, has written music for dance, and incidental music to an experimental play produced in the spring of 1946 by the Carolina Playmakers. He is a member of the Men's Glee club, and was one of the accompanists for last year's Christmas concert by the combined glee clubs in Memorial Hall.

The program will include representative works from the baroque Viennese classical, romantic, and modern periods, including a J. S. Bach toccata and a sonata by Charles Koechlin, contemporary French composer. America will be represented in the program by a work of Ernest Bloch.

ROTC Summer Cruise Set for West Indies

Plans for the annual summer cruise of University NROTC students have been released by the local Navy unit, and tentatively call for a trip to Panama, Bermuda, and through the West Indies. Student trainees will report to the Naval Academy at Annopolis, on June 19, embark on a carrier, a cruiser and four destroyers on June 21, and return to Norfolk, August 15. Contract seniors of the Unit will accompany the convoy on a light cruiser for three weeks, but will return to Norfolk July 11.

Cruise schedules for freshmen and other students not participating in the above maneuvers have not been made as yet.

One or two of the Navy officers stationed at the University will also make the eight week cruise.

Broadway Comes to Chapel Hill...

'Arms and the Man' Will Be Presented Here By Barter Theatre Actors Monday Evening

By Harry Snowden

Broadway comes to Chapel Hill Monday evening when the Barter theatre presents George Bernard Shaw's "Arms and the Man" in Memorial hall. Featuring such stars as Chaucy Horsley, Herbert Nelson, and Tom McDermott

Many of the Barter Players have appeared in Broadway productions and all have had extensive experience in the theatre. Chaucy Horsley, the leading lady, is called "a theatrical phenomenon, an actress who grew up on the 'Great White Way'." Under the direction of Robert Porterfield, the Barter theatre members have gained a reputation of being as versatile as they are talented.

Most Successful Comedy

As amusing and ironically true as when Shaw first conceived it, this play has been one of the modern theatre's most successful comedies. It was first introduced by Richard Mansfield in 1899 and since then has been performed with great success by such stars as Arnold Daly, Lunt and Fontanne, and the Old Vic's Laurence Oliver and Ralph Richardson.

"Arms and the Man" should appeal to many of the ex-G.I.'s on the campus because it is a satirical comedy based on the story of the professional soldier as compared to the war-time soldier," says the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot. "It is impressive for the timelinness of its message, delivered in the dry, rapier-like wit of Shaw's superb dialogue, dispelling many fanciful delusions about gloves of war and the nobility of heroes, yes, and of heroines, too."

Herbert Nelson and Chaucy Horsley play a love scene from George Bernard Shaw's brilliant satire on war, "Arms and The Man," a Barter theatre presentation.

The proceeds will go to the Carolina Dames club, an organization of student wives, to provide a social medium for its members. Tickets can be purchased at the Y or Ledbetter Pickard's.

Procedure and Policy

The following article was prepared for publication by the Men's Council.

For the information of all students this statement is prepared as a summary of principles underlying the Honor System, and as a guide for uniform policy and procedure to be followed by students.

THE PRACTICAL SUCCESS OF THE HONOR SYSTEM DEPENDS UPON THE FOLLOWING:

1. General recognition of cheating as a serious offense, not to be tolerated, against society in general, against the University, and against the integrity of the student body. Emphasis is needed on the words serious offense. Honor System or no Honor System, cheating is the sign of dishonor.

2. Full understanding of the Honor System by both the students and faculty. Understanding makes for support and the wholehearted support of all is required. Through meetings with members of the Men's Council and other old students, students new to the campus have the Honor System carefully explained to them. The same information is explained to new members of the faculty at the beginning of the school year by Administration officials. It is expected that your instructor will discuss the Honor System with your class near the begining of each quarter. Such discussion has a double benefit in that it makes for an understanding between the instructor and the student of the system and precludes possible cause for future reports of violation.

3. Maintenance of conditions and atmosphere condusive to honorable conduct, and action to minimize temptation and disregard for honor. Each student has the duty not only to conduct himself honorably but also to avoid the appearance of dishonor. Specifically, during examinations, students are expected to take alternate seats where room facilities permit, and lay aside their notebooks, texts, and papers, and to refrain from talking after the examiniation begins.

4. Complete awarenes of duties by administration, faculty, and students, especially the refusal to ignore cheating when it occurs. The student has the duty to take action when he sees cheating. He may report the accurence to the instructor, the office of the Dean of Men, or the Men's Council. The instructor has the duty to report any case of cheating to the office of the Dean of Men, the Men's Council, or to the Faculty Executive Committee.

5. Prompt and severe punishment of any found guilty of cheating. The Men's Council and the Faculty Executive Committee are under obligation, upon review of all evidence and testimony, to pass sentence summarily on any found guilty.

Each student should sign the pledge in full for all quizzes and outside work which is required to be his own.

To Change Subject

There comes a time in the life of every editor when he is so swamped by a deluge of letters that he can't turn around without having another dropped into his lap.

So we decided to call a halt to all letters on race problem with yesterday' issue. We devoted two columns to letters on the subject in yesterday's paper. It would be impossible to print them all. We feel that the student body is tired of the controversy and the letters, most of which are irrational, to say the least. Therefore, we printed what to us seem to be the most rational letters on the subject. We'd like to call the case closed with yesterday's edition. The whole issue has been washed and dried and still boils down to one fact—clear, rational, progressive thinking and cooperation is the only solution to any problem.

DTH Play Review....

Herculean Efforts of Cast Carry Poorly Written Play

By R. Haskell Hamilton

The premiere of "Hear the Hammers Ringing," a new American play by Cid Ricketts Sumner, with settings by Lynn Gault, Costumes by Irene Smart, and Direction by Kai Jurgensen.

An ambitious Playmaker production was undertaken Wednesday night when Cid Ricketts Sumner's new American play "Hear the Hammers Ringing," opened in the Playmakers theater. The show was excellently cast, properly directed, authentically costumed and presented in one of the finest settings yet to come out of the magical talents of Lynn Gault. But, unfortunately, "the play is the thing," and no matter how much time, effort and talent is expanded there is nothing that can make a poor play into a good one.

"Hear the Hammers Ringing" has it's good moments, and generally held the interest of the audience. However, that is probably more rightly attributed to the unusual theme and an occasional sparkling line of dialog; rather than the over all intrinsic worth of the play. Mrs. Sumner has caught the feelings, moods, and attitudes of the Southern American Negro, but unfortunately she hasn't made the best use of her medium, namely a play.

The major portion of the first act is given over to some tedious exposition probably justified as "setting the mood." In transposing the play from the original novel form, Mrs. Sumner has retained too much of the narrative of the story and has failed to realize that on the stage verbose dialog is not needed to set the mood and establish character, as it is in a novel. On the stage we can see, watch and follow the characters in the flesh, thus obviating the necessity of long exposition. Or, to be briefer, it seemed to me that much of the first act was entirely immaterial to the crux of the play which appears to be, "can a Negro inherit a valuable piece of property" in a rural, hide-bound by tradition area of Mississippi?

The second act is better than the first, due largely to the fine handling of the crowd by director Kai Jurgensen. However, even it can be shortened to good advantage if Mrs. Sumner would cut the entire action and speech immediately after Judge Shoreham's decision. That, to all dramatic purposes is the end of the act.

It isn't until the third act, (much too late to save the show) that the play really begins. Miss Sumner's misplaced emphasis ignores the crux of the conflict in her situation which is actually the way the community and the Negroes react after they move into the "Big House," and set up the Negro hospital.

Individual laurels for the performance should properly be bestowed on Eileen Smith for her courtroom scene as "Pinkey" and Robert Armstrong for a realistic portrayal as "Jake." Rue Guthrie moved through a small part as "Rozelia" with feeling and delightful voice shadings. "Miss Em" as played by Jane Hutson was a convincing role, for the most part; although Miss Hutson occasionally forgot she was playing an eighty year old lady.

Eleanor Ringer, Winford Logan, Madeline Cooley and Gordon Bennett were others in the cast who did their best to lift the play out of the mediocre category. But, even their herculean efforts were not enough to overcome such bad writing as the first scene in the third act when an old, feeble, infirm, senile Negro woman smells "smoke, like somp'n burning," while two young, virile educated modern Negroes attribute it to "some coffee grounds I spilled on the stove," and go gaily on chatting about the woods and trees.

The cast in order of appearance included Granny, Lillian Prince; The Postman, James Warren; Pinkey, Eileen Smith; Jake, Robert Armstrong; Arch Naughton, Porter Van Zandt; Rozelia, Rue Guthrie; Miss Em, Jane Hutson; Dr. Joe, Robert Epstein; Mrs. Melba Wooley, Eleanor Ringer; Miss Sue Ann Walker, Madeline Cooley; Judge Walker, Fred Johnson; Stanley, Winford Logan; Judge Shoreham, W. P. Covington, III; Clerk of Court, Harry Thomas; Officer Dalton, Gordon Bennett; Court Stenographer, Martin Jacobs; Sheriff, Claude Rayborn; Deputy, Churchill Womble; Policeman, Edgar Garrett; 1st Countryman, Arthur Solomon; 2nd Countryman, Richard Katzin; 3rd Counrtyman, Mark R. Sumner; Sister Carrie, Mary Jo Cain; 1st Negro Woman, Henrietta Cooper; 1st Negro Man, Churchill Womble; 2nd Negro Man, Francis Olds; 3rd Negro Man, Tread Covington; Frank Canady, Sidney Shertzer; Additional white members of crowd, Helen Brown, Alice Ross, Lois Warnshuis, Judith Kremen, Barbara Bramble, Arthur Early, Carlos Rico, Peter Bucknell; and Additional Negro members of crowd, Julia Pancake, Phyllis Isenhour.

Misleading

Dear Bill:

In the report on the meeting of the Cabinet which was presented in the Daily Tar Heel Wednesday morning there were several statements published concerning the report from the Men's Council which were presented in a misleading manner.

The work which is being done on the files of the Council is designed to make easy reference for checking old cases and to act as a double check on the accuracy of the recording of the hearings.

As to the question involving orientation, no inference was intended that our major task had been the orientation of the faculty rather than the students. It is true that the Council recognizes the fact that both new students and faculty should be familiarized with the operation of the Honor System. The emphasis which is placed on this problem is governed by the magnitude of the demand or the need.

The Men's Council has received fine cooperation from both the faculty and the students in its work.

The statement which is to be distributed to the members of the faculty is similar to the statement which appears in the Daily Tar Heel this morning. The statement is self-explanatory.

Sincerely,
PETE PULLY
Chairman of Men's Council.

Threat of American Disunity Menaces World Position

By Bill Patterson

If we wish to continue our useful role in world affairs, America must maintain internal unity. The swiftly developing fight in this country between "right" and "left" menaces our international position.

National party politics has nothing to do with this disunity. Competition among parties is a healthy token of our democracy in a world of growing totalitarianism.

However, the "conservatives," in their hysterical fear of "communism," are striking blindly, but with telling force, at "everything that moves" to their left. The way things are going now, it all may end in a free for all, knock down, drag 'em out battle between all "leftist" and "rightist" elements.

Such a situation can prove disastrous to our global prestige at the very time when we are being held up for rigorous examination by Russia.

Who is in a position to bring order out of this impending chaos?—we, the people, the great mass in the middle, who may be best described as "liberals" regardless of our political party affiliations. We must act to isolate these belligerant "left" and "right" minorities in our midst, and let them fight it out among themselves.

But, where shall we draw the line between the great mass of liberals and the extremist minorities? The principle problem is where to draw the line on the left.

A recently formed nationwide association of liberals, the Americans for Democratic Action, was faced with the same problem. It chose to draw the boundary on the left to exclude all "communists and fellow travelers." (This puts Mr. Henry Wallace in a position where he apparently must choose between "liberalism" and "communism.")

Charles G. Bolte, Dave Dubinsky, Walter Reuther, Reinhold Niebuhr, Leon Henderson and Wilson W. Wyatt are among the leaders of the organization. (Our Dr. Frank Graham is on the Committee of the Whole of the A.D.A.)

Above all, we, as students and citizens, need to know what the score is in state, national and international affairs.

The final decisions in politics are made by the average voter. He doesn't need expert knowledge to make those decisions; he just needs straight thinking.

One way to approach sensible conclusions is through intelligent reading. Another is to discuss things among ourselves, swapping viewpoints in informal "bull sessions," or taking an active part in such discussion groups as the Carolina Political Union and the International Relations Club.

State Crew Favored To Top Small Field

Defending champion diver Buddy Crone of North Carolina will be among the stars scheduled to swim here today and tomorrow in the annual Southern Conference meet, which is being revived after a lapse since 1943.

All events in the two-day meet have been scheduled for the afternoon, to enable many of the visitors to the conference basketball tourney to witness the tank event. Preliminaries will begin at 3 o'clock today and the finals at 3 o'clock tomorrow.

Small Field

A small field of four teams, including Carolina, State, VMI, and Duke are entered in the competition this year, but the entries make up for lack of numbers by the number of outstanding individual entries.

North Carolina State has been established a favorite to take the meet title away from the Blue Dolphins of Carolina. With Bill Kelly and Bill Ward as the main stars, the Raleigh team has a well-rounded team whose only loss during the season was a forfeit to the Tar Heels.

Carolina, with six wins and two losses, is rated a change to upset the Red Terrors in the tank classic. With Captain Warren Ficklen and Norman Sper slated for three events each, Jesse Greenbaum in the sprints, Jerry Cook and Pete Hexner in the breaststroke, and Mac Erle and Crone on the diving board, the Tar Heel mermen have a strong team that are expected to make trouble for all comers.

Duke has a team headed by Captain Bill Adams, a 220 and 440 star who is undefeated in the 440 in competition this season. Carolina's Ficklen handed Adams his first 220-yard loss at Durham Wednesday. Other Devilfish stars include Woody Venable, Bob Strickland, Bill Bronson and Ken Saturday.

Bill Harrington of VMI is another ace gunning for individual honors. One of the top sprint men in the circuit, Harrington recently broke the conference 50-meter record.

Hamilton Hits 20 to Star In Opening Round Triumph

Scottmen Quintet To Face South Carolina In Semi-Final Tourney Clash This Evening

By Irwin Smallwood

Duke Indoor Stadium, Durham, March 6——Carolina's White Phantoms got hot in the second half to cool off the Richmond Spiders, 55-43, in the final game of the opening day's activities of the Southern conference cage tournament here tonight.

Outscoring their opponents by 18 to 7 in the final eight minutes, the Phantoms, led by Wizard Jim Hamilton, closed with a rush to register their ninth consecutive victory. Hamilton hit the high mark for a Carolina player this season by bucketing a total of 20 points, 12 coming in the final half.

The triumph placed the Carolina quintet in a semi-final battle tonight against South Carolina, starting at 9:15 o'clock. In the other semi-final clash at 7:30 o'clock, top-seeded N. C. State will encounter George Washington.

Tight Defense

The Phantoms spent much of the game in trying to solve the tight Richmond defense. On the short end of the score up to the halfway mark in the first period, Carolina finally broke through to deadlock the count at 10-all and again at 12-all. Goals by Jim White and Hamilton plus a successful charity throw by Nemo Nearman gave the Scottmen their widest margin of the first half, a 17-12 lead.

The Spiders finally closed the gap and pulled into a 19-19 tie after 15 minutes of play. Two quick goals by Bob Paxton aided the Phantoms to a 25-21 intermission count. Paxton and Hamilton showed the way in the opening half with eight points each.

The two high-scoring Carolina pointmakers continued the pace in the second half by quickly upping the score to 28-21. But Richmond, definitely not ready to give up this early, came back strong and scored four quick points to pull within three of Carolina. Hamilton, Norm Kohler and White ran the score up to 37-28 but the Spiders again got hot to tally six straight markers to make the score 37-34. After the two teams traded goals, the Tar Heels began their final spurt that resulted in victory.

The tough zone defense that the Spiders set up caused the Scottmen no end of trouble all the way. At one time midway during the second helf, the Phantoms froze the ball for four minutes, giving it up only when the Richmond players broke up their defenese to come after the ball.

White, with 15 markers, and Paxton, with his usual brilliant floor game and 12 points, were big guns in the Carolina attack along with Hamilton. The Phantoms hit for an average of 41 per cent while the Spiders averaged 27 per cent.

In the evening's first encounter, George Washington held the upper hand all the way in a free-scoring affair and were never threatened by the Washington and Lee quint. The Colonials won the game 70-44.

Gamecocks Upset Duke in Opener; State Easy Victor

DURHAM, March 6—The opening clash of the 1947 Southern conference tournament produced the first and only upset of the first round when a fighting South Carolina quintet that simply refused to lie down and play dead turned the tables on favored Duke, 56-54, in the Duke gym this afternoon.

In the other afternoon encounter, N. C. State breezed through as expected to a 55-43 triumph over Maryland. Except for a few anxious moments halfway through the second half, the top-seeded Terrors had things all their own way throughout the contest.

The Duke-South Carolina battle was a thriller for the full 40 minutes, with the advantage continually changing hands back and forth. The Blue Devils held the lead for a good part of the first half but the Gamecocks grabbed the advantage shortly before intermission, at which time they led by 32-29.

Adams Scores 21

After play was resumed in the second half, the host team came back to knot the count at 34-34 after five minutes of action, but South Carolina immediately moved out in front and were never headed thereafter. Mainly through the efforts of center Al Adams, playing a great game while marking up 21 points, the Gamecocks finally emerged victoriaus after the Blue Devils saw their chances for a late victory go astray in the form of innumerable missed shots.

In the second game of the day, State jumped to a quick lead and held the upper hand all the way. Ahead by 8-6 after five minutes, the Red Terrors stretched the margin to 23-12 at the 15-minute mark and held a 32-20 lead at halftime.

The Old Liners gave the Raleigh quintet a tougher battle in the second half, narrowing the gap to a 39-33 level at the 10-minute mark. But that was all for Maryland, State coming back strong to win by an easy margin.

Baseball Candidates Hold Indoor Session; Many Lettermen Out

Forced indoors by inclement weather after two days of outdoor sessions, the large group of diamond candidates ran through indoor paces yesterday in the Tin Can.

Running and throwing drills took up the major part of the practice as the baseball hopefuls, including a host of lettermen, limbering up under the watchful eyes of Coach Walt Rabb. The drills are slated to return to Emerson field this afternoon at 3 o'clock, weather permitting, and will also be held Saturday at 3 o'clock.

Many Lettermen Report

Fifteen lettermen have already reported to Coach Rabb, who has taken over the baseball duties while veteran Coach Bunn Hearn is recuperating from a recent illness. Four pitchers are among the monogram-winners, namely Monk Whiteneart, Hamp Coleman and Vinnie DiLorenzo, all back from last year's team, and Tommy Andrews, from the 1944 outfit. Lettermen catchers include Dub Johnson, first-baseman and co-captain-elect from 1943 and now working out as a receiver, and Shot Cox.

All freshman or sophomores interested in a baseball manager's position should contact Coach Rabb immediately.

Infield prospects are also bolstered by five lettermen, headed by co-captain Johnny Gregory at first base. Others include Freddy Ryan and Bo Hackney from last year and Dallas Branch and Cookie DiChiara from the 1944 club. In the outfield, Jack Hussey and Kenny Black are returnees from the strong 1943 team, while co-captain Harry Beason and Tom Clayton are back from last year.

In addition to these lettermen and the many newcomers who are out, more candidates, including a catcher from last year, Jim Hayworth, are expected out next week after the basketball windup.

Another game has been added to the Carolina schedule, bringing the total up to 27. The additional clash has the Tar Heels journeying to Greenville, S. C., on April 21 for a Southern conference tussle against Furman.

Matmen Rated High in Meet

Eight-Man Unit Sent To Lexington Event

(Special To Daily Tar Heel)

LEXINGTON, VA., Mar. 6.—The University of North Carolina wrestling team, which won six out of six matches in conference competition during the regular season, arrived here late this afternoon and went through a light workout in preparation for the Southern conference tournament which gets underway here tomorrow afternoon.

Parings will be made in the morning just after the contestants weigh in for the afternoon bouts. Seedings are also expected to be made at that time.

Co-Favorites

Carolina's grapplers are rated as co-favorites with the potent mat crew from Virginia Military Institute, and the Tar Heels hold a slight edge over the Cadets by virtue of their victory over them earlier in the season.

A full contigent of eight wrestlers is on hand to represent Carolina, and three of them are unbeaten in loop battles. Co-Captains Tommy Hearn, a 128-pounder, and Dick Seaver, a 145-pounder are both undefeated in conference competition, and Oscar Gupton, the 165-pounder, has a perfect record in all eight regular season matches of this season. Hearn also is unbeaten in all eight matches, which added to an undefeated string of six last season gives Hearn a victory streak of 14 in a row.

Representing Carolina in the tournament, which is the first since 1942 when VMI nosed out Carolina for the title, are Doug Thompson at 121, Hearn at 128, Demont Roseman at 136, Seaver at 145, Irving Zirpel at 155, Oscar Gupton at 165, Bill Kemp at 175 and Laurie Hooper at heavyweight.

attack on Lilienthal and "upon Mr. Clapp, the President's appointee as new TVA chairman, is in large part motivated by a desire to destroy TVA. Indeed, one Senator who voted against Mr. Clapp said: 'I voted against him because I am opposed to the TVA and the philosophy behind it.'

"Now what would that Senator want? Does he propose to vote against every presidential nominee, merely for the purpose of keeping TVA without a chairman, and thus stifling it? Or does he want the President to appoint, as head of TVA, someone who does not believe in it, and who will sabotage it?

"Would it not be more honest and more direct to introduce a bill to repeal the Tennessee Valley Act? The fights against Clapp and Lilienthal are part of the price we pay for permitting monopoly to grow," Senator Taylor declared. "For one of the most vicious aspects of monopoly is its tendency to maintain enormous and well-financed lobbies in Washington for the purpose of influencing the course of legislation."

100th Anniversary of the Birth of Alexander Graham Bell • March 3, 1947

He gave the world a new voice

ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL
by Moffett, 1918.

Alexander Graham Bell was a teacher of the deaf. He was also a trained scientist who made it possible for millions upon millions of people to hear each other by telephone.

The telephone brought something into the world that had not been there before.

For the first time people were able to talk to each other even though separated by long distances.

Horizons broadened. A new industry was born, destined to employ hundreds of thousands of men and women and be of service to everyone in the land.

Alexander Graham Bell was a great humanitarian, not only as a teacher of the deaf, but in his vision of the benefits the telephone could bring to mankind.

Bell's vision has come true. It keeps on being an essential part of this nation-wide public service.

UN Emergency Palestine Plan Blocked by U.S.

British, Russians Accept Proposals

Lake Success, March 7—(UP)—The United States has blocked emergency consideration of the Palestine problem by the United Nations.

An official American spokesman says this country cannot make up its mind on the best way to handle the Palestine case in the United Nations, because Britain has not made a "concrete formulation" of the problem.

This statement is interpreted as being a diplomatic way of telling the British that the United States will not commit itself on any step until Britain had made more clear what it wants the U.N. to do about its mandate in the Holy Land.

Blocks Emergency Group

In effect, the American statement also blocks the plan for a 10-or-12-nation emergency committee to begin sifting the facts in the Palestine controversy.

Britain, France, China and Russia are understood to have accepted the plan proposed by Trygve Lie "in principle, but Lie dares not go ahead with the proposal unless the United States joins in.

Britain Doubts U. S. Pacific Trusteeship

Lake Success, N. Y., March 7—(UP)—Great Britain has expressed doubts that the United States, in advance of the peace treaty with Japan, has a right to exclusive trusteeship of the Japanese-mandated Pacific Islands. Anti-Liquor Forces Gain Lost Ground In State Assembly

Raleigh, March 7—(UP)— North Carolina's anti-liquor forces have gained back a little of the ground they lost in the Legislature yesterday. A Senate Finance Committee approved two liquor referendum proposals, but the committee has decided to hold up its unfavorable report on one of the statewide vote proposals.

The unfavorable report that's being held up is the one on Senator Chaffin's bill. Senator Gordon Gray of Winston-Salem, the chairman of the committee, says there's been a misunderstanding. He says Chaffin didn't know his bill was to be heard and voted on yesterday, consequently, Chaffin didn't show up at the Capitol. Therefore, Gray says, the committee will reconsider Chaffin's referendum bill next week.

Meanwhile, the House has received the $313,000,000 revenue act for the next biennium. The act provides funds for footing the state's appropriation bills. It will be the first order of business next Tuesday. But while the House will act on it first, copies of the record-shattering bill also are being handed to senators for study.

The Senate has approved a so-called [illegible] bill, which would keep information gathered by the State Bureau of Investigation confidential until released by a competent court. The house had approved it previously.

Joyce Corbett was elected president of the Tri-Delta sorority in an election meeting last Wednesday evening. The other officers elected are: Jean Anne Ramsdell, vice-president; Pat Ivey, secretary; Jean Stoutenberg, treasurer; Norma Hotard, house president; Evelyn Pettitt, rush chairman; Lois Sunstrum, marshall; and Kitty Miller, chaplain. The officers will be installed formally on March 20.

New Campus Party Nominates Eller

Two-Day-Old Political Group Names Jones Leader; Lineback Selected Vice-Chairman

By Sam Whitehall

Hearlding its appearance with a flock of posters announcing its platform, a third political group, the Campus party, came to light yesterday morning, and at a meeting in the afternoon nominated Tom Eller as its candidate for student body president.

Johnny Jones, secretary-treasurer of the student body and Candlelight room manager, is chairman of the new party. Other officers are Kenneth Lineback, vice-chairman and publicity manager; Tom Lookhart, secretary-treasurer; and Steve Millikin, business manager.

Thirty at Meeting

Other than the announcement that Eller, already SP candidate for president, had been nominated on the Campus party ticket, no details on the meeting yesterday are available. It is reported that about 20 students attended.

The new party is apparently built around the same group that walked out of the Student party Wednesday when the SP refused to oust Al Lowenstein from membership. Jones had been named chairman of the SP only last week upon the resignation of Bill Mackie. He was elected secretary-treasurer on the Student party ticket last spring.

The CP vice-chairman, Kenneth Lineback, was successful SP candidate for dormitory legislator in the election last December.

List Ten Objectives

Describing the CP as "the most representative body of the students," the posters listed ten objectives, including establishment of a student bank, improvement of janitor, telephone, Quonset hut facilities, and recreational equipment; and installation of a stoplight at Cameron and Raleigh street.

The split in the SP developed earlier this winter when nominations for student body vice-president were being considered.

CP chairman Jones announced last night that the new group would meet Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Candlelight room.

University String Quartet To Present Second Concert

The newly formed University String quartet will present its second concert of the year Monday evening at 8:30 in Hill hall. Composed of Willis Gates, first violin, Dorothy Alden, second violin, Edgar Alden, viola, and Emily Porter, cello, the group made its first public appearance early in December in a joint program with Nancy Brock, dancer.

All members of the quartet are also members of the University Symphony orchestra, which has presented two concerts this year. Gates, as concertmaster of the Symphony, is a graduate assistant in the music department. He attended Peabody conservatory and was an instructor at State Teachers' college in Alabama until he joined the faculty here in 1945.

With N. C. Symphony

Professor and Mrs. Alden are well known in the state, having served as concertmaster and concertmistress of the North Carolina Symphony orchestra. Both are graduates of Oberlin conservatory, and taught at Meredith college in Raleigh. At present professor Alden is a graduate assistant in the music department.

Miss Porter, also a graduate assistant in the music department, has studied cello with Sterling Hunkins, first cellist with the Dallas Symphony orchestra, and is a graduate of the Woman's college in Greensboro.

Assisting on the program will be Earl Slocum, flutist, and Wilton Mason, pianist. The program will include Mozart's "Quartet for Flute, Violin, Viola, and Cello," Beethoven's "Quartet for Two Violins, Viola and Cello," and the "Quintet for Piano and Strings," by Dvorak.

PREMEDICAL GROUP INITIATES

Jack Wilder and Dewey Dorsett, student body president, were recently initiated into Alpha Epsilon Delta, national honorary premedical fraternity. Officers of AED are Tom York, president; Charles Zukoski, vice-president; Hayden Lutterloh, secretary-treasurer; and Benson McCutcheon, program chairman.

Other members are Henry Shadlock, Jack Kirkland, Robert Sink, Conway Rose, Paul Walters, Sidney Gardner, Edward McKenzie, Arthur Shain, Robert Hamburger, Alex Veazey, James Patton, Jack Hamilton, and Jack Shiller.

Ocean Liner Burns At New York Pier

New York, March 7—(UP)— The world's biggest and busiest port had a bad scare today with the worst New York harbor disaster since the Normandie blaze, five years ago.

The fire broke out aboard the 16-and-a-half-thousand ton U. S. liner John Ericsson. Four alarms were sounded. The Coast Guard, fire engines, fire boats, and ambulances were rushed to the scene. The billowing smoke caused a minor panic aboard the mighty Queen Elizabeth, anchored nearby. However the passengers were quieted and the British liner sailed on schedule late today.

At first there was no determining how many, if any, were injured. Firemen fought the blaze raging on two decks under cover of heavy smoke. The fire blazed for more than two hours before it was brought under control.

A check, then, showed that three crewmen aboard the Ericsson—she usually carries 685 men—were overcome by smoke, but only one was hospitalized. No other casualties were reported.

The blaze apparently started in a short circuit in an elevator shaft, and spread quickly through the main and promenade decks, where crewmen battled to keep it down, until forced to abandon ship.

The Ericsson was scheduled to leave at noon today for Europe.

Local Veterans Office Warns Policy Holders

Veterans who [illegible] "lapse notices" on their National Service life insurance when they are confident they have made all of their premium payments should immediately bring any evidence of payment to the attention of Elliott G. Bourne, local veteran's training officer in Peabody hall.

Delay in the crediting of payments with premiums accounts occurred in some cases because of the heavy volume of work at VA's Richmond branch office incident to decentralization of insurance accounts to that office from New York, he explained.

In this connection, all insured veterans were cautioned to retain all records of all premium payments made in any form whatsoever—cancelled checks, money order stubs and so forth.

Bourne also stated that a veteran may now reinstate his insurance policy without a physical examination.

In all correspondence with the Veterans administration relative to NSLI policies, veterans should always include their "N" or "V" number and if they have more than one policy, their "FN" or "FV" numbers. These are NSLI policy or certificate numbers, not service numbers.

Ole Kollege Professor Keeps Saying Reports Are Just Lot of Bunk

Raleigh, March 7—(UP)—The Ole Professor of radio fame—Kay Kyser from Rocky Mount, is still denying those humors that he may run for governor in 1948. But the famous band leader is spending more time moving around North Carolina now than he has in a long time.

Today Kyser paid his second visit to the State Capitol to visit the General Assembly. Last time he made a speech, but today he only shook hands and greeted friends in the lobbies. The bespectacled musician insists his only political interest is in the Good Health program now before the General Assembly.

Kyser paid a surprise informal visit to State College in Raleigh this afternoon and then headed to Rocky Mount with his old friend, House Speaker Tom Pearsall. Like Kyser, Pearsall has been mentioned as a possible candidate for governor. But he hasn't made any public statement about his intentions.

Post-War Action Group Will Hold Discussion

The Post War action committee of Woman's college in Greensboro announces a Sunday discussion group on Socialized Medicine to be held at the Alumnae house tomorrow afternoon at 2:45. The college physician, Dr. Ruth Collins, Dr. Shivers of the Sociology department, and a local physician, Dr. LeBeur, will lead the forum in which students from Carolina are invited.

WDUK Opens Branch Outlet In Chapel Hill

Radio station WDUK will open a Chapel Hill branch Monday afternoon in the showrooms of the Strowd Motor Co., it has been announced by Harmon L. Duncan, general manager of the station.

Opening ceremonies will be held at 3:45 Monday afternoon at which time Mayor Madry will welcome the new unit to the village.

It is planned to broadcast every day except Sunday from 3:45 to 5 o'clock and during this time the Durham station of WDUK will be silenced and the local programs will be beamed directly through the station's transmitter located between Chapel Hill and Durham. Duncan stated that present plans call for a local man, possibly a student in the Communications center, to be in charge of the programs. Auditions for the position are being held today.

Interest to Chapel Hillians

Programs will be designed so as to be of maximum interest to Chapel Hill residents. Village merchants and other advertisers in the community will sponsor broadcasts. Local talent will be used as far as possible and it is hoped that announcers and technicians can be obtained from the classes in the Communication center. The University's drama and music departments will be called upon from time to time to contribute their efforts to radio productians.

WDUK is affiliated with the American Broadcasting Co.

Daumier Pictures To Be Discussed

A gallery talk on the lithographic prints by Honoré Daumier now on display in Person hall, will be given tomorrow afternoon at 4:15 o'clock in Person hall art gallery. The general public, as well as the Friends of Person hall, are invited.

John V. Allcott, head of the art department, will deliver the talk, discussing Daumier's life and times as seen in his cartoons, which are both ironical and humorous. Another series of the Daumier prints is about the bewildered city man, confused by all the novelties and inconveniences brought by city life, and desperate in a search for relaxation.

Daumier produced more than 4000 lithographic prints in his lifetime and also gained recognition as a painter.

Never A Dull Moment...

Glen Taylor Thrills Throng With 'Crazy Cowboy' Routine

By Earl Heffner

Chief Justice weaving through a broken field may provide more thrills; Bob Hope might provide more laughs. And Bing Crosby may croon in key more often. But for genuine entertainment none of these men could incorporate all of these talents as well as did thespian Glen H. Taylor, the Democratic Senator from Idaho in Gerrard hall Thursday evening.

"That crazy cowboy," as Senator Taylor reported his opponents used to style him, began his speech with earthy humor, made a neat transition into serious discussion of Capitol Hill problems, and concluded his main address with a serenade by himself, his wife Dora, and oldest son Arod—that's Dora spelled backwards as the Senator revealed when explaining his son was named after his wife.

How Elected

In answer to a question from the floor, Taylor explained how he was elected Senator.

It began in 1938 when he ran for the House of Representatives. In 1940 he ran for the Senate. Again in 1942 and 1944 he offered for the upper house. Each year his campaign carried him into the far country. Each year two politicians ran against him for the nomination, threw verbal brickbats at each other and ignored Taylor. Finally, in 1944 candidate Taylor won the nomination against the incumbent and the governor's son.

First, he said, the governor's son took the lead in the capitol, the incumbent was second and Taylor, last. Out in the other towns the incumbent slid into the lead. The governor's son was second, Taylor, last. In the hamlet's, Taylor pulled into second place.

Gain at Crossroads

"At the crossroads I gained enough votes to run neck and neck. Finally, in the out of way by-paths that the incumbent didn't know existed where I had campaigned the previous years, I slid into the lead," said Senator Taylor. "I won by slightly more than 200 votes."

Following the address and question and answer period, the CPU entertained Senator Taylor, his wife and two sons who were with him—the youngest didn't make the trip—at a reception in Graham Memorial.

The Senator said he was happy to be here. "I must be," he said, "I'm not getting paid for it." The sustained five minute ovation rendered him by the audience proved that students were happy to have him.

It Never Fails

It never fails. Just as sure as the approach of spring brings warmer days and budding jonquils, a new political party or group appears on the Carolina campus.

The campus political cycle is one that goes its erring way without fail each year. Early rumblings have both permanent parties drawing up plans for a big, well-planned, unified campaign. Then nominations begin, everyone gets excited, plans to benefit campus government and party strength are forgotten as tempers and personal feuds begin over the nominations and the men who were not nominated.

Such appears to have happened again this year with a vengeance. The Campus party has made its appearance. Apparently made up largely of dissatisfied Student party members, it has come out with a platform which is almost a duplicate of the Student party platform.

We can see no real reason for the formation of a new party except to satisfy a disgruntled few. It serves to make the always-confused campus political picture hazier than ever and can damage the hopes of some of the better-qualified nominees.

And it comes as a heartache to the idealistic few who mix in campus politics with the idea of improving government and campus life. As long as personal differences and prejudices keep men from working together, political progress on this campus will be nil.

Student Government Problems

The following article is the second in a series prepared by the Men's Council.

This statement is called "Student Government Problems," but we shall not try to go into all the many problems which are ever before the agencies of Student Government. What we are interested in taking up in this article are some of the general difficulties which we have had brought to our attention in the past few months.

The basic assumption made of each student as he enters this University is that he is an honorable man. The foundation of sound Student Government has been, since 1875, built and centered around personal acceptance of responsibility. So long as each student places personal honor and integrity on the level where it belongs, our form of self-government shall prosper and increase in importance.

We find that while all students will state that they believe that the system of honor which is exercised here is the best possible method of copying with the problems of lying, stealing, and cheating; there is a tendency for the violator to rationalize that the system is for everyone but him. There can be no crompromise with the lack of honor in any student. The allegiance which we owe our University, our self-government, and to ourselves dispels any thought of half-way honor. Step back and take a look at yourself along this line. Your question and answer are before you. You are a far better judge of yourself than any other person on this campus.

Since only a few general rules in Student Government are written, the Men's Council feels that it is part of its work to point out its interpretations in an effort to make Student Government more thorough. Along this line the Council would like to discuss briefly what it thinks may be a misconception which some students have acquired while in service. In some branches of training of the services we were led to believe that you had to get the academic work one way or the other. There was passive acceptance by ourselves and our superiors that to get "outside" help, so long as it was not detected, was part of the game. This attitude is very definitely not part of the picture here at Carolina.

Cheating is not a game. It is an act of dishonor. If we failed to point out this very important difference, we would be leaving out one of the purpose of this article.

This last general point may raise some question in your mind. If this is true, we invite your discussion. The Council meets each Tuesday at 7:30 PM. Come by if you wish. Your ideas may be helpful.

Idaho Senator Drops Verbal Bombshell During His Speech

By Earl Heffner

If Senator Glen H. Taylor decides to run for re-election in 1950, I'll not vote for him. Unfortunately, he is an Idaho senator; I'm from North Carolina. But if the honorable soion should ever run for President, he probably will get my vote.

For Thursday evening in Gerard Hall, Senator Taylor displayed five talents, any one of which often is unique in a politician. Certainly, the combination is amazing. Within slightly more than two hours, Mr. Taylor displayed intelligence, showmanship, integrity, a sense of humor, and "guts"—intestinal fortitude to the more aesthetic readers.

Much of what the senator had to say was encouraging as well as interesting; some of what he had to say was interesting although discouraging. All of it was stimulating.

Perhaps the most surprising statement was made during the senator's flaying of our foreign policy when he emphatically remarked that he did not know whether our policy was in error because it was bi-partisan or for other reasons.

He pointed out that since the termination of the war, the United States has lost much of its effectiveness in world affairs because it has prostituted its ideals in numerous cases. For example, the nation is backing a monarchy in Greece, has supported Japanese collaborationists in the Philippines, and has aided a Fascist in China—Chiang Kai-shek.

"Contrary to popular beliefs," said Senator Taylor, "the Chinese Communists are not Communists. They are the New Dealists of China." This was the bombshell dropped by Idaho's contribution to the Senate in his address.

To the veterans on campus, the senator had some discouraging news.

When questioned as to whether a subsistence increase to the GI Bill will be voted by the 80th Congress, Mr. Taylor promised that he would vote for such a bill.

"However," he said, "I don't think such a bill will have much chance of passage. In fact, veterans will be lucky not to get a decrease in subsistence."

He explained that the present Republican Congress is determined to cut the budget, that one of the institutions which may feel the pruning knife is the Veterans Administration.

GOP politicos, Senator Taylor pointed out, are past masters at doing something so the voting public cannot see what it is doing. As an example the senator explained that rent control has been knifed in the back by the Republicans who reduced the funds of the appropriations committee. In so doing, the GOP solons kept rent control on the books, removed the means of enforcing the regulation.

Later, the Idaho statesman was questioned as to the possibilities of passage by Congress of a Federal Aid to Education Bill.

His reply: "The Republican-controlled 80th Congress will pass no socialistic measures."

Short and sweet, isn't it? True, also!

Throughout the course of his speech, Senator Taylor expounded the cause of the liberals. A self-styled liberal, he bemoaned the unfortunate connotation that the word has begun to acquire, satirically remarked that a similar connotation had begun to creep into the usage of New Deal.

Because of this unfortunate situation wherein New Dealers and liberals have begun to be classed with Communists, Senator Taylor suggested a better term, "Progressive."

His own following, the independent voters, came in for their share of verbal lashing by the senator who assaulted the lethargy of the independent voter.

By analogy, he pointed out that many baseball fans began to ignore the game when Babe Ruth quit playing, that tennis fans began to forget tennis when Bill Tilden left the sport, that boxing enthusiasts stopped keeping up with the sport when Jack Dempsey left the ring, and that—apparently—many independent voters and liberals have forgotten their duties since the unfortunate death of that great leader, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"They have adopted a laissez faire attitude," said the senator. "Perhaps this policy has its advantages. But it was repudiated in 1789 when the Constitution fathers began work on their memorable document."

To those alleged idealists on this campus who believe in a world federation, Senator Taylor lent encouraging words when he stated that on October 24, 1945 he introduced in Congress a proposal for a World Republic.

After listening to Senator Taylor, I left with two important convictions, the firm belief that the ideals of FDR still are being championed and that liberals throughout the nation should champion their cause with the same zeal and fortitude as the "Idaho Cowboy," to use the words of his political antagonists.

Dissatisfied Laddies Decide To Roll Own Political Logs

By Jud Kinberg

As I was passing a stray fire-plug yesterday, who should leap out at me but my old friend—you guessed it—Dan the Dog.

"Freeze in your tracks, columnist!"

"Why hello, Dan. What causes this sudden ferocity, I thought the boys understood about the beer contest."

Before answering, he looked about furtively, put a paw familiarly on the lapel of my Brooks' Brothers Special and brought his snout close to my ear

"We forgive you for the fall you take in the contest. The wise ones send me up here to get the goods on this coming election. Gambler Pete the Peke is wanting to lay odds on the fracas and desires all available knowledge as to who gets the nod come the Maypoll."

"Dan, you approach me at a most unfortunate time. Only yesterday I would probably have been able to ferret out the best available odds on anything, but today. . ."

"Today?"

"Today, I couldn't even quote figures on the election of Dog Catcher for a Cat Hospital."

That staggered him. Of course, it might just have been the gag, but I sensed for the first time a certain loss of confidence on Dan's part.

"What's the excuse this time, fathead?"

"The word is flathead and I'll thank you to remember it, Dan."

"Enough small talk. What is your reason?"

"Dan, it's happened again. There is now a third party, purportedly representing the honest students on campus."

"The reform crowd, eh?"

"I wouldn't go so far as to say that, Dan. This new group says they are most representative body of the students, but every party makes that claim."

"Just who is fronting this new group?"

"It seems some laddies became dissatisfied with the Student Party and decided to roll their own logs."

Dan puzzled at this for a moment, then questioned, "But didn't these Student Parties just clean house and set themselves up as the pure party?"

"I seem to remember something of that sort. But you know, there's always enough dirty laundry for three parties. It's still too early to tell what kind of a whitewashing job they'll do, but it should be interesting. The third ring's been added to the greatest show on earth."

Generation of Parasites

A generation of parasites is being nurtured in the United States. The generous benefits which have been accorded to the veteran through the G. I. Bill of Rights have provoked boomerang results, and an apallingly unified group of ex-servicemen are lobbying through veterans organizations to promote legislation which would render the bill nothing more than a convenient tool in the hands of those who are consistently in search of something for nothing.

The concept that the federal government owes the war veteran a living has been encouraged and precipitated through the easy attainability of inducements already in effect. These inducements may not even be specifically applicable to the provisions of the G. I. bill, since for almost a decade prior to the war unemployed had been subsidized through the New Deal and other emergency legislative measures. It is not the purpose of this letter to digress into a discussion of the merits or evils of the New Deal administration, but rather to emphasize the fact that federal pecuniary aid has stimulated the theory among an element of great numerical strength, that it is the duty of the government to provide for all of those who do not choose to provide for themselves. It is an insidious philosophy, and its implications are certainly of far more imminent and vital concern to the American nation than would be revealed upon cursory observation.

Opinion has been noted in recent weeks thumping for $35.00 monthly increases for both single and married veterans, with additional allowances to be made for dependents. Unquestionably many of the veterans, and especially those who are married, are in financial pinches, but it is not the responsibility of the government to assume their burden. The ultimate goal of the educaticnal clauses of the G. I. bill is not to provide a panacea for the financial woes of the student; its purpose is to encourage the student veteran to complete his education and to assist him monetarily as much as is possible within the practices of sound and efficient government. The intrinsic worth of the bill is embodied in the prospect of an educated people who in the future will have the insight to recognize that it is they as a nation who must ultimately pay at all costs.

The pernicious consequences of a further raise in G. I. subsistence are inestimable, and it is the obligation of all citizens of national conscience to exert every means within their ability to block the growth of a dependent, parasitic society.

LOUIS NICOUD, JR.

Third Party

To the Students:

This is my first letter to the Tar Heel. I believe it necessary now to clarify my position in the political scene for I have but few days left at the University to clarify it otherwise.

For many months I fostered the Student Party to the campus because I sincerely believed, at that time, that S. P. was the only democratic and just means to attain better student government. Since the last election the S. P. has been infiltrated and largely controlled by a group of know--nothings, do-nothings and self-seekers, who have shifted the ultimate goal of the party (better student government) to a mere step ladder toward the promotion of personalities within their own selfish few.

To "accentuate" my last remark, I will cite you the S. P. nominations for Student Council post that appeared in yesterday's Tar Heel. Excepting B. Cashion, I cannot see a fit candidate for the position. Concerning other S. P. candidates, to date (Eller, Shropshire, Byrd and Mills) I feel that these men are qualified for their respective office, but I cannot sincerely endorse them not knowing who will oppose them.

The University Party has long been denounced by me as being a "Hamiltonian Club" a party run by a minority for the benefits of the same minority. Therefore, the only hope for a better Student Government through a political party is to form a new party. Recently there has been a move to organize a new party. I cannot endorse this party merely because the other parties are, in my opinion corrupt, but I sincerely believe that now is the time for all the students on this campus to denounce the control by the few in both parties and rally to the support of the new party and make it your party. . .and the best party. Now is the time to get a fresh start, now is the time to take bold action, yes, now is the time and you are the people.

WINDS OF A STORM

I remember the winds of Spring that set pale leaves shimmering
in the fragrant April showers.
And too, I remember stormy winds churning the seas for many hours that carried the drone of the fog horn far. . .and shuffled the clouds from star to star.
But whether the winds were stormy or shy. . .whether they calmed or coaxed rain from the sky, I came to love them in any form. But most do I cherish. . .winds of a storm!

DUKE INDOOR STADIUM, Durham, March 7.—There was nothing but speculation here today, speculation that was brought about by two big things. Those being the unexpected victory of South Carolina over Duke and the smooth performance of the George Washingtonians—the Colonials who held the lone triumph of the season over highly-regarded Navy.

The speculation was whether GW could successfully throw a bulwark in the State victory combination, and whether Carolina, North that is, could stop Adams, pardon, South Carolina in the semi-finals slated for tonight.

In their first round encounter, George Washington neatly did away with Washington and Lee, a team that had beaten GW by 10 points at one time during the season, and their slick ball handling and point-getting ability caused no end of discussion.

And South Carolina, with this boy Al Adams doing the damage at the pivot position, was being talked of as a big threat to the White Phantoms, who hold two victories over the Gamecocks going into the semi-final clash tonight.

Otherwise, the talk and observations ran thusly:

The officiating, with two men of three being new to the conference tournament, was met with somewhat enthusiastic accord. Dick Culler, the Boston Brave shortstop and native of High Point, did an excellent job as usual, and the two new striped shirt gents are well-liked. One in particular. . . . Heft of Washington, D. C., won the crowd with his jumping jack antics on the court. He is one of the best officials to appear in this section, and his work under the basket provided some of the cleanest games of the season in the Southern conference. . .Chief Justice Fred Vinson's son, Fred, Jr., was doing all right for himself for Washington and Lee. . .In the opening afternoon game, the appearance of Duke's Ed Koffenberger and Bubber Seward caused a lot of talk. They were both helpless against the tight defensive formation put up by the surprising Gamecocks. The overall failure of the Blue Devils came as a surprise, in fact it was not as big a one to those who saw Carolina twice completely baffle the Durham lads and State make almost a farce of their second battle with the Dukes. . .This will be the first time in eight years that Duke has not been in the finals of the tournament. . .George Washington's sharp shooters had the best average of the four opening games, hitting 41 percent of their shots, but the Tar Heels didn't fall too far behind that, hitting the hoop for 40 percent of their baskets, the best average the Phants have had all year. Jim Hamilton, the papa of the Tar Heel quint, made nine for 20 shots to lead the North Carolinians. . .Al Adams, the South Carolina pivoteer, was the fans favorite all day, and at times he resembled the old form of Bones McKinney, the State and Carolina ace now doing the work for the Washington Capitals. The elongated Gamecock not only scored 21 points for South Carolina, but four for Duke. (Interference was called on him twice and Duke awarded goals when he touched the basket as the ball hit the hoop). . .Tickets were available in no small numbers after the Dukes got knocked out of the running. . .And our thanks to Morty Schaap who is keeping the shot chart for the Daily Tar Heel and WPTF, and Billy Carmichael, the Daily Tar Heel score keeper. Also, to Bob Goldwater and Jim Pharr, the boys who stayed in Chapel Hill to see that the paper went to press.

The smartest display of basketball ability and coaching we saw during the first round games was in the Carolina-Richmond battle last night, when Coach Tom Scott's Phantoms showed the Spiders that a tight zone defense could be broken, and how. It was a real credit to Scott and his Tar Heels, who handled the ball superbly and finally broke through the defense to emerge with a 12-point triumph. . .A word of praise, too, to Hamilton, for his scoring, and Bob Paxton and Jim White, whose ball-handling and shooting were major factors in the Carolina win.

Red Terrors Trample Colonial Five, 70-47

Durham, March 7.—N. C. State's top-seeded Red Terrors moved into the finals of the 26th annual Southern Conference basketball tournament here tonight by taking the measure of George Washington, 70-47.

The Red Terrors spurted to an early lead and were never threatened. Ahead 40-24 at halftime, the Raleigh quint played conservative ball the last half, to insure its second tournament win.

With seven minutes left to play, State needed but seven points to tie a previous point record for the tournament. The Terrors fell short of the goal.

Carrying the big stick for State was Pete Negley who sunk 21 points. Cantwell paced the Colonial's attack with 12 points, all in the first half.

State previously defeated Maryland's Terps 55-43. George Washington advanced to the semi-finals by virtue of a 70-55 win.

Tar Heel Courtmen Advance To Loop Tournament Finals

Hamilton, Paxton Pace Scoring for Locals; Cantone, Martin Lead Attack for Gamecocks

By Irwin Smallwood

Duke Indoor Stadium, Durham, March 7.—North Carolina's White Phantoms had the rooster firmly by the feather here tonight and in doing so they dumped the surprising Gamecock quint, 58-33, to gain the Southern Conference finals position against N. C. State tonight at 8 o'clock. State trounced George Washington in the opening game 70-47.

South Carolina sped to a fiery start in the opening minutes of play, however, the Tar Heels tightened their belts and held the Gamecocks to 12 percent of their shots in the first half. The Gamecocks never rallied out from under the lead North Carolina took after seven minutes of play.

Bob Paxton paced the local court men with 18 points. Jim Hamilton added 14 more. Cantore let the Gamecocks with eight tallies, followed by Martin with seven.

Paxton stole the show in the first half by sinking two field goals and five free throws for 9 points. Paxton took possession of rebound after rebound to thwart the Gamecock's early attempts to retain a slim lead. After seven minutes of play the Tar Heel's put the damper on their opponents to surge ahead on a field goal by Kohler and gradually widen the margin between the scores.

Coach Tom Scott's charges held the Gamecocks scoreless the last 12 minutes of the first stanza. Haywerth was substituted for Nearman, the first time this season.

Hensley, Gamecock guard, and lanky Al Adams were individual standouts for South Carolina. The Tar Heels made six of 28 attempts at the basket good, or 22 percent while South Carolina sank 4 out of 32 tries.

The Tar Heels strengthened a seven point advantage at the outset of the last half in rapid order. Approximately six minutes had elapsed before the Gamecocks managed to score, and then North Carolina was heading the parade 31-14.

Coach Tom Scott called on the services of his reserves, Hayworth, Thorne, Swartzburg, Harley, and John "Hook" Dillon in the last ten minutes of play. The reserves contingent held the Gamecocks to 10 points.

Dillon cashed in on two foul shots, erring on no free throws during the seven minutes he played. He was charged with one foul on Cantore.

University Press to Celebrate Silver Anniversary

'Saprologniaceae' Bore Virgin Stamp

By Sigsbee Miller

Twenty-five years ago a formidable appearing tome, bound in somber black and impressively entitled "The Saprologniaceae," went on sale in North Carolina book-stores and made publishing history. Eminently authoritative and unexciting "The Saprologniaceae" crashed no best-seller lists, but more important, it bore the virgin stamp of the University of North Carolina Press.

Next Thursday, in celebration of the 25th anniversary of its founding on March 13, 1922, the Press will throw open its doors in Bynum hall to 2,000 guests, many of whom—including authors, publishers, reviewers and University officials—have contributed to its unique success in the publishing field. Plans for the celebration are still incomplete but at present call for an informal open house from 3 until 6 o'clock Thursday afternoon, when various exhibits of books the Press has published will be on display.

The University of North Carolina Press has come a long way since "The Saprologniaceae," which was written by Dr. W. C. Coker, still with the University. An extreme example of the diversity of the books published is "One Damned Island After Another," by Clive Howard and Joe Whitley, which appeared last December. Among the more than 500 books published by the Press, several have won the Mayflower award, one stayed near the top of the best-seller list for 13 months, and at least 16 have had sales ranging from 10,000 to 60,000.

T. J. WILSON

Press Will Publish Special Title List

Organized by 10 faculty members and three members of the Board of Trustees as a non-stock corporation, the Press was for a decade under the direction of Louis R. Wilson. Wilson was succeedded in 1932 by W. T. Couch, a former student magazine editor, who resigned in the fall of 1945 to become director of the University of Chicago Press. In January, 1946, Thomas J. Wilson became director. Mrs. Alice T. Paine has been head of the editorial department since 1929 and Miss Porter Cowles is executive assistant to the director. Wilson is responsible for the creation of a sales and advertising department under the management of George P. Scheer.

The primary interest of the Press has been publication of books of regional interest and this, according to Wilson, will continue to be the keynote. However, only 175 of the more than 500 titles have dealt with Southern topics. Universal topics—literature, the arts, science, law, philosophy, etc.—have been popular subjects. Economic and social problems of the South have been widely considered but elaborate works of Southern art and culture have won equal acclaim.

With the publication of Bernice Kelly Harris' "Purslane" in 1939, the Press became the first university press in the United States to branch into the fiction field. Other fiction works since published include "First the Fields," by Charles Wood; "Mexican Village," by Josephina Niggli, winner of the 1946 Mayflower award; and "Send Me an Angel," by Alice Nisbet.

Commemorating the silver anniversary of the Press will be the official publication on March 15 of "Books From Chapel Hill," a complete catalog of all Press titles from 1922 through 1946. Copies of the book will be distributed free to the trade.

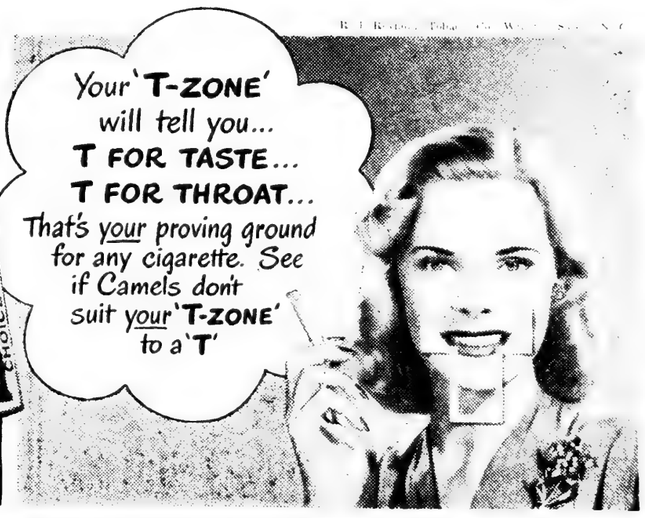
EXPERIENCE TAUGHT MILLIONS THE DIFFERENCES IN CIGARETTE QUALITY!



IT'S ONLY a memory now, the war cigarette shortage. But it was during that shortage that people found themselves comparing brands whether they intended to or not.

And millions more people found that the rich, full flavor of Camel's superb blend of choice tobaccos suited their Taste to a "T." And that their Throats welcomed the kind of cool mildness Camels deliver.

Thus the demand for Camels grew so great that today more people are smoking Camels than ever before. But, no matter how great the demand, this you can be sure of:

We don't tamper with Camel quality. Only choice tobaccos, properly aged, and blended in the time-honored Camel way, are used in Camels.

According to a recent Nationwide survey:

More Doctors Smoke Camels than any other cigarette

When three independent research organizations asked 113,597 doctors—What cigarette do you smoke, Doctor?—the brand named most was Camel!

Jewish Forces Make Strikes Upon British

Extremists Attack All Over Palestine

Haifa, Palestine, March 8.—(UP) The Jewish underground struck five times against the British today. Two of the attacks came before dark, thus marking the second week in a row and the second time in history that the extremists have taken up arms on the Jewish Sabbath. But these two attacks were minor. The underground waited until dark, until the end of the Sabbath, to strike their fiercest blows.

Building Is Beseiged

In the all-Jewish city of Tel Aviv, a six-story British administration building was besieged. The attack finally was beaten off, but the lull was shattered by the blasts of time bombs, left behind by the extremists in their retreat. At the same time, the police station in Sarona was being riddled by small arms fire. Two Arab policemen were wounded.

As the new wave of violence broke out, another illegal immigrant ship was intercepted off the coast and it was taken in tow over the bitter protests of its human cargo. The British have been dumping depth bombs into Haifa harbor to discourage underground swimmers who might try to scuttle the British ships that will be used to deport the refugees.

Eighteen year old Miss Brock was riding from New York to Greensboro when the two flyers in a small cabin plane owned by a private flying service. The coroner at Burlington stated that the pilot apparently tried to make a forced landing in a field and hit a treetop.

Bill Proposed in Congress Will Reimburse Dr. Friederich

A bill asking the government for $2,500 loss of salary for Dr. Werner P. Friederich, German professor who resigned his position at the University in April 1945 to accept a job with the OWI, is now being considered by the House Judiciary committee in Washington.

Representative Carl Durham introduced the claim for Professor Friederich last June and it is now being considered by the Judiciary committee.

W. P. FRIEDERICH

Services Turned Down

Dr. Friederich was employed by the OWI and ordered to report for work on April 10, 1945. The University granted him leave of absence from the faculty. Before he was to report for work, however, he was notified by the OWI that his services could not be used.

The government bureau reached its decision following a letter of protest from a group of Chapel Hill citizens, stating that Dr. Friederich was pro-Nazi, and to support their statement they submitted a published paper written by him several years ago.

Because of the letter of protest the OWI did not employ Friederich and he was unable to return to the University as a member of the faculty until November 1, 1945. The sum asked for in Representative Durham's bill is the salary Friederich would have received for services with the OWI between April 10 and November 1.

Barter Theatre to Present Shaw's 'Arms and the Man'

Broadway Stars Feature Second Appearance Of Group in Memorial Hall Tomorrow Evening

The Barter theatre will present George Bernard Shaw's comedy "Arms and the Man" Monday night in Memorial hall in its second appearance on the campus this year. Featuring such stars as Chaucy Horsley, Herbert Nelson, and Tom McDermott, "Arms and the Man" is a satirical comedy based on the story of the professional soldier as compared to the war-time soldier.

Versatile, Talented

Under the direction of Robert Porterfield, the Barter theatre members have gained a reputation as being as versatile as they are talented. Chaucy Horsley, the leading lady, is called "a theatrical phenomenon, an actress who grew up on the Great White Way." Many of the Barter players have appeared in Broadway productions and all have had extensive experience in the theatre.

The proceeds will go to the Carolina Dames, an organization of student wives, to provide a social medium for its members. Tickets can be purchased at the Y or at Ledbetter-Pickard's.

State Crowned Loop Champion

Kohler High Scorer In Tossup Thriller

By Irwin Smallwood

Duke Indoor Stadium, March 8.—A crowd of 9,000 thrilled spectators who weathered snow and ice to witness the 1947 Southern conference tournament basketball finals were well rewarded for their efforts here tonight as they saw a hard-driving band of State Red Terrors come from behind to register a close 50-48 victory over the fightingest bunch of White Phantoms ever to appear in a loop tourney.

The triumph gave State its first conference title since 1929 and earned the Raleigh team a possible bid to the National Invitation tourney in New York later this month.

With less than two minutes remaining in the battle, the Hoosier Hotshots were resting on a comfortable six-point cushion but two quick layups by guard Jim White, playing his final contest for Carolina and turning in an outstanding performance all the way, placed the Tar Heels within reach of a deadlock. Substitutes John Dillon and Dick Hartley missed with a hook and set shot respectively and State gained possession as the gun sounded.

The 18 minutes in the second half leading up to the dramatic conclusion

In 1939 he lectured on the relations between Christian theology and the social sciences. The greater part of these lectures were published under the title: The University and the Modern World. Last summer Dr. Nash made an extensive tour of the British Isles and Europe.

The CRIL, under whose auspices Dr. Nash will speak, was founded here in 1944 to bring about greater co-operation among all the religious groups in the Chapel Hill community.

This year's sermons are part of the third annual series sponsored by the group and is organized around the titles of the Hazen Books on Religion. These books were designed as a systematic treatment of the great problems of religion, written by America's greatest theologians and philosophers.

Other speakers presented by the CRIL this year have been Dr. Nels F. S. Ferre, Dr. Stanley Romaine Hopper, Dr. Clarence Tucker Craig, and Dr. D. Elton Trueblood.

Peter Bucknell Will Exhibit Designs in Person Art Gallery

Winner of Kay Kyser Scholarship to Direct Experimental Production Showing this Week

By Brooksie Popkins

Peter A. Bucknell, holder of the Kay Kyser scholarship in dramatic art, will have a one-month exhibition of costume plates and scenery designs in Person hall, opening today. Featured in the exhibition will be a complete project of costumes and sets executed in gouache for "Romeo and Julet," "The Tempest," and "Hamlet." The authentic costume designs are noteworthy for displaying an excellent sense of line and a harmonizing of muted color. The settings, showing the striking effect of precise proportion, simplicity and balance, are designed as semi-permanent or permanent settings and their pattern can be traced to the Elizabethan theatre.

Show First Sketches

This exhibition will also show Bucknell's first sketches of designs through his finished drawings. Over sixty photographs of Bucknell's theatre work in England will be on display. Many of the costumes in these photos were made during the war when he had to transform worn-out bedspreads into silks, satins and fine gold cloth.

Bucknell studied art for six years before he entered the Royal College of Arts in London where he was graduated last June with the medal of distinction in the school of design. Not only did he do outstanding work at the college in designing and exe-

'Most Kissable Lips' May Become Bigger Fad Than Harvard Goldfish Swallowing Tradition

By Jud Kinberg

College students can be counted on to do anything. Ever since the first goldfish was swallowed by a Harvard scholar, the extra-curricular academic world has resembled Paradise after Adam and Eve bit into the apple.

At a recent dormitory dance, the coeds of the University added a new note of mania to the already large list of college gags. The girls obtained lip prints of the 75 residents of Spencer dormitory and mounted them carefully. Then, on the night of the big dance, the women put the pasteboard kisses around the ballroom and as the feature of the evening had the 150 dates and stags vote for their choice as "The Most Kissable Lips in Spencer Dormitory."

Only One Way

Most of the men were disgruntled at the second-hand method of judging. As one young student said, "There is only one way to tell this sort of thing—by taste test. Pictures are no good." Despite their disappointment, the men studied carefully, weighed their decision, and by a large majority named honey-blonde Jane Bradford of 2110 Walker avenue, Greensboro, as their choice for the signal honor.

The prize for Jane, in addition to the title, was a box of candy. Her date got an in-action test of the young coed's kissing powers before the assembled throng of men and women. According to Jane, she was "Pretty self-conscious about the whole thing. But," she added, "I think my date thoroughly enjoyed it."

The winner and new-type champion of Spencer dormitory is now in her first year at the University, after attending Lenoir-Rhyne college last year. With her father a practicing pharmacist, family tradition has led her to take up the same course of study.

"It's right hard work," is Miss Bradford's comment on UNC. "Right now I'm between a freshman and a sophomore because I don't have some of the courses I need. It's kind of mixed up, but I'm still passing my courses—so far, at least."

After studying at Lenoir-Rhyne with its 500 enrollment, North Carolina seems like a vast metropolis-type university to the 19-year-old southern lass. "Why there were almost as many people in my one chemistry class here at UNC as there were in the whole of Lenoir-Rhyne. But now that I'm used to it, I like it fine," she asserted.

So far, the fact that 150 men "like her fine" has had only minor repercussions in Jane's life. "Oh, the girls rag me about it right much, but I'm used to that now. I don't have much time for dating, what with Pharmacy school studies, so I don't really know what effect my new title could have on my social life."

Free Time—Lenoir-Rhyne

Heavy courses are only a minor reason for Jane's relative inactivity after classes. The most important one is the boy she met while attending Lenoir-Rhyne. Usually she saves her free time for his visits. It was he who sealed Jane's victory in the contest with the public kiss on the night of the dance.

Quite modestly, the girl with the most kissable lips attributes much of her success to loyal roommates. "They just talked to everybody at the affair and showed them my card. That's right nice, don't you think?"

Red Cross Reports Must Be Turned In

Johnny Clampitt, chairman of the Red Cross campus drive, requests that all dormitory campaign managers who have not turned in their collections to him please leave them with the dormitory managers in their respective residences so that they may be picked up tomorrow morning.

Clampitt stated that the canvass this year has not been as successful as expected and all students who have not given their contributions should do so as soon as possible.

It's Up to You

James Renn has struck the normal student's attitude on campus government in a letter on this page today stating, ". . . students are in a complete fog as to the purpose of campus politics . . . I care so little that it really matters not . . ."

The writer assails the campus political groups for being "satisfied with their interparty squabbles" and taking a real interest only in their selfish personal gain . . . and then says he does not care to have anything to do with them.

We believe that the main fault in our student government—and it has many—lies with the ninety per cent of the student body who feel as he does on the situation.

The national political scene—and state and local government situations—are all pretty much the same as our campus government setup. John Q. Public constantly gripes at the mayor or the congressman—but will he write him a letter, or investigate his political record? "Hell no, I won't have anything to do with politics."

And this is why our country continues to have its Bilbos and Talmadges. So if you don't like your student government and campus politics, either get in it and clean it up, or get out!

We take a great deal of pride in Carolina student politics and self-government, and the free reign which the administration allows us in settling our own affairs. Sometimes they're in a mess . . . student government is far from perfect now!

But the blame should lie squarely with those who do not exercise their democratic obligation to take a personal hand in their own government!

And we cannot state it too strongly! If you don't like your dormitory ward heeler, or glory-grabbing student legislator, do something about it. Remember, one doesn't learn to swim by staying away from the water. Nor does one improve campus politics by griping about it from the outside.

Positive Reform Is Needed To Compete Against Russia

By Manny Margolis

The Christian Science Monitor of March 5th makes the following arresting editorial comment: "Uncle Sam, the reluctant world policeman, cannot follow merely a negative course of resisting Russia. He must have a positive reform program."

It comes in connection with a discussion of the latest developments in and regarding Greece. England's Grecian urn, supported indelicately on British bayonet-points, seemed about to topple. Both Greece and Britain were appealing to the U. S. for aid.

The remarkable piece of editorial candor quoted above is significant for two reasons. First, it is an admission that the United States has undertaken the role of the "world's policeman," in an apparent world-wide extension of Teddy Roosevelt's Big Stick-ism. Second, and much more refreshing, it is a recognition of the need for competing with Russian communism via the only practical, progressive, and propitious route—positive reform.

Greece is more than just a battle ground. It is a testing ground. It is a challenge to the United States Government to offer an affirmative approach toward waging peace.

Our press and radio are creating their usual issue-befogging smoke-screen. It's that old refrain, and it begins with "dough." If British troops and the Greek police-state are not maintained and supported, we are told, the removal of both would create a political "vacuum" which could only be filled by "Communism."

This is a lie, pure and simple! There are no vacua in the world today—only people. If any "vacuum" is created upon the withdrawal of the 15,000 British troops from Greece and the concomitant disintegration of the present puppet government there, it will be filled by GREEKS! It will be filled by a people fighting for self-determination, for economic security, yes, for democracy.

It is time that the lie were finally given to this time-worn "red-herring"—a red herring proved wanting wherever it has been tried. It has already failed in Greece, and the "changing of the guard" and a switch in currency will not change the outcome of—let us face it!—a people's revolution. Edmund Wilson made this point undeniably clear in his report from that country in the September-1945 issue of the New Yorker:

"It has become very plain to me since I had been in Greece that the movement which the British had disarmed, and which the United States had allowed them to disarm, was neither a chess play directed from Moscow nor a foray of bandits from the hills—but a GENUINE POPULAR MOVEMENT which had recruited almost all that was generous, courageous, and enlightened in Greece; the most spirited among the young, the most clear-sighted among the mature."

What the British have been doing, says Anne O'Hare McCormick, is "spending money they did not have, holding on to positions they could not maintain."

We have now become heir-apparent to this paradoxical piece of imperialist real-estate. One of the keys to the Middle East, one of the oldest roots of civilization, yet without its own democracy; a country which just this week boasted of its huge tobacco crop, while its people are haunted by the spectre of starvation!

The Norfolk Virginian-Pilot makes this inheritance offer painfully clear:

"The changes recently made in that government have left it still far from representative of even the Greek moderates, certainly not of the mass of the people. The commitments the U. S. is now asked to assume are commitments to that government."

But the choice in Greece is NOT between the present Tsaldaris monstrosity and a future communist state. A synthesis of the democratic forces in Greece (including the Communists, who have been increasing their numbers as British occupation has protracted) is more than just feasible—it is the only equitable and practicable solution. Such a representative coalition could, and undoubtedly would, receive the political and financial support of the United Nations, which would assist it on its difficult road to recovery.

This should be our "positive program." This is a realistic acceptance of the Greek challenge. Greece, oil, and democracy are highly combustible elements. Handle with care, Mr. Marshall!

REFLECTION

Is life so full of living that we cannot see . . . the poignant beauty in a tattered tree along the shore of some forgotten bay?
Are we so ingrained with the ways of the world that our eyes are blind to the wonders unfurled in each passing hour . . . each passing day?
Have we misplaced the vibrant thrill that comes from gazing on a snow-clad hill . . . that sparkles like diamonds in the slanted light that filters through the trees on a winter night . . .
from a quiet moon above?
Our eyes can only see . . what our hearts would have them know. The heart alone decides whether our lives will shrink . . .
or richer grow.

Student Politics

To the Editor:

The University of North Carolina has in its own backyard a sandpile where the children with no one to look after them play. This is within itself the student politics on the campus. The University party and Student party are two organizations so completely satisfied with their interparty squabbles that the remainder of the University's students are in a complete fog as to the purpose of campus politics.

These two organizations can't seem to realize that there are 7,500 students on this campus with a very, very small minority knowing exactly what is going on and who the elections are held for. As for myself, I care so little that it really matters not whether I am introduced to the so called political parties on this campus or not.

I feel free in stating that if the students knew who they were voting for, and what they were voting for that there would be fewer ballots cast than is anticipated. I also feel free in stating that were an independent party formed, the existing parties would be all but shunned from balloting in the coming elections.

I also believe that if an independent party were formed, the people who act as politicians would roll in agony at the thought of their future on this campus.

JAMES RENN

For the Record

In May, according to DTH headlines, Mr. Tookie Hodgson will give us a humor magazine. Abetting him in this undertaking will be the entire staff of the Carolina Magazine. . .or so Fred Jacobson asserts. Now, as a member of that staff, I know better. Fred should have asserted that Mr. Hodgson will have the entire staff. . . almost. . .because here is one member who desires no part of what he considers the inflation of Mr. Hodgson's already oversized ego. Of course, this announcement will come as no great blow to Mr. Hodgson, inasmuch as I am but a small voice on the publication, and inasmuch as he has never respected my efforts anyway. Be that as it may, my announcement is just to keep the record straight, given with the faint hope that there will be others to follow the example.

Why so bitter? Try these for size:

1. Mr. Hodgson is an appointee (and a member) of the PU Board. . . not elected by the students.

2. Mr. Hodgson will be consuming student funds for a project unknown to the students when they paid their bills.

3. Mr. Hodgson will have over two months to prepare his issue. . .not the case were he publishing every month.

4. It will come at a time when the present issue would have progressed to a position among the first ten in collegiate publications.

5. Funds and facilities are not sufficient to support two magazines. The idea that UNC's magazine should be entirely humorous is an insult to the maturity of the student body.

6. During the school year, Mr. Hodgson has contributed but one humorous story to the magazine. Does that merit him the priviledge of editing an entire issue? Why should he be so glorified when he has been too indolent (or prejudiced) to help make the preceeding issues more humorous?

In short, the May issue will serve as nothing but homage to Mr. Hodgson's ego and to the Publications boards rule over student publications. It will illustrate again how a selfish individual can worm his way to a position of power through the medium of politics.

JOHN E. SINK

Juvenile Behavior

Dear Sir:

In Reply to Mr. Heath:

I am one of those students nominated by the Student Party for the Student Council considered by you to be unfit for the post.

I came into campus politics reluctantly and by request (request, incidentally, by one of those whom you do feel qualified for student government office), and with only one desire—to help, if possible, to bring to student government some degree of maturity of thought and action which I consider so totally lacking on all levels of University activities. And I have said as much before I was nominated by the Student Party, and I said it to the party, including them in that group lacking such maturity.

I was shocked at the type of behavior which was going on in student politics. I was shocked, Mr. Heath, at the juvenile behavior of the organization which you so proudly boast to have fostered.

It is men like you, sir, who are driving out and keeping out of Student Government good men on this campus. Your actions and words in the Student Party which I have heard and observed certainly do not qualify you to pass judgment on who is and who is not qualified to serve in student government.

I challenge you, Mr. Heath, to show why I am unfit to serve on the Student Council. Until you can justify your unwarranted attack upon me, I charge you to be narrow, prejudiced, bigoted, full of ill-feeling toward others, and a spreader of misinformation through the columns of the campus paper.

If you had been as interested in good Student Government as you claim to be, you would have been present at the two Student Party meetings when my qualifications were discussed and when I spoke in my own behalf.

Blue Dolphins Cop Conference Tourney Crown

SPORT SPINS - -

with

IRWIN SMALLWOOD

A SOAKING WET gentleman wasn't a bit unhappy about being thrown in Bowman Gray pool with his clothes on yesterday afternoon. But why should he be, this man Dick Jamerson, for his Tar Heel swimming team had just swept to an impressive victory in the annual Southern conference tournament. It was a successful defense of the title they held from last year.

Jamerson, who had been doing a lot of worrying about his chances in the tourney, was tossed into the pool with the finish of the last event by his jubilant Blue Dolphins, who finished a good 34-point margin over second-placed State—the Red Terror squad coached by youthful Willis Casey, former Carolina freshman and head swimming coach.

Duke, considered no threat in pre-meet dope, provided a surprise by finishing close behind State in third place. The Blue Devil coach, Jack Persons, awarded the trophies after the meet, to Billy Kelly for the most outstanding individual performer, and to Warren Ficklen, Carolina co-captain, for the conference meet and dual meet championships.

The fourth team in the finals, VMI, was coached by another familiar personage around Carolina. He was Ralph Casey, a brother of Willis and also former freshman and varsity coach here.

The swimming title gave Carolina the first of three conference crowns on the block this weekend, and at this writing the basketballers and wrestlers were just hours before entering final competition for titles in their sports. It was also the fourth conference championship that Carolina has won during the 1946-47 season, the Tar Heels already holding top place in football, cross country and indoor track.

Coach Tom Scott, the smiling Kansan who took over the coaching reins at Carolina in the midst of a great Carolina record, was headed for the last hurdle in the long line that has faced him and his White Phantoms this season yesterday as he briefed his Tar Heels on last minute defensive tactics.

The Phants had won 10 games in a row since Scott revamped his lineup in favor of freshman Nemo Nearman, and as we pen these notes before the titular clash, the Phantoms are being given a pretty fair chance to take the game.

"I'm proud of the showing my boys have made," Scott said, "and I have a lot of confidence in their ability and chances against State tonight." When quizzed on what he thought the secret of his success of late had been, Scott pointed out the fine defensive work of his combine, the one that twice handed Duke a decided defeat, something that Carolina hasn't done since the 1941 season when George Glamack was cavorting around the hardwood.

NOTES FROM NC-SC: Big surprise of the Carolina-South Carolina semi-final game Friday night was the failure of big Gamecock pivot-man Al Adams to come through as he did against Duke the day before. It was not too big a surprise to the Phantoms, or Coach Scott, for in their second game during the regular season at Columbia, Nearman held Adams to the same six points he got in the game in Durham Friday night. . .One of the finest exhibitions of fancy ball-handling and defensive maneuvering was seen in that game, too, with Senior Jim White of Kannapolis turning in a superb performance. . . Bob Paxton's platter hands came in mighty handy on the boards as usual, also, and the lanky Roberto from out west, acting as game captain, was dead on his one-handed push shot—the one, you remember that beat Ohio State in the NCAA tourney last year.

Phants Lose First Contest After 10 Wins

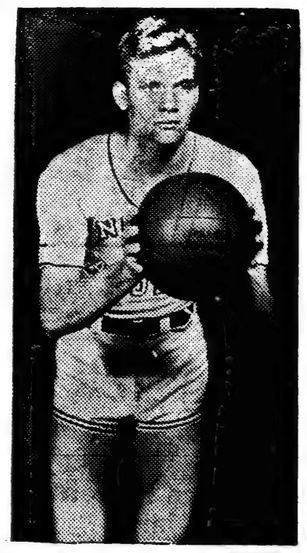
were a whirlwind affair all the way. Behind by 31-27, the Terrors led off on a set by Leo Katkavek but two sets by Norm Kohler pushed the margin up to seven. State came back on a tap-in by Bob Negley, a layup by Ed Bartels, and charity throws by both to pull within two points, 38-36. After Nemo Nearman had tossed in a foul shot, Bartels and Negley again combined forces to put the Terrors ahead, where they stayed for the remainder.

The Phantoms started off faster than they had done any other time during the campaign. After Jim White and Bob Negley had traded field goals, Nemo Nearman connected with a push-shot to give his team a lead it held until midway during the second half. Jim Hamilton hit for three points and Bob Paxton registered five to give the Tar Heel combine a 12-6 lead after six minutes.



It took the Phantoms only four minutes more to increase their margin from six to 13, the greatest advantage either team held during the battle. As the game passed the 10-minute mark, Norm Kohler tossed in a long set to make the scoreboard read 22-9, Carolina. After another swish by Kohler, the Terrors finally started their drive that put them only four tallies behind at halftime. Seven points by Negley sparked the Raleigh quintet into a 31-27 deficit at intermission.

BULLETIN

Lexington, Va., March 8—Carolina's powerful mat crew walked off with the 1947 Southern conference wrestling championship here tonight with three of the Tar Heels gaining the individual crowns in their weight brackets.

Finishing with a score of 29 points, Carolina garnered eight more tallies than the second-place team, N. C. State, with 21. VMI, the defending champions, was third with 20, Washington and Lee had 14,4 Maryland 10, VPI 6, and Davidson 4.

Individual winners for Carolina were Co-Captain Tommy Hearn, by a 7-3 decision in the 128-pound class over Spencer of VMI; Irv Zirpel, by an 11-6 decision over Rosen of VPI in the 155-pound division: and Laurie Hooper, who scored a 4-2 upset over the heavyweight favorite, Wagoner of State.

Co-Captain Dick Seaver dropped a close 4-3 bout to Sherrard of VMI in another final-round clash. The match was decided by a one-minute time advantage.

In consolation encounters to decide third and fourth place points, Doug Thompson at 121 and Bill Kemp at 175 pinned their opponents to capture a pair of third places. Demont Roseman at 136 and Oscar Gupton at 165 were both defeated in their bouts.

Locals Register 81 Points To Swamp Three Opponents

Sper, Crone, Cook Capture First Places; Kelly of State Gains Individual Trophy

By Roy Holsten

Garnering an unexpected total of 81 points which almost doubled the score of the nearest opponent, the potent Blue Dolphins scored a stunning victory yesterday when they captured the 14th annual Southern conference swimming tournament championship.

Capturing five firsts and five seconds, the Tar Heels finished well in front of the co-favored North Carolina State Red Terrors who had a final score of 47 points. Duke copped the third place spot with 31 markers and VMI rounded out the card with a total of seven.

In the presentation ceremonies at the conclusion of the meet, the Blue and White mermen were awarded both the Southern conference tournament and the dual meet championship trophies. The outstanding individual performer's cup was given to State's versatile Bill Kelly, who captured two firsts and a fourth to total 14 points. Close behind was Carolina's Norman Sper who finished with an impressive 13½ tallies.

The swimming team will have its post-season banquet tomorrow evening at 6:30 o'clock at the Carolina Inn, Coach Dick Jamerson announced yesterday.

In the diving, Carolina completely dominated the scoring when they took the four top positions. Buddy Crone and Norman Sper tied for first and received 150.3 points each. Third and fourth places went to Mac Erle and Dick Swigart. For Crone it was a repeat performance of last year's championship.

Other firsts were awarded to the Tar Heels' Jerry Cook in the 200-meter breaststroke and Norm Sper in the 150-meter backstroke. For the State swimmers, Bill Ward, who set a new mark in the 100-meter freestyle in the semi-finals, splashed home in a 50-meter freestyle win. Duke's Bill Adams, who also shattered a long standing mark on Friday, again won the 400-meter freestyle.

It was the final performance in Bowman Gray pool for Buddy Crone, Pete Hexner and Co-Captain Warren Ficklen, who all turned in creditable performances during the season.

The summary:

300 medley—Carolina (McCoy, Breeden, Bultman), Duke, N. C. State, VMI; 3:40.2.

200 freestyle: Kelly, McCauley (C), Ficklen (C), Desperes (NCS), Hutton (C); 2:28.3.

50 freestyle: Ward (NCS), Greenbaum (C), Reynolds (NCS), Bronson (D), Adams (D); 27.4.

Diving: Tie between Crone and Sper (C), Erle (C), Swigart (C), Martin (VMI); 150.3.

100: Kelly (NCS), Ward (NCS), Venable (D), Ficklen (C), Greenbaum (C); 1:02.6.

150 back stroke: Sper (C), Despres (NCS), McCoy (C), Burrell (D), Grubbins (D), 2:00.

200 breast stroke: Cook (C), Breeden (C), Hexner (C), Kelly (NCS), Sutton (D); 3:07.3.

400 freestyle: Adams (D), McCauley (C), Hutton (C), Norwood (C), Stockslager (D); 5:29.02.

400 relay: Carolina (Bultman, Ficklen, Greenbaum, Sper), NCS, Duke, VMI. 4:24.8.

ONE OF Carolina's outstanding performers, Norm Sper, above, registered 13½ points towards the Tar Heel total of 81 in yesterday's conference triumph. Sper took first place in the backstroke, tied for the top position in the diving, and swam a leg on the winning relay team.

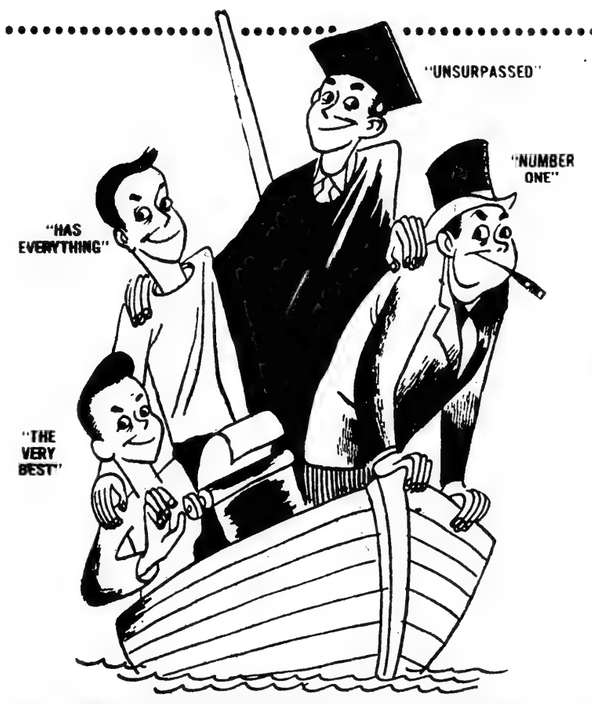
They're Oceans Apart on: "What's Best in Esquire?"

A few weeks ago we showed four of your college chums an advance copy of the April issue of Esquire (now on your newsstand). We asked them to name their favorite feature, and they all picked a different one.

ATHLETE PREFERS TRAVEL REPORT
"That travel article on Argentina made me want to take the first plane to Buenos Aires. It's terrific! In fact, the whole Esquire travel series has my vote."
Bob Paxton, '47, Golden Fleece; UNC Varsity Basketball.

SCHOLAR CHOOSES MOVIE COLUMN
"Your screen critic, Jack Moffitt, is one of the few who write intelligently about Hollywood. His review of the new picture, Pursued, is exhilarating."
Art Golby, '47, Independent; Producer, Lake Summit Playhouse.



EDITOR SELECTS STORY BY KERSH
"Gerald Kersh's piece, Sharks, has tremendous punch and drama. Esquire has always been famous for fiction, and this one tops them all."
Bill Woestendiek, '47, Sigma Chi; Editor, Daily Tar Heel.

CAMPUS POLITICO LIKES CARTOONS
"My favorites, any month, are the cartoons. Best of all, in my opinion, are Webb's tobacco-chewing Mountain Boys and also those Harem Girls."
Alex Davis, '47, Zeta Psi; Chairman, University Party.

but they're in the same boat on:
"Esquire is Best!"

Sure they disagreed on what's best in Esquire. One preferred the fiction; another, the travel story; a third liked the movie critique; and the last one picked the cartoons as the outstanding feature. But, when it came to naming their FAVORITE MAGAZINE, Esquire got all of their votes.

U. S. Attacks Russian View On Atom Bomb

American Delegate Asks Quick Answer

Lake Success, N. Y., March 10—(UP)—The United States has attacked Russia's atomic control proposals as "a constant incentive to distrust and war." American delegate Warren Austin demanded that the Russians indicate soon whether or not they really want world control of nuclear energy.

Note of Optimism

Austin managed to keep a note of optimism in his words to the Security Council. But he also spoke grimly of the need for action, of the dangers of an atomic armament race, and of the horrors of atomic war.

He said that the Russian plan, which would outlaw the bomb and provide for only limited international inspection, would lead directly into such an atomic armament race. He described the Soviet proposal as "a control which would be neither international nor effective—a control which would permit or encourage national rivalries."

Russia Asks Big Four For Parley on China

Moscow, March 10.—(UP)—Russia has made a surprise request that the Big Four foreign ministers discuss the Chinese political situation at their current Moscow conference. Senate Atomic Group Approves Lilienthal

Washington, March 10. — (UP) — The Senate Atomic Energy committee has voted eight to one to approve the nomination of David Lilienthal as head of the Federal Atomic commission. The lone dissenting vote was cast by Republican Senator John Bricker of Ohio who says he believes Lilienthal is "sympathetic to communists."

Supreme Court Given Government Request

Washington, March 10. — (UP) — The supreme court has taken under advisement a government request for an immediate mandate directing John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers to withdraw within five days their threat of a soft coal strike. The UMW has opposed the government request, indicating that the union intends to ask the court for a rehearing of the case.

Judiciary Committee Agrees on Pay Bill

Washington, March 10. — (UP) — The Senate Judiciary committee has approved, 8 to 4, bills that would outlaw virtually all portal pay suits. The group was reactivated and officers were installed by John Dahme of Washington, D. C., national executive secretary. Dahme addressed the group at a banquet given in the Carolina Inn after the ceremonies Friday.

Cost Survey Shows GI Pay Inadequate

AVC-UVA Poll Finds 99 Per Cent Unable to Live on Present Stipend

Judging by results of the AVC-UVA joint cost of living survey, the House of Veterans is on insecure financial footing with many members literally being plagued by the proverbial wolf at the door. Results of the balloting reveal that 99.4 per cent of veterans on campus find it impossible to live on the subsistence provided under Public Law 346, the G I Bill of Rights, thus bearing out the belief of American Veterans committee and University Veterans association leaders that the present monetary allowance is insufficient to meet needs created by the spiraling living costs.

In indicating that the subsistence is not enough, 89.1 per cent of the veterans said that they believed Congress should increase the subsistence allowance clause of the GI bill.

Breakdown Listed

With 852 returns being used—some were not legible, data was incomplete, or were from veterans under Public law 16 instead of the GI bill—the following breakdown of averages were noted:

Rent costs require an average of $16.25 a month; food budgets take $55.03 a month; incidental expenses total $18.27 monthly; cost of recreation runs at $13.90 each month.

This total shows a monthly expense budget of $103.46, exactly $33.53 more than the average subsistence allowance of $69.93. These averages included all students, with and without dependents, whether living at home or away from home.

Married Students Short $63

Married students with dependents find their budget running $63.47 more each month than does the government check. Of this discrepency, only $6.19 is spent on recreation.

By comparison, single veterans without dependents living at home spend only $22.50 more each month than provided by the government, yet $17.64 of this goes into recreation. And veterans in the same category except for the fact that they live away from home find their budget lacks $30.35 of being enough, $15.27 of this being traceable to recreation.

Of the 16.9 per cent of veterans augmenting their pocketbook by working more than five hours a week, 85.4 per cent report that it interferes with their studies. Another 67.5 per cent of those not working now indicate that they must find work in order to stay in school.

Besides working, veterans have augmented the GI bill allowances by cashing in war bonds, withdrawing savings, borrowing money and accepting money from relatives or friends.

Half Cash Bonds

A breakdown shows that 50.6 per cent have cashed in war bonds, 84.2 per cent have withdrawn savings, 40.5 per cent have borrowed money, and 68.5 per cent have accepted money from friends or relatives.

The survey was conducted on a volunteer basis over a period of three days by the UVA and the Chapel Hill chapter of the AVC.

Results are to be mimeographed and sent to Capitol Hill legislators, to other schools to aid them in conducting a similar survey. Some copies will be made available in letters to their Congressmen advocating an increase in subsistence.

Three Debate Squad Members Cop First Places in Tourney

Aileen Taylor, Robert Andrew Win Honors: Group to Participate in National Contest

Three members of the University debating team took first places in the South Atlantic Speech and Debate tourney held in Hickory last weekend under the sponsorship of Lenoir Rhyne college. Aileen Taylor captured first place in the woman's poetry reading division and Robert A. Andrew took first place honors in radio news casting and tied for first place in radio extemporaneous speaking.

"Considering the competition from 15 southern colleges and universities with as many as 30 contestants in some events, Carolina did exceedingly well with only six entrants," said Maurice Braswell, president of the Debate council. The six entrants in the event were Richard Mottsman, Maurice Braswell, Don Shields, Blanton Miller, Robert Andrew, and Aileen Taylor.

National Tourney this Weekend

The next forensic activity will be the National Invitational debate this weekend. The affirmative team will consist of Jim Taylor and Bill Crisp, while E. O. Brogden, and William F. Farnes will uphold the negative.

The debating squad will participate in the Grand National tournament to be held in Fredericksburg, Va., on April 3-5. Public speakers and debators will take part in the rounds of extemporaneous and impromptu speaking, oratory, declamation, dramatic reading, and poetry for both men and women. Book review speaking on "David and the King," and problem solving will be features of the tournament.

Tryouts for the Debate council and squad will be held in the Dialectic senate hall, third floor New West, on March 25 at 7 o'clock. Expenses will be paid to the tourney by the Debate council.

Don Shropshire of the Di senate and Jim McNider from the Phi assembly will be two new members of the Council for the spring quarter.

First Comes the Lyric...

Talented Alan Bergman Finds Little Trouble In Turning Out 10 Tunes for Sound and Fury

By Sigsbee Miller

Alan Bergman is a musician from 'way back. At 14 he wrote his first love ballad and a year later turned out his first complete musical show, which was produced in the New York high school he was attending.

That, he explains modestly, is why he had little trouble tossing off a mere 10 tunes including lyrics for two of them for Sound and Fury's forthcoming spring production, "Dear Congress."

"After you've done it awhile it's easy—if you know how," says S and F's 21-year-old music director. "When I'm writing a song the lyrics come first. They can hit you anytime. Then you write a tune to fit the words. Unless the tune hits you as soon as you do the lyrics there's going to be trouble. In that case you memorize the lyrics and repeat them to yourself everywhere you go and one day while you're walking across the campus the tune comes. That's all there is to it."

Bergman, a native New Yorker, was playing the piano when he was five years old, but after seven years he decided to switch to the trumpet. His first stab at composition came when he was 14 and the result was a sentimental ballad he called "I Want to Have You Always" (which he still thinks is "pretty good"). The musical review he wrote when he was 15, replete with ten songs, created a mild sensation in his high school. He studied for some time under Jacques Wolfe, who immortalized himself by writing "Shortnin' Bread."

Bergman came to Carolina in 1942 when he was 16 and completed almost

Open Letter

The following is a copy of an open letter sent to Mr. J. S. Bennett in South building. Mr. Bennett is Supervisor of Operations for the University.

Dear Mr. Bennett:

The Student Legislature of this University unanimously finds occasion to present its stand in regard to the local telephone problem. These conclusions are believed to have been arrived at only after thorough and constructive consideration of the preblem—therefore, in the following paragraphs, you may consider this proposal a reflection of the facts, and of sheer student body sentiment. This assembly urges you to approve this recommendation and approach the necessary authorities in seeing it activated.

We are told that there are presently four University dormitories operating on party telephone lines. We are, also, informed that the University has ten telephone lines now available and unassigned. Of course, we realize that most of the ten lines must be used for emergency purposes. From this allotment of ten, however, we urge you to use one line to immediately disconnect Steele dormitory from the Law association. This dormitory is considered to be one of the busiest of party lines.

We are further of the opinion that the following dormitories are on party lines and should be removed upon arrival of new lines. (The next shipment):

1. Old West and Veterans Association
2. Stacy and Monogram Club
3. Mangum and Ruffin

It is our belief that every University men's dormitory (now having one telephone for hundreds of occupants) should be on separate telephone lines, as the first measure of improvement. This, we believe, to be a modest request provided that more lines arrive in excess of the number which must be retained for emergency purposes.

Secondly, we urge you to approve the next and most important part of our proposal, which concerns telephone installations in dormitories.

We recommend that two telephones be installed in every permanent dormitory for men. The additional telephones should be located on the second and third floors of men's dormitories, having three and four floors, respectively. Since lines are difficult to obtain, we approve of the installation of the additional telephones on the line now in use—to be installed in the most satisfactory manner. We trust that you will take the proper steps in conveying this proposal to the necessary authorities.

According to your office, one hundred telephones, which are scheduled to arrive in May or June, have been ordered from the American Automatic Company. Furthermore, your office states that there are now two hundred and sixty applications on file for telephones (for the University and the community). We venture to state that one additional telephone in each permanent dormitory for men is undoubtedly more essential and proper than many of the two hundred and sixty applications now on file. Furthermore, we believe, that said installations should have been made long before the war, especially in the relatively new buildings. The extra cost, we believe, is small. It behooves this body to call attention to the fact that women dormitories are equipped palatially compared to those of the men.

We commend your office for obtaining sixteen telephone booths to be placed in men's dormitories; for installing telephones in Victory Village with the view of obtaining more; and, for removing several dormitories from party lines over the past few months.

In conclusion, please permit us to suggest that your office should periodically publicize programs upon which you are endeavoring. In doing so, we are convinced that a better understanding will result from the student's point of view in regard to your policies.

Sincerely,
Student Legislature, UNC

Extraordinary

Dear Mr. Heath:

Congratulations, Mr. Heath, on your remarkable powers of mind reading. How extraordinary that you can see that the motives of all the candidates for Student council are selfish. Tell us, Mr. Heath, how can you know that the candidates are "self-seekers" with no thought of the betterment of student government? You underestimate your readers' intelligence when you think it unnecessary to state your reasons for such an assumption.

Perhaps you would point to the fact that quite a few of the nominees were people who had attended SP meetings as a basis for assuming that their motives were selfish. It seems to me, however, that attending party meetings is a good indication of active interest in Student Government and affords an excellent means for learning about its needs and functions. Mr. Heath, you yourself were present at SP meetings in which consideration of candidates for office was postponed in order that the steering committee could make a more thorough investigation of qualifications. The steering committee that made the recommendations for the Student council posts was headed by Johnny Jones, who is now chairman of the Campus Party, and was composed of people from both factions (if you like) in the Student Party.

Furthermore I think it is not the SP who is concerned with personalities. Was it not you who wanted to exclude Al Lowenstein from the party? The resolution to exclude him was voted down not so much by the people who agreed with Mr. Lowenstein but by people who would not tolerate such a petty and undemocratic act as excluding a person with whom they might not agree.

It is indeed unfortunate that your party has made its entrance armed with a bucket of mud.

MIMI MASSEY.

Shocked!

Dear Bill:

I was shocked to see that the usually sober-minded Di Senate has jumped on the bandwagon for increased veterans' subsistence. As you know this measure is being pushed by the AVC which has the slogan "Citizens first, veterans second" and consistently backs every item of class legislation and vets "grab all I can" that comes up. The $65 a month will allow a veteran to subsist; the Government should not be asked to pay for his every whim and fancy. The idea of the Government is to make it possible for the veteran to attend school—not be his father, mother and wet-nurse for four years. The raise has not too much chance of coming through thanks to the sober influence of the American Legion.

The bill on the Un-American Activities committee sounds silly as reported in the Daily Tar Heel. Does the Di object to the prosecution of Communist Eisler? Do they object to its actions in rooting subversives from Government positions? This committee is a weapon held over the head of our home-grown subversives. We need it for our own protection.

Maybe the Di had in mind the "investigation" of UNC by the committee. This investigation was reported by a "Roulhac" Hamilton. May I point out that "roulhac" spelled backwards is Cahlour! I'm surprised and dismayed at the Di's recent actions.

Sincerely,
PAUL E. MULLINAX.

The Pay-Off

Dear Sir:

"Lanier's Lottery" pays off . . . and how! The results of this crime against campus democracy are beginning to appear. It was claimed by South Bldg. that the new registration system would be of great benefit to the student body. Now the evidence to the contrary has presented itself.

All that is necessary to show how this "Efficient" new system works is a quick check of the students receiving their class tickets. I personally know of one student who applied for four courses and listed several alternates. He received a class ticket for one course and a note to see his adviser about choosing some others. Another acquaintance of mine requested Polit. Sci. 158. Somehow, however, he received History 159, a course he had never even heard of.

And as added addendum to the new "efficient" system I cite my own case: With its usual razzle-dazzle South Bldg. is unable to find any record at all of my registration. As an excuse I was told, "If some people could get their names right, there would be no trouble." I may be merely a student, but I think I can at least spell my own name.

When is the administration going to wake up? When is it going to run this University for the students, and not for the mere convenience of the "Autocrats of South Building?"

Sincerely,
J. H. BURWELL.

An Invitation

Dear Sir:

This is an invitation to Mr. James Renn and to those students who "are in a complete fog as to the purpose of campus politics" to come out of that fog and let your voices and opinions be heard in such a way that they will be most beneficial to the student body. I think that the most expedient means of accomplishing this is by attending party meetings. There are now three political parties active on the campus. Each student is perfectly free to choose the one he so desires, but in determining his choice he should give careful consideration to the policies and purposes of that party.

Mr. Renn insinuates narrow-mindedness and selfishness on the part of the University Party and the Student Party when he says that they are "completely satisfied with their interparty squabbles." I don't know whether he is right or wrong, but I do know that the newly-organized Campus Party is so far free from these afflictions. Its avowed purpose is to be the most representative party at the University of North Carolina. Its policy is to select as its candidates the men who are most capable and best qualified for the position, in order to give to the student body the most mature and efficient student government possible. The pursuit of this policy has led to one, and will probably lead to more, joint nominations. It matters not what affiliations the candidate has—his chief qualification need only be ability. So I urge all students who are even remotely interested in student government, and all those who would like unbiased information on the subject. to attend Campus Party meetings, where you will be free to take part in the nominations and to voice your opinions where they will have the best effect.

Sincerely,
STEVE MILLIKIN.

Different Ways

Dear Sir:

Louis Nicoud says in 440 words that he is not behind a GI subsistence raise. None-the-less, I'll wager that his GI check is subsidized by one source or another. Many of us are "parasites" in different ways.

New MGM Record Album Is Success

By Sam Whitehall

The MGM lion has transferred his roar into the profitable field of recordings. This week, MGM Album No. 1 "Till the Clouds Roll By," hit Abernathy's and those of us who are interested in records, recording and music hastened to get an earful of Leo's outpurrings of music by Jerome Kern.

All in all, the four record album lived up to the expectations we had for them. It's hard to see how you can go wrong when you get such stars as Kathryn Grayson, Judy Garland, Lena Horne, Tony Martin, Virginia O'Brien and Caleb Peterson. And, oh yes, June Allyson. What if she can't sing? The others more than carry her.

The album was recorded directly from the sound track of "Till the Clouds Roll By" and even on a scratchy machine the lack of surface noise, and the high fidelity of the recordings is something that record collectors will greet with joy. The excellence of reproduction, and the low price of the records are something to welcome. This is the first downward slash in record prices since Decca went into the Victor price range and started recording in England, for records at two bucks a throw.

The MGM studio orchestra and chorus accompanies the aforementioned artists on all of the records. Even they're not enough to help everybody, but for my dough Lena Horne singing "Can't Help Lovin' That Man," Virginia O'Brien singing "Life Upon the Wicked Stage," and Judy Garland singing "Who" don't need much help in making Leo the Lion's first album a top rate value, and a success in popular music.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

LEWIS HAD PREMONITION OF SUPREME COURT DECISION MINERS' BOSS APPEALED FOR "FREE ENTERPRISE" AT BREWSTER DINNER; FRESHMAN REP. JAVITS BUCKS HOUSE OLD GUARD

Washington.—John L. Lewis seemed to have a premonition as to what the Supreme Court had in store for him. Shortly before the Court's decision, the big, beetle-browed mine worker boss made a significant, rather plaintive talk before a hush-hush dinner given to various Senators and Congressmen by Kingman Brewster, Massachusetts bluestocking tax lobbyist.

Forgetting certain well-known tactics by which he put rival unions out of business, and how he twice called a strike during the war, Lewis complained that the Government was oppressive, and urged his Senatorial hearers to get back to "free enterprise."

Sen. Albert Hawkes of New Jersey, former president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, made a brief reply, tartly reminding Lewis that it was up to labor leaders to help save the American free-enterprise system.

WHEELER HONORED AT DINNER

Allegedly the dinner was given in honor of ex-Democratic Senator Burt Wheeler of Montana, one of Lewis' most intimate friends. Lewis is the man who persuaded the Anaconda Copper Co. to support Wheeler when Burt was in danger of being defeated for the Senate in 1928.

Most of those invited did not know Lewis was to attend, and frankly were puzzled regarding their host's intentions. Staunch Republican host Brewster boasts that his ancestors landed with the Pilgrim Fathers from the Fayflower, and prides himself on being a Son of The American Revolution. Asked about his dinner, Brewster would not even admit that he had held one.

"If a man can't have a purely social dinner we've come to the end," he exploded. "If you want to pry into my affairs I can tell you where to go."

However, it was ascertained that guests at the hush-hush elkmeat dinner, apparently given as a sounding board for Lewis, included: Republican Senators Cain, Wash.; Ecton, Mont.; Cordon, Ore.; Butler, Neb.; Revercomb, W.Va.; Bridges, N.H.; Hawkes, N.J.; Democratic Senators Johnson, Colo. and Eastland, Miss.; Republican Representatives Bradley, Mich.; Short, Mo.; Mundt, S. D.; plus president Robert Young of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad and Ed Wheeler, son of the ex-Senator.

LEWIS URGES "FREE ENTERPRISE"

John L. was called on at the end of the dinner and took 15 minutes to appeal for a return to "free enterprise." There can be no free enterprise, he said, if the rights of labor are restricted.

"We have a good government in this country," Lewis intoned, "but if we want to keep it a halter must not be put around the neck of labor. I will testify before Congress soon in regard to this; not that it will do any good, but I want to put myself on record."

To illustrate his point about what he meant by good government, the mine labor leader told this story:

A Chinese leader came across a woman of his country who was weeping bitterly.

"Why weepest thou?" asked the leader.

The woman pointed to a fresh grave where the body of her husband, who had been killed, was buried. Then she pointed to another grave where her only son, also killed, lay.

"Well, why don't you leave here?" asked the leader. "Why do you want to stay in a country where you have suffered so much?"

The woman replied that she preferred to stay in a country where the government was "not oppressive."

In telling the story, Lewis emphasized that this woman could endure every hardship, providing the government under which she lived was a just one.

Several others were called on to speak after Lewis had finished, including Senator Hawkes, who delivered a polished reply to the mine leader's comments.

"Mr. Lewis, you have expressed a desire to see the American system saved," declared the New Jersey Senator. "Well, you and other leaders of labor have a major responsibility in this. You should conduct yourselves as labor leaders in a manner that is compatible with the interests of the people as a whole.

"With their new powers, labor leaders have the same responsibility as industrial leaders. It rests on their shoulders, and if they don't carry it well, we will fail as a nation."

Grad Cagers Meet Kappa Sigs For Intramural Crown Tonight

IRWIN SMALLWOOD

IT IS ALL OVER now, this 1946-47 basketball season, but there are still a lot of loose ends that need taking up before putting a 30 sign on what has been one of the toughest seasons the White Phantoms have ever had from a schedule standpoint. Coach Tom Scott's Phants started right at the beginning with the best the nation had to offer and followed right through to the end with the spirit of a champion until being knocked off by State in the finals of the conference tournament last Saturday night.

"I'm nothing but proud of my team for the way they played," smiled Coach Scott yesterday as he sat with Assistant Athletic Director Chuck Ericson making out the 1947-48 schedule. "Everyone of them played well, especially Bob Paxton, who was the outstanding man in the tournament, and Jim White, who was great all the way."

Before turning to Paxton, who was terrific, we want to say a few words for that little man White, the senior who played the best trio of games we have ever seen him play in the just past conference playoffs.

Jim, who has constantly been the forgotten man in the Carolina lineup, has never been a scoring player. But during the crucial last 11-game stretch, he has become one of the finest guards and most valuable men the Phantoms ever had, both from his regular floor game standpoint and from a scoring angle as well.

And this, the 1947 Southern conference tournament, provided him with a perfect ending to his varsity playing career at Carolina. He wound up as a first stringer on the All-Tournament team, was among the top scorers, and won his first basketball in SC tourney play—only it was a silver one and not a gold one. Jim, however, put in a sensational last-minute drive to make it a gold one, you remember, laying in two quick field goals to bring the Tar Heels back within reach of the Red Terrors. (Partial credit for one, incidentally, goes to Tee Thorne, who fed him the ball down the court for the layup.)

Now White—the cotton-topped lad from Kannapolis—is through his basketball days for Carolina and will graduate come June. We say Carolina is losing a great ball player and a great competitor, basketball player who will be missed by fans and coach alike come next season.

Also along with White in the ranks of the seniors goes Jim "Daddy of 'em All" Hamilton, the mite of a fellow who came along with Scott from Weir, Kan., this season to play out his last year of eligibility under the Tar Heel banner. Hamilton, who is a fast-break artist and push shooter, ended the season as the high scorer for the White Phantom team, averaging well over 10 points per game.

The Wizard of Weir, as he was dubbed by Billy Carmichael, was an integral part of the Carolina offense all season, and his loss through fouls in the final game with State hurt the Carolina chances to a great extent. Scott will also miss the cavortings of Ham when next year rolls around, for his spirit as well as cage ability proved valuable time and again.

When it comes to putting into words the importance of "Ham Hands"—pardon Paxton—we are pushed for adjectives to adequately do him justice, for if there ever was a most valuable man on a team, Paxton is it, not just in a game now and then, but game after game without a letup.

Paxt was the only unanimous choice for All-Tournament honors, and in our opinion he is a true All-American in every sense of the word. Bob has played even better this year than he did last season on the NCAA finalist Phantom team—if that could be possible—and without him the Tar Heels would have been sorely lost. But he was there, and how, and we join the tournament sports writers in naming him as the outstanding man of the playoffs.

And as to the rest, Norm Kohler, who did a great job guarding Dick Dickey, Nemo Nearman, Jim Hayworth, Taylor Thorne, Johnny Dillon, who tried hard to pull the game out of the fire with a hook that bounced in and out, Dick Hartley and Fred Swartzberg, we say a job well done and thanks for a great job from the students and the Daily Tar Heel sports staff.

A word of final commendation, too, to Coaches Scott and Pete Mullis, who piloted the Tar Heels through thick and thin from early December until the end.

The following is the All-Tournament team chosen by your Daily Tar Heel staff sports men, Smallwood, Carmichael, Goldwater, Pharr, Schaap, Holsten and Woestendiek:

First Team		Second Team
Bob Paxton, UNC	F	Jim Hamilton, UNC
Pete Negley, NCS	F	Phil Cantore, USC
Al Adams, USC	C	Ed Bartels, NCS
Jim White, UNC	G	Bernie Kriesberg, GW
Leo Katkavek, NCS	G	Bill Cantwell, GW

Lassie Finale Set For 7 P.M.

Dorm Quint Rated Slight Favorite

By Billy Carmichael

A campus championship will be at stake tonight when the dormitory cage champs, the Grads, take the court against the fraternity winners, Kappa Sigma, in a clash that is slated to get underway at 8 o'clock on the main floor of Woollen gym.

The Grads gained the championship bracket by winning their respective dorm league and then eliminating the other three circuit victors in a playoff tourney. The Kappa Sigs reached the championship game the hard way, surviving a three-way playoff of their league, and then taking five straight wins from the cream of the frat crop in the round robin playoffs.

The Dorm champs will be paced by Kenny Black, Jim Poole, Frank Murray, and Walt Cottingham, a quartet who accounted for a total of 251 points during the regular season play. Leading the way for the Greeks will be another high-scoring trio consisting of Jack Folger, Bryant Hicks, and Bill Olsen. They averaged 95 points each during the year.

According to the pre-game information circulating the campus, the Grads are rated as five-point favorites to take the championship. The Kappa Sigs though, are used to the underdog role by now and all signs point to a bang-up ball game.

Coed Cage Playoff

There will be another championship tilt on the campus tonight with the women's mural cage title on the line as the Pi Phis square off against Town at 7 o'clock in the Woman's gym.

Both teams are undefeated in season's play and will sport star-studded aggregations. All are cordially invited to attend and a large crowd is expected.

Conference Win Was Great Finish For Blue Dolphins

Sporting an impressive record that includes seven conference wins, a dual meet and a Southern conference championship, and only one setback, Coach Dick Jamerson's powerful Blue Dolphins concluded one of their most colorful seasons Saturday when they romped home to a lopsided victory in the Southern conference finals.

In what Coach Jamerson termed the squad's best showing of the season, the Tar Heel swimmers submerged all opposition in their sound trouncing of the second place North Carolina State Red Terrors by 34 tallies and the third place Duke Devilfish by 50 points. VMI placed fourth with 7.

At a post-meet interview, the versatile Tar Heel coach opined that it was the team balance of the Carolina mermen that gave them the decided edge in Saturday's meet. Where the other squads depended on two or three stars to carry the load, the well rounded Dolphins stressed teamwork which gained for them the well-deserved victory.

Coach Jamerson also expressed the opinion that although all the squad members did exceptionally well in their final outing, probably the team's most outstanding performamnce was turned in by Norm Sper who totaled 13½ points when he took one first, a first place tie, and swam a sensational lap on the Blue and White's winning relay team.

Almost as valuable a showing was that of Jerry Cook, when he turned on a tremendous finishing kick and passed tired favorite, Bill Kelly, to win the 200-meter breaststroke by three yards. He was followed by Don Breeden and Pete Hexner. In the diving division, Buddy Crone, Norm Sper, Mac Erle and Dick Swigart all turned in excellent form as they copped the first four places.

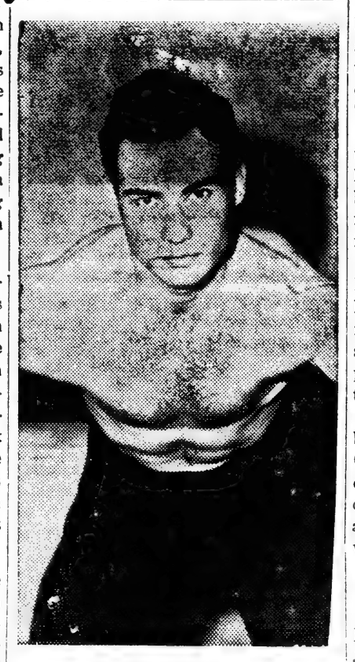
Jess Greenbaum and Mike Morrow were elected as Co-captains for the 1947-48 version of the Blue Dolphins at the annual swimming banquet last night.

1947 SC Champs....

Three Carolina Matmen Win Conference Crowns

Bringing the Southern conference mat crown back to Chapel Hill after a five-year absence, Carolina's 1947 wrestling team put the finishing touches on a highly-successful season Saturday night when the Tar Heels rounded out an undefeated record in league competition.

Final team statistics show that the Carolina aggregation captured seven victories, six against loop opponents, and suffered one setback at the hands of a powerful Navy team. In the tournament Tar Heel grapplers gained three individual championships and one runner-up position while fighting their way to the team crown with a total of 29 points. VMI, the defending titleholder, tied for second with State, both garnering 20 points.



From a Carolina viewpoint, the outstanding triumph in the mat finals came in the unlimited bracket when Laurie Hooper, out of action for the six weeks prior to the tourney with a sprained ankle, turned in a well-earned upset victory over the pre-meet heavyweight favorite, Dick Wagoner of State. Co-captain of the 1944 team, Hooper handed defeats to VPI and Maryland wrestlers on his way to the final round against the Raleigh ace.

The other two individual titles were captured by undefeated Co-Captain Tommy Hearn, operating in the 128-pound division, and Irv Zirpel, holding down the 155-pound berth. Hearn had a close call in his preliminary bout, coming through in fine fashion with a 8-7 decesion over Blalock of State and pinning his VMI's Spencer in the finals. Zirpel registered two decisions by large margins and scored one fall on his way to the title in his division.

The toughest break for Carolina came in the 145-pound division when Co-Captain Dick Seaver, wrestling his final match for the Tar Heels, lost a heartbreaker to Bob Sherrard of VMI. The Cadet ace, who dropped a decision to Seaver earlier this season, won by virtue of a one-minute time advantage.

Two other Blue and White matmen ran off with third-place honors. Bill Kemp came through in the 165-pound bracket and Doug Thompson did likewise at 121. Both won their final bouts by falls.

The remaining two Tar Heels, Oscar Gupton, and Demont Roseman came in fourth in their respective classes. Gupton, suffering an upset stomach during the trip to Lexington, Va., where the meet took place, suffered his initial setbacks in conference competition this year in the 165-pound group. Roseman's fourth-place finish came at 136 pounds.

State Begins Practice For National Tourney

(Special to Daily Tar Heel)

Raleigh, March 10. — State college's Red Terrors, who barely eked out a win over Carolina for the SC crown Saturday night, have begun workouts for their appearance in the National Invitational basketball tourney in New York starting March 15.

State has won 25 games out of 29 played this season and faces St. John's in their opening game in the tournament.

RabbWelcomes Two Ex-Cagers

Hayworth, Hamilton Join Baseball Squad

Another letterman and an additional infield prospect, both members of the recently-disbanded basketball team, reported to Coach Walter Rabb during diamond workouts yesterday as the baseball candidates went through an indoor session in the Tin Can.

Jim Hayworth, who alternated behind the plate on last year's team, and Jim Hamilton, a prospective third baseman, were the two former cagers who hope to win berths on the Tar Heel nine.

A pair of grid stars are also among the diamond prospects. Ernie Williamson, giant tackle during the football season, is out for a spot on the mound staff while guard Sid Varney is trying for a backstop position.

Kept indoors by the muddy turf on Emerson field, the large group of hopefuls went through throwing and running drills as part of the necessary conditioning process. Outdoor practice is expected to be resumed today.

Progress in pre-season drills has been fairly satisfactory, according to Coach Rabb, and the pitchers and catchers are well ahead of schedule due to the fact that they have been able to work all during the bad weather inside.

Recalls the "Good Old Days"...

Eddie Black Plans to Build Cement Block Bailiwick Here

By Thomasene Cates

Edward Anthony (Blackie) Black halted his typical ship gait. "Whatta' ya' say there buddy! Glad to see ya.' How's Harry's? Been holding everything down while I was gone?" he said, punctuating his phrases with occasional slaps on the back and low chuckles.

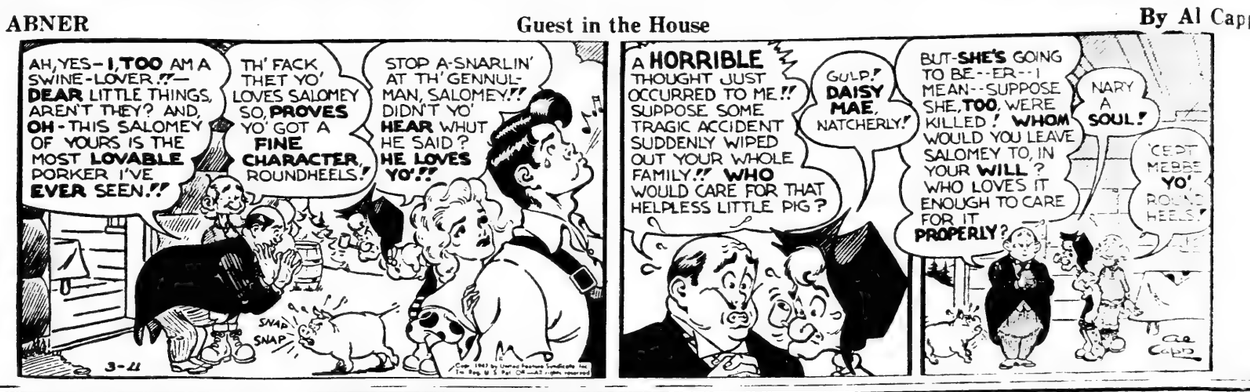
Blonde, blue-eyed, friendly Blackie Black so nicknamed, because, according to him, he is the black sheep of the family, continued the conversation.

"Yeah, I did graduate, but I've come back to the old grind again, doing graduate work in personnel managing. I'm gonna' build myself a house out of cement blocks, forsake Sutton's tower, (Blackie's former residence, located above Sutton's Drug store) and settle right here in Chapel Hill. No kidding," Blackie hurriedly sputtered out so he could yell at somebody across campus.

Blackie, who came to Carolina in 1943 with the naval program, is noted for his friendliness which he says recalls the "good old days" when everybody spoke to everybody else on the campus. "My first love is people," he said.

He probably knows more people on the campus than any other person having had a chance to deal directly with them in his activities. As originator and first proprietor of the Candlelight room, a member at large of the Student council, the freshman baseball team in '43, the dance committee, former Tar Heel columnist, a member of both the Mag and Yack staff, and the Di and the Phi.

Since graduating in journalism last December he has been working with the South magazine, a travel monthly. "I just finished a story on the Ringling home in Sarasota, Fla. It has been made a state museum and is reputed to be the only private estate in the U. S. costing three or four million dollars to build and furnish. I also do my own photography with my stories."



EDDIE BLACK

Life of Alumnus

"I already know what it's like to be an alumnus of this place," he said laughingly, "I just had to pay $2 to get in a basketball game. I couldn't use my twin brother Whitie's ID card because we don't look alike—he's good-looking."

"See ya!," Blackie said as he spotted someone halfway across the campus and dashed over to shake his hand.

BERGMAN

two years of music-preparatory work before he was called to the Army. He returned in March, 1945, and changed his major to economics.

"I have several reasons for changing my major," he says. "First, I don't particularly need or want many of the music courses here. Second, I want some day to be a Broadway producer. And a producer is a businessman. So I'll take my A. B. in economics here next August, then I hope to take business administration in the Harvard graduate school."

In the Army, Bergman picked up a wide range of musical experience and a case of asthma, the latter of which forced him to abandon his trumpet. As director of an Army entertainment unit he was on tour with such musical luminaries as Dick Haymes, Marilyn Maxwell and Helen Forrest. He wrote songs for all-soldier shows every two weeks and for three months was arranger for a daily radio show at Camp Butner.

Since he has been at Carolina Bergman has had two tone poems performed. He scored and conducted the Sound and Fury production, "Gadabout," in his sophomore year, 1943, and has made a special arrangement of Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" for clarinet, trumpet, tenor saxophone and bass fiddle, which Earl Slocum is considering for performance in a spring concert. The ten songs he has written for "Dear Congress," his second complete musical review at Carolina, include two ballads, "Your Loveliness," "Where Have We Met Before," and "Barren Counties," a novelty tune.

Tops among popular music conductors, he thinks, is Mark Warnow, of Hit Parade fame. Bergman spent six weeks with Warnow at Palm Beach, Fla., last winter and gained commendation from the orchestra leader for his songs.

"My hobby," he says, "is making recordings of my songs."

He sings, too.

Senator Taft Endorses Plan To Continue Rent Controls

G.O.P. Policy-Maker Would Extend Ceilings Until Next March under Board Supervision

Washington, March 11—(UP)—The Republican party's number one spokesman in matters of policy, Senator Robert Taft of Ohio, has thrown his influence behind a plan to continue rent control for another year. The plan, drawn up by Taft and Republican Senator McCarthy of Wisconsin, would do three things:

It would create a rent adjustment and de-control board to continue federal controls on rents throughout the county until the first of next March; de-control rents on new housing projects; liberalize the present system for "hardship relief," under which individual landlords can apply for rent increases.

Decontrol Any Area

The rent adjustment and decontrol board would have the power to decontrol any rental area, or to grant rent boosts throughout the area.

A conference of Republican Senators is expected to be called in a few days to consider the Taft-McCarthy plan. Last night, a party conference failed to produce an agreement on rent policy.

Housing expediter Frank Creedon told the New York Building Congress today that he will end all limitations on construction of buildings other than homes as soon as conditions warrant. Creedon said, "I think this will come to pass before the end of the year." He asked builders to keep their promise, and begin building as soon as federal controls are off.

Legislature to Hear Final Revenue Reading

Raleigh, March 11—(UP)—The North Carolina Revenue bill for the next two years has passed its second reading in the House of Representatives. The vote was 103 to two. The measure is up for a final reading in the House tomorrow. If it passes, it then goes to the Senate. The only lawmakers voting against the bill in the House were Representative Whitfield of Pender and Hancock of Granville.

The Appropriations bill was reported in today by Representative Allen of Wake county, the House appropriations chairman. The bill has been placed on the House calendar for tomorrow.

59,000 N. C. Veterans Are Using GI Benefits

Winston-Salem, March 11—(UP)—The Veterans administration reports that more than fifty-nine thousand North Carolina veterans are taking advantage of the G.I. bill of rights. The regional V-A at Winston-Salem says more than forty thousand North Carolina veterans are drawing pensions. The reports shows an increase during February in the number of veterans receiving education or on-the-job training under the G.I. bill.

Fist Fight Flares Up In French Assembly

Paris, March 11—(UP)—A meeting of the French National Assembly has broken up in disorder after a fist fight between Communist and Right Wing party members.

House Sends to Senate Post Office, OPA Bills

Washington, March 11—(UP)—The House has passed and sent to the Senate a 12 and one third billion dollar treasury-post office appropriation bill. It was the first of a series of Federal supply bills for fiscal 1948.

The House also has approved a bill liquidating the Office of Temporary Controls, including the OPA by June 30th. The measure now goes to the Senate.

Course in Religion Open to Students In Spring Quarter

A non-credit course in "The Essentials of the Christian Religion" will be offered to all interested students during the spring term.

The new course, which is not a part of the University curriculum, is open to all students, especially those who have questions about the Christian religion. The class will meet every Monday evening from 7 to 8 o'clock in Gerrard hall, and will be conducted in such a manner that individual members of the class will participate in the discussion.

Dr. Frank Hanft, professor of jurisprudence in the University Law school, will conduct the class, which will endeavor to confront frankly and candidly the deep-seated questions pertaining to religious experience.

The idea for the course originated in the Young Adult Church school of the local Methodist church, whose members felt that in the make-up of the University curriculum there is no opportunity for the student body to meet systematically the questions of religion.

Professor Hanft, who served in the European theater with the Ninth Air force during World War II, was asked to conduct the course by the Sunday school class in which the idea originated.

Any student interested in the course should meet the first class on March 31 at 7 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

Belgium Cabinet Votes To Tender Resignation

Brussels, March 11—(UP)—The post-war government of Belgium is in a crisis tonight—mostly because of difficulties concerning the nation's economy.

The left-wing cabinet led by socialist Premier Camille Huysmans has voted to resign in a body. The resignation are to be submitted to the Prince Regent tomorrow.

The crisis began developing earlier today when the four Communist members resigned because the other Cabinet members refused to meet their demands. The immediate controversy is said to have involved the fixing of steel and coal prices.

It's not clear just what the nature of the new Belgian cabinet is to be. But observers in Brussels are speculating that the Catholic party—the largest single political organization in Belgium—may be asked to form a new government.

Bad Weather, Labor Conditions Impede Work on Classrooms

By Ed Joyner

Erection of the new frame classroom buildings now arriving here from Camp Forrest, Tenn., is running behind schedule due to labor shortage and bad weather conditions here and in Tullahoma, Tenn., J. C. Stone, Jones Construction Co. superintendent said yesterday.

A change in plans for heating the buildings is also a contributing factor in the holdup, Stone said. Though originally calling for hot air heating, the plans were changed by the University in order to eliminate inside furnace rooms and utilize all available space for classrooms and offices. The buildings are now to be heated with steam from the central heating system.

Await More Material

As a result of the revised heating plans, none of the buildings now under construction can be completed until surplus material arrives from Tullahoma to fill the space which would have been taken up by the concrete floored furnace rooms.

The first of the new buildings to go into construction, one of three additions to the library, began two weeks ago is still unfinished, but might be ready by the end of spring vacation.

A promise of thirty new workmen to report from Durham today brightened the labor picture for the project but Stone said that he would welcome applications for work from students who have at least half of their day free for the job.

In spite of slow progress, construction is now moving on two of the three library buildings and work will begin today on two public health buildings and on three storage units near the power plant.

In addition parts of the naval science building and of the geology building have arrived. However, these two buildings are far down the priority list for construction.

Re-voting Set for Three Positions As Rest of Election Runs Smoothly

By Chuck Hauser

As campaign fever ran high in Y court, freshmen and sophomores filed in and out of Gerrard hall yesterday afternoon to cast their votes for officers for the two classes.

The temperature was still rising as the Daily Tar Heel went to press last night, on the issue of a run-off election for the office of president of the freshman class.

Figures Released

According to figures released at approximately 6 o'clock yesterday evening, final tabulation of ballots was as follows:

Freshman: President: Steve Nimocks—102, N. A. Winn—97 (run-off); Bill Wood—20 (disqualified); vice-president: Paul Baschon—96, Ralph Lee—65 (run-off); Paul Fuller—44, Bill Rogers—19; secretary-treasurer: Stuart Bondurant—127, (elected), Jim Lingle—93; social chairman: Jo West—116 (elected), Ted Barnes—99.

Sophomores: President: Dusty Leonard—44, Curt Youngblood—29 (run-off); Sam Sprunt—13, Edward Smith—10 (disqualified); vice-president: Carl Durham—45 (elected), Bob Lee—41; secretary-treasurer: Miles Smith—56 (elected), Earl Somers—32; social chairman: Jerry Pence (unanimously elected).

The hot issue still being debated on campus last night was the question of whether Bill Wood's disqualification (because he failed to file a statement of campaign expenditures, as provided for by the constitution) in the freshman presidential bracket gave Steve Nimocks a majority over the only other qualified candidate, N. A. Winn.

At press time last night, Chairman Jabie Heyward of the elections board could not be located for a statement on the question. Neither could John Clampitt, chairman of the Student Legislature's elections committee be found.

One member of the elections committee, however, was reached for a statement. Tag Montague made the following comments: "In my opinion, due to the fact that Mr. Wood failed to file a statement of expenditures, and was disqualified for such, any votes cast for Mr. Wood should not be included in the total number of votes, giving Mr. Nimocks a clear majority over his opponent."

IFC Kills Proposal For Stan Kenton Hop

The Interfraternity council turned down a proposal to hire Stan Kenton's orchestra for IFC dances tentatively set for April 18 and 19, Whit Osgood, president of the organization, stated yesterday.

At a brief meeting held in Graham Memorial, a vote was taken on the question yesterday afternoon. The necessary two-thirds majority required to pass the motion was not reached.

Board Opposes UNC Printery

Group Favors Hike In Publication Fee

By Louis Nicoud

In a session of the Publications Union Board yesterday afternoon the culmination of discussion concerning the future establishment of a University printshop was a resolution introduced by Howard Merry, which places the board on record as being opposed to a University printshop in favor of mutual cooperation with the Orange Printshop, which it anticipates will have more adequate facilities available to University publications in the future.

A measure to increase the student publications fee from $6.90 to $7.50 was passed at the meeting. The increase was voted in order to minimize an existing deficit in the publications fund described as "dangerous" and to insure against future deficits.

Because of the great responsibility which it considers are involved in the executive positions of campus publications, the board adopted a fair practices resolution. Upon assuming office each incumbent editor-in-chief will be asked to give his voluntary assent to the code of the resolution, which requires unbiased presentation of information, a guarantee that legitimate news will not be suppressed and that all letters from persons or groups who have been attacked in their publications will be published.

A motion to award keys to students who have worked on student publications was passed. In order to qualify for the award, applicants must present a letter of request to the board, accompanied by letters of endorsement from two editors under whom they have worked.

Labor Secretary Blasts Communism

Washington, March 11—(UP)—A bi-partisan drive to outlaw the Communist party is underway in the nation's capitol.

The campaign was brought into the open today by Secretary of Labor Lewis Schwellenbach who publicly stated he thought it was time the United States banned Communists from the ballot, since their purpose is to destroy the government.

The Republican head of the House Labor committee thoroughly agreed. New Jersey's Fred Hartley jumped to the support of the Cabinet member and said he too believed it wasn't enough to ban Communists from labor unions—that they should be outlawed everywhere.

Hartley promised to get legal experts working on the problem and to take immediate steps toward writing such a ban into law.

Attorney General Tom Clark was asked what he thought of the idea—but he sideswiped by commenting, "I am for outlawing any group whose aim is to overthrow the government."

Schwellenbach is the first high official in the administration to actually advocate a legislative purge to rid the country of the Communist element. It is not known whether his proposal was given prior endorsement from the White House.

Edwin S. Lanier, Director of Central Records office announced late last night that all students who have not called for their spring quarter class tickets should do so today. After today no class tickets will be distributed until March 22.

Moose, Rouzie Ask Veterans to Write Congressmen

Cost Survey Results To Be Made Available

By Earl Heffner

Pointing to the necessity of veterans writing and wiring their congressmen immediately in support of H. R. 870, the increased subsistence clause of the GI Bill of Rights, formerly known as Public Law 346, Roy Moose and Ben Rouzie, respective presidents of the University Veterans association and the American Veterans committee, yesterday issued a joint plea for individual action of this nature by campus veterans.

"Without letters and wires to home state congressmen, the increased subsistence measure has little chance of passage," the joint statement read. "The Chapel Hill chapter, AVC and the UVA have done all they can to aid this bill at present. Individual action is now required."

Results Today

It was pointed out that results of the AVC-UVA cost of living survey will be made available at the "Y" today, that the information contained therein and in the story in yesterday's Daily Tar Heel, provide excellent and factual information which may be used in correspondence with congressmen.

Roy Moose, (left), and Ben Rouzie, (right), presidents of UVA and AVC, respectively, yesterday made a plea to all campus veterans to write their congressmen in support of House Bill 870, favoring a hike in GI subsistence.

Individual Letters Are Hope of Success

An AVC spokesman revealed that the measure is now in the Veterans Affairs committee of the senate, and that the AVC and other organizations are maintaining a lobby in Washington at present in support of the bill, and that action is momentarily expected.

Results of this UVA-AVC joint survey are to be sent to the Carolina delegation in Washington.

Should the measure not be passed before next quarter, the UVA and the AVC plan further action in support of subsistence increase.

No Compromise

In last Friday's edition of the DTH a statement on procedure and policy concerning the honor system appeared on this page. It was prepared by the hard-working and efficient Men's council as a guide for all students.

A similar statement was distributed to members of the faculty. In one paragraph of the statement distributed to the faculty appears a sentence saying that, due to the crowded conditions of the classroom which make it more difficult to observe the honor system, the instructors may remain in the classrooms during the entire test period in order to answer any questions; that the instructors should not be allowed to set aside a question period at the beginning of the test and then leave the building.

It seems to us that any procedure such as that stated in the preceding paragraph is defeating all the work that has been done towards building an efficient honor system. It is redundant in that it says we have an honor system, but the instructors must stay to enforce it. If the system must be enforced, it is no longer an honor system.

We do not feel that any such halfway measures can be used on this campus. We are strongly in favor of a smoothly-functioning honor system as the ideal system. But we do not believe that it is possible to have an honor system with proctors, which is what the above statement infers.

If the instructors were to remain in the classroom, students could not help but feel resentful, provided they are faithful adherents to the honor system. "If we do have an honor system, why is he watching me?," would be the question on everyone's lips. No, we are sure that you cannot put a man on his honor and then watch him to see that he stays on it.

The success of the honor system depends on both the student and the instructor. If it is to work, the student's word and honor must be respected. The students must make the system work; they cannot be made to make it work.

Our Congratulations

Tomorrow, one of the organizations on this campus about which little is known by many students, but which is widely known throughout the nation, celebrates its twenty-fifth birthday.

Twenty-five years ago the University of North Carolina Press published its first book. Since that time the University Press has published over 500 books, several of which have won awards and been best-sellers.

Although the Press has published books dealing primarily with this region, the topics covered in most of its books have been of universal interest. It also became the first university press in the country to delve into the field of fiction.

Tomorrow, the Press will open its doors in Bynum hall to some 2,000 guests, many of whom have contributed to its great success. Many of the books the Press has published will be on exhibit.

On its twenty-fifth birthday, we would like to join with its many other well-wishers to offer our best wishes to the University Press and our congratulations for a job well done. May the next twenty-five years prove even more successful.

We will have to can individual selfishness to preserve world peace.

Fighting with each other causes trouble. Fighting for each other solves it.

I'd Rather Be Right

Veterans on Campus Believe Increased Subsistence Necessary

By Earl Heffner

Oyez! Oyez! Hear ye all ye parasites, ye veteran scavengers feeding off the monetary bowels of a munificent government! Now is the time for ye all to come to the aid of your selfish brethren and back this class legislation that will increase monetary allotments.

"Thanks to the sober influence of the American Legion," this gimme, gimme cry for more money has little chance of passage.

This is the clarion call of opponents who would label veterans seeking more money as a "generation of parasites."

The holders of this view dogmatically refuse to admit that two distinct interpretations of the GI Bill of Rights subsistence clause may be made.

The narrow and conservative viewpoint is that these funds were granted to augment living costs and to serve as an incentive for veterans needing education.

The more liberal interpretation is that the funds are to meet the necessary and basic expenses of veterans attending school.

Certainly, it is true that no veteran in a literal sense is owed a living by the government. Equally it is true that the subsistence is not a dole created to provide an "easy" living for loafers. Rather it is a reciprocal agreement in that through the medium of taxes, the student veteran eventually will pay for his education.

It is my sincere opinion that the liberal interpretation of the GI Bill of Rights subsistence clause is the one held by the visionary creators of this Public Law 346.

The results of the University Veterans Association and Chapel Hill Chapter, American Veterans Committee indicate that 90 per cent of the veterans on this campus also subscribe to this latter belief.

Unfortunately, passive agreement is not sufficient.

Senator Glen H. Taylor, in his address here last week, stated that, in his opinion, the 80th Congress will not pass the measure calling for increased subsistence. He intimated further that a decrease may be in the offing sooner than many expect.

It is true that the Republican-controlled Congress is seated on a hell spot. It doesn't want to finance the present government in Greece; it doesn't want to lose votes by a too drastic cut in Army-Navy appropriations. Yet, it is committed to a cut in the national budget.

Already eyes have been cast at the Veterans Administration. These GOP solons may reason that the student-veteran vote will go against them in '48 in spite of any political or legislative coercian. Should this decision be reached, there will be no hesitation in slashing at the GI Bill of Rights.

If for no other reason but to postpone this inevitable move, veterans should take an active step in support of the present request for a subsistence increase.

The American Veterans Committee is championing this bill; so is the University Veterans Association as are similar groups on other campuses. A large lobby is being maintained in Congress for this specific purpose.

But an even larger lobby against the increase is being maintained by the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

To counteract this last bloc, an impressive array of individual action must be in evidence.

The UVA and AVC in joint action with their survey have made available impressive and truthful figures to campus veterans. The next move is up to the veteran interested in furthering his own cause.

H. R. 807, the increase measure, is in committee, the Veterans Affairs Committee of the Senate, now. Action is expected on the measure any day.

To aid this bill, veterans should write their home state legislators. As soon as they read in the newspapers that action is being taken, veterans should wire their Congressmen in support of the bill.

With this kind of action, the bill has scant chance of passage. Without it, the measure cannot pass. And possible veterans soon may be trying to stretch $50 monthly over the items formerly covered by the $65.

Strictly Detrimental....

Early Returns of Registration System Contain Many Evils

By Jud Kinberg

Despite prior criticism, the Administration continued its search for the Golden Fleece of an "easy registration" system. The result, it seems from first returns, is a lot of dirty wool.

Lanier's Lottery has spun full turn and fully one-tenth is so far out in right field that they can't even see home-plate. There is the sad tale of an editorial associate of mine who put down four courses and four alternates. Naturally, he got the alternates, only two of which are really important to his major.

Such sad experiences can probably be multiplied a hundred-fold by even a cursory (that is, the boys are cursing) poll of those who have been holled by this latest Administration system. When the Daily Tar Heel unwillingly ceased firing against the new plan, it warned that students would be looking for fair treatment. It is quite evident that many of them did not get it in the first round of the present registration plan.

It is too late to rectify the manifest sins committed before we leave for home. But when we return, the Administration should set up a Board of Rectification and see that it works quickly and efficiently. The many men who have had such things as language studies interrupted must be gotten into such classes despite the slight inconvenience to the administration. There are many other curriculum crimes that have been committed in the name of "efficiency." If some system to compensate for it is not devised and implemented during the vacation, the only recourse open to the students will be a general strike. If we take this latest bit of chicanery without raising a most righteous stink, we will have sent Carolina spinning merrily on its way to status as a low-grade military school.

While we're on the subject of inequalities, there is a glaring one for which the student body as a whole—or at least its leaders—is responsible. In former years, the number of graduate students was so small that they neither asked for nor were given representation in student government.

Today, however, they have became

Today, however, they have become a potent force of 500 or more. Yet they still, are completely excluded from any part in governing themselves. It is an obvious injustice that so large a group is not given a representative to the Student Legislature.

True, such groups as the Law School are given members, but a special post for the graduates as a whole should be created. At the present time, the MA candidates in the many other departments are given no representation, nor is their opinion generally sought by responsible student leaders.

It is time to enfranchise this sizeable minority. The argument that they desire no such voice is a spurious one. Only by granting it to them can we find the true answer. If these men and women are interested in student government, they will provide a new and intelligent group of constituents to bolster our many self-government organizations.

This is another matter that should be investigated as soon as school reconvenes. It is a chance for the present Legislature to make a notable contribution to the campus setup.

What Do YOU Say?

By Harry Snowden

Today's Question

Would you prefer to have a campus "treasure chest" instead of the individual campaign solicitations as at present?

Answers

Yes, think of the student time that could be saved: somebody always must collect for these incessant campaigns, which are an unnecessary bother, when one campaign could take care of the whole idea.—Betty Anne Green, Lake City, S. C.

Yes, for it would make it much easier for those of us who operate on a budget. It is especially distressing to be unable to give to a worthy cause because we have been caught unprepared.—Albert E. Lovejoy Southern Pines.

Yes, because people are always coming in asking for funds when you are broke and can't meet your personal obligations! I think it's an excellent idea.—Lois Clarke, Wilson.

No, because not everyone has enough interest in all the various causes to give a relatively large amount to the "treasure chest," whereas they would be willing to give smaller individual sums to the separate causes.—Colbert Leonard, Chapel Hill.

Yes. Leaders of campus drives could agree on a proportional distribution to each fund as is done in Community Chest drives, could present their needs forcefully, and could arouse greater support through a united appeal.—Lee Copple, Albemarle.

Yes, I think so. It would be much more convenient for the student who has to watch his expenses and it would eliminate the annoyance of dormitory solicitations.—John W. Davis, Ft. Monroe, Va.

I think it would be a good idea; it would be more convenient for the students. I'm afraid, however, that it would be difficult to collect a sufficient fund.—Kathryn E. Hall, Asheville.

Yes, it would save a lot of time for the solicitors. However, I don't think students will donate as much to a single fund as they will to individual campaigns.—Natalie Selig, Elizabeth City.

Lack of Understanding

Dear Sir:

I'm glad that I shall not be alive to read what future historians will have to say about the post-war period in America. The present clamor for more governement hand-outs vividly shows a degeneracy of individual pride and responsibility that I doubt has ever been equaled before and that I hope will not be equaled again. In short, I fully endorse Louis Nicoud's letter recently printed in the Daily Tar Heel.

This give-me, give-me-more philosophy, now being driven at top speed, shows a fundamental lack of understanding of what our government is, who it is, and what it is supposed to do. "Of the people," and "by the people" are lost and forgotten phrases, and now all we have is "for the people." We here that "they" ought to give us more money, and nobody seems to know who "they" are. "They" are you and I.

Another phase of this lack of understanding about our own country is the attitude that most all veterans seem to have: that they did their country a favor by going into the service. This, I think, is at the bottom of the give-me campaign. We didn't do anybody any favor. Why is it so hard for present-day America to see the most obvious facts? When your country is at war, you go into the service where every able-bodied man belongs. Nothing could be more natural than that. It is a duty that is to be taken for granted.

Despite the fact that this is only a basic duty, our government is showing its appreciation of our service by helping us through school. I am sure that it was never the intention of the G. I. Bill to pay the whole cost.

The present tax-rate is deadening to individual initiative (ask your father if you don't believe me). Some of us apparently have forgotten that even when "they" spend money, somebody has to pay for it. If anybody in this school thinks that he won't be paying for much of this, he ought to leave school and save himself and the government a lot of money.

It is the individual responsibility of every American to try to take care of himself and his family. When this job is completely taken over by the government I'm moving out. Our national pride is almost national shame if we expect our government to do everything for us. Amusingly enough, it was this same paternal attitude, inherent in the service, that everybody said he hated. It looks as if American youth loved it and wanted more of it now. The Navy recruiting trailer left Chapel Hill today, but I'm sure it would come back for those who think their government owes them a living. Because, if you're in the service, you can truthfully say the government does owe you a living.

Yours truly,
FREDERIC D. LEWIS

Nostalgia

Richmond, Va.

To the Editor:

Perhaps your readers would be interested in the nostalgic thoughts which prey on the mind of an old grad who didn't graduate from the Old North State's great educational institution, U.N.C.

The little memories are most poignant: sipping a hot Viennese and munching a tasty schickelgruber in Danziger's Old World Coffee Shop; listening tensely as those intrepid exbirdmen on the campus calmly relate how they feathered their props with gnu feathers over the Hump; or, in a more serious vein, the heart-warming, inspiring relationship—vastly more beneficial than all the studies—with that dear old friend of every college student, Aunt Katherine.

Very, very choked up, I remain, your humble correspondent who will never falter in his duty to hark the sound of Tar Heel voices (even if they have Brooklyn accents), nor fail to make with the salaam for each passing locomotive in honor of "Choo Choo."

In the shadow of the Old Well,
PAUL RICK

JIM PHARR

(Ed. Note—With this column veteran sports reporter and night sports editor Jim Pharr writes his journalistic "30" to the Daily Tar Heel. Graduating at the end of this quarter, he has shouldered a major share of the DTH sports work during the past year and the entire staff wishes him good luck in future newspaper activities.)

IT'S KINDA HARD for a guy who likes sports to be leaving Carolina at the end of this quarter, with the remainder of the 1947 sports calendar expected to be the most glittering in the athletic history of this institution. This columnist doesn't need a crystal ball to predict a great spring season for the baseball team, the trackmen, the tennis squad and the golfers.

As for the Tar Heel gridmen, who will begin spring practice early next quarter, from all reports they will be among the best in the country come September. With all the holdovers from last year, along with some fine looking new talent, Coach Carl Snavely has the makings on hand for a world-beater—at least, that's how it looks to us.

NOW WE would like to take a look backward over the sports happenings of the last quarter and wrap the winter athletic season up into a neat package by picking out some of the highlights that stand out in memory.

Coming back after Christmas holidays, everyone is talking about Carolina's great game in the Sugar Bowl against Georgia and Gabe Hill becomes infamous in the minds of all Carolina fans . . . Jim Hamilton leads the White Phantoms to a 58-42 drubbing of Maryland in the first conference clash for the Tar Heel cagers . . . The Blue Dolphins open their season with a 49-26 win over the Bainbridge Navy swimmers . . . Carolina courtmen travel to New York and upset NYU, 50-48, with Norm Kohler and Bob Paxton leading the play . . . Coach Chuck Quinlan's grapplers open their season with an impressive victory over VPI, 18-10 . . . The Tar Heel jayvees whip Dook junior varsity, 44-32 . . . John Dillon, Charlie Justice and Snooky Proctor nominated for Teague Award . . . The boxers floor South Carolina 4½ to 3½ . . . Phants lose to Navy, 39-35, in spite of brilliant performance by "Hook" Dillon—who bucketed 19 points against the Middies . . . "Daddy" Hamilton drops in foul shot for cagers to pace thrilling 50-49 Carolina victory over South Carolina Gamecocks . . . Phantoms hit their season's high against the Deacons of Wake Forest, 70-49, with Hamilton, the Wizard of Weir, pumping in 15 points . . . Blue Dolphins sink VPI, 49-26, for first conference success of season . . . Matmen trip State, 17-13, for their third straight win . . . Phants drop overtime tilt to State cagers, 46-48, with Paxton hitting 12 points . . . NYU whips Phants, 60-47, in return tilt . . . Coach Snavely greets turnout of 117 gridmen, led by Charlie "Choo-Choo" Justice, for the start of winter practice . . . Phants blast Dook, 49-28, in thrilling contest as Nemo Nearman sinks 16 tallies . . . Matmen continue Tar Heel assault on Duke, walking over Blue Devil grapplers, 22-6 . . . Blue Dolphins sink VMI, 45-30, for second loop triumph . . . Jim White hits for 17 points to lead Phantoms to 53-47 win over South Carolina . . . Football schedule announced with Georgia, Texas, and State included on 10-game card . . . That boy Hamilton again as Phants whip Wake Forest, 54-46 . . . Navy breaks grapplers' unbeaten streak, 28-6 . . . Swimmers whip State by forfeit when Raleigh tankmen fail to show . . . Carolina-State basketball clash at Raleigh cancelled as mob of students overcrowd gym . . . Paxton and Hamilton lead Phants to 57-47 triumph over Duke . . . Carolina trackmen score 46 points to take Southern Invitational Indoor crown, with Chunk Simmons taking first place in two hurdle events . . . Grapplers maul Virginia, 48-27 . . . Second-seeded Phants meet Richmond Spiders in opening round of loop tournament . . . Carolina takes opener over Richmond, 55-43, as Hamilton buckets 20 markers . . . Phants crush South Carolina, 58-33, in tourney semi-finals . . . Blue Dolphins win swimming tournament, with 81 points . . . Grapplers win conference mat crown at Lexington, Va. . . . White Phantoms drop heartbreaker to State in Southern conference tournament finals, 50-48, before 9,000 howling spectators.

TO SUM UP the quarter, Tar Heel teams copped conference titles in track, swimming, wrestling, and finished second behind the Red Terrors of State in basketball. It has been an outstanding quarter for Carolina all along the sports front, but we can't help but feel that even greater triumphs are ahead. That's about all from this corner, except that we will be watching you with interest. Beat DOOK!

Rabb Names Players For Vacation Drills

Coach Walter Rabb sent his baseball aspirants through a lengthy two-hour practice session yesterday afternoon on the Navy field in preparation for their initial encounter with Trinity College of Hartford here on March 28.

Football Ducats Go on Sale June 1

In response to the large number of orders already flooding the ticket office for ducats to the home grid contests next season, the Athletic Association announced yesterday that no tickets will go on sale before June 1.

All requests to home tilts already received in the office will be returned to their senders, Vernon Crook, head of the Athletic Association ticket office, said yesterday.

The home games that season ticket purchasers will see include Georgia on September 27, Wake Forest on October 11, Tennessee on November 1, and Virginia on November 29.

The ticket problem facing the athletic officials reached its peak during the excitement before the Sugar Bowl battle with Georgia on New Year's day. At that time local offices were swamped with about 10 times more requests for tickets than they could comply with. The coming season is expected to be even more difficult, with four great home tilts on tap for grid fans.

Shown above are Mike Morrow (left) and Jesse Greenbaum, the two co-captains elected to head the Blue Dolphins for the 1948 swimming season. Both swimmers are former captains of Tar Heel tank teams and both specialize in sprint events. Greenbaum hails from Baltimore, Md., and Morrow is from Wilmington.

Greenbaum and Morrow Named Tank Co-Captains

Sprint Specialists Elected by Teammates At Blue Dolphin Banquet Monday Evening

Two former captains were elected by their teammates to head the 1948 swimming crew Monday evening as this year's Blue Dolphin squad rounded out a successful season with the annual banquet at the Carolina Inn.

Jesse Greenbaum, from Baltimore, and Mike Morrow, of Wilmington, were the pair of mermen selected for co-captains next year. A graduate student, Greenbaum headed the 1945 team and was one of the outstanding stars on this year's squad. Morrow, a junior, was co-captain of the 1947 club along with Warren Ficklen, but was ineligible during the campaign. Both men specialize in the sprints.

As part of the banquet ceremonies, Coach Dick Jamerson presented most valuable swimming awards to the senior and freshman selected by the team as the most outstanding. Ficklen, a sprint and middle-distance tankman, was the choice for the senior award and Norm Sper, who gained conference first places in the backstroke and diving, won the yearling plaque. All members of the team who placed in the conference meet last Saturday were pesented with medals.

In a brief address following the dinner, Coach Jamersen mentioned several outstanding records that this year's team added to while turning in a 6-2 record. "I'm especially proud of the teamwork and spirit that all the boys showed," he stated. "Those two factors plus hard work made possible our successful season."

Graduating from this year's team are Co-Captain Ficklen, Buddy Crone, Pete Hexner, Larry Johnson, Warren Perry, and Bill Herr.

Pi Phi Downs Town To Gain Coed Title

The Grads and the Pi Phi cagers were crowned intramural basketball champions last night, when the Grads downed the scrappy Kappa Sig five, 27-23, and the Pi Phis trounced the Town girls, 27-15.

The Kappa Sigs played on even terms with the Grads during the first half and at intermission they were trailing by one point, but the fast-breaking Grads dropped in 10 markers while holding the Kappa Sigs scoreless for the first eight minutes of the second period. On the short end of a 20-10 score with seven minutes remaining in the game, the Kappa Sigs made a determined comeback, but their drive fell short as the Grads held the ball for the last two minutes of play.

Whitey Black led the scoring for the Grads with a total of eight points, and for the Kappa Sigs it was Bryant Hicks, who also dropped in eight markers.

The sharp-shooting Pi Phi lasses had little trouble in clinching the women's cage championship as Helen Barnes and Fran Miller led them in their 27-15 victory over the Town girls.

Clowns End Court Campaign With Impressive 15-1 Slate

The Carolina Clowns, one of the most colorful basketball teams in the state last season, ended the court campaign with an impressive 15 game winning streak against a single setback.

The Clowns, under the sponsorship of the intramural department, were organized and coached by Claude Crocker, professional basketball pitcher for the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Sparked by several grid players including Charlie "Choo Choo" Justic, Joe Wright, Jim Camp, Max Spurlin and other local basketball players of varsity calibre including Buster Stevenson, Dick Donnon and Bert Nesbit. Other members of the Clown squad were Bud Stanback, Tom Gorman, Pete Earl, and Carroll Poplin.

Coupling a polished brand of basketball with a circus act which included everything with the exception of a strip-tease performance, the Clowns were well-received all over the state.

The biggest accomplishment of the court season for the Clowns was winning the Carolina A. U. U. junior championship in Winston-Salem. The Clowns defeated a strong Roberts Esso quint in the finals by a 15 point margin. Buster Stevenson, Bert Nesbit and Randy Brown, 6-10 center, who accompanied the Clowns to the tourney, made the all-tournament team.

The Clowns opened the season by walloping the Kenley All-Stars 92-36. An underdog Carolina freshman team handed the Clowns their lone defeat with a 39-38 victory in the last four seconds of play. After that setback the Clowns went undefeated. Among the teams that fell before the Clown onslaught were Biltmore Junior College, Canton All-Stars, Atlantic Christian College All-Stars, Louisburg Mad Dogs, Warrenton Aces, Beeker-Knott, Pilot Mountain V.F.W., and Fayetteville All-Stars.

Senate Committee Approves Anti-Closed Shop Measure

Raleigh, March 11—(UP)—The Senate Labor Committee has approved the Anti-Closed shop bill with only one amendment, a provision that a worker might voluntarily have his employer withhold his union dues and pay them to the union. The committee this afternoon laid great stress on not allowing the press to report how individual members voted on the controversial labor proposal, and the same ban of secrecy was imposed on arguments on the bill.

Already approved by the house, the bill will be reported to the senate with the committee's amendment.

Hire Only Union Members

It would forbid workers to enter into a closed shop agreement with their employers, an agreement which would require the company to hire only union members. The committee refused to approve an amendment to allow a closed shop when the employer and every single worker of the company wanted it, at plants where there had been no strike for 12 months.

Generally only a few votes would have changed the outcome of the amendments, but by rule of the committee members themselves, the vote was not made public.

House on Money Bills

The house is now in the middle of action on the two big money bills, the biennial revenue and appropriations measures. The revenue bill passed its second reading this afternoon and will be up for third reading tomorrow.

At the close of today's session, Representative Arch T. Allen, chairman of the House Appropriations committee, turned in his report on the appropriations bill, and now the spending bill is on the calendar for debate tomorrow.

There's apt to be plenty of debate on both measures. Representative O. M. Mull got a Cleveland county dry law written into the revenue bill this afternoon. Talk is now going around the Capitol that efforts may be made to strike out his amendment when the revenue bill is up for final reading in the house tomorrow.

The Joint Appropriations committee is scheduled to tackle the permanent improvements appropriation bill tomorrow afternoon, and item number six on that bill is the loudly-debated question of a $3,790,000 appropriation for the four-year medical school at Chapel Hill.

A delegation of Mecklenburg county drys appeared before the house finance committee in Raleigh this afternoon to object to the proposed liquor referendum in their county.

Former Governor Cameron Morrison, who last week appeared in support of a statewide liquor referendum, was against a referendum today, declaring that wet forces around Charlotte were turned down when they asked the county commissioners for a liquor vote.

Against County Vote

Morrison told the House Finance committee it should give an unfavorable report to the county referendum bill and stick to the policy of the present state A.B.C. law, which allows two methods of calling county liquor votes.

The House's youngest member—Representative Elmore, University law student, of Swain county—introduced several bills to control liquor in his county. One of them would outlaw on-premises beer licenses, and another would allow residents of the county to bring in one quart of legal liquor for home consumption. Another bill by Elmore would outlaw the sale of Abbott's bitters in Swain county.

Fitch, Logue Nominations Approved for CAA Offices

Castleberry, Bartley, McDuffie, Taylor, Pully, Grizzard Get Group's Endorsement

By Ed Long

Roy Moose, president of the University Veterans association, has been nominated for the office of editor of the Daily Tar Heel by the newly-organized Campus party, Chairman Johnny Jones announced. Other nominations by the party include Jack Fitch for president and Dan Logue for vice-president of the Carolina Athletic association. Also nominated were Jim Castleberry, Lewis Bartley and Jack McDuffie for men's members to the Student council, and Margaret Jean Taylor, Young Pully and George Grizzard for members-at-large.

UVA President Roy C. Moose has been announced as Campus party nominee for editor of the Daily Tar Heel next year. An Army Air corps veteran, Moose is a former DTH reporter and present member of the editorial board.

Moose, who served almost four years in the Army Air corps, is presently a member of the editorial board of the Daily Tar Heel. During his freshman and sophomore years, the 24-year-old native of Mooresville was on the Daily Tar Heel news staff, and has recently been a delegate to the State Student Legislature in Raleigh.

Fitch, who hails from Etna, Pa., is a member of the Monogram club, the Grail, and the Golden Fleece, and the dance committee. During the 1942-'43 and 1946 seasons he was a star football wingback, and played basketball during the 1946-47 season.

Logue, a rising junior from Clairton, Pa., is chairman of the membership committee for the University Veterans association, and was a member of the football team in 1942 and 1946.

NEWS BRIEFS

Bullitt Warns Of Red Attack Against U.S.A.

Un-American Group Hears Former Envoy

Washington, March 24. — (UP) — Former U. S. Ambassador to Russia William Bullitt warns that Russia is planning to attack America. Bullitt told the House Un-American Activities committee that if Russia had the atomic bomb, and America didn't, the Soviet would already have dropped one.

He said the so-called "fifth column" of the Russians is trying to take over key positions throughout the world in preparation for an attack on the United States.

Stalin Directing

Premier Stalin allegedly is directing the plot and will only give up when the United States tells him to stop. In Bullitt's words, "Stalin, like Hitler, will not stop of his own accord. He can only be stopped."

And the time is growing short, says Bullitt, for America to speak up and give the stop signal. Until that can be done, he recommended a tight guard over our atomic secrets and maintenance of a fleet of planes armed with A-bombs ready for any emergency.

Telephone Union Plans Walkout for April 7

Washington, March 24. — (UP) — The top policy committee of the National Federation of Telephone Workers, has called a nationwide telephone strike to take effect at 6 a. m., April 7, unless an agreement is reached between the union and the telephone companies before that time.

Tehran, Yalta, Potsdam Agreements Revealed

Washington, March 24. — (UP) — The State department has made public the entire texts of the Tehran, Yalta and Potsdam agreements.

The agreements revealed little major information which has not been announced previously. However, the Tehran pact does reveal that the Allies were urging Turkey to get into the war and that Russia agreed to go to war with Bulgaria if Bulgaria attacked Turkey.

Legion Urges Purge Of Communist Party

Washington, March 24. — (UP) — The American Legion urged Congress to outlaw the Communist party today. Legion representatives charged, before the House Un-American Activities committee today, that American Communists are "the willing instruments of a foreign power, dedicated to the violent overthrow of the United States government."

Allis-Chalmers Workers Are Returning Slowly

Milwaukee, March 24. — (UP) — About 500 CIO auto workers have returned to their jobs at Allis-Chalmers following the surprise settlement of the 327-day strike. Two thousand more are to return during the next three weeks, but the company has refused to take back about 94 strikers pending an investigation of their actions during the long walkout.

'Hexed' Negro May Get Treatment in New York

Louisburg, March 24. — (UP) — Stephen Richardson, the young Negro whose hex by a Negro witch doctor attracted national attention, may get a trip to New York. Richardson appeared on a nationwide broadcast from Durham last night with hypnotist Marsh Babbitt, who hopes he can have Stephen examined by mental specialists in New York. Babbitt has been trying to remove the young Negro's fear of the hex by hypnotizing

Freshmen Retain Class Executive

By Chuck Hauser

Steve Nimocks, freshman from Fayetteville, has been declared president of the Freshman class in a statement released by Chairman Johnny Clampitt of the Student Legislature Elections committee.

In the elections held March 11, tabulation of ballots indicated that a run-off election would be held between Nimocks and N. A. Winn. The third candidate, Bill Wood, was disqualified, however, which, according to Clampitt, gives Nimocks a majority.

Dispute Superfluous

Clampitt's statement in full follows:

"The freshman elections were conducted by the elections board in the correct manner. The dispute over which of the two candidates, Nimocks or Winn, is president is superfluous, legally speaking.

"The third candidate (Wood) was disqualified and the votes cast for him are void. Nimocks has a majority of the other two. He is president! If any Freshman thinks there was foul play, let him prove it—and we will gladly hold another election."

Nimocks was formerly elected president of his class in the ill-fated January 30 elections which were voided by the Student council on constitutional grounds.

Other election results are: Freshmen: Ralph Lee, Paul Baschon, run-off for vice-president; Stuart Bondurant, secretary-treasurer; Jo West, social chairman.

Sophomores: Curt Youngblood, Dusty Leonard, run-off for president; Carl Durham, vice-president; Miles Smith, secretary-treasurer; Jerry Pence, social chairman.

Coed Fall Reservations Deadline Is Set April 1

The deadline for all women students to make room reservations for the fall quarter is April 1. Each coed should make reservations in the office of the dean of women, 104-C, South building. Coeds who have space reserved for the summer session, will not be assured of a room in the fall.

Room reservation procedure is as follows: Each student is to pay a deposit of $6.00 at the cashier's window in the basement of South building, and take the receipt to the dean of women, 104-C South building. The final step will be to fill out a room application blank, which will be marked paid.

Book Exchange Manager H. R. Ritchie yesterday declared that all veterans must either return or pay for unauthorized textbooks charged to the Veterans administration last quarter.

Unapproved Books Must Be Returned

By Sigsbee Miller

H. R. Ritchie, head of the University Retail Exchange, which includes the Veterans Book Exchange, yesterday afternoon denied reports that the Veterans Book Ex was refusing to issue books to student veterans who had failed to return books which they received without authorization last quarter.

"The issuing of books for the spring quarter is not contingent on the veterans' returning unauthorized books," Ritchie said. "We are merely asking that these books be returned. We give the students a chance to go to their rooms for the books without losing their places in line. If they are unable to return the books they may pay for them."

600 Return Books

Out of 700 veterans who received unauthorized books last quarter, 600 have returned them upon request, Ritchie said.

Jimmy Williams, University attorney, made it clear that no attempts to force the return of unauthorized books would be made. He defined an authorized book as "one that is required for the personal use of all students pursuing the same course, as specified by the person responsible for teaching the course."

Williams displayed a memorandum to veterans which states clearly that "any unauthorized books received by veterans cannot be billed to the Veterans administration. Each veteran, when he is given a letter of credit to the Book Exchange by the University, states that he will pay for books and supplies not authorized under the above laws." A copy of this memorandum is put in the hands of every veteran before books are issued, Williams said.

Forensics Tryouts For National Meet Set This Evening

Debate squad tryouts, in preparation for the Grand National Forensic tournament to be held April 3-5 in Fredericksburg, Va., will take place this evening at 7 o'clock in the Di Senate hall, Debate council President Maurice Braswell announced yesterday.

Although two national champions of the 1945 tourney, Bill Miller and Jim Taylor, will return to the event this year, new talent will be needed for the squad's spring debut. Braswell made clear the Carolina team's need for coeds as well as men.

Tryouts are to be under the supervision of members of the debate squad and council, and faculty advisers Dr. H. M. Oliver and Dr. F. C. Erickson.

The Grand National, drawing participants from universities and colleges all over the country, is being sponsored by the Strawberry Leaf society, an organization which fosters the promotion of public activities among students. Scheduled to be held at Mary Washington college, the contest will include many types of public oratory as well as eight rounds of debate. The panel of judges will be selected from the community of Fredericksburg by that city's Rotary club.

A full social program, highlighted by dances Thursday and Friday nights, will be offered to all participants during their stay.

University Is Building Sidewalks to 'Mudville'

Sidewalks are now being constructed by the University along the Pittsboro highway for the use of veterans and their families now living in Victory Village.

One walk is being built on the east side of the highway from Wilson hall up to the medical building, and another on the west side from the trailer park to the entrance of Victory Village.

University authorities have asked the State Highway commission to put several "caution" signs along the entrance to the highway from both directions.

WAR CREDITS COMMITTEE

Dean D. D. Carroll, Chairman of the University committee on Emergency War Credits, has announced that the committee has completed all back work, and that all veterans who have made application may learn what credit they have been granted by calling at Room 316 South building.

Veterans' Checks May Be Forwarded

Attention is called by the Veterans administration to a new postal policy which makes possible the forwarding of subsistence checks to veteran-trainees where there is a local change of address, provided the addressee notifies his mail carrier direct. The veteran-trainee should also notify his VA training officer, as in the past, of any change of address in order that VA may send his mail to the new location.

Heretofore the forwarding of government checks has not been permitted, but new postal instructions provide that a check may be forwarded within the same postal delivery area provided the mail carrier is notified of the change. By following this procedure, the veteran-trainee can guard against delay in the receipt of his check until VA has his new mailing address.

Kennedy Talks Here Thursday

CPU Will Sponsor Boston Congressman

Boston's able young congressman, John F. Kennedy, now serving his freshman term in the House of Representatives in Washington, will speak from the Carolina Political union's non-partisan platform Thursday evening in Hill hall.

The youthful solon, who has been an active worker on the House Labor Affairs committee, was graduated from Harvard in 1940, and, while still a senior there, wrote "Why Britain Slept," a best selling book which discussed the failures of British foreign policy leading to the war.

The son of Joseph P. Kennedy, former Ambassador to Great Britain, young Jack Kennedy served as a PT boat skipper in the Pacific, received the Navy and Marine Crosses as well as the Purple Heart. His exploits were written up in a saga entitled "Survival" by John Hersey, author of "Hiroshima" and "A Bell for Adano," which was published in the New Yorker, and reprinted in the June 1944 issue of Readers' Digest.

Jerry Davidoff, CPU chairman, announced that the speech would begin at 8:30 Thursday evening, being followed with the usual open question and discussion period. Following the meeting there will be an informal reception at the Graham Memorial lounge, at which time students, faculty and townspeople will have the opportunity to meet and chat with Mr. Kennedy.

UVA Honors McIver Coeds In Tomorrow's Open House

McIver dormitory will be guest of honor at the inauguration of the spring series of open houses to be held by the University Veterans association at the club house tomorrow night at 8:30.

UVA President Roy Moose stated that the favorable reception to the winter series prompted the UVA to continue the policy of inviting an individual girls' dormitory or sorority to be guest of honor each week at the club house during the spring quarter.

Plans are underway to present outstanding campus entertainers in a floor show to highlight the weekly open house, and arrangements are being made with a national cigarette manufacturing company to furnish free cigarettes each week.

In announcing the continuation of the open house policy, Moose also stated that UVA membership cards for the spring term are now available every night at the club house. He urged all UVA members and non-members to procure their membership cards as early as possible since elaborate plans are being formulated for the association this term.

The club house is now open and will remain open every night of the week from 7:30 until coed hours for UVA members and their guests.

Sketch Classes Resume Tonight

The beginning of a new series of the art department's extra-curricular figure sketch class has been announced by John V. Allcott, head of the department. The series, beginning this evening will meet twice weekly on Tuesday and Thursday from 7 to 10 o'clock in the evening at Person hall. This non-credit class is open to everyone interested. University students and townspeople, regardless of previous training or experience.

A fee of $10 is charged for the ten-week series to cover the cost of materials, models, and informal instruction. Further information is obtainable at Person hall.

On Federal Aid

The ever-increasing need for federal aid to education for public schools in the United States was intelligently expressed by President Frank P. Graham at a recent public health meeting in Chapel Hill.

The University's president attempted to alleviate the many fears shared by those opposed to the federal aid bill. He pointed out that public education is, of necessity, a concern to the federal government and stated that the fears of government control of education are unfounded. This is particularly shown by a part of the bill which renders impossible federal control of any school receiving federal aid.

The need for federal aid is a great one. Especially in the South where more children and less wealth to provide for their education exist than in any other section of the country. It is a recognized fact that the majority of Southern public schools do not compare favorably with those in other parts of the nation. Certainly this is no fault of the children concerned, whose ability is at least as great as that of a western or northern child.

If the South, while spending proportionately more than any other section of the country on its public schools, still cannot afford opportunities for learning to compare with other areas, the responsibility should rest with the federal government.

The numerous advantages one may receive from the assistance of federal finance would prove of great value to the average public school student. Certainly, they would more than offset the largely unfounded fears of federal control, racial difficulties, and other minor objections currently offered.

Graham is one of many of the country's leading educators who are in favor of federal aid to education. At a time when education is of utmost importance to our nation's future, the need for federal aid is well worth considering.

Spring Lines

Spring has come to the Carolina campus once again. And so have the lines—the ever-present, never-ending bugaboo that rears its ugly head without fail at the opening of each quarter.

The lines don't always pop up in the same places, but they always pop up—and drag out. Students seeking their grades for last quarter found themselves in a maze of confusion that would have done justice to an amusement park concession. Not only were the people handing out the grades grouped too closely together on the small stage area, but the lines did not progress alphabetically and students stood in line to find out that they were in the wrong line. The general result was general confusion.

Students seeking to change courses found lines outside of their adviser's office, students seeking almost anything found lines almost anywhere. But it was still spring. And it's nicer to stand in lines in the springtime than in the winter—it says here.

Civilization will become a farce unless Christianity becomes a force.

We won the war by sticking to our guns. We can win the peace by sticking to our principles.

Unselfish people are never lonely.

I'd Rather Be Right

Representative's Allegations Refuted By College Surveys

By Earl Heffner

When a solon commits political suicide on Capitol Hill, he usually either has lost ambition and is retiring from public life or has become so senile that he is no longer able to keep his mental finger on the public's emotional pulse.

It is questionable which factor is involved in Representative Charles B. Deane's alienation of veterans' affections with his verbal slash in the bowels of student veterans doing a Ghandi while trying to complete their education.

The Rockingham politico in a statement released Saturday through a Washington news bureau said that "a survey of North Carolina colleges failed to show justification for boosting allotments to single veterans," then tempered his remark by adding that ". . .at the same time revealed subsistence for married veterans is inadequate."

Where the legislator got his information is as intriguing and obscure as the fathomless sea since only last quarter a comprehensive survey jointly conducted by the University Veterans Association and the Chapel Hill Chapter, American Veterans Committee established results which completely refute the representative's allegations.

Unfortunately, Mr. Deane has been asked to sit in on sessions of the House Veterans Affairs subcommittee considering training subsistence pay for ex-servicemen.

Since it isn't customary for Washington legislators to question the integrity of basis of judgments by a colleague, the Rockingham politico may be expected to critically injure any remote chances of an increase being approved by the committee.

This misinformed, misguided little man—by his own words—is proving himself incapable of representing the people who elected him to office, if the cross-section vote here at Chapel Hill and at other schools—notably Columbia University—is indicative of the desires held by a majority of the voting public.

And while readers may experience the impulse to scathe verbally the Rockingham solon and his fellow-travelers, the crown of blame rests not solely upon their heads. For it is the duty of every civic-minded citizen to acquaint his representative with his personal desires on matters of domestic as well as international matters.

There is a "let John do it attitude" prevailing again in the selfish souls of many individuals who lack interest even in legislation beneficial to themselves—in this case to the veterans class as they have been falsely branded by a recent letter to the Daily Tar Heel.

If this attitude continues, the veteran who leaves school because of economic difficulties has only himself to blame. If, on the other hand, veterans and their families do express their wishes, the increased subsistence either will receive an affirmative vote or veterans will have an unchallenged right to charge their colons with alienation of affections and divorce themselves from these nonrepresentatives at the highest of democratic courts, the Ballot Box.

Letters To The Editor

All letters must be typewritten, double-spaced, under 300 words in length, and signed by the writer. Writer's name will be withheld on request, but letters must be signed. The Daily Tar Heel reserves the right to present the letters as it wishes and to delete all matter it considers libelous.

Criticizing Criticism

Dear Bill,

During the past few months there has been a constant flow of criticism against the Daily Tar Heel from one source or another. Some of this criticism has a basis—some of it doesn't. All of it though, attempts to drive home one point—the DTH is not the newspaper it should or could be.

The paper and its staff have been under bombardment from every angle. Everyone seems to know what is wrong, but no one seems to want to uncover the truth behind the matter. Putting the blame on Mame is good enough for the majority

It is time that someone conducted a little survey to see if there is any truth in the rumors that are circulating and the tongue-lashings that continually fall on the DTH. That survey might prove the following:

1) That the University journalism department shows no comparative interest in the DTH and does not heavily encourage its students to work on the paper. Hence it is understaffed. There are too many "journalism" students on this campus that feel the DTH is not worthy of their time and talent.

2) That the DTH is underfinanced by the PU board in some instances, while that same board is turning right around and promoting the fun-making follies of one Tookie Hodgson in backing a humor mag that there is little or no need for on this campus.

3) That the DTH is completely blocked in any attempt to expand or enlarge, not because of the lack of funds, but because of the inadequate local printing facilities which maintain a monopoly in Chapel Hill through the existing Umstead Act.

4) That the majority of the students of this University take a "don't-give-a-damn" attitude toward the DTH and toward campus activities in general. This is the group that is always ready to criticize the activities of any and every campus organization, but disappears back into its hole when the time comes to do anything to improve them.

The success or failure of any campus organization lies with the students of the University, especially in the case of the DTH. If the DTH fails to reach the standards—whose I don't know—then it is the fault of those who contribute nothing to it rather than those who contribute something to it.

Next time you start to hand out criticisms about the DTH or one of its campus contemporaries, ask yourself, "What have I done to promote this activity?" Then if you still feel in the crusading mood, why not join up and throw the brunt of your experience and background behind the somewhat-mired wheels of that organization. Who knows? It might even profit by it.

Yours while the roof falls in,
BILLY CARMICHAEL.

Unfounded

To Mr. Heath and the Students:

I have been at Carolina since June 1944. During that stay I have seen the party in opposition to the University Party split five times. It happens near every spring and every fall.

This time the split takes form of the Campus Party. The split this time came because, as Mr. Heath says, "Since the last election the Student Party has been infiltrated and largely controlled by a group of know-nothings, do-nothings, and self-seekers, who have shifted the ultimate goal of the party (better student government) to a mere step-ladder to the promotion of personalities within their own selfish few." In any court of justice the burden of proof rests on the plaintiff. As I see it Mr. Heath and the Campus Party are the Plaintiffs and the proof of this claim (above) and all other claims in his letter are upon them, and until such time as all of these allegations are proved one should consider all of them as a group of generalizations, unfounded assertions, and fallacies.

An independent,
JOHN E. DAVENPORT.

Puzzling

A college course is plenty tough.
The lessons are very rough.
But life has come to a pretty pass
When the hardest problems aren't in class.

To reach the answer you will pause,
And try to fathom out the cause.
You'll work it from the top part down,
Then from the left to right you'll frown.

At last you ask, "What can it be,
A Malay god that starts with C?"

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

REAL ESTATE LOBBYISTS SCORE OVER VETERANS; GREEK CABINET MINISTER PLAYED BOTH SIDES OF FENCE DURING WAR; CAPTURED GERMAN MILITARY DOCUMENT REVEALS.

Washington.—The fur is flying backstage over another fast housing deal the big real estate lobbyists have put over in Congress—and on the veterans.

The deal involves a resolution, adopted behind closed doors by the House Banking and Currency Committee and by an appropriations subcommittee, whereby surplus war housing can be sold only for cash.

Innocent on its face, this means a big advantage for the big real estate operators, who can afford to put up spot cash for the multiple-unit surplus housing projects. It also means a swift kick-in-the-pants for war veterans who have been bidding for the same housing projects under "mutual ownership" credit plans.

Since most of the projects are big ones, ranging from 100 up to 3,000 units in size, veteran purchaser groups cannot compete on a cash basis with the big real estate syndicates. The latter would be in a position not only to put up the money, but, because of the limited cash bidding on such large transactions, could force down sales prices.

FPHA experts estimate that one 2,600-unit war housing project which would noramlly sell for about $8,000,000 (at the rate of $3,000 average per unit) would bring only $4,000,000, or a 50 per cent loss to the Government, in a straight-out cash sale.

Yet this is what Congress proposes to do. The action was taken without anyone's knowing about it in committee resolutions addressed to Dillon Myer, chief of the Federal Public Housing Authority.

HOUSING ADMINISTRATOR PROTESTS

The deal was put over by Chairman Jesse Wolcott (Michigan) of the Banking and Currency Committee and Chairman Ben Jenson (Iowa) of the Government Corporations Subcommittee, both favorable to the big real estate interests.

However, Housing Administrator Myer has sent a brisfling, confidential letter to Wolcott and Jensen informing them: "While I shall, of course, comply with your request, I wish to emphasize that, in my judgment, the adoption of a permanent policy that would permit sales of war housing projects only for cash would not be in the public interest and would cost the treasury millions of dollars.

"In the first place, such a policy would limit competition in the purchase of the apartment-type housing units to those who have large amounts of cash and those who can readily borrow large sums. Such a sharp narrowing of the possible sales market will, in my judgment, drive down steeply the amounts which the Government can hope to realize on the sales.

"Secondly, the overwhelming majority of present occupants of the housing units, and of the veterans, both occupant and non-occupant, who now seek to become home owners by purchasing these units individually or in groups, would be unable to compete successfully on that basis."

Since Wolcott and Jensen are both professed believers in saving money for the Government, and both professed friends of the veteran, the Myer letter would seem to put the issue squarely up to them.

UNDER THE DOME

Senator Forrest Donnell, meticulous Missouri Republican, spent three days speaking on the portal-to-portal bill. Suggested bored Senator George of Georgia to his Democratic colleague, Tom Connally of Texas: "Tom, now that we haven't got Bilbo around to filibuster, I think we ought to draft this man Donnell. We can use a man with staying power like that on our team.". . .It was supposed to be hush-hush, but Wendell Berge, soon-to-retire chief of the Anti-trust Division, quietly blocked a merger of giant manufacturing companies. Calling them into his office, he warned that the Department of Justice would go to court if Lockheed Aviation merged with Victor Emanuel's Aviation Company of America. The latter controls the huge Consolidated-Vultee concern. . .Ex-Congressman Martin Smith, formerly mayor of Hoquiam, Wash., is being boomed for the post to be vacated by Berge. A good man. . .D. C. Judge George D. Neilson is waging a vigorous campaign to preserve the residence of Francis Scott Key, author of the Star-Spangled Banner. Key's old home threatens to be demolished by the widening of a Washington boulevard. . .Congratulations to Norwegian Ambassador Morgenstierne for giving the U. S. public the facts regarding the pro-Quisling activities of Norwegian soprano, Kirsten Flagstad. . .Unlike Toscanini, who bitterly fought Mussolini, or Pablo Casals, the cellist who spent ten years in the Spanish mountains rather than bow to Franco, some European artists who collaborated with the Fascists now want to come back and receive the plaudits—and gate receipts—of the American public.

GREEK PRO-NAZIS NEED PURGING

The more you probe into the snarled-up Greek mess, the more it appears imperative that some of the Fascist-Royalists in the present Greek Cabinet must be ousted before the USA dumps millions of relief and food into King George's lap.

NOW IS THE time for most people to get the well-known "spring fever" but after a hurried glance at the things in front of Carolina athletes during the coming weeks, it is a cinch that there can be no such epidemic in the ranks of the Tar Heels.

As a matter of fact, three major spring sports begin competition this weekend, and a fourth will get the ball rolling Monday. Friday will see the baseball team, with Bunn Hearn at the wheel, open hostilities against Trinity college of Hartford, Conn., and then Saturday the trackmen will enter the Florida Relays in Gainesville, Fla., and the tennis combine will take on Yale here . . . Tar Heel golfers meet the foe on the links for the first time Monday against Virginia Tech over Durham's Hope Valley course.

Taking no back seat to the rest will be the gridders, who start the all-important spring training sessions tomorrow.

"I am looking for all men interested in football who are not out for a spring sport to be on hand for the drills beginning day after tomorrow," Coach Carl Snavely said yesterday. "This year spring practice is going to be much more important than last season, for at the end of the warm weather sessions we expect to just about have our team picked out for competition next fall.

"It is very important for all those who expect to compete to be out doing their best in spring work," Snavely continued, "for it is then that they will have their chance to show us what they can do. Next fall only the varsity will be out mainly, although we will have a Jayvee club as usual."

The Silver Fox pointed out also that he planned to send the grid performers through a scrimmage at least by a week from Friday, and that the practices will be gradually accelerated. No definite length has been set for the drills, but it is anticipated that they will be terminated well before the end of the quarter.

Still along the football line, it appears certain that Carolina will have a warmup game prior to the scheduled opener with Georgia. No foe has been named, but it will likely be picked from this state somewhere. It may, however, just be in the form of a game-like scrimmage.

Snavely will be minus the services of such stars from last season as Billy Myers, Chan Highsmith, Baxter Jarrell and Ralph Strayhorn, but his end prospects were strengthened considerably this week when Art Weiner reentered school and prepared to resume his gridiron antics. Weiner dropped out of school following the season finale with Virginia and did not participate in the Sugar Bowl classic against Georgia. Also missed will be Max Spellman, the man behind the scenes all season last. Spellman, who posed as the opposing quarterback many times in practice, actually deserves a lot of praise for his operations during 1946, even though he saw only limited varsity competition.

IT'S A FACT! Carolina possesses one of the best amateur tennis players in the East in Vic Seixas, the little Tar Heel from Philadelphia who this season holds the No. 16 ranking berth among the nation's amateurs. Seixas, who also was a member of the basketball squad, recently made a good showing in the University of Miami tourney, falling finally before the racquet-wielding of Bill Talbert in three sets . . . Two Tar Heel swimmers also made superb showings for themselves during the spring vacations, meaning of course Buddy Crone and Norman Sper. Crone, a senior member of the 1947 Carolina swim team, won first place in the Eastern intercollegiate tournament's three-meter diving division and Sper finished third. In the one-meter event, Sper came in second . . . Johnny Dillon, the 1946 Carolina All-American hook shot artist, received All-American mention from True Magazine, placing on the second team. Congrats, Johnny! Speaking of selecting All-Americans, we believe the selectors made a slight slip in not even mentioning such Carolina and Southern stars as "Mr. Rebound" Bob Paxton and Ed Koffenberger of Duke. These two boys are among the best in the East and the nation as far as we are concerned, even if they failed to place in the All-American ratings to date . . . Along the same basketball line, it is good to note the success of "Ole Bones" McKinney and his Washington Capitals and Ben Carnevale of Navy. Carnevale has been named "coach of the year" by the metropolitan sports writers . . . Too, Jim Jordan played no small role in the last-half rally of Kentucky against State in the Invitational semis . . . Joe Hilton of the Carolina track coaching staff is a proud poppa, of baby girl no less . . . Coch Bob Fetzer is back in the active coaching scene now. He began working yesterday with the spring trackmen . . . And Assistant Athletic Director Chuck Erickson was busy working his golfers .

Trackmen Set To Begin Work For Hard Slate

Ten Meet Schedule Opens on Saturday

"We have the material in school to give us the finest team we have ever had," said Coach Dale Ronson yesterday afternoon as his tracksters went through their pre-season workouts. He warned, however, "It still will take a lot of work to get into shape to face the tough schedule that lies ahead."

The squad has been strengthened by the return to school of Laddie Terrell, who paced the broad jumpers last year. Another pillar of strength comes in the form of Jack Moody, one of the premier high jumpers in the country who entered school this term.

Coach Ranson is planning to take seven or eight men to Gainesville, Florida, this weekend to compete in the Florida Relays.

A call has been issued to all men in school who have had any experience on the cinders and to any men who want to try and see if they have any ability.

The coaching set-up calls for Coach Bob Fetzer to handle the shot and discus men, Coach Joe Hilton to take care of the pole vault, broad jump, javelin, high and low hurdles, and Coach Ranson to tutor the sprinters, middle distance men, high jumpers and relays. Hank Gifford will be in charge of a freshmen squad that will have a schedule with other Freshmen teams and high schools.

The schedule:

March 29—Florida Relays at Gainesville; April 5—Carolina Relays at Chapel Hill; April 12—Georgia Tech at Atlanta; April 19—Navy at Annapolis; April 26—Carolina AAU's, Chapel Hill, Penn Relays at Philadelphia; May 7—Duke at Chapel Hill; May 17—Southern Conference at Chapel Hill; May 24—Virginia at Charlottesville; May 30-31—IC4A at Philadelphia.

The first chance that the Carolina track enthusiasts will have of seeing their team in action will be on April 5 when the revived edition of the Carolina Relays will be held.

This meet will bring together some of the finest athletes in the south and east, and they will compete in three divisions, college, freshmen and prep and high school.

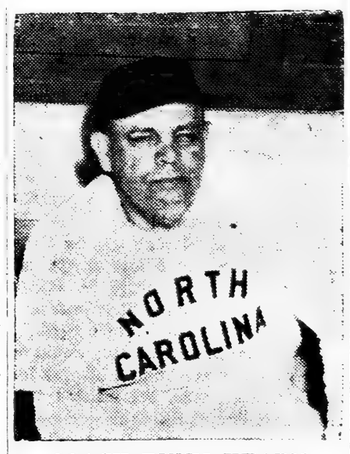
Diamond, Net Teams Get Set For Opening Tilts of Season

Yale Will Battle Locals Saturday

Coach John Kenfield's Carolina netters resumed workouts yesterday afternoon following the holiday layoff, with all eyes turned in the direction of the opening match with Yale only five days hence.

Minus the services of their ace, Vic Seixas, who has not returned from a tourney trip to Florida, the racqueteers worked a solid two hours under the season's first taste of broiling hot sun.

Such returning lettermen as Jim Nicholson, Sam Daniels, Stan Gruner, Don Skakle and Ray Morris were in attendance, and this quintet of felt pounders along with a dozen more prospective net stars kept the air full with looping lobs, driving smashes, and sizzling services throughout the afternoon.



The ever-present Coach Kenfield divided his time during the drills between directing the efforts of his charges, and supervising gang of workmen putting the courts, somewhat damaged by the recent bad weather, in top shape for Saturday's opener.

The Tar Heels will face tough opposition when they take the courts against the Bulldogs of Yale for the Eli are present Eastern champions and will come South loaded with talent from last year's title team in addition to several new discoveries.

The match Saturday will be the first of a series of three encounters the Eli will play with the locals during the Southern swing. The other two clashes are slated for Monday and Tuesday afternoons of next week.

SWEATER MEASUREMENTS

All men who won letters in varsity sports during the winter quarter are requested to report to the Carolina Sport Shop at the earliest convenience to be measured for sweaters. This announcement comes from the athletic department.

COACH BUNN HEARN

Two Mural Confabs Today; Softball Begins Thursday

Intramural activity for the spring quarter gets under way this week with two important meetings slated for today and softball competition starting Thursday afternoon.

All men interested in umpiring mural softball during the approaching season are asked to meet with mural directors Walt Rabb and P. A. Lee this afternoon at 4 o'clock in 302 Woollen.

Then, at 7:30 this evening in the same room, the mural managers will convene to discuss the activities for this quarter. Any organization desiring to enter a softball club should send a representative to this meeting.

Lid-raising ceremonies in the softball play will come off Thursday at 4 o'clock. All team entries must reach the mural department by Wednesday noon, either by phone or in person.

Mural competition in tennis, track and horseshoes is due later in the quarter, Assistant Director Lee also announced, with water polo a possible addition to this list.

Strayhorn Resigns Position At Gym

Ham Strayhorn, for several years an assistant in the Carolina athletic office and a former Carolina freshman and assistant baseball coach, has resigned his position here and will be the business manager of the Burlington professional baseball club, it was learned yesterday by the Daily Tar Heel.

Strayhorn, who was a member of the staff from his graduation here in 1936 until entering the army in 1941, returned just a year ago and has been working ever since in the front office at Woollen gym. He was a letterman at Carolina in both baseball and basketball.

Tar Heels Oppose Trinity on Friday

Coach Bunn Hearn will return to the helm of the Carolina baseball ship today as the Tar Heels ready themselves for the season's opener with Trinity college of Hartford here Friday afternoon.

Convalescing from a recent illness during the practice sessions of the past month, the veteran coach, beginning his 18th year as diamond mentor, will find the squad in good shape following last week's heavy practice schedule of two drills per day. Walt Rabb, who has directed the team since practice began last month, will stay on as assistant coach.

This year's club, bolstered by a score of returning lettermen, is expected to show considerable improvement over last season's Big Four cellar-dwellers. Most of the starting berths are still undecided, with the three outfield posts appearing to be the lone exceptions. Co-Captain Harry Beason, Kenny Black and Jack Hussey are almost certain to be the opening outfielders, with Hussey's power at the plate one of the outstanding highlights of the early workouts.

There will be a meeting of the varsity baseball team at 2 p.m. today in 304 Woollen gymnasium, Walt Rabb, assistant coach, announced.

The battery positions have also shown up well in the pre-season drills. On the mound a quartet of lettermen, Monk Whiteheart, Hamp Coleman, Tommy Andrew and Vinnie DiLorenzo head a corps of flingers that also includes Ray Blair, George Whitted and John Sharpe. DiLorenzo and Sharpe are the only southpaws in the group. Behind the plate Buck Hardee, Sid Varney and Jim Hayworth are setting the pace, with the one showing the heaviest stickwork expected to gain the starting nod.

The four infield posts are currently the big problem, with several players, all of about equal ability, fighting for each position. The first-base berth lies between Co-Captain John Gregory, knocked out of action by illness for the past two weeks, Bob Mitchell and Jack Brasington. At second, another trio, Dallas Branch, Cookie DiChiara and Frank Jones will battle it out. Walt Kirk and Freddy Ryan top the shortstop contenders and Dub Johnson, Jim Hamilton and Buster Stevenson head the third-base candidates.

Carolina's Ben Hogans and Byron Nelsons will swing into action next Monday afternoon when Coach Chuck Erickson's golfers tee off against VPI, according to the schedule released yesterday by the Athletic Department.

The locals will play a total of sixteen dual matches during the course of the season and will also appear in three tournament affairs.

As in the past, all home matches will be played at the nearby Hope Valley country club, where the Tar Heels with their coach spent an afternoon of full practice yesterday.

From the advance notices coming from the Durham links, the Tar Heels look loaded, sporting a power-swinging sextet, paced by little Harvey Ward, the fair-haired boy of the fairways.

The complete schedule: March 31 Virginia Tech at Durham; April 1 Davidson at Durham; April 7—Georgetown at Durham; April 9—Georgetown at Durham; April 11—Michigan at Durham; April 15—South Carolina at Columbia, S. C.; April 16—LSU at Baton Rouge, La.; April 17-18-19—Southern Intercollegiates at Athens, Ga.; April 21-22—North and South Amateur at Pinehurst.

Mayor Bob Madry Cites Need For New Two-Way Boulevard

In a recent address at the Hope Valley Country club, R. W. Madry, head of the University News bureau and mayor of Chapel Hill, stated that a two-way boulevard with a parkway in the middle is urgently needed to facilitate transportation between Durham and Chapel Hill. The projected thoroughfare, which has been pushed for a number of years by a Durham-Chapel Hill committee under the chairmanship of Judge Robert H. Sykes of Durham, would decrease the distance between Duke university and the Carolina campus to 10 miles.

Madry said the State Highway and Public Works commission has demonstrated interest in the proposed road and "there is reason to hope it will be built in the not too distant future."

Town By-Pass

The mayor also stated that he understood that plans have been tentatively approved for a Chapel Hill by-pass that would begin at the Morgan's Creek bridge on the Pittsboro highway, cut across the Mason farm, come into Route 54 at the Pines, and continue until it intersected Route 54 and the Durham road.

Madry considers that this would be a great aid in providing a by-pass for south bound traffic, but insisted that a Durham-Chapel Hill boulevard would still be critically needed, not only to bring the two universities closer together, but also to provide a by-pass for traffic west bound, should the Highway commission decide to continue the road past Carrboro to connect with Route 54 as it leaves there.

His genius gave wings to words

It was an historic moment. Alexander Graham Bell's telephone had just spoken its first words—"Mr. Watson, come here, I want you."

That evening in Boston—March 10, 1876—Dr. Bell's crude instrument transmitted his voice only to the next room. But out of it was destined to come a whole new era—the era of quick, easy nation-wide telephony, of radio telephony in all its varied forms, of talking pictures, voice and music reproduction systems and electrical aids for the hard of hearing. Few inventions have played a greater part in shaping the world we live in!

Since 1877—just one year after Bell's long experimentation was crowned with success—it has been Western Electric's privilege to help carry forward his great idea which gave wings to words. In that year Western Electric made its first telephone. More than 45,000,000 have followed it—over 4,000,000 of them in 1946 alone.

Today, from coast to coast, in factories, offices, distributing houses and central office installation crews, there are more than 110,000 Western Electric workers. Imbued with the Bell System spirit of service, they are helping to provide equipment in record quantities to meet telephone needs far beyond any envisioned by the inventor.

Alexander Graham Bell

This year marks the 100th Anniversary of Bell's birth in Edinburgh, Scotland, on March 3, 1847. From early youth, he was keenly interested in aiding the hard of hearing. He became a teacher of "visible speech" when 18 years old.

This work led to experiments with "telegraphing" sound, out of which, in 1876, came his greatest invention—the telephone.

Dr. Bell was a great humanitarian as well as a great scientist. His accomplishments—in aiding the deaf, in communications, in aviation and other fields—were outstanding. His rich life—which had an incalculably great influence on the world—came to an end on August 2, 1922.

Most of the available information has come from the Centralia radio station (WCNT), which reports that rescue squads have brought out three miners, one of them seriously injured. And the radio station is issuing appeals for doctors, nurses and ambulances.

Townspeople as well as students and faculty are invited.

The leading role in the farce will be taken by Buddy Westover, senior from Merchantsville, New Jersey. Playing the part of an imaginary invalid, Buddy will be reacting the role which Moliere wrote for his own acting ability.

Lynn Leonard, queen of Carolina comedy, is co-directing the production along with David Hooks, Smithfield graduate student. Very active in dramatics in Detroit, her home town, Lynn is also enacting the role of Toi, the out-spoken maid of the imaginary invalid's family. Hooks will also be seen in the part of Thomas Dia.

Lois Warnshuis, Staten Island graduate student in dramatic art, is to be seen as Beline, double-crossing mate of the invalid. Barbara Bramble and Mac Shaw handle the romantic interests while Harry Thomas, Henrietta Cooper, Art Solomon, Francis Olds, Jim Riley and Marty Jacobs will be seen in other parts.

"The Imaginary Invalid" is the third production attempted by the Laboratory group, the first two, "Pierre Pathelin" and "Aria da Capo" scoring successes with campus audiences.

UVA to Entertain At Party Tonight

The University Veterans association will welcome the coeds of McIver dormitory this evening at 8:30 as it resumes its popular policy of entertaining coeds according to sorority or dormitory, in the UVA clubhouse.

So successful were efforts in this line last quarter that weekly open houses for different coed groups have been planned for the remaining 10 weeks of school. Better-than-average talent is being sought by UVA planners to brighten the parties, and arrangements for receiving free cigarettes are being completed with a large cigarette company.

Four-Year Medical School Passes House

Solons Vote $7,844,800 for Improvements Of Greater University of North Carolina

By Ed Joyner

The 48-million dollar permanent improvements bill, which includes provisions for a four-year medical school and teaching hospital in Chapel Hill, passed the House of Representatives yesterday afternoon without a dissenting vote.

Blocked temporarily by opponents to the proposed location of the medical school here, the bill was approved unanimously after three amendments pertaining to the school were defeated.

The defeated ammendments would have: located the school and hospital in Asheville; prevented establishment of the school until local health centers and hospitals had been provided; allocated funds for a large regional hospital in Buncombe.

Of the 48-million dollar appropriation $7,844,800 is designated for permanent improvement of the Greater University, of which $3,790,000 is earmarked for erection of the medical school and teaching hospital. Another $1,500,000 for the school is expected from federal funds under the Hill-Burton Act, bringing to a total of $5,290,000 the amount available for the project.

The University appropriations bill was reported favorably to the legislature last Tuesday by the joint appropriations committee of the House and Senate, and no opposition is expected when the House approved bill comes up before the Senate for final approval.

Novel by UNC Student, 'Another Man's Poison' Will Be Released Soon

Hugh Holman, graduate student at the University relaxes from the grind of scholarly research by writing mystery novels. His fourth published detective story, "Another Man's Poison," will be issued by the M. S. Mill company of New York on March 26.

Holman began the series, which features the genial sleuth, Sheriff Macready, while serving as Dean of Presbyterian college at Clinton, South Carolina. He is at present on leave of absence from that institution.

Aside from mysteries, he has written and directed over 200 radio plays, has been editor of the Jacobs Press in Clinton and state publicity director of the South Carolina Council for National Defense. During the war, he was a physics instructor with the Army Air forces.

At Chapel Hill he is now busy with his Ph.D. thesis, the subject: "Detective Plays of the Nineteenth Century."

Coeds to Hold Mass Meeting To Nominate Senate Speaker

Women Will Name Candidates for Positions In WAA at Convention Tomorrow Afternoon

Nominations for Speaker of the Coed senate, president, vice-president, and secretary-treasurer of the Woman's Athletic association will be made at a mass coed meeting tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock in Gerrard hall. Although the meeting will be a Coed senate session, the business will be turned over to nominations.

The election of the officers nominated will be held 10 days following the nominations.

The Woman's Athletic council has prepared a slate of officers to be presented at Thursday's meeting, however, nominations will be welcomed from the floor.

Present Speaker of the Coed Senate, Sybil Goerch Powe, suggests that no coeds be presented as a candidate who are already overloaded with extra-curricular activities.

It may be necessary at the meeting to hold a run-off to reduce the number of nominees to three persons per office. For this reason, Jerry Atkinson, chairman of the Senate Elections committee, urges all coeds attend the meeting.

Jeanne Driscoll, president of the Woman's Athletic association, asks all coeds to take into consideration the coeds who have had some experience in the fields to which they are nominated for WAA offices.

Union Darkroom Reopening Today

The popular student darkroom at Graham Memorial will reopen today for the first time in the spring quarter according to C. B. Brasington, manager. Brasington will resume office hours from 1 until 2 o'clock Monday through Friday to issue darkroom cards to students.

Free lessons in photography and darkroom technique, which met with such success last quarter, will be continued. Hour-long classes will be held each Saturday from 10 until 12 and from 2 until 4 o'clock, thus giving five hours of free lectures and laboratory work.

Those taking elementary instruction last quarter may take advanced darkroom work such as enlarging instruction in tricks of photography trick shots, cropping, vignetting, making paper negatives, positive slides from negatives," said Brasington.

Only 20 new students will be accepted for elementary lab work because of the darkroom manager's desire to teach thoroughly such techniques as negative developing, printing of pictures, enlarging and gold-toning.

Jack Fitch Gets Party's Backing For CAA Post

By Ed Joyner

Meeting in a nominating session yesterday afternoon the Student party named Matt "Tookie" Hodgson, Publications board member and former Daily Tar Heel humor columnist, as its nominee for editor of the Carolina Magazine in the spring elections.

Hodgson, who recently gained approval from the Publications board, to act as guest editor of a humor edition of the Carolina Magazine in May, defeated Fred Jacobson, present editor of the Mag and only other candidate for the SP nomination.

Fitch for CAA

In the same meeting the SP nominated Jack Fitch, flashy Tar Heel wingback, for president of the Carolina Athletic association, with Monk Whiteheart, head of the baseball mound staff, to run for the vice-presidency.

Other nominations placed Sarah Buchanan, Mady Jo Parrish, and Jo Fishel on the SP ticket as senior candidates for the Women's council. Nomination of representatives-at-large to the Council will be made later.

At the close of the meeting Bill Wood, Student party chairman, announced that the SP platform committee headed by Basil Sherrill, is whipping the party's platform into shape and will make a public statement on Friday.

Meet Tomorrow

Wood, also announced that the next meeting of the Student party will be held tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial and more nominations will be made at that time. Wood said that tentative plans are being drawn up for an SP social function to take place in the near future.

The Student party ticket for the spring elections now includes Tom Eller for president, Don Shropshire for vice-president, Joe Byrd for secretary-treasurer, and Barron Mills for Daily Tar Heel editor.

Scholarship Bids Received by UNC

A number of applications have been received for the Herbert Worth Jackson scholarship which is to be awarded again by the University this spring.

The scholarship is valued at $500 a year for a period of four years and is awarded to a North Carolina student on the basis of scholastic achievement, qualities of leadership and promise of future distinction.

Applications for the scholarship should be submitted to the Herbert Worth Jackson Scholarship committee on or before April 15. Each high school may nominate one candidate from its senior class.

Previous holders of the scholarship are Nelson Ferebee Taylor, Oxford; John Meredith Simms, Raleigh; William McNeely, Greensboro; and Charles Gordon Britt, Goldsboro.

The original Jackson scholarship was endowed in 1938 by the late Mrs. Annie E. Jackson of Richmond, Va., as a memorial to her husband, a University graduate of the class of 1886 and for 27 years president of the Virginia Trust company, who died in 1936. The present scholarship was endowed by the three children of Mr. and Mrs. Jackson.

Today Is Last Chance To Register for Term

Today is the last day that changes may be made in registration for courses for the Spring quarter. It is necessary that students who expect to make any change in their class schedule see their dean or adviser today.

Gets A Kick Out of the Kids. . .

'Three Little Pigs' Takes Place of Texts When Coeds Try Their Hand at Baby-Sitting

By Tommie Cates

Putting aside her parasitology manual, Eleanor Highsmith, one of the baby-sitters sponsored by the University YWCA, picked up a copy of the latest issue of a "Three Little Pigs" picture book and watched as three-year-old Claudia Walker pointed out the pictures to her six-month-old sister, Shirley, both daughters of C. P. Walker, living in trailer 84 of the Pittsboro road trailer camp.

Eleanor, a senior from Wilmington, is one of the members of the social service committee of the YWCA which recently planned the baby-sitting aid for young-married couples.

Gets a Kick

"I get a big kick out of staying with the kids," Eleanor said as she told how appreciative the couples were in having the service. "They tell me to make myself at home and that any food I can find is all mine, including the soft drinks they usually leave on ice for me."

The aid was an outgrowth of a YWCA cabinet meeting last October after there had been so many requests for the service by the young married veterans with children. The baby-sitters are contacted through the Y, where their names and telephone numbers are listed under the nights they are available. Services of the group are without charge; however, the taxi fare is paid by the couples if the distance from the veteran's home necessitates a ride.

Eleanor Highsmith demonstrates with Shirley (right) and Claudia Walker (left) the technique she employs in keeping the kiddies quiet while Mr. and Mrs. Walker spend an evening away from home. Eleanor is just one of the many coeds on campus who donate some of their time for baby-sitting—an activity sponsored by the social service committee of the YWCA. (Photo courtesy of the Greensboro Daily News).

"I find that most of the children are well-trained and most interesting," Eleanor said. "The Walker children are fairly quiet compared to some of them who insist that I play some vigorous game with them, and are satisfied only when I've knocked over a few vases, lamps, the radio, and any other equipment that isn't attached or built in.

Intelligent Alan

"One of the most intelligent little chaps with whom I've stayed, though, is little six-year-old Alan, the third of the Walker children, who reads his first grade reader with such conscientious vigor that I get a guilty conscience and turn my attention back to my parasitology manual again. The children always get a thrill out of the pictures of the amoebas and paramecium and of course have to know all about them. Incidentally, usually in the middle of my explanation, they interrupt to ask why my mother lets me wear red fingernail polish when their mother won't let them wear it."

Walker, the father of the children, is a graduate of the University of Florida, and is now doing graduate work in public health. The couple have their permanent home in Miami, Fla., where Walker is employed with the state board of health. They came to the University last September.

Excellent Job

Mrs. Walker says she thinks the service of the YWCA is excellent, and the girls are doing a fine job. She also added that she has no complaints

The Clarity of Books

Latest puzzle confronting University veterans seeking an education has arisen over the matter of unauthorized books. The story is one of veterans, the majority of whom have acted in good faith and on seemingly sound advice, who now find themselves owing money for books they assumed were paid for by the Veteran's Administration.

Veterans who purchased such books as a dictionary of synonyms, law dictionaries, medical handbooks, and other parallel reading material, all of which proved helpful in their studies, are now being told that they must either return the books or pay for them.

When he first buys his books, the veteran must sign a contract with the VA which states that the VA will pay for only those books used by all students in a course and those authorized by the instructor. It also states that the veteran must pay for unauthorized books purchased.

The meaning of the above regulation is understandable. It is unfortunate that it was not complied with sooner. To the contrary, veterans were not only allowed, but were urged, to purchase extra and valuable books for their work in past quarters. A sign was hung prominently in the veterans booketeria which invited all veterans to come in and browse around, implying they were free to buy any books they considered helpful.

Ritchie, manager of the vet's booketeria, told us yesterday that the Book Exchange had been wrong in selling the books to veterans. He admitted his error in doing so. He added that the University had also been acting in good faith, however, in allowing the students to buy all the books.

While this is true, the fact remains that the veterans committed absolutely no wrong in their eyes when they bought the books, and they cannot be blamed for any kickback from the VA. Actually, the veterans have been amazingly cooperative in returning the unauthorized books and most of them have already done so.

Naturally, a few veterans have fantastically abused the book privilege and purchased many books irrelevant to their work for reselling and for friends. These men, of course, should be made to pay for their actions, but the great majority of the veterans have always acted honestly and in good faith in buying their books.

We also believe the Veteran's Administration is being too strict in its interpretation of necessary and authorized purchases. Such books as the dictionary of synonyms, some political science books, and many, many others were recommended to the students by professors who told them they could get them under the GI Bill of Rights. These books are of great aid to the students in their work. They are used constantly along with and besides the regular textbooks in many courses. Provided the veteran stays within his monetary limit and purchases books vital to his work, we feel that the VA should allow such books to be included on its bill.

Ritchie also told us that, while yesterday some students were not allowed to go through the present book line until they returned or paid for their unauthorized books, such practice has been discontinued and no veterans will be prevented from buying any of his books for the current quarter. But he added that the books must be paid for or returned.

Many veterans have raised the question as to whether or not the University has any legal right to make them pay for books they bought in good faith. The legality of this cannot be ascertained immediately.

However, the refusal to issue books until past accounts are adjusted is illegal. It would be possible for the University to refuse to register a student who owes it money. Nonetheless, once registered it has no right to deny the veteran rights granted by Public Law 346, the GI Bill of Rights. To do so would be illegal.

Basically, the present chaos seems to have been provoked by a misunderstanding on the law by the University. This situation—which could have been cleared easily by a frank explanation—was clouded into a controversial issue when the alternate course of trying to frighten the veterans into returning books or paying for them was adopted.

It is unfortunate that the veterans were not taken into confidence and treated as intelligent adults, rather were treated as broken-field runners eluding the arms of Tackle John Law.

University Wins by Default

Battles for Regimentation

By Jud Kinberg

The University administration has won its biggest battles to regiment education at UNC, won them by default.

Two of the most pernicious bits of sabotage to student freedom at Carolina followed hard on the dirty heels of one another. First, the administration inaugurated its own pet registration program, whereby choice of hours and instructors was sacrificed to vague promises of "efficiency" and no wait, no stoop, no squat. The Daily Tar Heel fought a losing rear-guard action against the new plan, but lack of student support made it impossible to swerve the administration from its chosen path.

Well, the men who are taking courses they never dreamed of, due to the defects in Lanier's Lottery—probably have faint praise for the new plan. Nor could those who wasted yesterday and today trying to get courses changed be called enthusiastic supporters of registration a la Rube Goldberg.

Then, with that curve ball barely over our bald plate, the Administration wound up and struck out quite a few veterans. With the hot breath of Veterans' Administration auditors on its neck, Mr. Ritchie's Book Exchange started sending out short notes to many veterans. Gist of the message was, bring back the books you unwittingly "stole" or you'll get no more, white trash.

The story behind this development seems to be brilliantly hued with the color of gold. Although Ritchie must have known that the VA would pay for only authorized texts, he loaded the Veterans' Booketeria with volumes having no possible relationship to any conceivable course. I remember thumbing through a copy of "Terry and the Pirates." I defy Ritchie to relate that to any class, or even general culture. Yet, the signs all invited the vets to browse around and the lax policy of checking made it evident that you were welcome to buy any volumss which struck the fancy.

Now, Ritchie demands that such extra books be returned before the veteran can procure the texts for spring quarter classes. Yesterday's story on the DTH front page is an example of weasling of the worst sort.

"H. R. Ritchie denied reports that the Veterans Book Ex was refusing to issue books to student veterans who had failed to return books which they received without authorization last quarter."

No, they're not refusing to do it, they're just NOT doing it. The veteran with a book bill has to pay it or drop out of line, get the offensive books and return them before he can get new texts. If that isn't denying new books until old bills are paid, Ritchie or I need a course in grammar.

But it is not the attitude of the administration, but that of the student body which deserves the most bitter condemnation. It is a nasty and clear fact that we knuckled down in these two important instances. We accepted the registration system, made no protest when fellow students were deprived of needed courses or forced to wait in line for an entire afternoon merely to change one class.

The veterans, faced with their problem, acted like good little boys and proceeded to pull Ritchie chestnuts out of a pretty hot Veterans' Administration fire. In both cases the University was in the wrong, blatantly so. Both errors had come about through a desire to benefit the University and not the student. Yet, no concerted protest was made, no mass voice even pipsqueaked. In the second case, that of the Great Book Robbery, action here at UNC is in direct contrast to that of a northern university student body which is reported to have refused to bring the books back or to pay the bills. The administration there paid the cost of being very wrong, something which we obligingly made unnecessary for the smiling boys behind South Building desks.

If the mistakes had been done in good faith in an attempt to aid the students, I could countenance student obeisance. But it seems all too evident that both the registration plan and the book-run could rebound to the ease, convenience and financial well-being of the University to a far greater degree than to students.

The conclusion is obvious. We have all the paraphenalia of student self-government, but we have surrendered the spirit of it to the administration by default. Our duly-elected student leaders took only weak positions or none at all on both questions. Our students merely allowed themselves to be herded along the administration's runway, like very docile cattle being led to slaughter.

In themselves, these incidents are important enough. The negative results they brought from the student body, makes them catastrophic. It may be too late to stop the harm done, but we should make it quite clear—and by that I mean nothing less than mass-meeting protest—that we will countenance no more of the mucked-up registration system, nor of the blackjack method of collecting old book bills.

Editorially Superior

Best Mag of Year Features Excellent Photoword Story

By R. Haskell Hamilton

From a standpoint of make-up, attractiveness and editorial competence the best Mag of the year hit the campus yesterday with the publication of the March issue. Superior make-up and stability of lay-outs do much to lift the current issue out of the mediocre category, and into the class alongside some of the better Carolina Mags Chapel Hill has turned out.

I found the feature "What Makes Sammy Run," the best photoword story in the mag all year. Sam Beard's MOONGLOW program is certainly of wide and popular interest in Chapel Hill, if his mailbag is any indication, and the talents of Jud Kinberg and Gerald Conrad are perfectly blended to give the reader the "inside" story on one of Tar Heelia's current, popular disc jockey characters.

There's some poignant and realistic fiction by Ken Rothwell and Don Justice. The former's "Chain of Command," accentuated by B. Heinfrich's illustration is to my mind a superior war episode. Rothwell manages to vividly relate the futility, the clash of personality, and some of the weary miserableness of many phases of Army life. The writer's club selection "The Pink Rosebush and the Peachtree," by Don Justice is the best story Mr Justice has had to represent his work so far, this year.

These two pieces do much to atone for the undistinguished work of Alan Smith in his "You Were Just Born," which is too unbelievable and sugary for my consumption. For my money, it's strictly "True Romances" stuff. Doris Meriweather's story while on an unusual theme, is contrived and a trifle too slick to make interesting reading. Margaret Whitney's "The Last Day" completes the fiction offerings with a poignant story that sometimes creates an exceedingly sympathetic mood.

The poetry page is on a par with last month's excellent writing. Dick Stern, Paul Ramsay, Curtis Butler, Bill Robertson and Lorraine Bothbard combine to offer representative, modern American poetry of the better grade.

The editors have eulogized Stan Croner's photo work more adequately, and more highly than I would care to. Croner is good, very good; but he's got a long way to go to be a Weegie, or a Steichen, or even a Hugh Morton. The center spread on a touch of Venus suffers from poor engraving. Sloppy cut outs make the edges of the pictures look like last Sunday's newspaper and contrast in color tone is lacking to make the spread an outstanding piece of work, instead of the ordinary good-idea-gone - wrong which it is.

All told, however, the March Mag is about the best of the current crop and should prove interesting, rewarding, and entertaining to all. If the editors can keep up this pace; there'll be no kick coming from this quarter or from anyone who is sincerely interested in a readable Carolina Magazine.

Checks Postal Ruling Clarified by Bourne

Letters To The Editor

All letters must be typewritten, double-spaced, under 300 words in length, and signed by the writer. Writer's name will be withheld on request, but letters must be signed. The Daily Tar Heel reserves the right to present the letters as it wishes and to delete all matter it considers libelous.

For the Jury

To: Mr. Davenport and the Students

Your article in yesterday's issue of the Tar Heel has placed the Campus Party in the position of plaintiff in the case of Heath versus the Student Party. As chairman of the Campus Party, sir, may I point out to you that Mr. Heath has never been a member of the Campus Party; therefore, the Campus Party cannot assume responsibility for Mr. Heath's statements concerning the Student Party and the manner in which it is operated.

To further clarify the position of the Campus Party and its present membership, may I also state that the Campus Party did not originate as the result of a split in the Student Party. It was formed only after a meeting of a group of individuals who are interested in doing something constructive in the improvement of Student Government at Carolina. Upon a decision being reached by this group that the time has come when something must be done to eliminate the inefficiency in the present student government, the Campus Party was formed. Its present membership consists of only six of the old Student Party members. This same membership has representation from every section of the Campus. We believe that we are the most representative group of any of the political groups now in the Campus.

We cordially invite everyone who is not a member of another political party to drop by for our meetings and participate in the discussion on our party policies and platform. We want YOU to help us select and then elect the best qualified slate of officers. Only through you, the Student Body, can this be done. Your cooperation is earnestly requested.

Johnny Jones,
Chairman, Campus Party

Easy to Complain

To the Editor:

I wish to congratulate Mr. Nicoud on his letter, "A generation of parasites. . ." which must certainly have met with unanimous disapproval from the majority of veterans. The primary reason given by students for demands of increased subsistence is a simple one. Sixty-five dollars a month is insufficient to maintain a decent living-standard. No one denies this. It is not difficult to convince one that he should have more money. But this logic makes one viscious assumption—the government is completely and solely responsible for the comfortable maintenance of its veterans.

Some, more conscientious veterans, have attempted to rationalize further and have declared that money invested in the education and well-being of veterans is money invested in the future. This may be true. But is our future to be determined only by veterans? If the federal government is to assume the responsibility of making higher education available to its citizens, what right have the veterans to ask that the privileges be limited to them alone? What could be more against the underlying thesis of the AVC, "Citizens first, Veterans second?"

The G. I. bill is intended to aid veterans in reassuming their places in civilian life. Those who fought, suffered, were wounded and maimed, deserve all that can be done for them. The rest of us (a large majority) are receiving more government benefits than the veterans of any other war at any time in history (excluding a few individuals such as Nelson and Wellington). The present law makes it possible for any veteran who so desires to get an education. It may not be easy if he's broke, but if it was done before the war, it can certainly be done now. It's easy to complain. If the reader is not satisfied with the present tuition and subsistence allowance, at least let him be thankful that he didn't start his university education ten years ago. Let us place more responsibility on ourselves rather than become indifferent and unthinking wards of the government.

Sincerely,
HOWARD TURNAGE

With State College salting away third place honors in the National Invitation Tournament and the NCAA slate finishing up tonight, basketball once again is tucked into moth-balls.

The play during both the Post-season tourneys at Madison Square Garden produced fine exhibitions of basketball with plenty of upsets as witnessed by unseeded Utah's Cindrella kids repeating their 1944 feat of taking top honors. . .The Wolfpack of State opened festivities by toppling New York's finest, St. John's, 61-55. The men of Everett Case started slowly and trailed by two points at half, but a last half surge, paced by substitute Bob Hahn, brought home the victory. . .State's hopes soared when at the end of the half of the semi-final game with Kentucky they were tied up, but when second half play got under way the more experienced Wildcats gave the "Hoosier Hot-shots" a lesson in basketball as taught only by Adolph Rupp. However, it was no disgrace to bow to Kentucky as they had won 28 out of 30 games and beaten their Southeastern conference opponents by as many as 69 points. . .One thing is sure and that is the Red Terrors will be the team to watch in years to come. Right now they have offers to play in Boston, Buffalo and New York next year.

Sid Tannenbaum, Captain of the NYU shrinking Violets was picked as the best player in New York City. It all added to his laurels as having been the first player to ever be selected four years in a row on the all Metropolitan New York team. . .Among the spectators at the game were John "Hook" Dillon and Norm Kohler. . .A bright light in the attack of the St. John's Indians was diminuitive Dan Buckley who will be remembered as the spark plug of the 1944 Duke team. . .In Saturday night's NCAA game the Carolina fans were all on edge when George Kaftan of Holy Cross went on a scoring spree, the reason, the mark set in 1941 by George Glamack, the daddy of the hook shot, still stands at 31 points. Kaftan netted 30. . .Carolina's own Jim Jordan helped turn the tide against the Terrors by playing most of the second half for the Kentucky team; his play made many spectators wonder why he wasn't in the starting five. . .Pat Kennedy, one of the finest whistle tooters in the country, made his first New York appearance of the year by calling the NCAA tourney—per usual, he kept the fans in an uproar with his acrobatic antics. . .While on officials an awkward situation arose during the NCAA tourney as one of the arbiters selected was William Haarlow of Chicago. It happens that his brother Jim was one of the big guns in the Wisconsin attack in the same tourney. As a result assignments had to be shifted.

The West Virginia supporters were most in number outside of the New York schools and they gave the huge crowds plenty of laughs when paunchy alumni, with pants rolled up and bare footed, led yells for the Mountaineers. . .When you talk to Coach Vadal Peterson of the Utah team he will tell you that automobiles have played an important part in the Ute basketball picture. . .In 1944 the Utah team was invited to the National Invitation Tourney and were nosed out in the opener. The same night an unfortunate automobile accident to the University of Arkansas team left an opening in the Western Regional NCAA's. A quick phone call to New York and a vote by the Utah team sent them into the play, they knocked off Missouri and Iowa State in Kansas City and came back east to capture the tourney by beating Dartmouth. Two nights later they faced St. Johns the team that had won the invitation tourney and they copped the decision by seven points. This year an automobile accident almost kept the Utes out of tournament play as Arnie Ferrin and Fred Weidner cracked up and missed the Big Seven post-season play that saw Wyoming win and get the NCAA bid. However, Utah was selected to compete in the NIBT, much to the dislike of the other seven teams and the "Blitz Kids" came through again to bring the silverware back to the Mormon State.

This observer having seen all the teams play submits the following as the all tourney teams:

First Team		Second Team
Kaftan, Holy Cross	F	McGuire, St. Johns
Jones, Kentucky	F	Byrd, West Virginia
Gardner, Utah	C	Groza, Kentucky
Beard, Kentucky	G	Selbo, Wisconsin
Ferrin, Utah	G	Dambrodt, CCNY

Big Turnout Is Anticipated

Gridders Launch Spring Practice

By Irwin Smallwood

The lower practice fields will feel the impact of something near 150 sets of cleats this afternoon at 4 o'clock when candidates for the 1947 Tar Heel football team begin tearing the turf in spring drills under the vigiliant guidance of King Carl Snavely and his court of assistants.

"I am inviting all men in school interested in trying out for the team next fall to report tomorrow afternoon," Coach Snavely pointed out emphatically yesterday afternoon. "As I have pointed out before, these drills during the spring are carrying more weight this year than ever before, and for that reason any person who is planning to play ball next fall will have to be out there during spring practice unless he is actively taking part in a spring varsity sport."

Gridironic formations will be cutting patterns in the sunshine and rain alike for the next few weeks, and weekly scrimmages are anticipated as the defending Southern conference champions begin amassing their forces for the toughest schedule in years which lies ahead next fall in the form of such teams as Georgia, Texas, Tennessee, Duke, Wake Forest and William and Mary.

Nearly all the varsity members returning from last season will be on hand for these spring sessions, and the Tar Heel combines of last fall are expected to get right back on the track on schedule. Charlie "The Choo Choo" Justice, Walt "Pumping" Pupa and all the rest will be hard at the task of improving the football finesse for the task ahead.

Two important additions have been made in the line since the Sugar Bowl encounter with Georgia, those being through the return of big Al Bernot, 1945 center standout, and Bill "Earthquake" Smith, a star tackle from the 1944 team. Several others who played with Snavely here in 1945 are expected back shortly as well as a few newcomers who have just been released from the armed service.

Wintry Weather Slows Diamond Team's Drills

Baseballers Scheduled For Heavy Workouts Before Friday's Contest Against Trinity

With practice held to a minimum due to wintry blasts from the north, Carolina's diamond crew went through an abbreviated session on Emerson field yesterday afternoon with much drilling still necessary before the 1947 unveiling on Friday against Trinity college of Hartford, Conn.

Definitely behind schedule in preseason training, the baseballers are hoping for two days of warm, sunny weather today and tomorrow in which to round into shape for the opener. The team is apparently well set in the battery and outfield departments, but the starting infield remains a big question mark.

Infield defensive play took care of the major portion of yesterday's practice. Conditioning drills also received attention, with the coaches keeping throwing activity to a minimum in order to avoid sore arms. The weather forced an early adjournment.

No indications have been forthcoming as to who will hurl the opener, but it is expected that the choice lies between Monk Whiteheart and Hamp Coleman, the two right-handed mainstays of last year's nine. Tommy Andrew and southpaw Vinnie Di-Lorenzo will be available for relief duty, since it is certain that the starting flinger will not travel the full route.

At the other positions, Buck Hardee and Sid Varney are expected to divide the catching chores and Harry Beason, Kenny Black and Jack Hussey have virtually clinched the outfield berths. Leading the quest for infield jobs are Dub Johnson at third, Walt Kirk and Rip Ryan at short, Dallas Branch at second, and John Gregory and Bob Mitchell at first.

Opposition in the opener is expected to be strong with the Trinity team boasting nine lettermen on the roster. The visitors, who are coached by veteran Dan Jessee, dropped only one game last season and will be playing their second contest of the campaign when they meet the Tar Heels.

Bones McKinney Placed On All-Pro Cage Team

Big Horace "Bones" McKinney, former star of White Phantom and State Red Terror basketball teams was again honored yesterday when he was picked by the Philadelphia sports writers on the mythical all pro-team.

McKinney, who has been a spark plug of the first place Washington Cap team, joins Joe Fulks, Bob Feerick, Max Zaslofsky, Ernie Caverly, George Senesky, Stan Miazek, Bob Doll, Frank Baumholtz and John Logan on this top all star aggregation.

Monogramers Sponsor Gala Affair Saturday

Saturday night from 9 o'clock until 12 the Monogram Club turns its fancy towards dancing rather than athletics with an affair scheduled for the Monogram club house.

The big ball is to be semi-formal with music furnished by Jimmy Marshall and his Carolinians, and it is open to all those who participated in intercollegiate athletics at Carolina and their dates.

Also brought before the Monogram Club at its weekly meeting was the inauguration of a trophy to be presented each spring to the coach who has done the most for Carolina athlete and athletics. Another award will be given to the jayvee or assistant coach who has contributed the most to the athletic program.

The remainder of the meeting was given over to the discussion of regular business, which included several important issues involving Carolina athletes. At the close of the meeting, membership cards were given to those present.

High Winds Prevent Practice by Netters

Lion-like March winds put a crimp in the practice plans of the Carolina tennis team yesterday afternoon as Coach John Kenfield's charges were unable to cope with the latest havoc of old man weather.

A few of the more sturdy netters took to the courts in an effort to overcome this obstacle of nature, but soon they retired in the face of overwhelming opposition.

Loss of a day's practice left the team with only three more work sessions in which to prepare for the coming invasion of the powerful Yale Bulldogs scheduled for Saturday.

About the only bright news of the day was that of the return of Vic Seixas from a Florida tournament tour. Weather permitting, the netters will get back into action this afternoon.

LACROSSE CLINIC

Durham, March 25.—A lacrosse clinic will be held here at Duke University beginning Saturday and lasting until April 5. The meeting celebrates Duke's admission into the National Collegiate Lacrosse association.

Linksmen Prep For VPI Clash

Ward and Doeschler Pre-Season Leaders

The Hope Valley Country Club was the scene of some diligent practice yesterday as Coach Chuck Erickson sent his Tar Heel golfers through a heavy drill in preparation for their clash with the VPI Cadets next Monday.

This is the first of nineteen duel meets slated for the Carolina linksmen who are doubling their efforts to smooth out the pre-season wrinkles and gain top form. The locals have a strong squad this season and despite some highly touted opposition are expected to come up with an excellent record.

Particularly impressive of late has been the work of flashy sophomore, Harvie Ward who hails from Tarboro. Ward has shown consistently good form and is currently seeded first on the 1947 version of the Blue and White. Another long hitter is Dick Doeschler who has been displaying tremendous power in his drives. Big things are expected from both.

A well rounded team, the rest of the squad includes Ed Bailey, Ray Taylor, Ed Ashby, Mike Nolan, Bob Cox, Dan Nyimicz and Mason Rankin. All of these men have shown up well in pre-meet sessions.

Since the release of the current schedule Coach Erickson has announced the addition of two meetings with the North Carolina State Wolfpack. The first tilt is scheduled for April 28 at home with the return match slated for Raleigh on May 20.

Trackmen Preparing For Practice Meet

Carolina track fans will be offered a pre-season chance to see the 1947 squad in action Friday afternoon when the coaches are pitting the Freshmen against the Varsity in a regulation dual meet.

Coach Ranson reiterates his statement that all the men in school that want to compete in the meets this season must get down and start working out. The only way that the Tar Heel tracksters can hit their true stride is in having all of the men in the best of shape. Some of the boys that are being counted on have not as yet started work and the coach pointed out that the first full competition is just a little more than a week away.

Mural Umpires Meet

All men interested in umpiring mural softball during the approaching season are asked to meet with mural directors Walt Rabb and P. A. Lee this afternoon at 4 o'clock in Woollen 302.

Not Rip Van Winkle's...

Lost Civil War Flintlock 'Liable to Hurt Somebody'

By Barron Mills

If you stumble over an old flintlock rifle around on the campus you needn't rub your eyes and think that Rip Van Winkle hibernated South and has awakened at the first signs of spring.—It's only a leftover relic from Sadie Hawkins day and its mislocated owner, Wescott Moser, says it's loaded and "liable to hurt somebody."

Wescott explains that the reason the flintlock is so dangerous is that his "grandpappy" carried it all during the Civil war going through engagement after engagement without getting a scratch, and then at the close of the war was killed while loading the gun.

Now according to Wescott this antiquated piece of firearm was lost on January 28 while he was moving from 519 Hooper lane to 303 Aycock and that probably someone has located it by this time and should be "mighty careful with it since it is loaded and the only way it can be unloaded is for it to be shot off, and the finder may receive the same treatment as Grandpappy."

"I have a great sentimental attachment to that ole model M.0001," stated Wescott, "and it has as much tradition about it as anything I ever heard of. Why my great grandpappy carried it through the Revolutionary war and I have already told you about my grandpappy. Why I'll bet that if it had a notch cut in it for every Yankee that he killed with it there would be over a hundred slices in it.

"I brought that thing up here for Sadie Hawkins Day to catch me a coed, but didn't have much luck. It wouldn't do for me to lose that gun in addition to the coed."

If anyone finds the flintlock they are asked to return it to the Daily Tar Heel office without tampering with it since it is "liable to hurt someone."

"We are very glad to have a place to stay at all," she said. "Of course, some things are inconvenient, but the University is doing us a favor to let us come here to school and we are grateful. There is something here we want, we begged to get in, and we are satisfied with what we are getting."

The social service committee, headed by co-chairmen Judy Swain and Janet Johnson, is composed of approximately 50 coeds. It is one of the many committees of the YWCA, which now has a membership of 400 under the direction of Miss Betty Rose Dowden, secretary.

Second Meeting Planned In Orientation Tonight

Eller, Miller, Beal, Todd Scheduled To Deliver Addresses to All Freshmen

The second meeting in this quarter's orientation program will get underway this evening in Gerrard hall, featuring talks by Tom Eller and Bill Miller, Student Legislature leaders, Annie Ben Beal, speaking for the coeds, and Leon Todd, Interfraternity council vice-president.

The meeting will start at 7 o'clock instead of 7:30, as originally announced, and is compulsory for all male students who entered the University this quarter.

Policies and Programs

Bill Miller, chairman of the Student Legislature Ways and Means committee, and Tom Eller, presidential nominee of both the Student and Campus parties, will speak to the new men on their policies and proposed programs.

Annie Beal will speak on the social phase of life at Carolina and will give the new Carolina men advice on how to get dates and where to take them.

Fraternity Background

Leon Todd will give some of the background on fraternities and will explain the technical set-up of rushing and what the new man's attitude toward rushing should be.

This is the second meeting of the quarter in the Campus Orientation committee's program. Pat Kelly, chairman of the committee, emphasized that attendance at the meeting was compulsory for all new men and that the roll would be checked closely.

The first session of the program was held Monday evening in Gerrard hall. Kelly presided and introduced Dewey Dorsett, president of the student body, who welcomed the men to Carolina and gave a brief explanation of the student government set-up.

Following Dorsett's talk, the meeting reassembled into smaller groups in which individual student counselors gave the new men a picture of the general campus organization and activities.

As the Container Corporation of America advertises through modern art the exhibition will, be of great interest to those interested in marketing, advertising and art fields.

WALTER S. SPEARMAN

Vets Pay Hike Seen Possible By Spearman

Walter Spearman, assistant professor in the University journalism department and southern regional chairman of the American Veterans committee, recently returned from a meeting of the AVC National Planning committee indicated yesterday that the AVC campaign for an increase in GI subsistence was a major topic of business now being considered by the national organization.

"Chet Patterson, AVC's legislative representative in Washington, said at the New York meeting that the main hope for an increase in GI subsistence lies in the willingness of the individual veteran to write a letter to his congressman," said Spearman in speaking of the meeting.

Need Steady Pressure

"It was generally agreed that a Republican congress intent on cutting taxes will react favorably only to steady pressure from veterans in their home districts. If veterans feel they can't get along on their present allowance it is up to them to write their representatives in the congress," Spearman said.

Tri-Delta Scholarship To Be Awarded May 1

Annual awards of the Delta Delta Delta scholarship will be made May 1, 1947. The gifts will be sent to the selected applicants when they enroll in the next school term.

Those women interested in applying for the scholarship may see Miss Ruth Duncan in 104-C South building for further information.

Talks to Center On Registration, Textbook Mix-up

By Tinsley Campbell

The present registration system and the recent mix-up in veterans' purchase of textbooks, two of the hottest issues on the campus, will be aired tonight in Gerrard hall at 8 o'clock at a mass meeting of all veterans under the auspices of the University Veterans association.

UVA President Roy Moose, inviting all interested non-veterans to also attend, disclosed that Edwin S. Lanier, director of Central Records office, H. R. Ritchie, Book Exchange head, and Col. F. C. Shepard, veterans adviser, will be present to explain all phases of current questions, and to answer any queries fired at them.

Says Veterans Bewildered

"Veterans on the campus have become so bewildered by the utter confusion presently existing concerning their status and the legality of their actions that they are demanding a clarification of the registration system and the dispensing of college supplies," Moose declared. He urged all veterans to attend the meeting so the administration can hear grievances of the students and possibly correct them while there is ample time.

Lanier will appear to explain the finer points of the registration system as well as answer questions pertaining to this much-discussed subject. He also plans to review registration plans formulated for the fall quarter.

Ritchie on Books

Ritchie will attempt to clear up matters involving the purchase of books by veteran students and the responsibility that is incurred while doing so.

Shepard is slated to explain the contract held between the University and the Veterans administration, with special emphasis on the legality of holding students responsible for any purchase termed illegal.

Weaver as Onlooker

As an interested onlooker, Dean of Men Fred Weaver will attend the meeting solely for the purpose of hearing the major student grievances brought out by discussion. Various other campus leaders are to attend.

Moose announced that all usual UVA business will be dispensed with tonight, but will be brought up at a later date.

Deposits Are Now Due For Dormitory Rooms

University Housing Officer James E. Wadsworth yesterday released the following statement on men's dormitory room reservations:

"Men students now assigned to dormitory rooms have the privilege of reserving space for the summer and fall terms, but a separate deposit must be made for each term. A room reserved for the summer only does not entitle the occupant to that space in the fall.

"These deposits must be made with the University cashier on the ground floor of South building not later than April 19. If such deposit is not made, the present dormitory occupant reverts to his proper place on the priority schedule."

John Kennedy Will Talk At CPU Program in Hill

Labor Problem Is Probable Topic of Talk By Youthful Massachusetts Representative

By Sam Whitehall

Congressman John F. Kennedy, the Massachusetts solon who was voted one of the ten outstanding young men of 1946, will take the speakers' stand at Hill hall this evening at 8:30 in the Carolina Political union's first speaker presentation of the spring quarter.

Kennedy, who first made a name for himself while still an undergraduate in Harvard in 1940 by publishing a best selling book, "Why Britain Slept," an analysis of the defects of British foreign policy in the period prior to the war, is the son of Joseph P. Kennedy, former SEC chairman and Ambassador to the Court of St. James.

A telegram was received late last night from Congressman Kennedy stating that the subject of his talk will be "American Foreign Policy—1947."

Talk on Labor

The Bay State lawmaker, who served in the Navy for five years, winning the Navy and Marine Crosses, as well as the Purple Heart, will probably speak largely on the labor situation today. He is an active member of the House Education and Labor committee.

Jerry Davidoff, Carolina Political union chairman, conferred with Kennedy in the early part of February, and the two discussed at length the topic for Kennedy's address, which will include the young legislator's discussion of youth in politics.

A moderately conservative Democrat, Kennedy, who resembles Van Johnson, movie star, has broad experience in diplomatic and journalistic fields, having covered the British elections and the San Francisco conference for American newspapers. His exploits as a PT skipper were written up by John Hersey in a saga entitled "Survival," reprinted in the June 1944 Readers' Digest.

Short Speech, Question Period

Davidoff stated that Mr. Kennedy would have a moderately short formal speech, and then, in accord with Carolina Political union custom, a long open question and discussion period.

Following the Hill hall meeting, there will be an informal reception for the Congressman at the main lounge of Graham Memorial, at which time the public is invited to meet Representative Kennedy and further talk with him. All campus veterans who served with the speaker in the Pacific are especially urged to be present at the reception.

It is expected that Kennedy will spend the night in Chapel Hill, and there is a possibility that he will speak informally to some classes on Friday morning.

Word was expected within a day or two regarding the definite confirmation of Senator Wayne Morse's scheduled address for the CPU April 3, Davidoff stated, and further news on that subject will be published as soon as available.

Congressman John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.), the author of the best-seller "Why Britain Slept," will make an address tonight at 8:30 in Hill hall under the sponsorship of the CPU.

Dusty Leonard Named Sophomore President

According to the same ruling by which Steve Nimocks claimed the presidency of the freshman class recently, Dusty Leonard, sophomore from High Point, has been declared president of the sophomore class, thus eliminating run-off election.

Nimocks claimed the freshman office on the grounds that he held a majority of the votes, the third candidate for the position, Bill Wood, having been disqualified. The same conditions existed in Leonard's case, with one candidate out of four nominated being disqualified. With the votes of the disqualified man thrown out, Leonard holds a majority and the presidency, according to a ruling released by John Clampitt, Student Legislature Elections committee chairman.

NROTC Rifle Squad Takes Twelfth Place

The University NROTC rifle team took twelfth place in the 1947 nation-wide competition for the William Randolph Hearst trophy, Capt. R. W Smith, Jr., team officer, announced yesterday. Final tabulations of the contest released by the Bureau of Naval Personnel in Washington showed the local team, with a score of 832, topped 41 other college NROTC units

Campus Party Adds 15 Names To Spring Elections Ticket

By Ed Long

The Campus party, continuing in the full swing of Carolina spring politics, Tuesday afternoon went into convention session, and after two hours had resolved itself on 15 additional nominations for the coming spring elections.

For Men's council sophomore representatives nominated were Jesse Dedmond and Walter Arnold, and junior representatives nominated were Charlie Britt and Vivian Parks.

Nominations for posts in the Student Legislature from men's dormitories include Steve Millikin, Joe McDaniel, W. B. O'Neal, John Kapp and Jim Kelly, all permanent nominations; Joe Hutton, Pete Dobbins, Bill Payeff, Ralph Sherrill, and Chester Zum Brunnen, temporary nominations.

Other nominations, among them some offices for Student council and town and women's representatives to the Legislature, were delayed until the next meeting of the Party, slated for the Graham Memorial Candlelight room this afternoon at 4:15.

DTH Broadcasts News Daily Over Local Station WDUK

In effect, "scooping" itself, the Daily Tar Heel now presents a five-minute resume of tomorrow's headlines every afternoon over local radio station WDUK.

The program "Tar Heel Topics," is presented by staff members of the Daily Tar Heel each afternoon in the local studios of Durham's station WDUK, from 4:55 to 5 o'clock. Included in the script are the headlines, main news facts, sports, human interest, and editorial features to appear in the following morning's Daily Tar Heel.

Jud Kinberg DTH columnist, and managing editor for the Carolina Magazine, last Monday presented the first commentary. Others who have since prepared the program are Eddie Allen, DTH Associate editor, and Bill Woestendiek, editor. Associate editor Earl Heffner will do today's broadcast. It is planned that members from all sections of the DTH staff will from time to time present this news feature.

With regard to the innovation, Editor Bill Woestendiek yesterday stated, "We are happy to cooperate with station WDUK in presenting these daily programs. We hope that these broadcasts will mark a step forward in the expansion of our ever-growing services to the campus."

The programs are actually the latest campus news developments at the time, being made up at approximately 4:30 each day, from material that has just come into DTH copy baskets, a scant 20 minutes before broadcast time.

Uncle Remus Says

"Whuffo, Uncle Remus," said little Jason, "does all white vet-rans habe flat feet and bowed legs?"

"Case dey went to Carolina and stood in long lines to get dere books, Jason. Dat's how the vet-rans got flat feet."

Maybe lines such as these will be used in the future by a Hollywood wonder in producing "Chant of Carolina." Then, maybe they will not.

Perhaps the only benefits of these long lines will be felt in the advent of another war and accompanying Presidential Greetings which will find many University veterans unfit for reason of flat feet and vericose veins in their legs.

When the University instituted its excellent Booketeria, the general concensus was that long, tiresome book lines could be classed as extinct. The move was an admirable one by South Building officials. Yet, its purpose was nullified when the veteran line in the "Y" building was eliminated. The only result was a transfer of the line from one campus point to another, the latter place—Steele dormitory—being slightly better since it could handle veterans a little faster and because more people could be inside a warm building while standing in line.

This much is good. Yet, it isn't enough since the line could be reduced to a minimum bordering on nonexistence should the University adopt another policy of issuing books.

There would seem to be few obstacles in the path of issuing books following registration at the end of each quarter. The procedure would be simple and easy for all concerned.

As soon as a veteran receives his class tickets he should be permitted to pick up necessary books at any convenient or propitious time prior to the end of the quarter. This would eliminate most of the long lines, would do away with the chaotic class conditions prevailing at the beginning of each term as a result of students being unable to purchase their books immediately.

If the Veterans Administration will not permit billing of books until a quarter has begun, the bills could be signed by the veterans at time of receipt of books, could be retained by Booketeria officials, and dated whenever the new quarter begins.

This plan, if adopted by the University, certainly should meet with overwhelming approval. If, however, it should be impossible, the student veterans deserve and should demand an explanation as to why such a plan cannot be instituted.

Also, if the plan cannot be effected, the Booketeria should open earlier and be kept open longer for the first two or three days of each new quarter.

It isn't fun to stand in line. And it's less fun for a student to go to class unprepared because he has been unable to get his books immediately. Even if the professor considers the difficulty and is sympathetic, the student still loses time from his books. In many subjects, this requires long arduous hours of intense study in an effort to make up this lost ground.

Something should be done! Will it?

Another Fine Program

After a slow start in the fall quarter, the Carolina Political Union has accelerated its program of speakers and is following its recent successful presentation of Idaho's Senator Glen Taylor with a speech by Representative John F. Kennedy of Boston.

A son of former ambassador to Great Britain Joseph P. Kennedy, the handsome young congressman, noted as a conservative Democrat, will speak in Hill hall at 8:30 tonight.

Recent speakers presented by the nonpartisan CPU have met with excellent receptions from the students and have delivered interesting and informative addresses. Tonight's speech by Congress' prototype of Van Johnson should be another prize speaking plum.

Students interested in national affairs can well afford to listen to the former PT boat skipper and youthful legislator present his views this evening. An open question and discussion period, always a source of interest and delight to the student audience, will follow Kennedy's address.

We need a sense of public responsibility in every private decision.

Religion is our steering wheel—not our spare tire.

Get Thar Fustest....

Those Who Bemoan Buildings Can't See Forrest for Trees

By Eddie Allen

General Nathan Bedford Forrest, a stubble-jowled old roughneck who once did a lot of fighting in a gray suit, is best remembered for his success formula: "Get their fustest with the mostest."

Many years after the general passed on to argue with the celestial Yankees, an army installation at Tullahoma, Tenn., was named for him. During the last war Camp Forrest had its usual and familiar quota of GI frame buildings, and now 29 of them are being moved to the campus of UNC to give crowded Carolina students a graphic idea of the necessity of "fustest and mostest."

Obtained through the Federal Works agency, these mobilized converted classrooms will soon add a new effect to a campus which always has been noted for its natural beauty than for its conformity of architecture. A half-dozen of the future boards of education are at present under construction, and within six months all of them will be rubbing piney elbows with the University's staid permanent buildings.

Anyone passing the library, public health building or NROTC Armory will notice the gaunt, not too pretty skeletons of the temporary classrooms. Old alumni, and even the more aesthetic of the present generation, may cry—and have—that shackizing such a venerable campus is inexcusable. But those who complain thus probably never have been refused courses because of the lack of classroom space; or, if they were assigned studies, they did not have to pursue them pick-a-back in some jampacked hall.

The truth of the matter is that the classrooms, however unsightly, are a definite boon to the University, which could expand like a two-way stretch girdle and still be insufficient for the present pour of students. They will serve temporarily as the needed "fustest and mostest" of a program of additions which should not be stopped by those misguided ones who claim that the present boom in education will pass. Those who know admit that the current enrollment peak may conceivably drop, but the cozy little student body of prewar days is a thing of other years. Plans should be made accordingly.

For the peace of mind of beauty-lovers, the termite tenements will be gilded white, and for the health of the sickly, they will be steam-heated. Except for the added necessity of fire extinguishers, they will serve the purpose as well as our most modern buildings, and better than archaic structures such as Murphey and Saunders.

At any rate students can philosophize: "Hell, Lincoln had a log cabin."

What Do YOU Say?

Today's Question

How did you fare under the new registration system?

Answers

It was purely luck that I was able to get a good schedule. I prefer the old system in which I was able to exercise a freedom of choice.—George Demas, Cleveland, Ohio.

My only objection lies in the fact that I was unable to exercise any choice in my instructors.—Vestal Taylor, Chapel Hill.

The new system of registration is like playing roulette at a county fair—you're almost bound to lose. Sure, they may let you win once but they don't run the concession for their health. This time okay—what next? I like a choice.—John Clampitt, St. Petersburg, Florida.

Having spent my previous three years of study at the University of Minnesota where the system of registration differs considerably (11,200 students in 1945) from the one now in effect here (choice of courses, hours, and professors) I was somewhat skeptical of the efficiency of this new system. Being a senior, however, I did get good courses and hours, and so am not in a position to say anything about the inconveniences other undergraduates may have suffered.—Richard Savage, Minneapolis, Minn.

Perhaps I was lucky in getting a good schedule because some didn't. Although the system worked alright for me this once, it could be ironed out to run smoother.—Woodrow Bryson, Cullowhee.

It's just as good as any other and takes less time.—Sammy Andrews, Chapel Hill.

Although I don't prefer the new system of registration I did obtain a good schedule. I feel, however, that a case such as mine is the exception to the rule.—Charles Porter, New Orleans, La.

It is almost impossible to satisfy everyone but I am afraid I don't particularly care for this new system. It certainly didn't solve any of my problems and seemed to add a few more worries.—Andy Williamson, Lumberton.

Letters To The Editor

Need for Education

Dear Editor:

As an active member of the AVC fighting for increased subsistence for veterans attending college, I would challenge the remarks made in your paper by Mr. Howard Turnage.

Either he has his facts wrong, or he is distorting the idea behind AVC's slogan, "Citizens First-Veterans Second." I believe in that slogan—or else I wouldn't be an AVCer. I believe in the need for subsistence increases—which is a need for a large number of citizens today. Citizens who are also veterans.

The way I see it, the government has provided a bill which is completely inadequate. Granted—vets are lucky having any G.I. Bill. But what good is this offer of a college education if the average veteran cannot possibly afford it?

Fact is, of a the war, fellows and girls were going to college without any government assistance. It must be remembered that today's college vet is no adolescent of 17. He is a family man, in many instances. He is more mature. But studying isn't child's play for him. The vet student must devote his time to concentrated work, or he will not make the grade. And, incidentally, he must save enough time for his family life, or he will find himself without the pipe and slippers.

I, as a woman veteran without dependants, have had to draw constantly on my meager savings. The living costs alone exceed the allotment, especially in the cities.

The subsistence surveys at Columbia, UNC, and NYU point to the obvious fact that many vets are leaving school because they cannot meet the cost of living. These students had good grades and a desire, a NEED for education. Why should they be deprived of this education? Make the bill satisfy the needs of the student-veteran in this day of the rising cost of living, or throw it out altogether, I'd say.

Sincerely,
RUSTY KIRSCH

Dear Editors:

We would like to know in what manner we can remove our Publications Fee from the GI Bill expenditures. We have no particular regard for old Uncle Sammie but we hate to see even him pay for such "publications" as the Daily Tar Heel and Carolina Magazine.

Both the Daily Tar Heel and the Carolina Magazine have been rocking of poor taste in writing since we have been readers. We are sincere when we say we want our publication fees stopped in order to cut out one of the unnecessary expenses of college life.

We trust that you will have the nerve to print this letter in your paper, so, when you do so, please include in your Editor's Note some pertinent information as to how we can stop receiving the publications and not be forced to pay for them.

Thanking you in advance,

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

BRITISH CABINET HAD LONG WRANGLE BEFORE DECIDING TO DUMP GREECE; PAUL PORTER SAYS "THANK YOU" IN GREEK; DIPLOMATS CRITICIZE TRUMAN FOR BY-PASSING UNITED NATIONS.

Washington—More diplomatic details are gradually leaking out regarding the sudden British dumping of the Greek dilemma into Uncle Sam's lap.

For several months there had been a bitter row inside the Labor Cabinet over both Greece and Palestine. The Foreign Office wanted to continue British operation in both countries, but the Chancellor of the Exchequer, worried over dwindling British finances, was opposed.

The dispute dragged on for some time. Rumblings reached the State Department and this was the source of reports on Capitol Hill that Secretary Jimme Byrnes had been warned last October that Britain would have to get out of Greece. Actually, British storm warnings were put up, but there was no definite decision until three weeks ago.

Then, British weather plus the internal crisis, played into the hands of British budget balancers. The Foreign Office was given an ultimatum to dump Greece.

Note—Some people wonder how the British can get away with the argument that it is too expensive for them to keep 10,000 troops in Greece when they can afford to keep 100,000 troops in Palestine. The answer is that they can't. Palestine also will be dumped shortly. Tragedy is that Palestine wasn't turned over to the United Nations long ago before Jewish passions had reached such a frenzy that a solution by the United Nations, the United States or anyone else will be difficult.

Paul Porter, President Truman's economic expediter for Greece, speaks with a delightful Kentucky drawl. Foreign languages are not his forte. In Greece, however, he wanted to learn enough language to be polite, and the first phrase he tackled was "thank you" which in Greek is "efhristo".

The pronunciation proved difficult. Finally the Greek interpreter suggested:

"Maybe you have a friend in Kentucky named 'F. Harry Stow.' Just think of him and pronounce it 'F. Harry Stow'—'Efhristo'."

Porter did pretty well that night at dinner and thanked everyone every time they passed anything. "F. Harry Stow!" he exclaimed on any and all occasions.

Next morning after breakfast, Paul tried to be equally polite..

"Harry F. Stow," he said, bowing graciously.

His hosts looked puzzled. Porter had reversed the initials of his "friend in Kentucky."

The more the diplomatic corps scrutinizes the Truman doctrine for Greece and Turkey, the more its members are inclined to think the USA made a historic mistake in by-passing the United Nations.

This is the conclusion of friendly-disposed diplomats, many of them Latin American, whose future is tied up with the peace and prosperity of this country. While they recognize the need for speed, they are convinced that President Truman should have placed all the facts before the United Nations at the very start, not as an afterthought. They also fear the USA established a precedent that may boomerang. Two cases are cited to prove their point:

1. Suppose the situation is reversed and Russia wants to apply the Truman doctrine to Latin America. She now has an excellent excuse for by-passing the United Nations.

To be more specific, Nicaragua and Panama are the two Latin American nations corresponding to Greece and Turkey. Panama, like Turkey, is on both sides of a waterway just as vital to the USA as the Dardanelles to the USSR. Nicaragua, alongside Panama, could control the Panama Canal, just as any nation controlling Greece could control the Dardanelles.

It is no secret that Russian agents have been extremely active in parts of Latin America, and the day may come when Communist governments in one or more of these countries will appeal to Russia for help against the USA. As sovereign nations they could argue, just as do Turkey and Greece, that they have a right to get help from whomever they please—by-passing the United Nations.

In such a case, Russia would have the precedent of the Truman doctrine and could argue that what's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. According to this doctrine, Russia would have the right to send military equipment to Panama and Nicaragua regardless of our opposition.

This illustration may appear far-fetched. But diplomats point out that already Chile, where the Communist party holds the balance of power, is signing a trade pact with Russia.

2. As a reverse illsutration of what the United Nations can do to stop aggression, diplomats point to the case of Iran. This was the greatest victory so far achieved by the United Nations, and came just as the Security Council got on its first wobbly legs, with the world watching to see whether it could really walk.

Iran, to Russia, is one of the most strategic areas in the world, second only to the Dardanelles. Sitting astride the Gulf of Persia and an outlet to a warm-water port. Iran is just as important as the ports of Manchuria.

In Iran, Russia was trying to do what she is now trying to do in Greece—set up a Communist government friendly to the USSR. However, strong factions in the Iranian Government were opposed and appealed to the United Nations.

The United Nations had no police force, no international inspectors, no international organization to speak of. It had only the force of public opinion. Yet it emphatic stand stopped Russia in its tracks. The boys in the Kremlin scarcely knew what had hit them. They complained to high heaven, but the United Nations stood firm and won a great victory.

JOVIAL JIM CAMP, the scampering little wingback of last fall's Justice, Pupa, Wright combination, is no less an efficient expeditor of business, and such is easily seen with a glance at the way the present Monogram club is directed. And the success of the newly-elected president of the Carolina letterman organization is supported no little by Len Szafaryn, vice-president, and Charlie Tietjen, secretary.

The latest campus project of this trio and their athlete brother members of the Monogram club is an intra-squad football game to be staged at the conclusion of spring practice in regular-game proportions. This skirmish between two equally divided teams selected from the Tar Heel squad will come in approximately five weeks and will be played in Kenan stadium under the sponsorship of the Monogramers.

It will mark the second annual such affair, the same thing having been done last spring for the first time. It was a big success last year despite bad weather, and it is hoped that this spring the game will be staged with even more success.

According to president Camp, concessions for refreshments and all the other requirements for a real football game will be supplied, and outsiders may be admitted along with students to the advance showing of the Carolina 1947 streamliner football combination. More definite plans and particulars will be forthcoming soon, but if you are a lover of football, plan now to attend the spring football game. Carolina's bound to win!

Camp, Szafaryn, Tietjen and company run things in very efficient fashion, and their group gets the social schedule going Saturday night when they entertain all the participants in winter varsity sports at a dance in the Navy hall clubhouse.

In the initial meeting of the quarter last Tuesday night, the Monogramers established a trophy to be presented each spring to the Carolina varsity coach who has done the most for Tar Heel athletes and athletics, and at the same time one was also provided for presentation to the most valuable assistant or junior varsity mentor.

These awards will be made just before the end of the spring quarter according to present plans, and selection of the winners will be made by the Monogram club.

During its regular meeting Tuesday, the Monogram club went on record as backing a movement to form a lacrosse team at Carolina, something which has been attracting quite a bit of discussion in athletic circles recently. Something near 30 students have indicated in early inquiries that they would like to participate and try to make a go of lacrosse at Carolina, but as yet it is still in the "discussion" stage.

A resolution was also passed to invite wrestling Coach Chuck Quinlan to speak at the initiation of new members into the club at the regular meeting next Tuesday night. Quinlan was chosen as the speaker after his successful season which saw his grunt and groan specialists capture the Southern conference championship and seven out of eight regular season matches.

This afternoon the Carolina intramural program gets under way with softball, and with this beginning Walter Rabb and his assistants P. A. Lee and Taylor Dodson prepare to offer another quarter of the best intramural activity possible.

This trio, working at the helm of the Carolina mural department, has done an extraordinary job during the past two quarters, and with softball they have prospects of getting the largest amount of participation yet. Something near 60 teams are entered, and the program, which will last for several weeks, promises to pit a large number of top-flight teams against each other and thus promote the keenest interest and competition.

We congratulate the intramural department, both Director Rabb and the crew as a whole. They have done a swell job, and now they're off on another schedule that may be the best yet.

Total of 59 Clubs Enter Competition In Five Circuits

By Gil McLeod

Intramural competition for the Spring quarter will get underway this afternoon when 18 softball games will be reeled off on the Intramural and Navy fields.

Nine of the contests will begin at 4 o'clock and the remainder will start one hour later.

A total of 59 teams have been entered for the softball competition, 37 from the fraternities and 22 from the dorms. The fraternity nines have been divided into three leagues, and the dorms will have two circuits.

The softball season will last until the end of May, and intramural play in tennis and horseshoes will commence on May 5. Track competition is also on the slate.

The intramural office has stated that the players will not be allowed to wear spiked shoes, and has requested that the team managers have their outfits organized and ready to begin play at the appointed time and place.

With a record number of entries, and prospects high for many outstanding teams, interest in the softball play is expected to reach a peak for this year.

Evers, Baseball Hero, Near Death in Albany

Albany, N. Y. March 26—(UP)—One of baseball's all-time great infielders—Johnny Evers— is fighting for his life tonight. The 66-year-old Evers has suffered a severe stroke and has been take to a hospital in Albany, N. Y., where his condition is listed as "critical."

Evers, the middle man in the famous Chicago Cubs infield combination, Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance, had a stroke several years ago, and was bed-ridden. However, he maintained a keen interest in baseball. He has outlived Frank Chance. Joe Tinker had a foot amputation last year.

Several times Evers was nominated to the Hall of Fame, but failed to poll the necessary number of votes. Last year he made it, joining his baseball mates in receiving baseball's greatest honor.

When Evers retired as player and manager, back in 1924, he was one of the best-loved men in the game.

Nearly 100 Grid Candidates Turn Out For Initial Spring Practice Session

Fitch Tried At Tailback, Bauer Moved To Wingback; Drills Continue Today

What was labeled as the opening spring practice turned out to be almost a polar expedition, but the nearly 100 candidates on hand worked with the spirit of a mid-fall session as Head Coach Carl Snavely began preparations for the 1947 slate.

The gridiron aspirants turned out en force for the beginning of the spring practice, which is expected to last about five weeks and end in a full-scale intra-squad game in Kenan stadium sponsored by the Carolina Monogram club.

At the outset of operations, Coach Snavely and his crew of assistants sent the Tar Heels through blocking and passing drills, and the hour and a half-long session was concluded with the running of plays.

On hand were all the varsity men from last season with the exception of those out for varsity spring sports and Chan Highsmith, Ralph Strayhorn, Billy Myers, Baxter Jarrell and Max Spellman. Returnees figuring in the thick of things included such former Tar Heels as Al Bernot, Art Weiner, Fred Bauer and Bill Smith.

Things will be kept on a light basis for the first few days of practice, but things will be accelerated as soon as the gridders get rid of the kinks that have accumulated during the layoff between winter and spring drills.

Coach Snavely exhibited satisfaction with the turnout and with the first-day performance of the candidates. Scrimmage sessions will be started a week from Friday, and one a week will be held throughout the spring practice period

Tar Heels Hold Brisk Drill Despite More Heavy Winds

In what seemed more like weather for football, the Tar Heel diamond outfit went through another brisk practice session on Emerson field yesterday afternoon despite high winds that necessitated lots of hustle in order to keep warm .

Fielding and running drills took up most of the afternoon. Assistant Coach Walt Rabb batted infield practice for the inner line of defense while the other assistant mentor, Henry House, lofted fungoes to the outfielders. Physically speaking, the team appears to be shaping up well and all the players are ready for duty in tomorrow's opener against the touring Trinity team from Hartford, Conn.

All starters for the initial contest are still uncertain, with the exception of the three picketmen. Both Coach Bunn Hearn, back at the reins as diamond mentor, and the two assistant coaches emphasized that a large number of players will be employed in the early games of the campaign so as to afford the coaching staff a look at all the players. At least two players are slated to see action at every position in tomorrow's tussle.

Veteran hurler Monk Whitehart still looms as the probable choice to take the firing line against the invading nine tomorrow, but one of the new members of the pitching corps may be used should the cold spell remain. Hamp Coleman, Tommy Andrew, Vinnie DiLorenzo and George Whitted are other possibilities for mound duty. Buck Hardee, Sid Varney and Jim Hayworth are the likely receivers.

The infield starters are expected to be picked from Bob Mitchell and Jack Brasington at first base, Dallas Branch and Cookie DiChiara at second, Walt Kirk and Freddy Ryan at shortstop, and Dub Johnson and Jim Hamilton at the hot corner. Last year's regular at first base, John Gregory, is still not in shape following a recent operation but will be ready in another week or two.

Lanier Says Too Much Criticism of Registration

Old System Inadequate Now, States Official in Speech

Ritchie, Shepard Discuss Textbook Problem Of Withdrawal of Illegal Books by Veterans

By Tinsley Campbell

The need for more student suggestion instead of continued criticism was the ringing reply given to an intent Gerrard hall audience by Edwin S. Lanier, director of Central Records office, who appeared there at the invitation of the University Veterans association to clear up matters pertaining to the controversial registration system.

Ritchie and Shepard

Also appearing were H. R. Ritchie, Book Exchange head, and Col. F. C. Shepard, Veterans administration adviser, to clear up matters involving the purchase of textbooks by veterans and the legality of holding them responsible for purchases termed illegal.

"Our old system was adequate before the war, but today, it would effect an endless maze of red-tape," stated Lanier.

Fast Registration

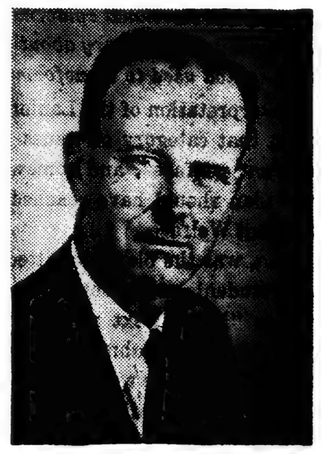
With these two major points, Lanier added the fact that the present set-up allows for the fastest possible registration, a better chance for a student to get the professor and hour he desires, and a better distribution of students in various classes.

Lanier recalled the break-down in the old system when veterans flooded the campus in January, 1946. "It was like a tidal wave," he declared, "and "and nothing we could do could stop it. Things were in a mess for 10 days afterward."

Not Guilty

"I don't think we're guilty of not attempting to find a suitable registration system to take care of the overflow," he added.

Then Lanier produced letters from universities all over the country, asking for help in remodeling their systems. He also showed registration set-ups from other colleges, which appeared to contain an enormous amount of red-tape. He stated that he had combed every piece of material sent him for an idea to aid this system.



He referred to the lottery system and how it had been attacked by a few, while the Daily Tar Heel poll taken on the subject showed that each person questioned was satisfied but claimed it was by luck.

"But was it luck?" he contended. "How effective is this system?"

Revealing that in January, 1946, there were 3,600 schedule changes, while this year there were only 1,200, he concluded, "As far as I and those who helped me work this thing out are concerned, we believe our system is, and surely will be with constructive criticism, as good as any in the country."

Ritchie and Shepard put themselves open for questioning, after they discussed the point of legality in requiring vets to return unauthorized books. Shepard stated, "No force will be used, or has been required, to make veterans pay for books not returned." He argued that the entire issue had been misconstrued, and that the University, the book exchange and the veterans had been misinformed on the policy laid down by the Veterans administration concerninig issuance of textbooks.

Saying that he was acting under "good faith" when he let veterans take as many books as they desired, Ritchie emphasized, "You can't stop a person who intentionally wants to beat the game."

Edwin S. Lanier, director of Central Records office, stated last night in his address to the UVA that there was too much criticism of the new registration system, and too few constructive and helpful suggestions.

Kennedy Supports Greek, Turkish Aid

SP Releases Board, Council Nominations

Congressman Says Russians Fearful Of Immediate War

The proposed assistance to Greece and Turkey is consistent with American foreign policy, youthful Congressman John F. Kennedy (D-Mass) declared in an address here last evening.

Speaking in Hill hall under the auspices of the Carolina Political union, the 29-year-old son of the former Ambassador to Great Britain, said the policy proposed by President Truman "is not turning the page to a new chapter in American foreign policy.

Policy Is Same

"Our foreign policy is the same as it has always been from the day that the discerning Monroe first enunciated the principles of the Monroe Doctrine. It merely means that time and space have brought a new interpretation to that historical document."

One has only to look at the map "to see what might happen if Greece and Turkey fell into the Communist orbit," Congressman Kennedy declared. "The road to the Middle East would be flung open. The traditional goal of the Russian foreign policy, an opening to the Mediterranean, with all of its strategic implications would be gained."

No War With Russia

Replying to the arguments of those who say that the proposed assistance to Greece and Turkey will increase the possibility of war with Russia, Congressman Kennedy said:

"It seems to me that war with Russia might arise in two ways. The greatest danger is a war which would be waged by the conscious decision of the leaders of Russia some 25 or 35 years from now. At that time, Russia will have a greater population than all the rest of Europe, and could challenge even this country in steel production and overall power. She will have the atomic bomb, the planes, the ports and the ships to wage aggressive war outside her borders. Such a conflict would truly mean the end of the world and all our diplomacy and prayers must be exerted to avoid it.

"I do not believe that Russia wants war now," he declared. "Nevertheless, as General Eisenhower said the other day, 'all wars are stupid and they can occur stupidly'."

Congressman Kennedy was entertained by the Union at a dinner at the Carolina Inn and the CPU held a reception for him, following the address, in Graham Memorial.

Jerry Davidoff, CPU chairman, presided and introduced the speaker. An open forum followed the address.

Debaters Prep For Nationals

Two Teams Will Enter Tourney Next Week

With most of the important speaking catagories well-stocked as a result of tryouts held Tuesday evening, the University debate squad is making final preparations for an all-out invasion of the Grand National Forensic tournament slated for Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of next week in Fredericksburg, Va.

The Debate council has named two teams to enter the competition on the national debate query, "Resolved: that labor should have a direct share in the management of industry," nine of the 11 other speech activity departments have been filled.

May Make Shifts

Entered in several events himself, Debate council President Maurice Braswell declared yesterday, "It may develop that shifts will have to be made in these assignments, but for now they hold good."

Taking the affirmative on the labor topic will be Charles Hodson and E. A. Ormand, while Earl Fitzgerald and Russel Baldwin will make up the negative side. "In all likelihood," Braswell said, "there will be at least one, if not two more teams entered as soon as we can get the selection of partners ironed out."

The list of other events and respective delegates includes: address reading—Blanton Miller and Braswell; extemporaneous speaking—Dick Mottsman and Ormand; response to the occasion—Jim Taylor and Mottsman; dramatic reading—Bill Miller, Blanton Miller, and Braswell; original oration—Aileen Taylor (women's division), Sid Rosinsky, and Baldwin; after dinner speaking—E. O. Brogden; impromptu rejoinder—Mottsman; informative speaking—Brogden; poetry reading—Mrs. Taylor (women's division), Blanton Miller, and Braswell.

Braswell appeared confident over the prospects of a good showing by the local debators. "In view of the competition and the calibre of the team we are sending, we should come back with more than one first place." Bill Miller and Jim Taylor became national champions in last spring's tourney.

Party Platform Is Given Approval

With the addition of seven new nominees to their party slate the Student party yesterday afternoon virtually completed their major ticket for spring elections, and simultaneously approved a ten-plank platform.

Finishing their publications choices, with the exception of Yackety-Yack editor, the group nominated a complete ticket of four nominees for Publications board. For the two senior class Board posts, Peter Gerns and Roland Giduz were chosen from a field of six.

Heffner, Allen Chosen

Daily Tar Heel associate editors Earl Heffner and Eddie Allen received the SP nomination for junior class representative and representative-at-large to the Publications board, respectively. Senior nominee Gerns is president of Mangum dormitory and Giduz holds the position of managing editor of the Daily Tar Heel.

Emily Von Borries and Jo West were added to the slate as nominees for representative-at-large to the Women's council. Martha Aiken, graduate student in public health was chosen nominee for graduate representative to the Council.

Approve Platform

The group quickly approved a ten-point platform, drawn up by a committee under the chairmanship of Basil Sherrill, however, voted to withhold publication of the objectives until next Wednesday evening.

Further consideration of candidates will be taken up at a meeting next Tuesday afternoon.

Senior Deadline Today To Order Invitations

Today is the last day for Seniors to order graduation invitations and those who have not ordered yet are asked to do so immediately. Invitations may be ordered at a booth in the "Y," sponsored by the Grail, from 9 to 1 and from 2 to 5 today.

SMYTH LECTURE CANCELLED

Dr. H. D. Smyth, who was to lecture to the Sigma Xi this evening, will not be able to appear as scheduled due to a meeting of the Atomic Research committee which he is attending in Washington.

NEWS BRIEFS

Anti-Strike Bill Signed By Tom Dewey

Measure to Prevent Organized Walk-Outs

Albany, March 27.—(UP)—New York's Governor Thomas E. Dewey, staking his political future against the power of organized labor, has signed into law the nation's most drastic ban on strikes by public employees.

Dewey signed the Condon-Wadlin anti-strike bill, which decrees automatic loss of job and other stiff penalties for state or municipal workers who take part in a walkout or sit-down.

Provoked 'Marches'

The controversial measure, which provoked repeated "marches" on the state capitol, was approved over the opposition of organized labor, teachers, and civil service employees.

The new law provides that any public employee participating in a strike will be summarily dismissed. If reinstated he could not be paid more than his pre-strike salary for at least three years. He also would be placed on probation and lose "tenure" for five years.

House Passes Bill To Abolish Draft

Washington, March 27. — (UP) — The House has unanimously passed and returned to the Senate a bill to abolish the wartime selective service system at midnight Monday. The bill establishes an office of selective service records, which will collect draft records from state and local boards for safekeeping.

Molotov Shows Signs Of Yielding Dispute

Moscow, March 27.—(UP)—Russian Foreign Minister Molotov shows signs of yielding in the Big Four dispute over German assets in Austria. Molotov has agreed in principle to let the deputies write a definition of assets—the crux of the argument which is blocking progress on the Austrian treaty.

Amendments Offered To Foreign Aid Bill

Washington, March 27. — (UP) — Republican Senator Lodge of Massachusetts has offered amendments to the Greek-Turkish aid program that would provide strict American supervision of how the funds are used. Under the plan a special administrator would work under Secretary of State Marshall to supervise the program.

Illinois Legislator Warns of Impeachment

Chicago, March 27.—(UP)—An Illinois state legislator says he may try to impeach Governor Dwight Green in connection with the Centralia mine disaster. Representative Carl Preighs says he will start impeachment action if he finds Green neglected or refused to act on a request to correct alleged dangerous conditions.

House Approves Bill Cutting Income Taxes

Washington, March 27. — (UP) — The House has approved by a vote of 273 to 137 a bill cutting most income taxes by 20 to 30 per cent. The measure bringing the first major tax reduction since 1928 probably will be revised in the Senate. Washington observers believe President Truman will sign the final draft despite his opposition to any cuts this year.

Hanft to Lecture On Religion Topic Beginning Monday

Professor Frank W. Hanft of the University law school will conduct a non-credit course in the elements of the Christian faith during the spring quarter. The class, meeting once a week, will convene for the first time Monday evening in Gerrard hall at 7 o'clock.

Special attention will be given to the deep-seated religious doubts characteristic of college students, and discussion will be directed so as to answer questions concerning the soundness of the Christian belief.

Although Professor Hanft's approach to the study of the Christian faith is not that of a theologian, his teachings are distinguished by a combination of deep religious resourcefulness and a method of inquiry and presentation which is well suited to college students whose relation to religion is either negative or indifferent.

Tokyo Resident Misses Chapel Hill....

Alumni Office Gets Letter from Jap Editor Who Received Master's Degree Here in 1918

By Raney Stanford

The University Alumni office received a letter from an old student the other day, one who had not written in over a half dozen years. He really liked Chapel Hill when he was here 30 years ago but could not help but lose touch with it lately, for his name is Seiji Shiki, and he resides in Tokyo, Japan.

Shiki came to Chapel Hill for graduate study after his graduation from Waseda university in 1916 and received his M.A. degree from here in 1918. After his return to the Orient, he founded a trade journal called "Shimbun no Shimbun" in 1924, and has published and edited it steadily since then, except for the war years.

His recently-received letter came to Alumni Secretary J. Maryon Saunders from a civilian employee of the Civilian Information and Education division of the occupational forces in Japan. They learned of the Japanese journalist's former affiliation with the University through his attendance of press conferences given by the Supreme Commander of the Allied Powers in Tokyo.

SEIJI SHIKI

"As I write this letter", the Carolina alumnus states, ". . .when the nations are yet at pains from the shocks and strains following the greatest Armegeddon the world has ever seen, my sentiments turn back to the days when I spent my memorable adolescence in the academy in North Carolina. . .The years I spent on your campus will always remain as a source of peaceful energy and the foundation of all my future endeavor."

The 53-year-old journalist writes that his family (a wife, a daughter and two sons) came through the war unharmed, but that he is "eagerly awaiting" the repatriation of his eldest son, who was interned while a student at the Port Arthur Institute of Technology.

"I remember that at the time I was in the United States studying at North Carolina, I promised Mrs. R. B. Lawson, whose husband was a professor in the University Medical school, that some day I would be back to Chapel Hill with my wife. But as the situation stands today, the chance of that being realized is very slim. I hope instead to send my son and daughter to the United States for study.

"We are now a very peaceful people, with the Government and the people trying hard to eliminate maliciouh men in the old military clique. At the same time we are doing our level best to learn democracy."

Like South in 1865

In a psychologically interesting paragraph, Shiki compares conditions in Japan today with those in the South following 1865.

"The conditions are still rather

Small Change Seen In Registration For Spring Term

Although registration figures for the spring quarter will not be ready for several days yet, Edwin S. Lanier, director of Central records office, estimated yesterday that the Spring enrollment is about the same as that of last quarter.

According to Lanier 6200 students signed up during the pre-registration period, leaving a difference of 600 from the fall quarter total. However, he estimated that approximately that many old and new students registered for classes this week.

Lanier expressed satisfaction with the new registration system, pointing out that it almost eliminated waiting lines and that it gave the majority of students schedules as good as they could have got under the old method. He said that the present system will probably remain in use although minor changes may be made.

Lanier said that the number of schedule chances made under the new system would total approximately the same as the number of drops and adds made in previous quarters. The total of changes for this quarter is not yet available but 1100 class changes were made after the registration in January.

In a cross section poll of the student body made by the "What Do You Say" column of the Daily Tar Heel yesterday, all but one of the students questioned revealed that they received satisfactory class schedules even though they were not in favor of the system of registration.

Almost Unanswerable They Flow as an Undertow....

Mysteries Shroud Facets Of New Registration System

By Roy Moose

This is a story—a MYSTERY story. It contains one of those almost unanswerable mysteries that flow as an undertow; one belonging to the species that tend to submerge students, snuff out student freedom, and draw tighter the bonds of the straight jacket.

The characters in this conflict are a heterogenous group of faculty members and students lumped together under the heading of "DIVISION OF STUDENT WELFARE" versus those who seek to circumnavigate this group when contradictory issues concerning student welfare are devised.

Under the guidance and chairmanship of Dean E. L. Mackie, the Division of Student Welfare has the responsibility of "discussing and advising on matters pertaining to student welfare." That was before a recent incident arose that relegated the board to the status of D.P.'s, existing in name only and serving a purpose only when some benevolent person drops in for its advice.

The culprit in the story is that "big, bad controversial" issue known as the Lanier plan of registration that so recently permeated the emotional epidermis of approximately 7,000 students. No, this is NOT a story about the merits of said plan, but rather the method used to transform the "theory" into a "law".

Interpretation of the Lanier plan would without a doubt place it in that category of issues known as "matters pertaining to student welfare", and somewhere along its evolutionary trail the plan should have reached the attention of the Division of Student Welfare.

But, was the plan submitted to the board of faculty members and students representing the student body? In Dean Mackie's words "NO!" Next naturally comes the question, should the plan have been submitted to the student welfare board? Again in Dean Mackie's words: "There is no compulsory, written regulation, but according to the customs and tradition Yes! Yes, it would have been wise to consult the representative board."

Then follows the mystery, WHY WAS THE PLAN OF REGISTRATION THAT WOULD PERSONALLY AFFECT ALMOST EVERY STUDENT ON THE CAMPUS NOT REFERRED TO THE "DIVISION OF STUDENT WELFARE?" That is the question to which everyone concerned turns an embarrassed about face. To my knowledge, that is a question that has yet to be answered. Dean Mackie has received neither an answer nor an explanation.

"Were you a member of the Student Welfare board, too?"

The recent hike in laundry prices was one of the more important issue submitted to the board. The 33 ½ per cent increase, touching as many students as does the registration plan, was given careful consideration, and the advice given was "Put the plan into effect, the students will approve it." That raise was put into effect, and although the extra fee caused still another dent in the students' already trampled pocket book, NOT ONE STUDENT LODCED A FORMAL COMPLAINT. In fact, to the contrary, the overwhelming majority of students thought the raise justified and fair. In this instance, the students' representatives were consulted, and that which the representatives approved the students concurred with completely.

This only brings us right back to the question of the registration plan. What was the reasoning behind the decision to withhold the plan from the welfare board? By ignoring the one group that could give a combined student-faculty opinion, the instigators of the plan immediately placed themselves in a defensive position. The mere discovery of such evasive action would immediately stir up a tempest of WHY's. To paraphrase, a stink by any other smell would still bring forth a deluge of protests. As seen in the editions of the Daily Tar Heel for the last month, that is exactly what has happened. The chasm of animosity between student and administration has widened more and more. A breaking point is bound to come soon. And yet, the matter, at most, could have been avoided by submission to the empowered advisory student-faculty board, the Division of Student Welfare; it, at least, could have been tempered by their advice.

As matters stand now, the welfare board has been relegated to the position of Displaced Persons looking for somewhere to alight. It has not met for over a month. When it will meet again is problematical. Whether there is any further use for it is questionable. Disuse fosters withering and death. One may well ask, IS THERE NO MORE STUDENT WELFARE ON THE CAMPUS, or ARE ALL STUDENTS SO SELF-SUFFICIENT AS TO INDIVIDUALLY LOOK OUT FOR HIMSELF AND HIS FREEDOM OF CHOICE AGAINST ALL OPPOSITION?

Missing Leaders

In the midst of all the recent grumbling and complaining coming from the students about registration and books, any strong student leadership has been noticeably lacking.

This is a sad commentary on some student leaders, the men elected by the student body to lead its student government and protect its rights and interests. Student leaders should always be the first to rally to the students' cause in any case in which the students' rights are about to be trampled underfoot.

Yet, local campus leaders have remained quieter than the proverbial mouse, or mice, consequently the recent controversies. Student protests have been received in the DTH office in a steady stream, but scattered protests can never achieve any result unless concentrated, concerted leadership assembles the crowd and leads it towards definite action. This newspaper has constantly fought against the registration system, the fouled-up bargain-basement book sale and other minor operations. Yet we have remained a voice in the wilderness of verbally active but actively passive students.

If student leaders fail to take the initative in investigating and seeking changes in faulty administrative action, they are letting down students who placed their faith in them. The lethargy which has existed on the campus all year is slowly seeping into the veins of the leaders of most campus organizations. No action means no results. Our student leaders too often tend to be dormant at a time when the need calls for immediate action. Spring fever can be a dangerous disease.

Chinese Brand of Communism Today Is of Foreign Origin

By Lincoln Shiao Hing Kan
International Relations Club Member

What does Communism mean in China and in the world?

In my opinion, Communism in China is a challenge against the established government by a minority political power with an independent army . . . Force is the Communist method for political control of China and their means to world domination.

We in America are faced with the same problem. However, Communism here has not yet become armed insurrection, because of the high literacy and political know-how of the American people.

But in China for thousands of years, the Chinese have experimented with many forms of government—Absolute Monarchy, Democracy, Fascism, Socialism and Communism. They were all of native birth. Communism failed in the Middle Soong dynasty almost two thousand years ago, and with its failure Communistic thought died an inglorious death.

Wellington Koo, the Chinese ambassador to the U. S., hit the nail on the head, when he said, "The existing brand (of Communism) in China is of foreign origin, and like that which flourishes in several other countries, it pays homage to one and the same shrine abroad."

Communism cannot succeed in China or elsewhere, as long as it does not spring from the people who till the soil.

It is "Down with the Mei-Kuo (American)" season in China today. That is a fact which cannot be blinked at. The days of the Flying Tigers and American popularity in China are gone.

What is the source of the mass anti-American demonstrations? Some people say that it is merely the pent-up emotions of the people of China who had to remain silent for the long years of Japanese occupation. Other people insist that the inspiration for the anti-American wave can be linked with the Russian Bear.

Way back in 1920 right after World War I, a similar reaction took place in China. It also was very definitely anti-American. There was a boycott on all U. S. products and large student rallies. When the smoke cleared away, we found the American business men flat on their back, with Japanese and British interests well entrenched in the industrial world of China, such as it was in those times. I am making no accusations; however, Russia is not the only guilty party in China today.

"Buy American" may soon be replaced or subdued by "Buy British" and possibly "Buy Russian." I play down the "Russian" because I feel that the issue is ideological, not commercial.

What is the defense against Russian-Communist infiltration? That is the real question.

Actually, the world is afraid. Fear has gripped us, made us immobile, hysterical, irrational. We must throw off this blinding fear and try to really understand the Communists.

Naturally, world affairs sometimes confuse me and you. We have classes to make, papers to write—we want to enjoy our loaf of bread and wine with a few dates tossed in when we can get one. But, we must be selfish.

Eventually, what happens in China and elsewhere hurts us. (Uncle Sam's draft notice to me, way back in 1941, is still fresh in my memory.)

Therefore, let's start to KNOW the Russians better. Let's stop blindly fearing. Only by self-education can we devise our counter-weapons to preserve democracy and our compromises to preserve world peace.

Above all, let's start really THINKING . . . for that is what separates man from beast. (We have seen enough bestiality in this world.) By real thinking, we can give the use of force back to the Devil.

An Apology

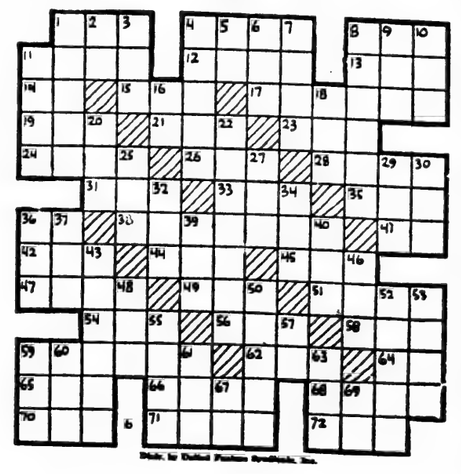
To Rep. Kennedy and the CPU:

I deeply regret that the conflict of the mass meeting of veterans last night with your program prevented many students at the University from hearing the worthy lecture delivered by the Honorable John P. Kennedy. I, along with others, was very much interested in his chosen topic, a topic that should be delivered to every American.

However, the time element necessitated a mass meeting LAST NIGHT concerning the registration system, for at the very same time we were holding our meeting the Registration committee was meeting in Memorial hall for the purpose of formulating a registration program for the summer terms and the fall term.

Since registration concerns each individual student on the campus directly and since the fate of the students' course of study at present seems uncertain and vague, it was felt that while there was YET time, the students should make known to the Registration committee their formal grievances.

Every effort was made to hold the meeting earlier to prevent conflict with your program, but all meeting halls on the campus were booked for the night. In fact, the Freshman Orientation committee consented to move their time of meeting up to 7 o'clock in order that we could hold our meeting. TO HAVE DELAYED THE MEETING UNTIL ANOTHER NIGHT MIGHT HAVE BEEN TOO LATE, SINCE THE REGISTRATION COMMITTEE TOOK ACTION LAST NIGHT.



It is hoped that you will understand that our meeting last night was in the interest of the Carolina students and will judge accordingly.

ROY C. MOOSE,
President, U. V. A.

Tar Heels Open Season Against Trinity Today

SPORT SPINS - -

with

IRWIN SMALLWOOD

NOT MANY SPORTS fans have been dreaming of a white opening day for baseball at Carolina this season, but just that seems to destined for the Tar Heels who do things with the little horse-hide that represents America's favorite game. It was the prospect of that that greeted "Coach Bunn" Hearn the day after he made his appearance in Chapel Hill to take up the reiens of the Carolina baseball team for his 18th season.

Hearn, who several weeks ago suffered a heart attack at his home in Wilson, returned to Carolina to assume his position as head coach Tuesday, and chilling winds first kept him from the diamond and then a surprising snow flurry turned up yesterday afternoon to almost assure a postponement of today's scheduled opener with the Trinity nine of Hartford, Conn.

Walter Rabb, intramural director, has been working as coach of the diamond crew until Coach Hearn could take over, and today his products are ready—weather permitting—to make their first appearance of the season.

The 1947 edition of the Tar Heel baseball-club, which is expected to be a decided improvement over last season's team, has been battling the weather man all quarter but has nevertheless been worked into a very promising combination. The strong point of the Carolina baseballers will without a doubt be on the mound, where four outstanding moundsmen are ready for action, namely Tommy Andrew, Monk Whiteheart, Hamp Coleman and Vinny DiLorenzo.

All four of these hurlers are lettermen and have had an abundance of experience on which the prospects of a successful season can be based. And the coupling of a good infield combine and some good hitting with this foursome of starting pitchers will almost assure just that—one of the best seasons in years. Too, there are quite a few monogram men vieing for the infield and outfield positions, adding to the potentiality of the local diamond team.

However, despite these good prospects, a maximum of experimentation is anticipated in the initial warmup engagements—experimentation in an effort to obtain a really well-balanced working combination. This switching may be the cause for a few losses early in the season, but such is something very necessary and will mean the difference between a winning and losing club later on in the campaign when the games mean more and more.

Lineup Switches Feature Grid Drills

Carolina's Silver Fox—football tutor Carl Snavely—has a lot of top-ranking teams to "fox" this season, and the sly producer of winning grid teams is wasting no time in his spring (spring, that is, when the wintry influence is driven out) practices. A good example of this is the opening day moving of Jack Fitch to tailback and Fred Bauer to wingback.

Fitch, the "jumping jack" scatback, saw only limited activity last season due to a shoulder injury, but during the trek ahead he will be called on more and more for action. So his weight and ability is being tried from the tailback spot, and footballing of Fred Bauer, a 1945 end standout, is being given a chance at wingback. These are by no means permanent changes, mind you, but are experiments and good indications of things to come—namely switches galore in view of one of the best football teams ever to take the field under the Blue and White of Carolina.

It was one of the finest group of prospective Tar Heels ever to take the field in spring practice Wednesday, and that's admitted even by King Carl himself. Spirit and spunk alike are in abundance as the Carolina "destiny" team gets set for all comers.

NOTING MATTERS. Southern conference baseball has already commenced in full fury, and coming out of that has been two surprising defeats in the loop for State's Red Terrors, the best in the Big Four last season. Furman and Clemson were on the winning ends of the battles, Furman edging the victory on a grand-slam homer in the ninth inning . . . Jack Hussey, Tar Heel baseball slugging prospect, lifted a drive over the left field wall in practice last Saturday. Is it an indication of more to come? . . . Coach Chunky Chuck Quinlan has accepted an invitation to address the Monogram club initiation next Tuesday night . . . What's this about the new Monogram sweaters being of inferior quality to those of past years? . . . And don't forget the Monogram club dance Saturday night. It's time for the athletes to socialize for a change.

Seligman, Moody, McLeod and Simmons Lead Tar Heel Track Team to Florida

The Carolina track contigent, seven strong, left Chapel Hill yesterday afternoon for the Florida Relay Carnival, which is set for Saturday afternoon at Gainesville, Fla.

One of the biggest attractions of the meet will be the high jump event which will pit Carolina's Jack Moody, one of the best in the country, against Florida's Henry Gardner, who copped top honors in the recent Indoor meet at Chapel Hill.

Another expected hot dual is in the shot put which sees Big Bob Seligman of Carolina facing his old team mate George Hills of Florida.

The mile team race, one of the top spectator events, will also see Carolina favored with a team of Jack Milne, Julian Mackenzie and Jimmy Miller.

Carolina's other entries include two Southern Invitation Champions, Norm McLeod in the pole vault, and Chunk Simmons in the high and low hurdle events.

MEET CALLED OFF

The scheduled track meet between the Freshmen and varsity teams scheduled for this afternoon had been postponed until Monday afternoon due to the inclement weather.

Back in the Tar Heel outfield after a three-year absence, big Jack Hussey, Carolina's version of a right-handed Johnny Mize, will be in the starting lineup in today's initial clash, weather permitting. Jarrin' Jack will patrol right field.

Weather Causes Calling Of Opening Mural Tilts

Old Man Winter, refusing to be evicted from Chapel Hill with the coming of spring, cut loose with an offensive in the form of a snow storm yesterday afternoon, causing a cancellation in the opening of the intramural softball season until next Wednesday.

The 18 contests cancelled yesterday will be played later in the campaign, and the games in next Wednesday's play will be those already scheduled for that day.

Meanwhile, the intramural office has released the fraternity and dorm standings for mural play thus far this year. The Phi Gams are on top in the fraternity division with 746 points, and Med School leads the dorm division with a total of 673.

Robinson Gets Starting Nod For Initial Tilt at Emerson

By Bob Goldwater

Weather conditions permitting, Carolina's 1947 baseball edition goes on public view on Emerson field this afternoon at 4 o'clock when the Tar Heel nine opens its campaign against the touring Trinity team from Hartford, Conn.

An aggregation that appears to be far superior to last year's Big Four cellar-dweller crew, the local club will make its debut looking stronger in three departments in which the 1946 outfit was deficient—defensive prowess, especially in the infield, batting power and experience. Pitching, the chief forte of last year's team, again looms potent with several new comers and one returning letterman to bolster the three mound veterans back form last season.

All members of the junior varsity whose class schedule will permit it are asked to report to Emerson field at 1:30 this afternoon for a short workout.

Varsity members are asked to report at 2:15 o'clock.

A right-handed rookie, Frank Robinson, has received the starting hurling assignment from Coaches Bunn Hearn, Walt Rabb and Henry House. A sophomore from Cana, Robinson has shown up well in the pre-season drills to earn the opening nod. His battery mate will be Buck Hardee, a freshman from Whiteville.

Tommy Andrew, a returning veteran from the 1944 combination, is expected to relieve Robinson after his three-inning stint and will himself be followed by either Monk Whiteheart or Vinnie DiLorenzo, both veteran aces from last year. Catcher Jim Hayworth is also slated for backstop duty.

Although still not certain, the starting infield is expected to consist of Jack Brasington at first base, Cookie DiChiara at second, Dub Johnson at third and Freddy Ryan at shortstop. All but Brasington are lettermen.

The outfield, probably the strong point of the squad, will have, reading from left to right, Harry Beason, Kenry Black and Jack Hussey, all monogram winners. Black will bat in the cleanup position.

Other players who will see action in the two-team system that will be employed are Dallas Branch, Emmett Cheek, Jim Hamilton, Ott Evans, Red Fahey, Walt Kirk, Bob Mitchell, Bo Hackney and Buster Stevenson.

Lacrosse Practice Called For Today

Another spring sport gets off to practice this afternoon when the Tar Heel lacrosse squad starts its preparations for the coming season.

All men interested in playing the game are asked to draw equipment in the basketroom at 3 o'clock this afternoon and then report out to the handball courts on the far end of Fetzer field.

Plans call for the squad to journey to Durham Saturday to take part in the clinic that is being held there. The scrimmages will last until April 5 at Duke with movies and talks being given in the evenings by prominent lacrosse officials.

It is imperative that all the men who have played the game come out to practice so that an estimate can be obtained as to whether sufficient interest by the student body warrants a schedule.

The Synthesis of Nylon

Chemists of original nylon research team honor memory of Dr. Carothers at the dedication. They are: J. W. Hill, Ph. D., M. I. T. '28; H. B. Dykstra, Ph. D. Ohio State '27; G. J. Berchet, Ph. D. Colorado '29; J. E, Kirby, Ph. D. Iowa State '29; E. W. Spanagel, Ph. D. McGill '33; D. D. Coffman, Ph. D. Illinois '30; and F. J. Van Natta, Ph. D. Michigan '28. Dr. Carothers received his Ph. D. from Illinois in 1924.

Dr. Wallace Hume Carothers

1896-1937, was the first organic chemist in industry to be elected to the National Academy of Sciences. During his short scientific career he made contributions that have greatly enriched American life.

Recently the Nylon Research Laboratory near Wilmington was dedicated as "The Carothers Research Laboratory," in honor of the late Wallace Hume Carothers and his classical researches on the structure of polymers, the mechanism of polymerization, and the invention of nylon.

In 1928, a group of chemists under Carothers began a study of polycondensation which led eventually to the discovery of nylon. The project was part of a program of fundamental research to discover scientific facts which might be of eventual value in laying a foundation for applied research.

As the first point of attack, they chose the condensation of dibasic acids with glycols and reaction materials which would preclude the formation of rings. They obtained linear polymers of molecular weights between 2300 and 5000.

Molecular Weights Increased

After two years, a significant advance in linear polymer preparation was achieved. Through the use of the molecular still, it was possible to obtain materials of molecular weights between 10,000 and 25,000, which, when molten, could be drawn into filaments.

More important, the cooled superpolyester filaments could be further drawn into fibers several times their original length and thereby acquired luster, tensile strength, elasticity, pliability, and toughness much greater than the initial polymer. In contrast with ordinary textile fibers, their tensile strength was unchanged by wetting.

The striking properties of the fibers aroused the hope of finding a commercial fiber from some type of linear superpolymer. Investigation showed, however, that fibers from the polyesters were too-low melting and too soluble for textile purposes. Mixed polyester-polyamides were also not of interest in this category.

Research on Fibers

The possibility of a commercial fiber development seemed remote, but the intuition that frequently accompanies research genius prevailed, and Carothers was encouraged to direct his research on superpolymers specifically toward spinnable fibers. A polyamide from 9-aminononanoic acid gave a fiber of 195°C. melting point, equal in strength to silk, and clearly indicated the possibility of obtaining a material for fibers of commercial utility.

In 1935, the superpolymer from hexamethylene diamine and adipic acid was first synthesized. It melted at 263°C., was insoluble in common solvents, tough, elastic and had the best balance of properties and manufacturing costs of any of the polyamides then known.

A third period of research covered commercial development. The task was enormous, and to reduce to a minimum the "time between the test tube and the counter" a large force of some of the most competent chemists, physicists, chemical and mechanical engineers available was assigned to the project. The story of the manufacture of nylon will be told next month.

Greek Aid Plan Halted by Reds At U.N. Parley

Gromyko to Air View During Next Meeting

Lake Success, N. Y., March 28 (UP)—The Russian UN delegate voiced objections today when the United States attempted to explain its Greek-Turkish aid program to the Security Council. Andrei Gromyko said the United States had raised "a new question" before the Council. And he added that the Americans could not legally attempt to put its program before the delegates by merely receiving the weeks-old "Greek Question" on the Council's agenda.

Soviet UN delegate Gromyko says he will air his views in the proposed American loan to Greece at the next Security Council meeting. Gromyko confined himself today to attempting to block the presentation of the American plan to the Council by American delegate Warren Austin. The next Council meeting on Greece is set for April 7th. Delegates requested the delay to consult their governments.

American UN delegate Warren Austin has called on the United Nations to endorse its Greek-aid program. He also asked for establishment of permanent machinery to police the Balkins. And he disclosed that the new "Truman doctrine" may be extended to other countries in addition to Greece and Turkey.

Navy Denies it Wasted Money in Buying Fuels

Washington, March 28—(UP)—The Navy tonight denied that it wasted 57-million dollars of the taxpayers' money in buying middle eastern fuel oil. The denial came after former oil man James Moffett had told the Senate War investigating committee that the Navy passed up a fuel bargain offered in 1941. Moffett charged that a deal later was concluded with the same company at more than two and a half times the original price.

Press Syndicate Urged By Publication Leaders

Woestendiek, Kinberg Sponsor Plan To Unite 11 University Newspapers

Action was started today on a "pioneering move toward giving greater cohesiveness" to collegiate opinion as contact was made with eleven campus newspapers by Daily Tar Heel Editor Bill Woestendick and Carolina Magazine Managing Editor Jud Kinberg.

The plan, which was lettered to the editors for their consideration, calls for formation of a column syndicate whereby editorial page articles from 12 major universities throughout the United States would be exchange for publication in the daily newspapers on those campuses. In part, the letter states, "More than any other group in America, the college student throughout the nation has interest in opinions quite similar to those of his prototype at all universities. Unfortunately, he rarely has an opportunity to find out what his fellow students are doing and thinking in the sections of the United States outside his immediate area.

Fill In Spot

"We here at the University of North Carolina feel that campus newspapers throughout the country could help to fill in this spot. . . ."

The scheme of the two publications men here at UNC provides for systematic exchange of outstanding columns and editorials from the 12 newspapers contacted, with a view towards giving these "guest writers" a chance to present their section's viewpoint on important collegiate questions. Each week, the editors would choose one article from their own publication and send it to the eleven other members of the syndicate. This would mean that every newspaper in the group would receive 11 pieces of "outside copy" from which to choose the "guest writers" each week.

Woestendick and Kinberg developed the plan during the recent vacation and put it into motion this week. If enough of the schools contacted approve, it will go into effect immediately. Universities written to are Texas, Illinois, California, Southern California, Harvard, Northwestern, Indiana, Syracuse, Minnesota, Louisiana State and Columbia. The Daily Tar Heel would be sponsor of the organization.

Cotsis Will Speak On Greece, Turkey Before IRC Monday

"The Truman Doctrine in Greece and Turkey" is the spark for Monday evening's International Relations club discussion at 7:30 in the Graham Memorial Roland Parker lounge.

Thano Cotsis, student from Athens, Greece and an IRC member, will launch the open debate with a first-hand report on the international friction in his home country. Congress is now discussing Truman's proposed $400,000,000 aid to Greece and Turkey in the light of its anti-Russian implications.

In addition to John Bristow, newly-elected IRC president, the club this week chose James Burwell for vice-president, Stuart Lucas as secretary and Bill Patterson, treasurer.

Bristow invited all students interested in world affairs to join in the club's discussion meetings. He particularly welcomed persons from foreign countries.

Meanwhile, IRC membership chairman, Ken Crews, announced that a number of vacancies will be filled in the next few weeks by means of a series of interviews. Prospective members should fill out application blanks to be found at the YMCA information office.

Committee Begins Work On Beer, Wine Control

Raleigh, March 28.—(UP)—The House Finance subcommittee working out the statewide local-option beer and wine control bill has begun its meetings behind closed doors, trying to work out a uniform statewide measure to allow counties to vote on beer and wine. It would replace the present confused tangle of local laws.

Meanwhile, the Senate Finance committee has decided to wait until Thursday to see what the House will do with the local-option question. The Senate committee has a handful of beer and wine laws to consider, including the so-called Pattern bills barring the sale of wine in 20 counties and allowing the commissioners of 29 counties to control the sale of beer in all but Grade "A" and "B" hotels and restaurants.

UNC Appropriations Measure Passed Unanimously By Senate

Woodhouse in Favor of Bill Against Communism in State

By Sam Whitehall

Dr. E. J. Woodhouse, prominent and popular member of the political science faculty yesterday raised a question as to the danger involved in the anti-Communist subversive activity bill approved by a sub-committee of the State House of Representatives Judiciary committee yesterday.

DR. WOODHOUSE

Introduced Wednesday by Reps. John Kerr, Jr., of Warren county and Frank Hutton of Guilford, the bill would make it a felony to advocate or teach the overthrow of organized government by violence or to publish or display printed material so advocating. It would outlaw meetings of two or more people for the purpose of promulgating this doctrine and all persons attending such meetings would be liable to fine and imprisonment.

Discharge Employees

Under the bill heads of State departments would be ordered to discharge employees who were or ever had been connected with subversive activities and the department heads would have complete authority in judging the evidence.

Woodhouse, an avowedly stanch Jeffersonian-Democrat and enemy of Communism, declared that he was strongly in favor of the general purpose of the bill in preventing Communism in the United States but questioned the wording of the bill in certain sections.

Woodhouse Statement

Said Woodhouse: "The second section of this bill in forbidding the public display of subversive literature might put an obstacle to the study and discussion of the dangers thought to follow from the purposes of this very literature and the planning of measures to combat such dangers.

"Further, the third section seems

Bill to Provide For 48 Million

Observers Surprised By Small Opposition

By Ed Joyner

The 48 million dollar appropriations bill containing $7,844,000 for permanent improvements at the University, including a four-year medical school and training hospital, completed its journey through the legislature yesterday, passing the Senate without a voice raised in opposition.

Controversial Issue

Considered one of the most controversial issues facing the legislature when it was introduced, the medical school bill has met with surprisingly little opposition. In fact, it passed the budget committee, the House and the Senate unanimously.

In addition to the $3,900,000 for the medical school and hospital, the University appropriation includes $1,215,000 for an addition to the library building, $1,310,000 for expansion of utilities, $234,000 for an addition to Lenoir dining hall, and $95,800 for an addition to the University laundry.

New Dormitories

The state is also assuming payment for the three new dormitories now under construction. $1,200,000 was included in the appropriation for this purpose.

State college in Raleigh and Woman's college in Greensboro also benefited in the appropriation. State re-

Local Laboratory Theatre Is Invention of Necessity

By Dave Owens

From cave man days when clothes were worn for warmth instead of modesty, from the 15th Century when Columbus yelled "Westward Ho," and from the time when some kid ruined his mama's pewter spoon to find out how much steam a tea kettle could muster, the mother of invention has been necessity.

LYNN LEONARD

Not so history-making, but ever so important to an eager group of hard-working actors at the University, came the birth of an idea which is growing rapidly into an outstanding organization on the campus. This organization came as a result of increasing numbers of dramatic art majors. More and more students, realizing the merits of the Carolina Playmakers, began to select this field for study.

But there was a group of ernest actors and playwrights among the fold which saw the shortcomings of the swelling ranks. This group, meeting each Sunday night to read plays and discuss pet theories of the theater, realized how much less time could be spent in teaching them many important things which they should know before going into professional jobs in the field of drama. These students feared loopholes in their educations.

Before one fateful Sunday evening was over, Lynn Leonard, David Hooks and Lois Warnshuis had planted the seed which grew into the Laboratory theatre. Sue Marden Davis, who came along with talent galore and ideas which fitted those of the other three, became the fourth and final member of the steering committee.

That feeling permeates the laboratory group. They are on their own and know it, for no monetary assistance comes from their parent group, the Playmakers. Martha Rice, Graham Memorial director, is their salvation, for she realized the good of the organization and made it possible for the three plays thus far to be presented through the auspices of the Student

Phillips Russell, professor of creative writing, and Paul Green, local playwright, have been singled out as "stimulating teachers of writing" by Edward Weeks, New York Times book reviewer, in a review of "Indirections: For Those Who Want to Write" by Sidney Cox.

"In company with many publishers," Mr. Weeks writes, "I have been excited by the quality of fiction which has flourished under the stimulus of Roy W. Police Say Sally Rand Needs Much Larger Fan

New York, March 28.—(UP)—New York police don't seem to mind fan dancers—provided there is more fan than dancer.

That seems to be the argument between the police and, of course, Sally Rand. But this time Sally is on the offensive.

Sally went to court to ask for help after she was denied a cabaret identity card. Without the card she can't dance. She told Supreme Court Justice Morris Eder that five detectives watched her act in a Greenwich Village inn. And, Sally assured the judge, the police were certain of the propriety of her fan dance.

But the police say differently. They say it's the same old story—too much Sally.

No Kick

It happened again. Every time the veterans and other students who have been yelling loudest about some campus situation get a golden opportunity to make their presence felt and to air their views on the matter, they fail to take advantage of it.

We certainly are in sympathy with those few campus heads who have attempted to help students by calling these mass meetings with members of the administration present to discuss the problems. They are getting sick and tired of listening to students complain haphazardly and then fail to appear when they get a chance to complain to the proper persons.

Latest instance occurred Thursday night when UVA President Roy Moose called a mass meeting of all students, especially veterans, to discuss the registration system and the book problem with Messrs. Lanier, Ritchie, and Shepard of the University. This was the opportunity for all to state their complaints and opinions, to hear the administration's viewpoint and explanation as to why each step was taken. Yet a mere handful of people showed up for the meeting. Approximately 50 students were present.

Granted the fact that Representative Kennedy's excellent speech at the same hour drew a packed audience of 800 to Hill hall, it must be remembered that 850 is but a small percentage of the student body.

If students had any gripes, they should have attended the meeting, which was well-publicized, last night. One can't help but feel that some of the biggest moaners on this campus just like to feel sorry for themselves. Apparently they can yell loudly until they get a legitimate opportunity to do so, at which time they disappear from the scene.

The administration showed its interest in the matter when its representatives appeared. UVA officials showed their interest by scheduling the meeting. The finger of disinterest can point at but one large group—the majority of the student body.

And our conclusion is that, as far as most of the members of the lethargic student body is concerned, they have no kick coming—unless it be administered to the seat of their collective trousers.

That Word

Effective immediately, the use of the word "Spring" on the editorial page of the Daily Tar Heel is "verboten." Twice in two weeks season-rushing enthusiasts on our editorial staff have written editorials in which the beautiful days marking the early - - - - season were mentioned.

No sooner was the word out of the typewriter on each occasion than old man weather decided to prove to these cocky collegiate journalists that their knowledge of the weather wasn't any greater than their knowledge of newspaper work.

The first time "the word" was used, a week of cold weather followed that made inhabitants check and doublecheck their calendars. However, it wasn't until the second time "the word" appeared that the weather man doublecrossed us, but good.

A short editorial in Tuesday's paper contained a comment on "the word." Yesterday we experienced the heaviest snowfall of the year at the latest date in years. While we should have been enjoying sunny days and balmy weather, we froze in a heavy snowfall. Baseball and softball games were postponed. Students plodded through snow to classes.

We won't mention "the word" again. Our warm weather writers have been properly chagrined.

It looks like a long, cold winter.

Warm hearts make sound homes. Hot heads break them.

We need united notions for the United Nations.

Do-Nothings

To the Editor:

Your editorial on the inaction and apparent complete disinterest of our campus leaders has again brought to the attention of the students the sort of do-nothing leadership that has characterized the campus for so long. We all should know or have a reasonably accurate idea of what the chosen representatives of the students are supposed to do, but at no time in the past year, as you point out, has any leading campus officer taken a firm stand on one of the many problems.

The reason for this neglect is quite obvious when one views the petty politicians of Carolina. If any one of our illustrious student leaders can come forth and show to the campus that he has represented the students as completely and fully as his electorate designated by their choice, let him do so and prove me in error. I doubt if one can honestly appear in this light.

Student government is dead in Chapel Hill today and good riddance. Let us get back to the beer and the books, leaving the tinhorn and two-bit politicians to taking turns electing each other and putting each other's names in the Daily Tar Heel.

A Suggestion

Dear Sirs:

It has been noted that much criticism has arisen over the present registration system by the student body and also criticism over the past system of registration by the Administration.

Although the past system involved waiting in line to receive courses at specified hours, the present system involved less waiting in line, but no choice of hours or professors. The fact is appreciated that the Administration is burdened with heavy enrollment and also that it is under-staffed, however the welfare of the Student should still be the main goal and in this respect may I submit the following recommendation as to how both Administration and Students could be better satisfied.

1) Registration slips should be provided with space for selection of hours for each class period, so that the student might fill in the course he wishes to take at that hour. (As under the old system).

2) Graduating Seniors should be allowed to register the first and/or second day so that they might get the required courses for graduation.

3) Coupled with the old system of first come first served, each department or school should set up a schedule or lists before the date of registration, having the students sign up for interview with their advisors or deans as is now done in the General College —Thus the student that signed up first on the list would be first to register. The elimination of lines, especially in the school of Commerce would be affected.

4) Once the registration slips are filled out the student should take them to the Central-Registration point. (Class tickets to be picked up at a later date, as in the new system). This would provide that when class cards are pulled for each student they be pulled in order of their delivery to the central point. (If need be date and time of delivery should be provided for on these slips to keep them in order). This would also eliminate lines at this point.

5) Students should be required (as under the present system) to place alternate courses on the registration slip so that in the event the first choices are not available the second choices would be allowed. Should it happen that all these courses are filled, the student affected should be called in as soon as possible and be made acquainted with the situation to determine what courses he would like to take in place of those closed. Or provision should be made to wait until the beginning of the next quarter to see if any vacancies had arisen in classes desired. The former, in my opinion, would eliminate a great portion of dropping and adding of courses.

6) Also students who were allowed to register for classes due to jobs, and other reasons should receive every consideration as was done under this present schedule.

It is felt that under this system the students would be permitted not only to choose their courses at the desired hours, but also to obtain the desired professors. It has been necessary in some instances to split classes this quarter but that was due to size of classes and no fault of the registration system—The fact that the Administration has to pull class tickets for each student would not be made more difficult by pulling the tickets for specified hours.

The above is submitted for what it is worth and it is hoped that it will receive due consideration.

WRONG NUMBER

University Business Manager C. E. Teague is being roundly "cussed" by employees of the local telephone office this week—and through no fault of his own.

When the new telephone directory —distributed in Chapel Hill yesterday—came off the presses last week, it was discovered that Teague's home number was the only wrong one in the book, and someone had to go through all 5,000 copies of the directory and insert the correct number by hand.

CPU Activity Is Encouraging Light in Dark Campus Scene

By Jud Kinberg

Amid the fog of ineffectiveness currently shrouding many campus organizations, activities of the Carolina Political Union stand out in welcome relief.

During fall quarter, the CPU hibernated along with other groups, but in the past month it has quickly regained its place as the outstanding discussion unit at Carolina. Thursday night's presentation of young Congressman John F. Kenfield culminated this return to puissance on the part of the CPU. The capacity crowd at Hill hall was probably the largest any speaker has seen "out front" at UNC this school year. The people heard a man who was an effective and stimulating platform personage, one who combined intelligence with platform personality.

Appearance of Kennedy came only a few weeks after the same Carolina Political Union had on its speakers' stand the most original orator to journey here in some years: Senator Glenn D. Taylor of Idaho. Democratic Congressman Taylor created a minor sensation with his liberal ideology and his unorthodox "entertainment" in which wife and young son took part.

It is to the credit of the Union and the officers leading it that they have been able to bring to Carolina two men equipped with such outstanding audience appeal and grasp of national and international problems. Mr. Kennedy's topic was taken from today's headlines and the knowledge he displayed of it mark him as one of our more conscientious Congressmen.

If the Carolina Political union continues to function in this manner, it will soon spread-eagle its field. I hope that this will not occur. Other organizations, notably the International Relations club, have remained dormant for long period at this time when peace or war are very much at stake. These other groups should make haste to match and surpass activities of the Union.

The CPU has proven that campus indifference can be obviated by clever programming. All we need is more such planning by all discussion organizations.

One sour note crept into the sweet music played at Hill hall. It was the impromptu siege between the brothers and pledges of one of the fraternities. College high-jinks are dear to my heart, but it does seem like a bit of bad timing and bad placing. There is a great difference between what goes on at any college and what purportedly goes on. For a college whose average age is well above 20, it seems that such boyish exuberance might be controlled.

What Do YOU Say?

TODAY'S QUESTION

What do you think of the new American foreign policy of financing other nations in the fight against Communism?

ANSWERS

I'm 100% behind the move. It is better to spend the money now for prevention than later for a cure.—Harry Charles, Jr., Florence, S. C.

I believe the policy is too great a step. Housecleaning should begin at home. While the intentions are good, I do not approve of the methods being used.—William Harris, Greenville.

I sincerely think that the Greek loan is one of the best and most efficient ways to check Communism. Also, I am in full accord and agreement with Mr. Kennedy's views as expressed in his recent speech on American Foreign policy.—Victor Johnson, Asheville.

For some months now I have been conducting this column, giving you, the student, an opportunity to express your views. During this time I have formed a number of opinions of my own, about the student body, which I now propose to pass on so that you may know what I say.

I would divide the student body in the following way: 75% of the students have no opinion about anything whatsoever; 10% are afraid to sign their names to their own beliefs (are those of you in this group afraid to defend what you believe in?); 5% are completely uncooperative; and finally there is the remaining 10% whose answers are read twice a week in this column. Which group do you fall into, dear reader?

The poor response to today's question has occasioned this outburst. To get the answers given above I consulted more than thirty people. Twenty-seven students had no opinion or were admittedly afraid to express one. A few did not even know what America's new foreign policy is. I personally feel the latter are wasting their time at a university. This new policy is going to have far reaching affects; at the very least it will mean money out of all your pockets. Are most of you students on this campus in the habit of spending money without knowing what you spend it for?

I questioned students who were reading books on European history in the library. They had no opinions. Of what use is it to study the past history of Europe if you don't read your daily papers and listen to men like Kennedy to find out what is going on in the world about you and is going to have a direct affect on you.

Wake up and live, students! Getting an education is a two-fold process; you have to put something into it to get something out of it. What do you say?—H.S.

Carolina Tracksters Seek Honors in Florida Relays

Tar Heel Track Team Opens Outdoor Season With Seven Men Participating in Carnival

Gainesville, Fla., March 28—North Carolina's seven-man track outfit arrived here this evening prepared to compete in the Florida Relays set for tomorrow afternoon.

Many of the outstanding teams in the Southern and Southeastern conferences will appear in the Carnival and close competition is expected. Carolina, despite its small entry, Georgia Tech and Florida are among the favorites to cop the event. The Tar Heels and Engineers finished one-two in the Indoor Games at Chapel Hill last month and the Gators, the host team, placed fourth.

The Carolina trackmen are not in the best of shape for outdoor competition due to the inclement weather. However, Coach Dale Ranson said he was sure his boys would give a good account of themselves in their various specialities.

Top Attraction

Outstanding attractions in the meet will come in the high jump and shot put events, where Carolina and Florida stars hook up in hot duels. The Tar Heels' Jack Moody opposes Henry Gardner, who captured top honors in the indoor event, in the jumping clash while big Bob Seligman of Carolina faces his old teammate, George Hills, in the shot.

Other Blue and White entries include two Southern Invitation champions performing in their specialities, Norm McLeod in the pole vault and Chunk Simmons in the two hurdle events plus another titleholder, Jack Milne, who gained two-mile honors, in the mile team race along with Jimmy Miller and Julian Mackenzie.

Georgia Tech's team will be paced by Doug Fowlkes, who copped two firsts and one second in the indoor meet.

Duke and N. C. State, also arrived today. Southeastern conference squads that are expected to enter include Georgia, Mississippi and Vanderbilt, in addition to Florida and Tech.

ONE OF Carolina's outstanding track performers, Chunk Simmons, above, will seek honors in the high and low hurdle events in the Florida Relays in Gainesville, Fla., today.

Pope, Burns Triumph In Badminton Tourney

Two badminton players from Carolina fought their way past early-round opponents Thursday evening in the North Carolina state badminton tournament currently being held in Durham's city armory.

Mark Pope, one of the top players in the intramural department's badminton club, turned in one of the chief upsets of the tourney by coming from behind to down C. R. Council of Raleigh, 7-14, 18-13, 15-11, in a second-round clash. Pope, rated a good "dark-horse" entry to cop top honors, whipped Robert Holmes in his first-round encounter.

The other Carolina player to get by the first round was Miss Frances Burns, coed physical education instructor. Miss Burns' victory was scored over Mrs. Kendal Morton of Burlington.

Other entries from Carolina, all of whom dropped their opening matches, include Basil Jackson, Jim Blount, Jim Wadsworth and Fairfax Mackernan.

Quarter and semi-final matches in the tourney were held last night and the finals are slated for tonight. Entries include contestants from Durham, Raleigh, Chapel Hill and Burlington.

The tournament in Durham brings the season to a close for the campus badminton group, which met each Wednesday evening in Woollen gym.

Carolina Stickmen Hold Initial Drill

Not a bit daunted by the slippery condition of the turf, the Carolina lacrosse team went through its first workout of the season yesterday afternoon.

With about 15 men on hand, the session was devoted to teaching new prospects how to handle the stick and general principles of the game.

Among the experienced stickmen are John Anderson, Bob Kavanaugh and Fred Wright, who have all played prep school and college ball.

Although no schedule exists as yet, the men are anxious to revive this fine game and have the backing of the Monogram club in their pursuit to be recognized as a sport at Carolina.

Plans call for the squad to go to Durham to the Duke clinic, which will run from April 3 to April 7.

Trinity Encounter Erased from Slate

A blanket of white established a precedent in the history of Carolina sports yesterday when a Tar Heel athletic event was cancelled because of snow, the first such incident that old-time fans can recall.

The cancellation wipes the clash with Trinity college of Hartford, Conn. completely off the schedule since the touring baseballers move on to Davidson for a tussle with the Wildcats this afternoon. Opening game for the Tar Heels will now come Monday afternoon, weather permitting, when another travelling team, Michigan State, provides the opposition.

In the absence of a regular contest, the Carolina players went through a short practice session yesterday afternoon with the main emphasis pointing to throwing drills. Most of the members of the mound corps took advantage of the sunny weather to loosen up their pitching arms and Coach Walter Rabb, in charge of the team in the absence of Coach Bunn Hearn, appeared pleased with their progress.

If the blue skies can hold out for another day, Coach Rabb expects to hold a brief intra-squad game at Emerson field this afternoon with all members of the team seeing action. What was expected to be the starting lineup in yesterday's tilt will compose the blue team while their understudies will make up the white outfit. Jack Couch and Ray Blair will hurl for the blues with George Whitted, Bob Wilkes and Harold Sharpe on the mound for the whites.

Players who will probably see action are Buck Hardee, Jack Brasington, Cookie DiChiara, Freddy Ryan, Dub Johnson, Jack Hussey, Kenny Black and Harry Beason for the blues and Jim Hayworth, Sid Varney, Bob Mitchell, Dallas Branch, Walt Kirk, Jim Hamilton, Buster Stevenson, Emmett Cheek, Bo Hackney, Red Fahey, Tom Clayton, and Ott Evans for the whites.

Movies, lectures and scrimmages will feature this big event. The gathering was originally scheduled to get under way today but due to weather and other obstructions it had to be moved back.

The practice routine calls for another session on Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock on the far end of Fetzer Field.

STARTING HIS 20th season as tennis mentor at Carolina, Coach John Kenfield sends his 1947 netmen against Yale this afternoon. A Tar Heel victory will mark the 268th win for Kenfield-coached teams during his long stay at Carolina.

Linksmen Resume Practice Sessions For Opening Clash

Having remained idle for the past few days due to the current influx of bad weather, Coach Chuck Erickson's Tar Heel golf squad is planning to resume practice today, weather permitting.

Snow and rain have made the Hope Valley Country club course unplayable and the linksmen, who meet the VPI golfers on Monday in their first encounter of the season, will have to double their efforts to remain in top form.

The locals can boast of a strong squad this year with an abundance of good reserves. Among them are Bob Cox, Tar Heel football star, and Dan Nyimicz, who was one of the mainstays of the junior varsity basketball team. Both have shown up well in the pre-season practice sessions.

The main hopes of the team rest on the shoulders of steady Harvie Ward and Dick Doeschler, who have played consistently good golf since early in the year. Ward, who hails from Tarboro, has been particularly impressive in his workouts to date. Doeschler has developed rapidly to work his way up to the number two position.

The rest of the squad consists of Ed Bailey and Ed Ashby, both of whom are returning lettermen, Mason Rankin, Mike Nolan and Ray Taylor.

Seixas Choice For Top Berth

Remaining Starters Still Not Decided

By Bob Goldwater

Encouraged by a weather forcast of fair and warmer, Carolina's 1947 tennis crew held final workouts yesterday in preparation for their opening clash of the season this afternoon against Yale's powerful netters. Starting time is 2 o'clock.

Greatly handicapped by adverse skies during the past week, the locals are far behind in pre-season work, but Coach John Kenfield is hoping that yesterday's drill, the first in four days, might be sufficient to provide a triumph. The two teams meet again Monday and Tuesday.

Despite a possibility that 13 matches, nine singles and four doubles, might be played, the veteran mentor, starting his 20th campaign as a Tar Heel coach, is still uncertain of his opening lineup, with the exception of the number one slot. That berth will be occupied by Vic Seixas, 16th ranking amateur in the nation's rankings and Carolina's hope for national collegiate honors this year.

Singles Assignment

Coach Kenfield declined to name the remaining singles starters, being content to list only the possible players from whom he will choose. Alphabetically, his list includes Heath Alexander, Sam Daniels, Stan Gruner, Bert Ingram, Jack Kenfield, Ray Morris, Jim Nicholson, Charlie Rice, Don Skakle, Dick Swigart, Clark Taylor, Tom Wadden and Duke Wilder. Daniels, Gruner, Ingram, Nicholson, Skakle, Swigart and Wilder are returning lettermen from last season, while Morris and Wadden gained monograms in previous years.

In the doubles assignments, the coach revealed the starting array in the event of four tussles in this department. Seixas and Morris, fellow Philadelphians, will occupy the top berth, Taylor and Rice will pair for the number two slot, Skakle and Nicholson will form the third duo, and Gruner and Kenfield will handle the fourth assignment.

Carolina and Yale have met 17 times in the past, with the Tar Heels emerging victorious on 15 occasions.

Special Rehearsal Of Men's Glee Club To Be this Morning

The Men's Glee club of the University will have a special rehearsal and business meeting today at 10 o'clock in Hill hall to elect officers for the 1947-48 season and to rehearse for the spring concert to be given Tuesday night at 8:30 in Hill hall.

Under the direction of Professor Paul Young the Glee club has become what is perhaps the largest student organization on the Carolina campus; being composed of over 156 men, carefully selected on their ability as singers and musicians. During the last quarter century the club has toured all the eastern section of the country, given several concerts in New York, and completed a European tour. Plans are now under way for a tour of the United States next year.

Danville, Va., March 28—(UP)—The local radio station didn't mean to but it gave the school kids an extra holiday when a bright youngster called up and asked the radio station to announce that there'd be no school because of the heavy snow. The station did not check the report and went on the air with the announcement.

School officials couldn't help it once the word got around, and of course the students didn't show up. However, school superintendent G. I. Johnson followed up with another announcement—Easter hollidays will be one day shorter this year.

Render It Liable

"Would anyone teaching or printing Jefferson's statement on the Right of Revolution—on which the Puritan revolution of 1640-50 in England, the Bloodless Revolution of 1688 and the American Revolution were at least partly based—render himself liable under this act?"

Expressing himself strongly opposed to communism, Dr. Woodhouse stated, "I believe in democracy and do not think communism any answer to or remedy for our mistakes in trying to advance democracy."

Union.

"The Invalid," another Laboratory production, will be presented in Graham Memorial tonight at 8:30 and tomorrow night at 7 o'clock. Not only will Moliere's bawdy comedy be given in modern dress, but the audience will see it from three sides. Because of this arrangement, every actor is forever conscious of stage movement and action, whether in the center of attention or not. All performances will be free to the public.

Moliere wrote "The Imaginary Invalid" for his own acting troup in whoch he starred. It concerns the head of a family (Buddy Westover) who imagines himself on the constant verge of death. The worldy-wise maid (Lynn Leonard) tries to set him right about himself as well as his daughter's (Barbara Bramble) romance and his wife's (Lois Warnshuis) plot to tkae off with his money as well as his crooked lawyer (David Hooks). From the beginning to the end, "The Imiginary Invalid" is designed to bring, according to Lynn Leonard, "As many laughs as the audience can stand."

APPROPRIATIONS

ceived $6,485,333 for permanent improvements and $3,177,600 was alloted to WCUNC.

Legislation Complete

Although legislative action has been completed on the appropriations and the bill has only to be ratified by the governor, there is no indication as to when actual construction of improvements will be started.

Under the terms of the law, funds will not become available until the governor and the Advisory Budget commission shall have determined the time best suited, in their opinion, for the state to secure the greatest benefits from expenditure of these appropriations and shall have approved the date for starting these projects.

A possible joker in the medical school plan is the condition that the state funds can not be used unless one-third of the cost of the project, or $1,500,000, is furnished from federal funds under the Hill-Burton act for medical aid. At present, however, it is generally believed that the federal funds will be made available without trouble.

and winds up his review of it with: "This small book of his, will help to force that decision (whether to take up writing) into the clear.

"Beginning writers," he says, "spend a good deal of time mooning. It is so tempting to fill notebooks with snatches of observation, with half-formed plots, with couplets which are hoping to grow. In the notebook (or when he walks for thought or chats with his roommate) the beginning is constantly projecting what he lacks the facility to finish. The best cure for this is a deadline (even the fortnightly delivery of a theme) and a mentor critical, kindly and objective.

"The great teachers exert their influence by suggestion. At Harvard, Dean Briggs used to open every session of his English by quoting some of the commonest and most laughable mistakes which he had culled from the pages of Dickens and Kipling, Conrad or Sinclair Lewis. There they were—the common fallibilities even in our best. The precept glanced against your mind as it passed. But it made a dent."

NEWS BRIEFS

Mine Holiday Is Condemned

Lewis Walkout Order Called Grandstanding

Washington, March 29—(UP)—A spokesman for J. A. Krug, the Secretary of the Interior, said tonight, "John L. Lewis planned to have a strike on April 1, and this is his way of doing it." That so far, is the only even semi-official comment on the mine leader's announced decision to call his soft coal miners off the job for one week, starting at midnight Monday and continuing to midnight Sunday, April 6.

Lewis says the six-day period is to be a time of mourning for the 111 miners killed in the Centralia, Ill., mine explosion. Whether by coincidence or design, the stoppage is set for the exact time Lewis had planned to call a strike against the government until the Supreme court stopped him.

"Grandstand Play"

Meanwhile, John D. Battle, the Executive Secretary of the National Coal association, says the order is an exhibition of "Lewis' tyrranical and absolute power over the miners and the nation's fuel." He calls the move a "grandstand play." Senator Joseph J. Ball of Minnesota echoes the mine executive. He says, "This demonstrates again the kind of complete dictatorial power this mas has."

Centralia Death Toll Reaches Total of 111

Centralia, Ill., March 29—(UP)—The bodies of the last 17 miners still missing in the Centralia disaster have been found, raising the final total of deaths to 111. Thirty-one of the 142 men trapped came out alive.

Washington, March 29—(UP)—Former Senator Burton K. Wheeler, who gained national prominence in investigating the Teapot Dome oil scandal, has been asked to aid in a current oil inquiry. The Senate War Investigating committee has retained Wheeler to help in the study of Navy oil purchases in the middle east.

Porter Asks Liberals To Support Greek Aid

Washington, March 29—(UP)—The head of President Truman's recent economic mission to Greece, Paul Porter, urges anti-Communist liberals to support the Greek aid program. But he says we should insist on what he calls "obvious reforms" in the Athens government.

Strong Navy Urged By Admiral Halsey

St. Louis, March 29—(UP)—Admiral Halsey says America must keep the strongest Navy in the world until other strong nations prove that disarmament can work.

Truman May Ask Funds For Loyalty Program

Washington, March 29—(UP)—President Truman is expected to ask Congress within ten days or less for funds to finance his proposed new loyalty investigation of federal workers.

C.I.O. Public Workers To Fight Truman Order

Washington, March 29 — (UP) — The CIO United Public Workers, which claims to represent 100,000 federal, state and municipal employees, announces it will fight President Truman's order to eliminate subversive from government payrolls. The union plan includes community mass meetings and a march on Washington.

WEATHER TODAY

Cloudy. Occasional rains.

Professor Frank W. Hanft of the University law school will conduct a class devoted to the candid consideration of the elements of Christian faith. Plans call for Professor Hanft's class to meet in Gerrard hall every Monday evening from 7 to 7:50 o'clock. No preregistration being required, all interested students are invited to appear at the first session which will meet tomorrow evening. Particularly those whose relation to religion is chiefly negative or one of indifference are especially urged to attend.

Princeton Dean To Speak Here At Convocation

Topic of Gauss Talk Is Human Traditions

Christian Gauss, dean emeritus of Princeton university, will address the first University Convocation of the spring quarter Wednesday morning, April 9, on the subject, "The City of Man."

The address will discuss the revolutionary nature of this period and the need of bringing social and political thinking into line with the fundamental ethical concepts in the "humane tradition." University classes will be suspended for the 11 o'clock hour in order that the student body and faculty may attend the convocation.

Dean for Many Years

Before his retirement from active service in 1945, Dean Gauss was for many years Dean of the College and Professor of romance languages at Princeton university.

He has also been especially interested in the problems of international and intercultural relations. In recognition of his distinct achievements as a scholar and teacher of romance languages and literature he was awarded a knighthood in the French Legion of Honor.

Wrote More Books

Besides the books in this field and on college life he is the author of "Why We Went to War" (1918), and "A Primer for Tomorrow," in addition to many magazine articles and contributions to collaborative works. He is currently the president of the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa.

Modern Art Show To Open in Person This Afternoon

An exhibit entitled "Modern Art in Advertising," a collection of more than 100 original paintings and drawings by 50 contemporary artists, most of them with international reputations, will open in Person hall art gallery today and continue through April 25.

All of the works in the exhibitions were commissioned by the Container Corporation of America for use in its national advertising, a program said to be one of the most progressive art programs in the United States.

This afternoon, beginning at 4:30 an open house marking the formal opening of the exhibit will be held in Person hall to which the public is invited. Several guests from the Container Corporation of America will be present.

The exhibit is expected to be of great interest to those interested in marketing, advertising and art in advertising.

Men's Glee Club Will Appear In First Concert of Quarter

The University Men's Glee Club, under the direction of Paul Young will present its annual spring concert Tuesday evening at 8:30 in Hill hall.

The 160 members of the Glee club have given programs in Raleigh, Winston-Salem, and Greensboro this year, and are scheduled to give other programs in North Carolina and Virginia this quarter.

John Ellis, pianist, will play Mozart's "Fantasia in D Minor," and Edgar Vom Lehn, baritone, will sing "Pretty Lady," Leporello's "Catalogue Aria" from "Don Giovanni," by Mozart.

Accompanists for the concert will be John O'Steen, William Waters, and Clyde Wade.

Tickets may be purchased from the "Y" or from members of the Glee club. Tickets dated March 11, the originally planned date of the concert, will be honored.

AVC to Discuss Greek Aid Plan

Will Also Discuss Communism Tuesday

Chapel Hill members of the American Veterans committee will discuss the Truman proposal to aid Greece and the current move to outlaw the Communist party when the group assembles at 7:30 Tuesday evening in the Presbyterian church for its first spring quarter meeting.

Walter Spearman, assistant professor of journalism and AVC southern regional chairman, will report to the organization on the results of his trip to New York over the spring holidays to attend the AVC National Planning committee meeting.

Discuss Subsistence Hike

Also on the agenda will be further discussion of the current drive to raise the amount of GI subsistence. Last quarter AVC and UVA conducted a campus-wide cost-of-living poll which revealed that most veterans find the present allowance inadequate. The group plans to continue work on this project throughout this quarter.

"New members will be very welcome," said Chairman Ben Rouzie. "We would be especially happy to have those people who dislike veterans' organizations attend because we believe they would be surprised to see that we don't fit the traditional pattern. Any veteran of the armed forces or merchant marine is eligible. This includes women veterans. Of course casual visitors are always welcome too."

Last Showing of 'Imaginary Invalid'

Pictured are members of the cast of the Laboratory theatre's production of Moliere's farce, "The Imaginary Invalid." The play will be shown for the last times tonight in the main lounge of Graham Memorial. Two performances will be given, one at 7 o'clock, and another at nine. Playing to a packed house last evening, the play boasted a cast including Beddy Westover, Lynn Leonard, Barbara Bramble, Lois Warnshuis, and David Hooks.

The Laboratory theatre was formed to take care of the increasing number of Dramatic Art majors who do not usually get a chance to appear in regular Playmaker productions. Since Graham Memorial started sponsoring the productions this year, playgoers on the campus have shown a high degree of enthusiasm over the work of the group.

It is the policy of the Laboratory theatre to put on plays which are original, or seldom done on the stage.

Says actress Lynn Leonard of the Moliere work, "It is designed to bring as many laughs as the audience can stand."

Townsend to Instruct Dancing Classes Again

Bill Townsend, special student and former New York and Miami Beach dancing instructor, will teach the third in a series of eight weeks dancing classes starting Tuesday evening, Dr. Oliver K. Cornwell, director of the physical education department, said today.

The Townsend dancing classes will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7 to 9 p. m. with the first hour being devoted to beginning students. Such dances as the waltz, foxtrot, jitterbug, and rhumba, will be taught, with special attention being given to the rhumba, samba, Viennese waltz, and tango on Thursday evenings.

The new Fred Astaire style of dancing will be taught to the advanced students, a step learned by Townsend while studying at the Astaire studios in New York during the spring holidays.

The classes in Woollen gymnasium are free to all students and are a part of the regular physical education program at the University, stated Dr. Cornwell.

End of the Line

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Lion soon may have no rival. For the famed, and infamous, Line clan on this campus soon will be well nigh extinct. And it is with pardonable pride that the Daily Tar Heel pats its own back for this approaching Great Day. Perhaps the student body will forgive us for this arm-breaking undertaking. Since our failings invariably are brought to our attention—and for this we are pleased so we may correct our errors—we feel that we are entitled to ladle editorial praise upon ourselves when it is due.

But the truth of the matter is that as a result of a recent DTH editorial suggesting the issuance of books as soon as veterans have their class cards, the Booketeria is investigating the plan with the intent of adopting it as soon as one major obstacle is eliminated.

Only difficulty now facing the officials is the question of how to insure the return of books by students who may receive class cards and then, for some unforseen reason, be unable to return to school.

Again the Daily Tar Heel offers suggestions for eliminating this problem. In fact, alternate plans may be considered by Booketeria officials.

If the officials wish to operate on a basis of faith, each veteran may be required to sign a statement upon receiving his books stating that he will return the volumes in the mail if he does not return.

Should this plan seem unbusinesslike to the Booketeria, there should be no objection to having the veterans who draw books prior to the beginning of a quarter leave a deposit covering costs of the books, this deposit to be returned to the veteran upon his return to school. Naturally he would receive a receipt upon making the deposit and return it when he received his money back after returning to school.

The first of these plans definitely would be based on good faith between the Booketeria and the veterans. While it may not be a sound business plan, there would seem to be no reason for its failure to work adequately.

The second of these plans would entail more work, red tape that is, for veterans and the Booketeria. But it would be spread out over a long period of time. In fact, the veteran could get his money returned at any propitious time after a new quarter begins.

Frankly, the Daily Tar Heel heartily advocates the first plan. The second is merely suggested as an alternative should the Booketeria officials dislike the first.

H. R. Ritchie said Thursday night at the University Veterans association meeting that this is the only obstacle to the plan of issuing books in the quarter prior to that for which the books will be needed. If this is true, then it, too, is now eliminated.

Only one line will be left. And everyone has to eat.

Worthy of Thought

Students going through the registration line last week were all issued pamphlets entitled "A Special Class in Christian Belief." Nine out of every 10 pamphlets were discarded by the students almost immediately—even before they were read.

Certainly, the student body is not so well-versed in the elements of Christian faith that its members can afford to treat the subject so lightly.

The special class starts tomorrow night at seven o'clock in Gerrard hall. It will be held every Monday evening thereafter and will be conducted by Frank W. Hanft of the University law school.

The class will be conducted with special attention to the deep-seated religious doubts characteristic of college students. Discussion will be aimed to answer questions pertaining to the validity of the Christian belief.

Those interested in the matter are invited to attend, but the class will be of still more value to those whose attitude toward religion is one of indifference. One hour of your time a week might turn the indifference into understanding.

Scribe Flays Latest Policy Of President

By Manny Margolis

History has predestined the so-called "Truman Doctrine" to failure. Whether or not the policy eventuates in cataclysmic failure which quicksands half the globe in its wake, the outcome remains the same. The policy is doomed to futility.

Why so? Why can't this Trumanesque mosaic hold together? History provides the answer, namely, that you cannot successfully combat a socio-economic idea or ideology such as communism with the dollar and the sword. You can only combat it with bread and with a BETTER idea.

No people can be bought. No thought or belief can be "outlawed." The former must be fed and granted the basic human freedoms. The latter must be challenged in the dynamic of social change.

This nation is still licking its wounds from the recent mammoth world srtuggle against Fascism. Numerous veterans still bleed, limp, or are "war-fatigued." It is a time, as a great American President expressed it 83 years ago, "to bind up the nation's wounds; to care for him who shall have borne the battle . . . to do all which may achieve a just and lasting peace among ourselves, and with all nations."

It is at such a time that our political time-server in the White House has decided to undertake his crusade against communism at home and abroad. He is flirting with want and war. He is ushering in what Henry Wallace has aptly termed "a century of fear."

What the ill-named and ill-fated Truman Doctrine boils down to is this: we stand committed to intervene in the internal affairs of any nation, small or large, which is in danger of moving "to the left" and/or capable of being communist-dominated.

A big order? An impossible one, more likely. It is a WORLD ORDER, American brand. Today it is Greece and Turkey. Newsweek Magazine promises Spain is next. Dean Acheson has placed Korea on the list. Add to them Portugal, China, Argentina, and the puppet nations of the Near and Middle East.

This doctrine can do nothing but make an utter mockery of democracy. It can only undermine our position as a spokesman of free peoples. For it is a notorious fact that neither Greece nor Turkey are free nations in any sense, and to talk of "preserving democracy" in such countries is to make a sham of a revered ideal.

Secretary William Clayton has candidly admitted that 250 millions of the proposed 400 million dollar loan will be channelled to the military forces of Greece and Turkey as a "prerequisite" to domestic needs. He conceded still further that 44 per cent of the Turkish Government's present budget is being spent on its military forces.

John Sophianopoulis, Greek Foreign Minister following the Greek liberation, stated on March 24 that the present Greek Government has been conducting a bloody "reign of terror" against its political opponents.

N. Y. Times editorial columnist W. H. Lawrence reports from Salonika: "There is little hope of lasting peace in Greece without considerably more bloodshed so long as the present government is in power and follows its present policies which, in the opinion of this correspondent, inevitably will INCREASE the forces of resistance.

"The Government policies . . . have brought hardship to many villages whose residents, formerly pro-Government or neutral, now openly declare their opposition . . .

"While the fighting continues, Greek political life must be unstable and funds spent for rehabilitation largely wasted."

And yet, the Truman Doctrine seems almost assured of support in the Congress. The present communist hysteria, which has been crescendoed in this country so effectively by our politicians, our press, and our radio, has guaranteed confirmation. James Reston put the issue quite succinctly in Thursday's Times, stating that "if (the opposition to the Doctrine) speaks out frankly against the bill, it is charged with being pro-Soviet; and if it even tries to amend the specific proposals in any fundamental way, it takes the risk of advancing communism and repudiating the President."

"My dears, socialism is passe. In my circle it went out with gin rummy."

I'd Rather Be Right....

Sectionalism's Ugly Spectre Again Rears Its Shaggy Head

By Earl Heffner

Philosophy is too weighty a term to describe the infantile mental wanderings of a University student who exposed his kindergarten brain last Thursday night when members of the University Veterans association and South Building officials were seeking an understanding on problems of registration and of operations of the Booketeria.

This student—to go unnamed herein—with a masterful intellectual stroke exposed the crux of difficulties being faced with the stupid allegation that "too many Yankees have been admitted to the school."

Further, stated the neophyte genius, these Yankees didn't have any good Northern schools to attend so they came down here. And now, with their radicalism, they are trying to ruin this school.

Sectionalism! Crass sectionalism.

And this from a veteran who has forgotten that thousands of his buddies died because a few power-drunk little men held similar small ideas. Super race. Selfishness. Narrow-minded bigotry.

Perhaps this is indicative of the conservative trend being observed by many people that is springing into life throughout these United States.

Now, at a time when super weapons have narrowed the world into a tight little ball, when peace through internationalism—one world and tolerance—seems possible on the historical horizon, it is discouraging to liberals to learn that before they can strive to eliminate dogmatic nationalism, they must resume the fight against sectionalism.

The individual rights article of our Constitution guarantees every American citizen equal rights in each of the 48 states. In brief, this means that a New Yorker can come to North Carolina and enjoy the same privileges of the native Tar Heel, that the Georgian can go to Pennsylvania and live in equality with the man from Philadelphia or Allentown, that the Texan can go to San Francisco without the use of a passport or visa.

En principe, this is the American way. It has been called Democracy.

Too, there is the Golden Rule of religion, "Do Unto Others as You Would Have Them Do Uuto You."

Many Southern boys are studying in Northern schools that also are experiencing difficulties with registrations. Are these traveling Rebels to blame for this difficulty?

Actually, in the cold illuminating light of logic, the arguments of this sectionalistic veteran display their fallaciousness.

If we are to ban Yankees from the University, we must ban students from all states other than North Carolina. If we ban all of these students, we must admit all North Carolina boys who seek admittance until the present enrollment is equalled. There would be no excuse not to do this.

Therefore, if we remain the same as now, or if we make the assinine change, we still will have about 7,000 students. And the registration system is a machine unable to recognize the sectionalism of a student.

The charge that these Yankees have no good Northern schools to attend is equally stupid.

Columbia, Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Ohio State, NYU, MIT, Dartmouth, Williams, Antioch, Brown, ad infinitum.

It was unfortunate that this political aspirant failed to recognize the irrelevance of his argument. It is more unfortunate that he spoke at all.

When this man began discussing sectionalism, he did so at a time when registration problems were being discussed. How our petty individual was able to work sectionalism into this subject is an unfathomable mystery.

But his only accomplishment was to show the limits of his own vision, a method of thought that was supposed to have gone out with bustles on women's skirts.

And the Model T Ford.

Art Story....

Professor's Portrait Has Vivid History

By Harry Snowden

The University is fortunate in possessing a very large collection of art works. In 1943 Dr. Arthur E. Bye, a noted painter and restorer from Philadelphia, came here to restore a number of paintings.

While Dr. Bye was here he restored one painting which most of the students have probably never seen. It is a self-portrait by Dr. Jesse D. Graves and hangs in the secretary's office in the University Library. Bye repaired four holes in the canvas so that today one can scarcely distinguish where these holes were.

This portrait has a rather interesting history. But, since we inmates of this great educational institution have already been burdened with stories concerning every building, monument, and tree stump on the campus I hesitate—but not for long—to weigh you down with another tale of tradition. However, hoping that it will not prove to be the proverbial straw, I throw the weight of this story on your shoulders, and disclaim any responsibility for the consequences.

In 1837 a young man by the name of Jesse D. Graves came here to the University to study, intending to become a doctor. However, the urge to paint became too much for him, and in 1838 he went to Paris, then the art center of the world, to study painting. There, in 1845 he completed the self-portrait which the library now owns.

One evening, a few days after finishing the portrait, he was settled comfortably in an easy chair reading a book when the sound of loud voices and a banging on his studio door startled him.

"Entrez, entrez!" he shouted, laying aside his book, and rising from the comfortable chair.

The door swung open with a bang revealing four of his cronies leaning rather heavily upon their walking sticks. It was quite obvious they had all spent the evening bending their elbows over a bar. Filing noisily into the room they demanded to see this self-portrait which they had heard Graves had finished. Jessie reluctantly unveiled his work and, stepping aside, allowed the four inebriates to gather round. As they eyed the painting critically, looks of displeasure began to creep slowly over their faces. Suddenly one of them raised his cane.

"I don't like it," he cried, and, lurching forward, plunged his stick through the canvas. Before Graves realized what was happening, the other three, professing similar sentiments, followed suit.

Their judgment passed, the four "critics" staggered out into the night.

Shortly afterwards Graves returned to the United States and the study of medicine. He subsequently became a doctor, and established a practice in Randolph county.

Of the portrait, given to the library by Thomas Graves in 1930, Dr. Bye said, "In its forceful design, severely correct draughtsmanship and emphasis on line, it shows the influence of the great French classicist Ingres who was supreme in the art world of Europe at that time."

Tar Heel Netmen Whip Yale, 8-4, In Opener

Baseball, Golf Squads Open Tomorrow

Hearnmen Battle Michigan State

Carolina's baseball nine attempts to play its second opener of the campaign tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock on Emerson field when the Tar Heels run up against an old rival, the touring Michigan State team.

Bolstered by two days of practice following Friday's cancellation with Trinity, the Hearnmen will be seeking revenge against the Spartans for the two lickings that the Midwesterners handed the locals last year in the first two games of the season. Michigan State triumphed by 5-3 and 3-2.

Starting Team

The same starting lineup that was to open for Carolina Friday was named by Assistant Coach Walter Rabb as the probable team that will take the field for the first few innings tomorrow. This means that Frank Robinson, rookie hurler, and Buck Hardee will handle the battery assignments, Jack Brasington, Cookie DiChiara, Rip Ryan and Dub Johnson will fill the infield berths, and Harry Beason, Whitey Black and Jack Hussey will patrol the outer gardens.

Monk Whiteheart, mainstay of the 1946 mound corps, is the choice to relieve Robinson after four or five frames. Other players who may be called on for action in the two-team system that will be employed are Jim Hayworth, Sid Varney, Bob Mitchell, Dallas Branch, Walt Kirk, Jim Hamilton, Buster Stevenson, Emmett Cheek, Ott Evans, Red Fahey and Bo Hackney.

The probable starting batting order: DiChiara, 2b; Beason, lf; Johnson, 3b; Black, cf; Hussey, rf; Ryan, ss; Brasington, 1b; Hardee, c; Robinson, p.

Record Breakers....

Carolina Trackmen Dominate Gator State Relay Carnival

Gainesville, Fla., March 29.—Setting two new Carolina records plus two Florida Relay marks, the powerful Tar Heel track team opened its 1947 outdoor campaign here today by dominating the relay carnival.

Big Bob Seligman led the way, setting a meet mark in the discus throw with a heave of 143 feet, 2¼ inches, which also bettered the University record in the event. Seligman set a University mark in the shot put by winning with a toss of 48 feet, 1¾ inches.

Chunk Simmons set a meet mark by copping the high hurdles in the fine time of 15 flat. Simmons also took second in the javelin throw with 176 feet, 2 inches.

In the mile team race Carolina emerged victorious with Jack Milne taking second place, Jimmy Miller, third and Julian Mackenzie sixth, for a total low score of 11 points. Tim Carley of Auburn won the event in the record time of 4:25.3.

In the high jump, Bill Rowe of Mercer captured first place with a leap of 6 feet, 3⅞ inches to establish a new meet record. Jack Moody of Carolina and Henry Gardner of Florida tied for second with jumps of 6 feet, 3 inches.

The pole vault saw Carolina's Norm McLeod tie with Jim Korick of Tennessee at 12 feet, 9 inches.

Linksmen Oppose VPI Aggregation

By Roy Holsten

Completing their final practice sessions yesterday afternoon, the Carolina golf team takes on the strong VPI link squad over the Hope Valley country club course in Durham tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Inclement weather conditions forced the Tar Heel golfers to call a halt to their warmup drills earlier in the week and Coach Chuck Erickson welcomed the opportunity to resume the all-important workouts.

Little information is known about the Tech golfers other than the fact that four of the squad are returning lettermen. The Gobblers have traditionally come up with a strong team and this year's edition should be no exception.

Starting Team

Coach Erickson has given the nod to Harvie Ward, Dick Doeschler, and Ed Bailey as probable starters in tomorrow's tilt. The other three team members will be chosen from a list that includes Ray Taylor, Ed Ashby, Mike Nolan, Bob Cox, Mason Rankin and Dan Nyimicz.

Ward and Doeschler have been most impressive in the pre-season trials, both displaying excellent form in their driving and around the green work. However, not to be underrated, is the playing of returning letterman Ed Bailey, who has been outstanding in his consistency. Bailey has improved over last year's game and is fast becoming one of the standout performers.

Pope, Burns Reach Finals in Badminton

Mark Pope and Miss Francis Burns of the University were finalists in their respective divisions of the State badminton tournament last night.

Pope reached the finals by defeating Cole of Raleigh, 17-15, 15-9. Miss Burns downed Lib Hayes of Raleigh, 11-3, 11-4.

Other Carolina entrants in doubles competition were all eliminated in the semi-final play Friday night at the Durham City Armory.

Seixas Upset by Ray of Eli In Top Match of Afternoon

By Bob Goldwater

The cold news telling that Carolina's net team opened its 1947 campaign yesterday with an 8-4 triumph over Yale fails to express the hot time witnessed by the largest audience ever to view a match on the local courts.

Estimated at close to 2,000 fans, the crowd came for expressly one purpose, that of watching the nation's 16th ranking amateur, Vic Seixas, in action. The assemblage thinned immediately after the Tar Heel ace suffered a stirring three-set upset before the strokes of the Eli standout, Rollor Ray, New England intercollegiate champion last year. The scores were 6-1, 5-7, 6-3.

To the spectators, it mattered little how the rest of the match progressed. With all eyes focused on the number one court, Ray galloped through the first set and assumed a 3-1 advantage in the second before Seixas began his challenge, which resulted in a 3-all deadlock. Ray broke through Seixas' service and held his own to gain a 5-3 lead. And then followed the hot time that held the crowd tense with each stroke!

Match Point

Leading at match-point on three occasions, the Eli star finally dropped the ninth and tenth games to even the struggle at 5-all. Heartened by this maneuver, Seixas came through for another pair of games to capture the second set. But that was as far as he got, despite jumping to a 2-1 margin in the final set. Ray, playing what his mentor, Coach Johnny Skillman, described as "Rollor's very best brand of tennis," reeled off three straight games to gain the upper hand, 4-2. After Vic held his service in the seventh game, the Eli lad, a 19-year-old sophomore, put the finishing touches on an outstanding performance by capturing two more games and the match.

Play Tomorrow

The two stars are slated to hook up in another hot duel again tomorrow and Tuesday when the two teams meet in the second and third tilts in a three-match series. Starting time tomorrow is 3 o'clock.

In the other singles encounters which gave Carolina a 5-3 lead as competition entered the doubles engagements, Clark Taylor registered straight 6-4 sets over Irv Dorfman, in another tight tilt at the number two assignment. Carolina's number three player, Jim Nicholson, fell before John Moses, 6-2, 6-2, and Stan Gruner dropped 6-4, 6-4 sets to Jack Geller in the number five battle for Yale's other singles wins.

Remaining Scores

The remaining clashes: Charlie Rice of Carolina downed Carl Badger, 6-0, 6-1, at number four; Jack Kenfield defeated Linton Baldwin, 6-4, 6-3, at number six; Don Skakle triumphed over Miles Suchin, 6-4, 6-3, at number seven; Heath Alexander registered a 6-3, 6-2 win over Bruce Bayne at the eighth slot.

In doubles: Ray and Moses over Seixas and Kenfield, 6-1, 6-0; Taylor and Rice over Dorfman and Badger, 6-3, 8-6; Nicholson and Skakle over Suchin and Bayne, 6-1, 6-0; Gruner and Alexander over Baldwin and Gellar, 6-3, 6-4.

Track Meet Tomorrow

The varsity track team will engage in a regular dual track meet with the freshman team, coached by Hank Gifford, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Gifford is anxious for all freshmen in school interested in track to start working out so that a schedule can be drawn up.

Dr. William P. Maddox, director of the Foreign Service institute and chief of the Division of Training of the Department of State, will be in Chapel Hill Tuesday to address the classes in American foreign policy and current problems of international relations conducted by the political science department, and to hold conferences with students interested in foreign service as a career.

Graham Orders Liquidation Of All Liberal Faculty Members

Tom Eller Proposes Collective Farm Bill In Legislature

Then Tossed Out Of Gerrard Hall By Warren Order

After introducing a bill to establish collective farms on all property now belonging to fraternities, Tom Eller, "the red hound of the Student Legislature," was forcibly ejected from last night's meeting of the campus law-making assembly.

The order to boot Eller from the hall was issued by Speaker Charlie Warren, so incensed at the proposal that he called Eller "a bounder who probably wears red underwear and has borscht for breakfast."

Eller proposed the measure in the form of an amendment to an amendment to a bill recommending that all students owning more than one convertible be liquidated. Said the Student party nominee for president, "Half of the land owned by fraternities is being used for mint beds anyway."

Give Added Flavor

It was this statement about the main ingredient to a good julep that brought pin-striped Warren to his feet. "You have no right," shouted the speaker, "to accuse fraternities of misusing the rich soil of our state. Mint, as everyone knows, is essential to give added flavor to a glass of iced tea."

Eller made casual reference to the effect that the taste buds of most fraternity men were so liquor-soaked that they "couldn't tell the difference between iced tea and battery acid."

It was then that Warren gave the order for seargant-at-arms James Wallace to "toss Eller out of the nearest exit."

Eller Unpeaceable

Eller didn't go peaceably. He fought hard, and his turtle-necked sweater was torn in the scuffle. Finally, Wallace's efforts were successful, and Eller landed in the rain soaked street outside Gerrard hall.

In a voice that sounded a mile away, Eller self-styled voice of the working students shouted, "The Kremlin will hear about this."

Drinking Contest Highlights Court Tomorrow Night

The Bolshevist Student union, through its local soviet leader, Quietflowsda Don, has challenged the Canterbury club (so named in honor of our noble foreign admirer, Hewlett Johnson) to a Vodka drinking contest in the Yasha Memorial court at midnight tomorrow. The Y court festivities will include drinking out of ofratory plates and singing "The Lady in Red" while chewing on bachlavar.

Young Marxists Communist association secretary general, Beel Poteatski will head a committee of judges, including Phillippe Russe, whose new edition of the writings of Tolstoy is off the red hot presses, and Captain Casket, censorship czar, and author of a tome entitled "A Free Press Pays Through the Nose."

Bulletin!

Word was received late last night that a body was seen swinging around in South building's belfry in place of the usual bell. It was suspected that the corpse was that of Bill Miller, recently publicized capitalist, one of the first victims the cause has singled out for its Spring Purge.

The bell itself was supposed to have been sent to Russia for scrap iron, a martyr to the cause of regimentation.

Margolis Says He Will Run For Grand Praesidium Post

Before a packed house in the Carolina Inn telephone booth, Comrade Manny Margolis scratched his red flannels, decried the fact that the spirit of free love was not as powerful here as in Stalingrad, and announced his independent candidacy for the Grand Praesidium of the Supreme Soviet of the Campus.

COMRADE MARGOLIS

Margolis, who finds the shortage of halivah at Danziger's a serious threat to left wing unity on the campus, bitterly condemned the fact that Cornell footballers were known as the "Big Red team." When, in actuality, he stated, "We have the most powerfully coordinated left wing formation here in Chappell Collitch!" Requesting his audience to move back so that he could expand his chest in the crowded booth, Margolis lamented the divisionist tactics of Max Schulman in making a fool of Yetta Samovar, his current favorite glamor girl.

Spring Purge to Be Subject Of Marx Bread, Water Supper

Comrade Don Broad Releases Propaganda Entailing Prospects of Siberian Summer

The annual Spring purge has been decided upon as the subject for discussion at this weeks bread and water supper of the Young Marxists Communist association. Comrade Don Broad, president of the association, in an interview yesterday, issued the following statement of propaganda, "I expect to see all Party members present on Red Thursday for this supper. Anyone desiring a summer vacation in Siberia need only miss this unimportant affair."

The Young Marxists have openly commended the University for its policy of laying red brick walks, the gutters of which should carry off the flow of blood, which inevitably results from this purge.

Hear Margolis, Lanierovitch

Commissar Lanierovitch, of the Kremlin, and Comrade Manny Margolis, political columnist of the Daily Comrade, will be guests of honor. As both Communists are considered as prime ribs of beef for the coming purge neither is expected to stick to the subject in his speech.

Commissar Lanierovitch hinted today that he will defend his recently invoked system of registering alien students at the Univesity, maintaining that it is thoroughly consistent with Marxian doctrines and that only renegade capitalistic elements here have been speaking against it.

Will Charge Kennedy

Comrade Margolis, according to reliable sources, will level charges against the American Representative Kennedy, who only last Red Thursday criticized Soviet policies and at the same time was so stupid as to disagree with Margolis.

Comrade Broad has also stated that no one will be admitted without a ration card because of the present shortage of bread and water. Blaming capitalist infiltration for this recent shortage, Broad requested all hammers and sickles be checked at the door to avoid trouble.

Recent controversy aroused by presentation of the motion picture, "The Red House," at the local theatre remains unsettled, according to a statement made yesterday by a spokesman for the CBI group investigating the showing of the picture in Chapel Hill.

Termed "a serious menace to all fun-loving reactionaries" by the group, the picture featured Edward G. Robinski and centered about a red house. Its presentation at the local theatre was followed by a display of mass hysteria and a loud demonstration by local "sympathizers."

The word "red" appeared in practically every other sentence throughout the course of the picture," stated "Curly Locks" Holmes, private eye. "No other color was mentioned at any time. This definitely proves the picture was slanted in the wrong direction. In fact, Robinski kept feigning a limp, which kept him leaning to the left at all times. Such pictures cannot be tolerated in any free country."

A local sympathizer with the Communist organization also criticized the production.

"The picture should have been made in technicolor," he said.

Famous Ballet Troupe To Jump Here Tonight

The Ballet Russe de Monte Carrboro will be the feature of the second Student Activity series to be unshelved at Lenin Memorial hall beginning promptly at 8 o'clock this evening.

The world-famous dancers come to Chapel Hill after a successful seven-week tour of the Ukraine following their triumphant season's opener of a split week in Leningrad.

According to Judsch Kinbergski, top Russian dance critic of the Moscow Mirror, "The group is Marvelousch!" All comrades are cordially invited to attend.

President Flayed As 'Reactionary' By Red Officials

By Sam Whitehall

Recently denounced by Moscow as a "reactionary in Red clothing and a traitor to the cause," University President Frank Graham retaliated yesterday by announcing a purge of all faculty members suspected of any liberal tendencies either in their teaching and thinking.

In a dictatorial statement delivered to the faculty, Graham virtualy curtailed all freedom of thought in the University and promised complete cooperation with responsible student leaders in surpressing The Daily Comrade which he termed a "filthy Red rag."

Discharge Woodhouse

Taking a firm stand in favor of the anti-communist bill introduced into the state legislature last week Graham announced that his first act under the new regime would be to discharge political science professor E. J. Woodhouse who criticized in print Sunday certain features of the bill.

The University president stated that effective immediately all prospective faculty members must take an oath of allegiance to the conservative principles expounded by him and that they will at all times be subject to rigid supervision by him. A thorough investigation of all faculty members, present and prospective, will be made by the FBI.

Outlaw Fraternities

Graham also said that he intends to outlaw all campus fraternities for their use of russian tactics in obtaining new members.

Turning to The Daily Comrade, Graham launched a vitriolic attack against editor Duebillski Westenred and his staff. "If in the future this radical daily prints any news item unfavorable to the Administration," Graham proclaimed, "or if its New Order columnists do not whole-hearted ly support every measure undertaken by this administration, I shall personally see that The Daily Comrade is banned from this campus and that its entire staff is expelled from this university and put to work in the salt mines of Siberia for the rest of their natural born lives, Halleluja, Amen."

Victims Promised Fair Trial By Editor of Daily Comrade

Special Ode, 'If He Ain't Red, He's Dead,' Will Commemorate Cleansing of University

By Helen Highwater

Tass Enuff News Agency, April 1, 1947 (Red April)—Chaliapin Hill Editors of The Daily Comrade opened their toothless mouths today to hurl the lie back into the teeth of their persecuters. Opening a week dedicated to "complete liquidation of the back-biting, fascistic, war-mongering, wife-beater reactionaries," Editor Duebillsky Westenred said that the all-out fight would be conducted sanely and fairly. "All those accused of reactionary tendencies and of opposing the party line will be given a fair trial before being executed," he asserted

Ain't Red, He's Dead

Asked if the current purge will be commemorated by any special music, Westenred revealed that party songwriters had just completed a special ode entitled, "If He Ain't Red, He's Dead; If He's Right, Good Night."

Since The Daily Comrade went into the red—ink this year, snipers from the Right have constantly picked off news and edit copy couriers as they made the dangerous evening run to the printshop. Although the opposition has displayed craft and deceit, Daily Comrade guerillas have unearthed the names of those leading the back-biting, fascistic, war-mongering, wife-beater reactionary movement.

Final break came when Comrade Managing Editor Foosk Gidusky made love to the secretary of Rightist Frank Graham. Hopelessly enamoured (love to the proletariat) of Gidusky, the tool of the capitalists handed over complete dossiers on the top fascists heading the anti-Daily Comrade movement.

With the record of these war crimes safely in his hands, Editor Westenred dispatched minions of the OGPUsky to the hovels of the offenders. Named in the indictment which will bring the culprits to trial before a Peoples' Court are Dr. Frank (Fascist) Graham, Dewey (Watch that name in '48) Dorsett, Charles (Child-beater) Warren and Billious Miller.

Even as red cars of the OGPUsky raced through early-morning streets (only one of this type and two midday streets in Chaliapin) the Editor of the Daily Comrade pulled his pants out of the press and told the assembled throng in an off-the-cuff statement, "Garidubish mistanich aernusky bedeoff timoshenko!!" English translation: "Beer is on the house!!"

In a prepared statement handed to the writers of the world, the Daily Comrade promised swift apprehension and punishment of the reactionaries. "We of The Comrade have always been peace-loving. We have committed no overt acts between the couvert. Yet courier after courier has been downed in cold blood. We have sent them out in good faith and they have returned weeks later with a heavy burden. And the thing that we mind most is that our couriers are coeds! There are just about enough of them to go around now!!"

Rouzie Rates Concrete Coat

Police Picks Pain Lamentable Liberal

Ben Rouzie, fiery-thatched chairman of the Chapel Hill chapter of the American Veterans committee, was last night placed in a barrel of cement and suspended from the bell tower by unknown assailants. Painted on the barrel in large letters were the mysterious words, "Bourgeois, counter-revolutionary reactionary."

Rouzie in a statement issued from the depths of the cement as police worked to chip him out, said he had reason to believe the foul play was the work of Communists.

"Only last week I received a letter from Moscow indicating the Kremlin's extreme displeasure with the work of AVC in this country. The letter indicated that if the organization succeeded in gaining any strength it might be effective in its program of securing equal rights and real democracy in the U.S. Then the letter went on to say that if this happened the Communists wouldn't have a leg to stand on and would have to pack up and go back to Russia."

Rouzie paused while the police used a sledge-hammer to remove a particularly recalcitrant piece of cement from his nose.

After six hours of chipping police announced that the final layer of cement could not be removed from Rouzie. It was therefore decided to raise funds to erect him on a pedestal in front of South building as a memorial to the microscopic contingent of liberal veterans of World War II.

This will be major item of business at tonight's meeting of AVC at 7:30 in the Presbyterian church.

Women to Visit Lower Quad Under New Dormitory Rules

Under the vitally active program of our grand leader, Dewsky Dorsettovitch, Juniorivitch, with its ever expanding program of ignoring the student and his academic interests, the Commissar of the Secretariet for Interdormitory Control, Bustlovitch Neyoko, announced that women will be allowed to visit dormitories in the lower volga quad from this great day, a "red letter" day, the commissar stated.

Special rules have been instituted, allowing each resident of lower quad dorms to bring in his mother and sisters. However, each man must show evidence that his mother is over 25 years of age, and he is limited to three sisters a month.

Investigation Proves Foo Foo Jellyroll to Be Commie

Weakened by loss of blood, sleep and appetite following a week of constant pressure from the CBI, Campus Bureau of Investigation, Miss Foo Foo Jellyroll* broke down late last night and admitted that she has been a fellow traveller for lo, these many months.

Miss Jellyroll, who was picked up by one of the local investigators on Redmary lane last week when she dropped her red handkerchief, gave up all pretenses when it was discovered she had been wearing Commie Red lip rouge.

Upon immediate questioning by an alert Daily Comrade reporter, Miss Jellyroll admitted that her first name was Raspberry and that her real last name was Jellyrolloff. She had dropped "off" however to become a red. "I was only pink at first," she whimpered, "but I read too much and became widely-red."

Borscht!

Asked to comment on her current status, the comely Commie said but one word, "Borscht!"

"What did you say," asked one of her guards. She repeated.

Search of Miss Jellyroll's room in the basement of Carrkov dormitory revealed many interesting things, some of which were described by coed members of the investigating committee as

COMRADE JELLYROLL

"unmentionables." They admitted they were pink, however.

Also found in the girl's room were 43 books with red covers, a pair of red slippers, red fingernail polish by the quart, (also several fifths), several cans of "Red Hart" dog food to which investigators attributed the barking tone of Miss Jellyroll's voice) and a reddy to wear gown, with a hammer and scythe down the back.

First in a Series

The arrest of Miss Jellyroll is only the first in a series of investigations which, in the words of Curly Locks Holmes, will "wipe the bloody reds off this campus."

 Credit for use of the name Jellyroll goes to Took-off Hogson.*

Borscht Kitchens

Freedom is dead! The masses have been slain by the brutality of the Hitlerian methods applied by President Frank Graham in his sweeping assault on liberalism. Only when comes the revolution will we again have vodka in every glass and caviar on every plate instead of the impending borscht kitchens.

Heaping black coals upon the liberals heads, he wouldn't honor us with brimstone, the capitalistic fiend struck boldly at the freedom of the press with the threat of censorship for The Daily Comrade. Das Kapital for you! Oppression of the minorities!

Even the wealthy students have risen against the World Order. With threats and intimidations, these spawns of the aristocracy have spoken out against Marx. No more grades may be written in Red. These people must be color blind. Red is the fundamental color in every patriot's heart. Even the blood from our mortally wounded hearts flows red. Not like the haughty blue bloods.

The silk-shirted gentry have slashed at the bodels of liberalism. Progressive professors are to be discharged. The situation isn't even Trumansque. It is all part of the Czarist plan to subject the masses to the will of the aristocracy.

Comardes we must not admit defeat. We must march forward with Lenin and Stalin. Remember, in our darkest hour we may look forward to the inevitable rise of the Red sun.

Down with the dictators. Let's have mo' lasses for the masses.

For Better Marx

There is but one answer to the recent wholesale failures of students, especially those in Difby Harlandov's course in pre-Czarist Russian archaeology. Grades are falling like panzer divisions around Stalingrad, and the only solution is:

MORE AND BETTER MARX!

We can't emphasize the above fact too strongly, but again we say:

MARX IS THE ANSWER!

We're not talking about Harpo, Zeppo or Chico, but Karl, whose works will soon be available for everyone except Veterans in handy wheelbarrow size for sparetime reading.

We agree with the commisar of men, who yesterday proclaimed, "Marx is the answer for better scholastic standing."

Russian a Coed

Persecution of the masses by the classes again reared its ugly capitalistic head on campus yesterday with the announcement that the Student Council suspended Arboretum President Jan Kundatof, one of the few remaining true and liberal patriots, from school.

The crime? Russian a coed said the august body of aristocracy.

Da! Russian a coed indeed!

The Daily Comrade asks these capitalistic blue bloods what is mean by the term? An investigation by the Comrade's Daily Workman revealed that the only sin committed by Comrade Kundatof was in asking the coed to visit him in his Arboretum home to read his exposures of the capitalistic system.

Da! And there was the reason! The Campus un-Capitalistic committee pounced on the opportunity to remove a defender of the truth. For it was one of their subversive agents that had been assigned to trap Comrade Kundatof. Her name—to be died in a stigma of blue for eternity—Marias Pecuniary.

Again the wealthy few have oppressed the masses. Never have so many been so wronged by so few!

Danielsky the Dog to Vend Frozen Borscht on a Stick

By Judtov Kinskbeserk

"Garburdana krasnetz, Comrade Kinskbeserk. The revolution has swept all before it! Prost!!"

I looked up from my typewriter, equipped with a red ribbon naturally, to behold a transformed Dan the Dog. "What has happened Dan? Why this sudden exuberance? Have the boys at the pool hall made a quick killing?"

"Enough of this capitalistic talk, Comrade Kinskbeserk. I, Nicholas Lousasky Danielsky the Dog am the avant-guard of the magnificent revolution even now tearing the capitalists banknote from banknote."

"Then the day we've all been working for has arrived!"

"Da!"

"THE CAUSE has swept all before it!"

"Dada and Mama! But that is only one reason I am here. Now is the time for us to reap the whirlwind and make our mark in the new people's socialistic soviet agrarian five per cent deductable commonwealth."

"You mean you have a scheme whereby we can prosper . . . protecting the interests of our fellow men, of course?"

"Vat else would I be sitting here for, neo-capitalist? I have conceived the idea which will sweep the new United Soviet States, not forgetting Chaliapin Hill."

"And you've come to me with it, eh?"

"Garbudana krasnetz, Comrade Kinskberserk. You will be district manager for all Red and White Carolina."

"District Manager of what, Danielsky?"

"Nothing less than the greatest novelty concern in the new socialist soviet agrarian five per cent deductable commonwealth. You will represent the Danielsky Borschticle Enterprises."

"Da, da, Danielsky, but what will we produce beside hot air?"

"You might well ask, Comrade Kinberg. Our main, only and magnificent product is nothing less than the five kopek Borschticle: Frozen Borscht on a Stick!"

"Garbirdama krasnetz, Danielsky. I will get the go-cart, and attach the bells . . ."

"Remember Comrade Kinskberserk, the chimes must play nothing but the Internationale!"

"Prost! And I'll be equipped for selling Borchticles tomorrow. What genius, already the benefits of total production for the total population are evident. Every man, woman and chile will have a mouthful of Frozen Borscht!"

"And don't forget to tell them, Vendor Kinskberserk, to save the wrappers. For every ten wrappers it gives an autographed bottle of sour crem to go with the Borschticle . . . from the Farmers COOPERATIVE, naturally."

Dear Suh,

Comrades!

To the Comerade Editor:

In the long cold winter nights I would appreciate having copies of such communistic literature as the Bible, Declaration of Independence and Shakespeare's plays to read. I would greatly appreciate it if you would request that comerade students send extra copies of such literature to me. They say I will be released on good behavior in several years if I continue to improve.

Paul Maulanzi

(Editor's Note: The above letter arrived by dog sled from Siberia shortly before press time last night.)

A Horse, A Horse

To the Comerade Editor:

It has come to my attention that the most promenant monument on your campus is a statue of a standing Cossak, who shoots off his gun every time a non-believer walks past. Comment has arisen that there should be a horse under this statue, signifying the great horsemanship of our noble soldiers.

We have suggested that until a suitable horse can be sculpted, Comerade Morty Schapp be urged to substitute and crawl between the legs of the Cossak, holding a bag of Rye.

With continuing respect for the noble work you are doing in the revolutionary cause, I am,

Your Merry Marxist,
J. Satlin.

On Das Kapital Hill

Faces Red as Georgia Boys Take Spotlight in Proletariat Purge

By Jascha Pearson and Boris Allen

Raleigrad, March 31.—(Special to the Comrade)—There's something b[illegible] ing on Das Kapital Hill today, and you can bet your left kopeck that C[illegible] rade Lefty Davidoff of the C.P.U. (Committee of Proletariat Unions) [illegible] his hand in it.

We had lunch last night at Sam Samovar's tea den with the red-faced work commissar, and he disclosed to us that Governor Gregorivitch Cherry was on his way out in favor of someone of more definite color lines.

"Maybe Siberia, maybe Durham for that reactionary," hinted Davidoff as he fished a gob of caviar from his beard. "We're thinking of forcing him to steppe-down in favor of a native-born citizen. Possibly a Georgia boy like Stalin. I understand they have an extra governor down there, and Tovarich, if we don't like him we can always purge him!"

With that Davidoff bade us goodbye with a booming laugh and an upraised fist which demolished two chandeliers and three bus boys. It seems he was off to a conference with Royski Caribou of the U.V.A. (Union of Vodka Assimilators), and signing his borscht chit with a flourish, he hailed a droshky and departed.

Elsewhere on Kapital Hill, the Federal Communist Communications board has outlawed the new popular song, "The Vulgar Boatman," as for the air waves. "Not only that," said Otchi Tchorniya, head of the board, "it mentions water too much. Dirty British propaganda!" Also banned was the Anniversary Song, which encourages marriage and cuts down on the tremendous yearly revenue from divorce fees.

From the GPU police blotter comes reports of a raid by J. Edgar Redlight's vice squad on Aldermanov Hall, in which 30 coeds were caught using Lux soap boxes unapproved by the Southern Conference for Harranguers' Welfare.

Also cooling in the city clink, awaiting the next deportation train to the free state of Danzigers, is Albrecht Lowenstein, accused of openly displaying Fascist sympathies in class. Lowenstein protested through his attorney, Jim (Red Gallus) Wallace, "I had good reason to raise my hand in what they claim was the Nazi salute. Could I help it if the professor's name was John?" There was indication that the Lowenstein Treason case might be carried to Judge Hanging Hank Whitfield's Court of Appeals.

Questioning the prisoner, the district attorney said: "Do you actually claim to be a loyal fellow traveler, third class?"

"Da, D.A.," muttered Al, leaning slightly to the right.

Lowenstein's cellmate was Earl Slocumov, accused of hitting a clinker in the last playing of the Internationale by the University ba[illegible] Slocumov, who took his balaleika to prison, is just finishing a new and more appropriate love song to replace the beloved "Dark Eyes." It's called, "Yeux Rouge," and Slocumov got his inspiration while passing a fraternity house after a recent week-end.

Soviet Circles Greet News of Capitalistic Victory with Moans

MOSCOW, March 31.—News that the University of North Carolina, citadel of liberalism, has fallen to the resurgent capitalistic forces was greeted with grave concern in official Soviet circles.

The Red Star, official Red Army organ, bemoaned the situation with the following editorial comment:

"It is with serious concern that we recognize this movement as a repudiation of our armed forces' glorious victory over the Hitlerian forces of evil.

"The defeat at Chapel Hill is a defeat for all democratic peoples of the world.

"It is with pride that we note the stand taken by the Daily Comrade, sole remaining defender of the ideals possessed by the masses and their great philosophers."

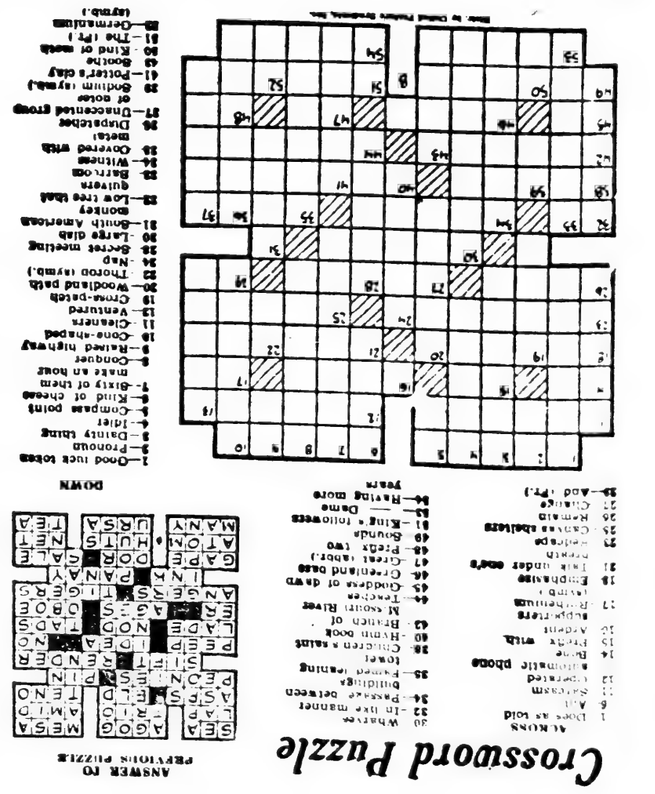
A high Soviet statesman issued the terse statement, "Comrades in Chapel Hill: You are fighting in a glorious cause. Courage."

Emerging from his underground refuge with a bottle of Red Top, a local liberal leader expressed his opinions and plans briefly.

"We'll paint the town red. Who has the bottle opener?"

HITLER HAPPY

By carrier pigeon, a rumor flew into the Daily Comrade's night offices last night that Adolph Hitler still alive in a mountain retreat, gleefully received the news that the forces of capitalism and liberalism have split in Chapel Hill.



"Maybe I'll yet win," gleefully chortled the fallen dictator.

Gabetri Hillikof Replaces Snavelin As Comrade Czar

By Irwinsk Tinybarsk

Head Comrade

Karvok Snavelin, for the past two years Czar of the Carolina Comrades, has revealed that he will return next year as head man for the Big Red at Cornelpetrovik, and at the same time Commisar of Universitrod Athletoks "The Red" Erinski announced that Snavelin will be replaced at once by Gabetri Hillikof, who paced the Tar Heelskis to defeat in the annual Salt Saucer last January 1 in Old Murmansk.

Snavelin said that he was giving up his position here because the administration refused to share the graft from the Salt Saucer unequally with him, and that he was going back where everybody was treated with malice and misunderstanding like they should be.

Czar Hillikof, whose superb fog vision played a major role in the Salt Saucer engagement, said in an interview yesterday that he was glad that he could take the position at the helm of the Tar Heelskis, for that he was sure that he could do much more damage that way than in his former role of field judjok.

As assistant for Hillikof, Erinski stated that through diligent efforts, Jorge Gardnolitov, teammate of Hillikof in "The Great Salt Shaking" of Old Murmansk, had been obtained. He is expected to do the same stinkinski job that Hilliokof has promised.

Practice for the 1947 season under the direction of Hillikof is expected to begin as soon as the new czars, former students of Jessok Jamesinivich, make their appearance in Chapel Hill. They are to arrive at the Woollen Kremlin next week and begin work immediately in Lenin stadium.

Minsk Mangler Mauls Puny Pinsk Pushover

By Comrade Holstinkski

Records fell by the way in Dneipperetrosk yesterday as Irvinoff Smallwoostivik, the Minsk Mauler, soundly trounced Lauristansk Hooporovitch, the Pinsk Pansy, in one of the most exciting matches in the wrestling division of the 143rd annual Marx Memorial games.

Repeatedly, the unruly crowd threw their borschtburgers into the air and leaped to their feet with cries of "kill the dirty capitalist (Capitalist Hooporovitch owns two pairs of tennis sneakers and an old tooth brush holder lined with wombat fur which he won in the Saar Basin Swedish Ring Toss finals of 1928) as Smallwoostivik hurled the Pinsk pushover to the mat again and again with his famous Lithuanian ankle drag followed quickly by a Murmansk knee push.

Order was restored and after a slight pause to put out the fire that a group of surly comrades had started under Hooporovitch's goat cart, the referee, who had gained the disfavor of the crowd was cut down from the tree which the embittered group had tied him to, and wrestling was resumed.

Smallwoostivik gained his victory early in the second period when he folded his heavier opponent with a Hungarian hinge and pinned his shoulders to the mat with a well executed three-finger Omsk eye poke that drew much applause from the crowd and an old Dr. Pepperoff bottle from Hooporovitch's aging mother.

HEARNMEN COP OPENER

Carolina's baseball nine started its 1947 campaign in fine fashion yesterday by coming from behind with two runs in the eighth inning to nip Michigan State, 4-3, on Emerson field.

Frank Robinson and Monk Whiteheart shared the mound duties for the Tar Heels with Whiteheart the winner. Whitey Black was the big gun in the Carolina attack with three safeties in four trips to the plate.

Carolina's tennis team topped the visiting Eli of Yale for the second time in three days yesterday afternoon, registering a 10 to 3 win.

The local golfers got their 1947 season off to a successful start at Hope Valley yesterday at the expense of the Gobblers of VPI, downing the Virginians 22-5. Junie Bailey, Jayvee cage star, paced the field with a 68.

Today's contests find the baseballers meeting Villanova at 4 o'clock, the tennis crew meeting Yale at 2:30 p.m., and the golf team meeting Davidson.

Justsch, Pupaski Leaders As Tar Heelskis Win Again

By Comrade Carmikelivich

Carolina's colorful comrades, paced by Walt Pupaski and Charlinski Justsch, rolled merrily over the Caucasian Commissars yesterday afternoon in Lenin Statium as they pounded out a 1567-789 victory in the opening outdoor games of the season.

It was Pupaski who gave the Tar Heelskis the lead early in the afternoon as he sliced out an easy win over Dirta Dirta of the Commissars in the double blade knife throwing event. Justsch added to the home score several seconds later as he romped home to victory in the 100 meter bayonet charge.

The locals also took first place in the hand grenade throw with comrade Selinsch coming through with the winning toss and in the flame throwing event as comrade "Red Hot" Hutvich turned in a sizzling performance to take the measure of Ivan "Torch" Torchsha of the visitors.

Comrade Justsch then returned to arena to capture his second first of the day as he squirmed to a side-stepping victory in the mine field run. The visitors suffered a serious loss in this event as their star, Tovan Turnshe, went to pieces after hitting a mine at the midfield stripe.

The feature event of the day turned out to be the barb wire jump which developed into a duel between comrade Moodivich and the pride of the Gausasus, Jumpin' Jackski Fovictch. Moodivich finally edged out a win when his rival failed to clear the barb at 65.4isms.

Other events saw visitor Igor Periti take the low height parachute jump when local star, Par Shutiski failed to "open up" with his usual last minute spurt.

The visitors gained another first in the latrine dig when Migor "The Mole" Morriski took the event in the fast time of 27.5 shovelfuls. This is a new record for the dig, erasing the old mark set by comrade Red Heifer earlier in the year.

The locals added to their total in the distance events, winning firsts in the artillery and mortar competition. The visitors offered serious competition at the start, hitting with unerring accuracy, but the home boys soon rallied with tight defensive play to stem the tide, and knot the count at the 10-minute mark.

From then on the Comrades took the lead and began to hit with their usual precision to romp to an easy victory.

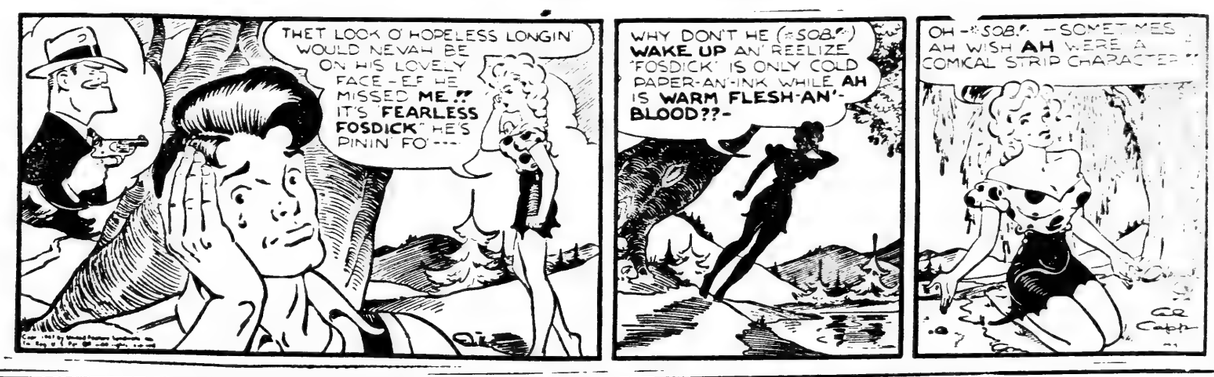
Hungry Will Declares War On All Dorm Wall Doodlers



Clandestine student boss of the men's dormitories, William L. "Hungry Willie" Smith came out into the pure red air of the Hill long enough yesterday to declare open war on all wall doodlers in campus dormitories.

Smith, actually manager of men's dormitories, declared angrily, "Keep Kilroy offa my lousy walls . . . The men in this University have gotta realize that wall doodling is the first step towards Communism, and WE can't have that in our GREEEAAT school."

The renowned conservative capitalist, who has cornered the market on sand fiddlers in his native town of Wilmington lashed out against the liberal element on the campus, listing the Daily Comrade, and, in addition, all forms of tolerance, as being sure signs of a possible breakdown in the present system of good, clean rooming halls.

"Hell, I've gotta make a decent living," reiterated the mellow master of money machinations, "And these damn doodlers expect honest management — Whatta nerve! I've got a mind to rejoin the Quartermasters."

British House Unites to Pass Draft Proposal

Conscription Now Virtually Assured

London, April 1—(UP)—Great Britain was virtually assured military conscription yesterday, the first such legislation in British history, when the measure was given a second reading which in the language of the English parliament means it is as good as approved.

Winston Churchill's conservatives banded with the Labor government to beat down an attack on the bill by a small group of rebellious laborites.

Final Reading

The proposal was debated in the House of Commons and the third and final reading of the bill is sure to pass when it comes to a vote within the next week.

When the measure is passed universal manhood conscription will then become official in Britain.

Prince Paul Sworn In As New Greek Monarch

Athens, April 1—(UP)—The new king has formally ascended the Greek throne. Prince Paul was sworn in four hours after the unexpected death of his brother, King George II. As a matter of formality, under the constitution, Paul will take a second oath before Parliament when it meets April 21.

Young Soldier Killed In Fayetteville Crash

Fayetteville, April 1—(UP)—A young soldier has been killed in a train and automobile collision at Fayetteville. Pfc. Joseph H. Horvath of Chicago was killed this morning when an army ambulance he was driving was struck by a train at a Fayetteville crossing. Horvath was stationed at Fort Bragg.

Moscow Conferees Fail To Solve Reparations

Moscow, April 1—(UP)—The Big Four foreign ministers announced tersely that they failed to solve the German reparations problems at their informal meeting today. Then they clamped extraordinary secrecy on their discussion, saying only that formal negotiations would be resumed tomorrow.

House Passes Reading Of Liquor Resolution

Raleigh, April 1—(UP)—The House of Representatives has approved on second reading a bill to allow each North Carolina county to vote on outlawing or permitting beer and wine sales. The bill faces final reading in the House tomorrow, and then will go to the Senate unless the House changes its mind overnight. The House vote was unanimous and there was only one minor amendment. The bill allows 15 per cent of the voters in any county to call a vote on beer and wine.

Illinois Mine Official Hands in Resignation

Centralia, Ill., April 1—(UP)—Governor Dwight Green of Illinois has announced the resignation of State Mine Director Robert Medill, who was criticized in connection with the death of 111 miners in a Centralia mine last week. Green says Medill's resignation was "for the good of the service."

Foreign Affairs Group Orders More Hearings

Washington, April 1—(UP)—The House Foreign Affairs committee has ordered additional hearings on President Truman's $400,000,000 aid to Greece and Turkey bill. Chairman Charles Eaton says the measure will not reach the House floor before the latter half of this month.

UP Nominates Miller For Student Body President

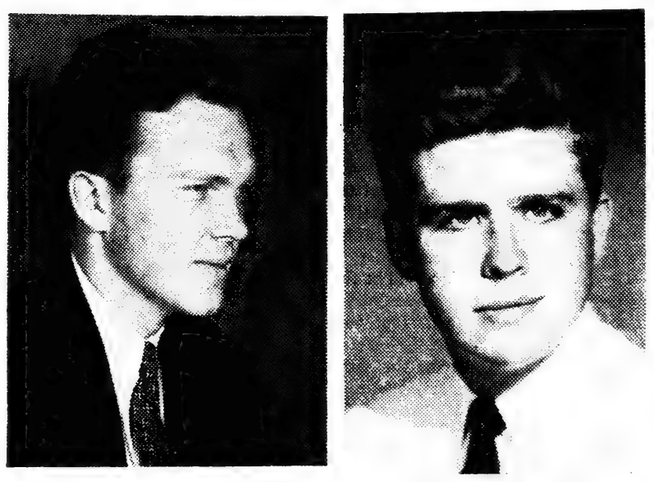
★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Long Named by SP for Office of Secretary-Treasurer

Platform Decided By Student Party

In a brief session yesterday afternoon the Student party nominated Charlie Long, of Thomasville, for secretary-treasurer of the student body and announced a platform calling for a change in the registration system, revamping of the Student Welfare board, and "elimination of the unjust discriminating Chapel Hill Merchants association monopoly on prices and building."

An expected nomination for the Yackety Yack editorship failed to materialize.



Long, a rising junior and ex-G.I., was nominated by acclamation for secretary-treasurer to replace Joe Byrd, who withdrew. Long is a member of the Student Legislature, where he is currently serving on the fact finding board, the ways and means committee and the finance committee. He is a former president pro-tem of the Dialectic Senate and a former vice-chairman of the Student party.

Men's Council Nominees

Nominated for the Men's Council were Ken Black and Charlie Lambeth, rising seniors, and Dick Walker and Al Winn, rising sophomores.

The party platform, made public for the first time yesterday, includes the following planks; Improved seating for students at athletic events, elimination of unfair price discrimination by local merchants, an up-to-date catalogue of courses, a campus information service, a new and better registration system, library facilities available to infirmary patients, and a campus schedule of events.

Additional planks were: better Quonset hut living conditions, better telephone service, thorough orientation program, better printing facilities, and reconstitution of Student Welfare board.

Bill Miller, left, and Charlie Long, right, have been nominated for the the posts of president and secretary-treasurer of the student body, respectively. Miller, named by the University party is head of the Ways and Means committee of the Student Legislature, while Long has been active on the floor of the campus assembly.

Ralph Strayhorn Chosen to Direct Campaign Policy

By Chuck Hauser

Bill Miller, tall, red-headed junior from Greenville, South Carolina, tossed his hat into the the presidential political ring yesterday with an official announcement that he was running for president of the student body on the University party ticket, stating, his primary objective was "progressive and representative student government above the party line."

Miller's statement in full follows:

Primary Objective

"I thank the University party for the confidence it has expressed in nominating me for the office of president of the student body.

"I will say now, I enter the campaign with no obligations and one primary objective—the formation of a progressive and representative student government above the party line."

Strayhorn Campaign Manager

Ralph Strayhorn, outstanding member of the Tar Heels' 1946 Sugar Bowl team, is managing Miller's campaign for the coming May elections.

Miller's qualifications for office, as listed by the University party, are as follows: Chairman of the Student Legislature's Ways and Means committee, top-ranking committee of that body; member and past president of the Debate council; member of the Student Government Leadership Conference committee, whose purpose is to orient campus office-holders in their duties and obligations.

UVA Member

Miller is also a present member of the University Veterans association, having seen action in France, Germany, and Belgium. A resident of Manley dormitory, the candidate was selected several months ago to represent the University as one of the delegates to the national Chicago Conference of college students. He also represented Carolina as a member of the North Carolina Student Legislative Assembly, in which he was elected a member of the Executive committee.

Assembly Sets Fee Structure At $5 Per Term

Group Earmarks $1 For Student Union

By Bookie Jabine

Just getting under the Constitutional deadline, the Student Legislature Monday evening heard the report of Budget commission chairman Johnny Jones, and passed a resolution setting a block fee of $5 per student per quarter for student activities.

It was also unanimously decided that $1 of the sum be earmarked for the maintainence of Graham Memorial. The remainder of the budget was turned over to the Finance committee for consideration.

Motion by Wallace

Jimmy Wallace, one of the students who conferred with Dean Weaver over the fee structure, made the motion providing for the $5 assessment.

The figure is believed to be one which will satisfy both the administration and students. Said Wallace, "This is the first time that a student group is assessing the student body."

In his speech explaining the budget, Johnny Jones scathed the heads of various campus groups for their "lack of cooperation," but praised members of the commission who worked "tirelessly" with him.

Budget Great Help

Dewey Dorsett also addressed the assembly, stating that the budget would be a "tremendous help" and that Graham Memorial had decided to set aside another room for the use of student government.

Finance committee chairman Bill Mackie explained that his group will meet today and tomorrow afternoons at 3 o'clock to consider the individual items in the budget. Today they will convene in the Roland Parker lounge, while the Grail room will be the scene of tomorrow's meeting.

Hearing of Dorsey Charges Postponed, States Manning

A preliminary hearing of the $16,000 breach of contract suit against Tommy Dorsey originally scheduled for this week's session of the Superior court in Burlington, will not be held, John T. Manning, lawyer for the Grail, stated yesterday.

Judge R. Hunt Parker, who was to have held the hearing, closed the court Monday, and, Manning added, "It doesn't look like the hearing will be conducted any time within the next two or three weeks."

Dorsey attorneys had interposed a demurrer in the case, Manning said, and the hearing would have concerned the demurrer, not the charges contained in the original suit. Grail officials have indicated that the case proper will be heard in the May term of the Orange County Superior court.

Charge Did Not Bring Full Band

Filed against Dorsey last fall, the suit charges that the noted bandleader did not bring his full band here on the Carolina-Duke weekend in November. It is alleged that "T. D." had contracted to appear with his whole outfit, but showed up in Woollen gymnasium minus his entire string section.

Dorsey is now reported to be in the Caribbean on a second honeymoon with his actress wife, Pat Dane. He recently stated, while stopping off in Morehead City, "The Grail suit is just a drop in the bucket. People are always suing me for something."

Grail officials, however, have evidenced a different attitude towards the case. They are determined to press charges against "Mr. Trombone" until the courts have handed down a decision.

Wayne Morse Is Forced To Cancel Talk Here Due to Senate Duties

Wayne Morse, progressive Republican senator from Oregon, has again cancelled his scheduled speech here for the Carolina Political union, it was announced by Jerry Davidoff. Originally scheduled for tomorrow evening, word was received by the CPU that Morse would be unable to leave Washington.

The following telegram was received from the Oregon solon: "Deeply regret must cancel my April 3 date with you because both Lilienthal and Greek loan debate will be before Senate for vote this week. There is no way of telling when vote on them will be taken, hence I cannot risk being off floor of Senate for single hour. Furthermore I shall be particularly active on the floor in debate on both issues. I am extremely embarrassed to cancel my trip to Chapel Hill but I would be derelict in my duties if I were away when important issues are before the Senate. I will be glad to try to arrange another date this spring if you have not already given up in disgust. (Signed) Wayne Morse, USS."

Morse was due to speak here in December, but a trip to Europe forced withdrawal at that time. Complications in University scheduling caused postponement of a January engagement to the April date.

It was also announced that Jo Fishel of Vaughn had been elected CPU secretary to replace Bob Jones who leaves for Latin America this week. William Patterson, Winston-Salem, was elected to membership in the Union.

The roundtable topic for next Sunday's meeting will be the proposed ban on Communists in the government.

Student Government Will Get Office, Secretarial Service

By Barron Mills

The Graham Memorial Board of Directors voted to provide office space and secretarial services for the benefit of the officers of the executive and legislative phases of Student Governement at a meeting of the group Monday afternoon. These provisions are expected to be in operation after July 1, according to Tag Montague, chairman of the Board.

President of the student body, Dewey Dorsett, stated that the office provided by the Student Union would be used to house the archives of student government, the Student Legislature and the various committees. Also it would be a meeting place of committees and "provide greater efficiency for student government."

Dorsett said that the Board should be commended for its action and interest in taking such steps. "Heretofore all the records of student government, the Legislature and committee meetings have been kept in individual student's rooms and oftentimes they have been destroyed or lost. File cabinets will be provided for the archives and with the help of a secretary, records and

UNC Debate Squad Will Participate In National Meet

Setting its sights for a blue ribbon performance, the University Debate squad embarks tonight for Fredericksburg, Va., to participate in its final off-campus debate of the quarter, the Grand National Forensic tournament to be held on the Mary Washington college campus tomorrow, Friday, and Saturday.

Maurice Braswell, Debate council president, felt confident that the team of 14 speakers would bring a number of victories back to Carolina, as University squads have done in the past in this all-important tourney.

The debators are scheduled to catch the "Silver Meteor" in Raleigh at approximately midnight tonight and will arrive in Fredericksburg at 5:15 tomorrow morning.

Eisenhower Spends Day Here with Captain Hazlett

By Darley Lochner

General's Wife Accompanies Him on Tour; 'Ike' Amused by 'Daily Comrade' Edition

General Ike Eisenhower spent yesterday afternoon in Chapel Hill "catching up on old times" with Captain E. E. Hazlett, former NROTC commander and boyhood friend. The general's visit to Chapel Hill was an interlude in his inspection tour of southern Army camps.

"You'll have to ask General Marshall about the Greek situation," General Eisenhower said. "This is a social call with Captain Hazlett and you shouldn't expect me to discuss the international situation during an afternoon's visiting."

The general's smiling geniality hardened only when he was asked about his plans of securing the presidential nomination. "I'll never be a candidate and I don't have any plans. The answer is definitely 'No'," the chief of staff said.

He had more to say about universal military training. "Anyone who has studied the situation for ten minutes should understand that an efficient program of preparedness is absolutely necessary," the hero of the Battle of Europe stated emphatically.

General Eisenhower displayed a healthy tan even on the top of his bald head.

"Captain Hazlett and I were just figuring how long it was since we have seen each other," Ike commented. "It's not been since 1935 and that has been a long time."

He explained, although he and Captain Hazlett had been boyhood chums, that the Chapel Hillian had priority over him in the matter of Abilene, Kans., the town which has become famous as the general's home. "Captain Hazlett was born in Abilene and I didn't get there until I was two years old," he said, his blue eyes crinkling with humor.

General Eisenhower laughed heartily when he was shown a copy of "The Daily Comrade," April Fool edition of "The Daily Tar Heel." "This looks like a clever piece of work," he commented. "I'll have to read it more thoroughly."

Mrs. Eisenhower, who is accompanying her husband on his southern tour, asked, "How did you know we were here?" When she was told that Merwin Van Hecke, University student, had removed the rain shield from the special five-star license plate, she turned to her husband and said, "That was good G-2, wasn't it?"

During the afternoon invited guests called at the Hazlett home. Among them was University student Gene Aenchbacher, Army major, who served as General Eisenhower's pilot. "You certainly took me through a tough landing that night we went from Algiers to Gibraltar," Ike said.

Editor Louis Graves of the Chapel Hill Weekly, whose brother coached cadet Eisenhower in football at West Point and whose nephew, Ernest Graves of Chapel Hill, was a classmate of General Eisenhower's son at West Point, class of 1944, also dropped in.

"I'm sorry I don't have any news for you to break in your paper," General Eisenhower said as the interview closed. It seems that the Army's most popular general and chief of staff didn't realize that his presence was news enough.

DTH Play Review

Laboratory Theater Scores Third Entertainment Strike

By R. Haskell Hamilton

The Laboratory theatre of the Carolina Playmakers put their third strike in a row right over the heart of the entertainment plate, with their farce version of Molière's "The Imaginary Invalid," this past week end. The excellence, competence and intelligent work of the group in their inital performance on Saturday night, insured their playing to standees during thier two Sunday night performances in Graham Memorial.

So far we've had nothing but top-notch dramatic presentations from this group, and all concerned are to be congratulated. The freshness, originality, sparkle, and ability with which the Laboratory theater has performed in the intimate surroundings of the Graham Memorial lounge is a delight to campus and town adult entertainment-seekers.

Buddy Westover as "Argon" gave a convincing and throughly enjoyable performance. Commendations are likewise in order for Jim Riley as "deBonn" Marty Jacobs as a blustering "Purgon" and David Hooks as "Thomas Dia."

It was regretable that Director-Actress Lynn Leonard chose to mug her way through a meaty part like "Toi" in a 17th century edition of Martha Ray; rather than play a comedy part with deftness.

Others in the cast worthy of mention include Barbara Bramble, Harry Thomas, Lois Warnshuis, Mac Shaw, Francis Olds, Henrietta Cooper and Arthur Solomon.

Campus Polling Places

Legislature Passes Biscuit To Students with New Bill

By Barron Mills

The Legislature recently doled out a cold biscuit to the student body in the form of the bill to provide four more polling places on campus. Like the cold biscuits that have been a trade mark in food kitchens during hard times the four new polling places are essential to sustain life of student government. However, how much more nourishing and more appetizing a little warm gravy would have been on the new bill. This gravy should have been in the form of making the newly-opened polls a precinct instead of merely a polling place.

As chairman of the Elections committee of the Legislature, Johnny Clampitt, will introduce a bill to remedy this fault at Thursday night's session.

When the Legislature passed the "cold biscuit" much time was consumed in arguing the methods that would be used as a check to see that a student voted only one time. How much simpler it would be to divide the campus into districts and have each student vote at his precinct—which would naturalliy be nearest his residence.

It seems to me that this would be the fairest method both to the candidates on the slate and also to student government. Under the recently-enacted bill it would be possible for the same voter to vote five times. He could cast his vote in Lenoir hall, the lower quadrangle, Carolina Inn, Gerrard hall, and McIver dormitory. There is nothing to stop him from marking five ballots except the honor system, since the very same student lists will be at all the polls.

If the recently-enacted bill is not amended by the Legislature before the spring elections, which are slated for the second Tuesday in May, I predict that there will be quite a disturbance by the three political parties and also the candidates. It would be long tedious work to compare the five lists of voters tabulated at the polling places and check to see if one man voted more than one time. Not only is it a time-consuming job, but the election would have to be held over again if enough persons voted more than once and the number of votes cast for the winning and losing candidates varied only slightly.

Under the precinct plan, the Board of Elections would be absolutely certain that a student did not cast but one ballot. Punching ID cards at the time of voting, as was suggested in a Legislature meeting would be very unsatisfactory, since too many of us do not carry our ID cards with us at all times.

Probably the main idea behind enabling a student to cast his vote at any of the above mentioned polling places is for the convenience of the voter—so that he will not have far to walk to the ballot boxes. Why would it not be better to divide the campus into precincts and let the student vote at his natural voting place?

Anti-Margolis

Dear Sir:

Isn't it about time that the Daily Tar Heel hunted for a columnist who believes in the American way of life, and who will write some articles to counteract the foreign ideologies of Mr. Margolis? We think that the great majority of students on this campus are fed up with Mr. Margolis's type of pink liberalism. It might be old fashioned, but give us somebody who will present the capitalistic-democratic point of view instead of continually following the Russian line.

Mr. Margolis bounced back Sunday from his rather disastrous clash with Representative Kennedy, and once again used the "student' newspaper" to blast our nations foreign policy. To the 800 people who listened to Representative Kennedy's speech Thursday night, Mr. Margolis' column must have seemed foolish, because if our memory serves us right, Mr. Kennedy answered Mr. Margolis' Sunday column before it was even written. Representative Kennedy also "shut" Mr. "M" up, which in itself made many, many of us very happy.

In closing we would like to ask Mr. Margolis to answer two questions. (1) Does Russia even do anything wrong? (2) Does the U. S. ever do anything right?

Can Do Wrong

Dear Sir:

Normally my desire for self-expression in the columns of the Daily Tar Heel is easily controlled. However, I cannot resist the desire to point out to Mr. Jud Kinberg that if "(Mr.) Ritchie must have known that the VA would pay for only authorized texts" as Mr. Kinberg states in his article of March 26, the veterans must have been equally aware that they were entitled to buy only texts required for their courses. Is it logical, then, to imply that Mr. Ritchie is guilty of intent to defraud and at the same time to exonerate the individual veteran who signed a receipt for books which he knew he had no right to buy? Even a veteran can do wrong.

Snow Flies

To the Editor:

Different problems come to front of discussion in Letters to the Editor in order of their pertinence at the time. Last fall numerous letters were written on seating the students at football games. Later came the controversy over Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays. As of late there have been heated discussions on the racial problem and registration.

With the blanketing of the campus with our first touch of snow came another problem, which generally speaking is of little significance. But to a certain student, who was a victim of circumstance, it highlights discussion of the hour. What harm in throwing a soft snowball with a steeply inclined arc of flight?

This particular student explains it this way. On his way from Aycock to Memorial hall last Saturday morning he was accosted by a group of small boys who persisted in showering him with snowballs. Taking it good naturedly he soon escaped and continued on his way. As he passed the Y court a dozen or so boys were standing there throwing snowballs at most anyone who came by. Spirited with the snowball fever as everyone else seemed to be, he joined in tossing at a certain woman.

Perchance her discerning eye caught him in the act of throwing the snowball that was to end its path of flight by coming in contact with her precious body. Poor sportsmanship on the part of this young woman, who was connected with the registration at Memorial hall led to retention of the student's class tickets and summons to appear before the Dean of Men.

Assured by the Dean that apology on his part would clear up the matter the student then sought to recompense for his disorderly conduct. The apology is accepted by the registration official, though not before seriously reprimanding the student. The official really threw off at the student with a verbal outflow of derogatory language that the student found hard to bear. Finally he capped off his speech by inquiring of the attacked woman, "Shall I cut his throat now or later?"

Receiving all this outburst as the result of a little meaningless gesture on the part of the student tended to hurt his feelings quite a bit. It all adds to this: Everyone doesn't live in and accept this playboy type of world, so my advice is when you throw a snowball, know who you are throwing at. You can get in trouble.

Scribe Tells Horse He's Boss But the Nag's Reply--'Neigh'

By Jud Kinberg

In line with the current sweetness and little light campaign, herewith a column dedicated to Things I Never Enjoyed Until Now!

Horseback Riding, or I Get a Kick Out of You. . .

When spring finally lasted through a weekend, stables here and about were crowded with students seeking a novel way to commit suicide. Actually, matters were hardly that drastic and even I was induced to make a quick fling at straddling a light fantastic in the form of a horse named "Velvet."

The first few minutes of the ride, the issue was in doubt, but everything resolved itself nicely when the horse and I finally decided who was faster. "Velvet" took me to some very nice places, galloped hell out of my posterior only once or twice and returned me to the Carolina Stables in right good contition.

If and when the clear, warm weather swoops down for a final landing at UNC, horseback riding should undergo a tremendous and well-deserved boom (no pun intended) here. There are at least two good stables, and the trails in this section rival the finest in the nation for picturesque beauty.

Tip to the male population: Horseback riding is almost as good as the back seat of a convertible.

Hold That Waistline . . .

For those who don't have to worry about avoirdupois in the wrong places, the retail store adjacent to the Farmers' Coop bottling plant has an ice-cream concoction they've been hiding under the lackluster name of a milk-shake. The boys make up the shake with such aplomb—or vanilla, if you prefer—that the result far surpasses a mere milkshake and turns into a very frosted malted of the time usually reserved for such places as seashore boardwalks. It's a grade A way to vary the mid-evening snack which we heartily recommend to all.

Bottled in Bond . . .

Last quarter someone maliciously registered me in a graduate course having to do with Literary Criticism. Before I found out that the class was filled with a bunch of ringers, among them some five or six sharks on literature, it was too late to pull out and keep one's self-respect, dontchano. While this forced me into periods of study as long as a half hour at one time, the result was quite enjoyable.

Reason for this is one Bond (of the New York bread family) who was ringmaster of what proved to be a three-ring intellectual side show. Out of the side of a face generally turned toward the window and great vistas beyond, Professor Bond slipstreamed some of the most witty and acid-filled comments to fill a classroom since I've been at UNC. The man has the ability to freshen even the dullest of the ancients.

For those revolving about in a welter of nonentity instructors, Dr. Bond is recommended most cordially. It's worth the "F".

Post-Mortem on the Daily Comrade . . .

At least four or five of the campus rightists barely escaped nicking their throats while shaving yesterday morning. Seems the boys had the habit of perusing the DTH through a sea of soapsuds. Tuesday morning's experience should cure them of that.

What Do YOU Say?

By Harry Snowden

Today's Question

Do you have any complaints against the University laundry service?

Answers

I have no complaints. The service has been very good and I am perfectly satisfied.—George Mitchell, Jr. Wake Forest.

I feel that the University laundry service could exercise more care in handling our laundry and in that way decrease the wear and tear on the garments. They also return clothes which are pressed very poorly, and their service should be more frequent—every week instead of two. This is especially true since the recent price rise.—Bernard A. Kemp Hendersonville.

In my experience with the laundry I have not lost even a handkerchief. The service is okay, although it would be better if it went out every week.—Norman Jacobson, Lenoir.

I am pretty well satisfied with the laundry and believe the rise in cost justifiable if used to increase workers' salaries.—James A. Lucas, Wilson.

Considering the amount of business the University laundry does, I think its service is fairly good. —Herman Baker, Nashville.

I have no complaints whatsoever. I feel the laundry has rendered the students excellent service.—Julian D. Kelly, Wilmington.

Tar Heels Stage Rally To Nip Villanova, 7-5

Seixas Defeats Yale's Ray; Linksmen Turn Back Davidson

Kalamazoo Net Crew Foe Today

Meet Is Halted In Sixth Match

By Roy Holsten

Rained out after completing five matches, the well-rounded Tar Heel tennis squad was leading the Yale Bulldogs 4-1 in the final of their three game series yesterday afternoon. Carolina won the first two meets, 8-4, 10-3.

Today Coach Kenfield's charges take on the highly touted Kalamazoo squad from Michigan, the meet starting at 3 p.m.

It was powerful Vic Seixas who blotted out Yale's ray of hope, Rollor Ray, when he took the measure of the 19-year-old New England Intercollegiate champ in straight 6-3, 6-4 sets. Ray had beaten the Tar Heel netter on Saturday and this was a revenge match.

Both Show Form

Both Ray and Seixas showed excellent form, but the Carolina courtman was just too much for the Yale star as he scored repeatedly with his potent drop shot and brilliant forecourt tactics.

Easily the best match of the afternoon, the stellar play drew applause again and again from the large gallery that had gathered despite the threatening weather.

The first set was tied at three-all when Seixas broke the New Haven sophomore's service and took the next three games. The play was featured by Seixas' canonball returns of Ray's lob shot.

Second Set

In the second set, the Blue and White netman took the offensive and pressed Ray, who returned the play with steady volleys. Deadlocked at 4-4, after a half dozen duece points Seixas put away a beautiful corner shot and captured the next two games and the match.

In the other matches completed Nicholson (UNC) deefated Badger, 6-2, 6-3; Suchin (Yale) defeated Kenfield 6-3, 6-4; Gruner (UNC) beat Baldwin 6-4, 6-2; and Alexander (UNC) stopped Ylvisaker 6-1, 6-3.

Radio station WPTF in Raleigh will carry three of Carolina's home baseball games this spring, according to an announcement yesterday by Jim Reid, sports director.

The first of these will be Saturday when the Tar Heels take on Duke, and the other two will be the Carolina-Duke game May 3 and the Carolina-State game May 31. One Carolina game at Duke and one at State will also be aired by the Raleigh station.

Mural Softball Begins Today

Intramural softball play will get underway this afternoon when a total of 18 games are played on the Intramural and former Navy fields.

Lee also said that tentative plans are being made for an intercollegiate intramural softball field day here about May 2 with all-star nines from Duke, Wake Forest, State, and Carolina participating.

Doeschler Low For Tar Heels

Carolina Scores 22½-5½ Triumph

By Billy Carmichael

Carolina's power-laden linksmen captured their second straight triumph in a like number of days yesterday afternoon as they outshot the highly-touted Davidson golfers 21½ to 5½, on the rain-soaked course of Hope Valley Country club.

It was No. 3 man Dick Doeschler, who turned in the top performance for the Tar Heels when he registered a par-71 for the 18 hole layout. The Jacksonville, Florida, senior played a brilliant round considering the prevailing weather and the condition of the course and might have registered a par-busting round had it not been for a pair of three-putt greens he fell victim to on the front nine.

The ever consistent Harvey Ward also performed admirably throughout the afternoon and toured the course with a one over par 72. Yesterday's low man in the defeat of VPI, Junie Bailey, failed to repeat his stellar three-under-par performance as he came in with a stumbling 77.

The Davidson squad lived up to their advance notices and gave the locals a closer battle than the score will indicate.

The rest of the Carolina sextet—Bob Cox, Mike Nolan and Ray Taylor—also hung up satisfactory scores, registering a 76, a 77, and a 77 respectively.

The golfers will be idle the remainder of the week, but will return to the links next Monday to face the potent Hoyas of Georgetown.

The summary:

Ward (NC) defeated Bumbarger, 3-0; Bailey (NC) defeated Bryan, 2-1. Best ball: NC, 3-0.

Doeschler (NC) defeated Henderson, 3-0; Jones (D) defeated Cox, 3-0. Best ball: NC, 3-0.

Nolan (NC) defeated Medford, 3-0; Taylor (NC) defeated Little, 2½-½. Best ball: 2-1.

Wrestling Coach Chuck Quinlan then told the members gathered the history of football and wrestling, and how they were developed into what they are today.

President Jim Camp then read an invitation from the Pi Phi's to a dessert party to be held Thursday, April 3. All members wishing to go are requested to be at Navy hall promptly at 6:45 to go in a body.

Senior Life Saving Course Scheduled

There will be a course in senior life saving offered here at Carolina beginning next Monday, April 7, it was announced yesterday by Dick Jamerson, head swimming coach.

The course is open to all students who have not previously taken senior life saving or who want to renew their certificates. An instructor's course will be offered later in the spring as a followup to this course.

Operations will get underway at 4 p.m. Monday, and there will be no admittance to the program after April 8th due to a necessity for getting things going at once. All interested are to report to the indoor pool.

Six Runs In Seventh Inning Nets Second Win For Locals

Vinny DiLorenzo Fans 10 in Relief Role To Register Victory; Ohio Here Today

By Bob Goldwater

A big seventh stanza in which six runs poured across the plate without any hits being made gave the Carolina baseball brigade its second win in two days yesterday on Emerson field as the Tar Heels came from behind once again to drub Villanova, 7-5.

The Hearnmen see their third straight day of action this afternoon at 4 o'clock when they engage Ohio university on the local diamond. Bud Blair and Tommy Andrew have been named by Assistant Coach Walt Rabb to share the mound duties with John Jurkovic or Mark Wylie the possible hurler for the Bobcats.

Southpaw Vinnie DiLorenzo was the main cog in the Carolina baseball machine in yesterday's triumph, allowing but one run and fanning an even 10 in a six-inning relief chore. Entering the fray in the fourth with the scoreboard readmg 4-1 against him, the New Jersey lad hurled brilliantly for the remainder and pitched his way out of the only troublesome spot in which he found himself. Les Couch, freshman righthander, allowed two safties and four runs in the first three frames but was in trouble in two of those innings due to several errors in the field.

Five Walks

It was three fielding miscues plus five bases on balls that spelled the difference in favor of Carolina. Four runs behind as they came to bat in the last half of the lucky seventh, the Tar Heels worked Villanova hurler Bill Smith, who until then had set Carolina back with five straight gooseeggs after one run in the first, for four consecutive free passes to register their second tally in the person of Dub Johnson. With the sacks full of Tar Heels, first-baseman John Gregory lined a grounder to short that Bill Doherty booted. Whitey Black and Jack Hussey, who were the second and third to stroll, scored on the play to put Carolina at a one-run disadvantage. That was all for Smith and Stan Chojnacki relieved him.

The new moundsman started off well, fanning Jim Hayworth for the second out. But DiLorenzo's walk, the fifth in the stanza, again loaded the bases and when shortstop Doherty booted his second grounder of the frame on a slap by Rip Ryan, Dallas Branch and Gregory tore across the plate with the tying and winning markers. One more miscue, this time by second-baseman Larry Aigeldinger on Harry Beason's grounder, allowed DiLorenzo to register the seventh and final tally.

First Inning

Both teams picked up single runs in the first frame. The visitors gained their tally on a single by Al Litwa and two infield errors by Carolina. The Tar Heels came right back on Walt Kirk's free pass and one-base knock by Emmett Cheek and Red Fahey.

That's the way matters remained until the top of the third, when the Pennsylvania club converted one hit, two walks, a pair of errors and three stolen bases, including a theft of home, into three runs. Villanova gained its final marker in the sixth when hurler Smith aided his own cause with a rousing single past third that drove in Chuck O'Malley.

Student Union To Hold Dance Here on April 12

With music provided by Ned Reap and his "Dream Serenaders," the first all-campus dance of the quarter will be held in Woollen gymnasium Saturday evening, April 12, under the sponsorship of Graham Memorial.

The first such dance since last fall when the Duke Ambassadors appeared here, the affair will last from 9 o'clock until midnight, Martha Rice, Graham Memorial director, stated.

Miss Rice's early announcement of dance plans came as "advance notice to all people who want to line up dates, and to give them plenty of time to make arangements for imports."

Believing that more informal dances should be held on the campus, Miss Rice said, "This dance should answer some of the need and get the dance calendar started off right."

Two Political Affairs Groups Organize Chapters on Campus

New Action Group Will Meet Tonight

A new campus political action orgainzation will meet this evening at 6:30 in the Carolina Inn cafeteria, and a call has been extended to students and faculty for any interested in progressive social and political action to attend.

This meeting features a program that will include a report from the "Students for Democratic Action" organization conference held in Washington, D. C., last week, and talks from representatives of all the major campus organizations of a social or political nature.

A spokesman for the group stated: "The new organization is open to all who believe the former New Deal program should be expanded to insure decent levels of health, nutrition, shelter, and education for all. This group is interested in protecting civil liberties from concentrated wealth, overcentralized government and all forms of totalitarianism. They endorse full support of the United Nations Organization, and are anti-facist as well as anti-Communist."

Constitution Shows Objectives of ASWA

A group of campus conservatives and liberals announce the forming of a new organization named the Association for the Study of World Affairs. The fifteen charter members represent a cross section of campus political thinking, including Lincoln Kan, Orrin Magill, Ralph W. Hyde, Helen Athenaelos, Herbert Bodman, Dr. K. C. Frazer, and Dr. Robson. Orrin Magill, President of the ASWA stated, "Of course, there is no lack of organizations on campus. But many organizations are frankly partisan, or are concerned only with local issues. We have brought liberals and conservatives together to stimulate interest in world affairs among the Student body."

Meet Weekly

Meeting once a week under the chairmanship of Lincoln Kan, the ASWA drew up a constitution and declared its objectives. Some of these aims are: to promote interest in world problems, and to present these problems to the public on an impartial, educational, and informative basis.

Forums, according to Magill, will present facts, and liberal and conservative interpretations of them. "We hope," he said "to be able later to extend these forums to high schools in the state and also to present them through the press and radio."

Herbert Bodman will moderate at a forum, "Truman Doctrine—Security or Imperialism," next week. Participants in the forum will be selected from the student body, and will represent opposing views. The details of the forum will be announced later.

House Passes Bill to Outlaw State Commies

Solons Receiving Communistic Mail

Raleigh, April 2—(UP)—The House of Representatives has passed overwhelmingly a bill aimed at outlawing the communist party in North Carolina. The measure does not state that specifically, but that will be its general effect.

The bill makes it illegal to advocate overthrowing the government by force or violence. It also outlaws any literature advocating overthrow of State or Federal government.

Communistic Mail

Representative John Kerr, Jr., of Warren county says every member of the General Assembly is receiving mail from communists. Kerr says the legislators should not fool themselves into thinking that movements to overthrow the government by subversive groups are not afoot.

The bill was introduced by Kerr and Representative Frank Hutton of Greensboro. It now goes to the Senate.

Senate Committee Agrees on Formula

Washington, April 2—(UP)—The Senate Foreign Relations committee agreed tentatively today on a compromise formula which would give the United Nations a limited veto over American aid to Greece and Turkey. But only if the UN is ready and able to take over the program itself.

Big Five Approve Palestine Session

Lake Success, April 2—(UP)—The Big Four have given their approval for a special United Nations general assembly in May to consider the critical Palestine situation. As soon as a majority of the other 55 member nations endorse the plan, the assembly will be summoned into session, probably in May.

No Changes Made In Strike Plans

Washington, April 2—(UP)—President Joseph Beirne of the National Federation of Telephone workers says there has been no change in plans for a nationwide phone strike on Monday. He made the statement after a two-hour conference with top labor department officials.

Ike Eisenhower Says U. S. Taking Gamble

Fort Bragg, April 2—(UP)—General Ike Eisenhower says the United States is taking a tremendous gamble in not having some sort of compulsory military training. However, the General says Army recruiting is good and the gamble may work.

House Group Approves Anti-Strike Measure

Washington, April 2—(UP)—The House Labor committee has approved 16 to 3 an emergency bill that would authorize President Truman to prevent the phone strike by federal injunction. Chairman Hartley says, however, that there is little chance for enactment of the legislation before the walk-out deadline.

Byrd Attacks Choice Of David Lilienthal

Washington, April 2—(UP)—Virginia Senator Byrd has bitterly attacked the nomination of David Lilienthal to head the atomic commission. He said one mistake by the commission might be irreparable, and that the job should not be entrusted to a chairman who believes, as Byrd put it, in a "government of men and not of laws."

Legislature to Pass On $110,000 Budget

Tonight's Session To Set Precedent In Campus Rule

By Bookie Jabine

For the first time in history of Student government here, a student assembly will decide on the disbursement of student fees when the Legislature begins voting on individual items of the $110,000 campus budget for 1947-48 at 7:30 this evening in Di hall.

Monday evening the body set aside $22,000 of the total sum for Graham Memorial operating expenses.

Consider Council

Although the budget is considered to be the most important business on the agenda, the assembly is also expected to consider the second half of the vital Student council constitutional amendment, that of reducing the membership from nine to five. The first part of the amendment removing the appellate power of the Council, was passed by a narrow margin at a special session last quarter. If ratified by the student body in the May elections the amendment will limit the Council's power to judge only the constitutionality of legislative acts.

Bill Mackie's finance committee has been holding hearings during the week with reference to the new budget, and will report some sections out this evening.

Report on Assessments

Mackie indicated that the committee planned to report on the assessments for the executive, legislative, and judicial branches of the government, but in yesterday's meeting they had arived at only one definite figure. A sum of almost $1,000 will be recommended for the executive branch.

Johnny Jones, secretary-treasurer of the student body and chairman of the budget commission, appeared before Mackie's group testifying in behalf of the executive budget.

On Coed Finances

Sybil Goerch Powe was present at yesterday's session to lend a hand concerning the finances of the Coed Senate, and Mackie said his panel will make one definite recommendation concerning coed affairs. The chairman explained, "We will urge

Grail Will Award Six Scholarships For Coming Year

Willie Long, newly-elected Delegata of the Order of the Grail, announced to the Daily Tar Heel today that the Grail was awarding six scholarships of $200 each to cover the spring quarter of this year and the three regular quarters of next year.

Long, a senior from Garysburg, who was elected Grail head this quarter, stated the scholarship would be awarded through Edwin Lanier's Student Aid office. The money will come from the Grail scholarship fund.

The scholarships are covering this quarter, Long explained, because the Order has not made any of its regular awards yet this year.

The Grail scholarship committee, headed by Bob Kirby, will name the students to receive the awards from a list compiled by the Student Aid office and recipients will be chosen on the basis of needs and other help they are receiving.

Surratt Runs for Secretary-Treasurer; Brockmann Up for Magazine Editor

CP Man Selected By Acclamation

By Ed Long

Moving quickly Tuesday, the newly formed Campus party nominated by acclamation Charles Brockmann for the editorship of the Carolina Magazine. Declining a motion to table the nomination, pending appearance of Earl Heffner to speak for Fred Jacobson, and Tookie Hodgson to speak for himself, the Party's machinery worked swiftly and efficiently in effecting the nomination.

Other nominations, including offices of secretary-treasurer, women's member to the Student Council and Student Legislature, student body vice-president and men's representatives to the Legislature, were tabled due to the absence of several earlier-selected candidates for nomination.

Air Force Editor

Brockmann, a rising senior from High Point, was a member of the editoral board of Scripts 'n Pranks, Davidson college magazine, for three years and was managing editor of an Air Force newspaper. He was also on the editoral staff of the Davidsonian. He is now a member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Johnny Jones, party chairman, appointed a platform committee to draw up a party platform, to round out the meeting's agenda. The members of that committee include Walter Arnold, Stanley Smith, Jesse Dedmond and Steve Millikin.

Next meeting of the party is scheduled for this afternoon in the Graham Memorial Candlelight Room at 4:15.

John Surratt, rising senior from Winston-Salem, is running for secretary-treasurer of the student body on the University party ticket. He is at present vice-president of the junior class.

University Party Makes Nomination

By Chuck Hauser

The University party officially announced yesterday afternoon that John Surratt, rising senior from Winston-Salem, was running on the University party ticket for secretary-treasurer of the student body.

Surrat, a resident of Grimes dormitory, made the following statement, which was released by UP chairman Alex Davis yesterday:

No Rash Promises

"I do not promise that I can dissolve the Chapel Hill Merchants association, that the Town Council of Chapel Hill will do as I say, or that the Board of Trustees will come to me for instructions.

"I can promise, however, that if I am elected, I will carry out the duties of my office to the best of my ability, and will work for the betterment of student living conditions."

Junior Class Leader

Surratt is the present vice-president of the junior class. He has served in the Student Legislature as a member of the Ways and Means committee and the Finance committee. A former member of the freshman class Executive committee, he was a freshman counselor during orientation week last September.

Marine Corps Classes Reactivated on Campus; Recruit Today, Friday

Simultaneous with the announcement that the United States Marine corps has reactivated platoon leaders classes at many of the nation's accredited colleges and universities, it was announced that Marine Major Donald W. Sherman will be in the lobby of South building today and tomorrow in the interest of Marine officer procurement.

Marine platoon leaders classes are open to freshmen as well as sophomores and juniors. Students selected for the program are enlisted in the Marine corps reserve (Inactive). As reservists, they are subject to call to active duty only during a state of national emergency, unless they request such assignment. Although a state of national emergency now exists, only those who volunteer are being called to active duty.

After successful completion of the required periods of military training and after graduation from college with a baccalaureate degree, platoon leaders are eligible for appointments to the commissioned ranks of second lieutenants, U. S. Marine corps reserve. A limited number of graduates may be commisisoned in the regular Marine corps.

Rent Cut Made In House Units

Slash Culminates Long Negotiation

Rent reduction of from three to five dollars a month became effective on the veterans' housing units in Victory village the first of this month.

The lowered rents culminated six months of negotiations between a University Veterans association committee headed by Ruffin Bailey, University officials, the Atlanta office of the Federal Public Housing agency and the Durham office of OPA.

Rents on the Laurinburg type units, formerly ranging from $27 to $36 a month have been reduced five dollars per unit and are now set at $22 to $31 a month. The Wilmington type units were lowered $3 and now rent for $27. No change was made in the rent scale for United Kingdom units.

A new barracks type housing unit now under construction will be rented for $25 a month.

Approved after Investigation

The reductions were approved by the FPHA upon reccomendation of OPA investigators after they had made a survey of rents on comparable property in the Chapel Hill area. Although the reductions were not as great as first proposed by the veterans and University, both Bailey, representing the Victory Village veterans, and J. S. Bennett, Supervisor of Operations for the University, have stated that they are gratified that FPHA consented to a lowering of the rent schedule.

At the same time that he announced the rent revision, Bennett said that work is now in progress to improve the grounds and roads in the housing project area.

Pratt to Appear In Recital Here

Stuart Pratt, accomplished pianist and faculty member of Meredith college, will be heard in a piano recital on Wednesday evening at 8:30 in Hill hall.

After receiving his A.B. degree from Hartwick college, he studied at the Philadelphia Musical academy where he was awarded a Bachelor of Music degree, and received his Master of Music degree from Syracuse university.

For the past five years Pratt has been head of the piano department at Meredith college, where he recently gave a recital and was praised for his interpretation and phrasing of the compositions of Bach, Lizst, and Chopin.

The program will include works of Bach, Beethoven, and Chopin.

Freshmen to See Films At Mass Meet Tonight

Films of "Football Thrills of 1946" and Walt Disney's "South of the Border" will be shown in connection with a special meeting of the Freshman class tonight at 7:30 in 110 New West.

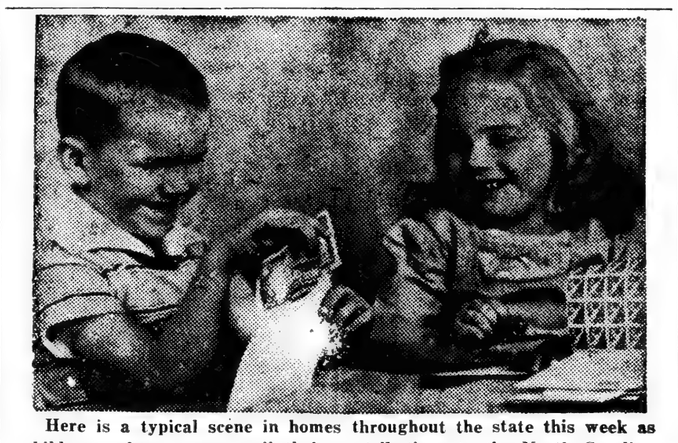
Sue Everett, Doris Harrell Elected to Senate Positions

Committee Reports Program for Election Of New Coed Officers to Be Held Tuesday

By Ruth Evans

Sue Everett, junior from Palmyra, was elected new secretary and Doris Harrell, junior from Raleigh, was named treasurer of the Coed Senate Tuesday evening. Filling vacancies left by graduating seniors, Mona Bensel and Blanche Jacobi, both were elected after assuming senatorial seats by virtue of presidential appointment. They will hold office for the remainder of the term of the seniors they replaced.



A third election resulted in the naming of Pat Lane as co-chairman of ceod orientation, to work with the vice-president of the YWCA in the program held at the beginnig of the fall quarter.

In committee reports Jerry Atkins announced plans for coed elections to be held next Tuesday. At this time coeds nominated in mass meeting recently will be voted on by coeds in three precincts. These special elections are being held early to allow the operation of a detailed leadership training program.

Concerning the election of house presidents and the president of the Interdormitory council, a recommendation was passed stating that nominations will be made in each dormitory on Monday evening and the elections will occur April 14. This will enable the Council to choose its leaders two weeks after the above date.

Reports were also heard from committies on orientation, the proposed point system, and the Woman's Handbook. The resignation of three Senate members were read, and an infringement of a Coed senate law by

AVC Opposes Truman Policy, Outlaw of Communist Party

Expressing qualified opposition to President Truman's Greek-Turkish policy, the American Veterans committee in its first meeting of the spring quarter Tuesday evening denounced the policy as detrimental to the United Nations and ineffective as a gesture against the spread of Russian nationalism.

In a resolution expressing views of the Chapel Hill chapter, AVC pointed out that "by supplying aid to these governments the United States would assume that the Greek people have no choice but between absolute regimes of either leftist or rightist persuasion and would, indeed, make that assumption a fact."

In a resolution opposing "any bill purporting to outlaw the Communist party in the United States," AVC asserted that disfranchisement of a legally established political party would "necessarily establish a precedent dangerous to the future of American democracic expression, which is obvious in view of experiences in totalitarian nations of our time."

"The American people are capable of distinguishing at the polls," the resolution said, "between democracy and communism."

Jerry Hodson was elected treasurer to succeed Tom McDade, who was forced to resign as a result of his extensive work with the Chapel Hill co-op. The chapter also heard a report by Walter Spearman on the coming AVC national convention in Milwaukee, to which the chapter plans to send delegates.

Jerry Hodson and Garry Fullerton were nominated to attend the AVC southern regional convention in Atlanta on April 19.

Eliminate Final Exams

A letter received from student Paul L. Furgatch included the following paragraph.

"In every discussion of the honor code at Carolina the blame for the collapse of the system has been levelled at the student. Professor Chester Warren Quimby of Ohio Wesleyan university has presented a different and plausible approach in a letter to the editors of Life."

The letter referred to is printed below:

"We professors are largely responsible for student cheating. We invite it by:

1. Our own stupidity. Any professor who gives the kind of quiz that can be passed by cribbing off the cuff, etc. isn't quite bright.

2. What we expect from the student in an examination. All semester long he has been toting thick textbooks in some half-a-dozen subjects. In addition he has class lectures and collateral assignments. No mind, however, brilliant, can absorb so much information in so short a time. Yet the student is expected to enter an examination blind, while the professor, who has confined himself to one field, has all along relied on his notes. He would "flunk" without them.

3. The artificiality of the whole examination system. The student is supposed to know the answers to any question, sight unseen, thrown at him. But in life the lawyer may consult his legal tomes, the physician can refer to his medical books. . . ."

We believe that Professor Quimby will probably find much support for his beliefs from students on this campus and others throughout the country. His ideas are certainly different from those shared by many other men in the teaching profession.

We do not feel, however, that the professor is so much to blame for student cheating. But his letter does contain one sentence with which we have long been in agreement—"the artificiality of the whole examination system."

We do not feel that final examinations afford an accurate insight into either what the student has learned during the year or his inherent intelligence and ability. Examinations can prove to be pitfalls for many brilliant students and lifesavers for some who have learned little all year long. The amount of knowledge absorbed by the student throughout the year and his daily classwork is what should furnish an indication to his ability and learning. His final grade should not be dependent on a final examination, which often becomes a hazard for a usually intelligent student and which many students who have done nothing all year long can pass by a night or week of intensive studying, better known as "cramming."

In the perfect system of education, elimination of the final examination would be ideal. For many reasons, such as the great number of students which makes it impossible for the professor to know and study them and forces him to resort to quizzes, examinations are a necessary evil in modern day education. But perhaps someday the time will come, as it has in some schools and in some courses, where the headaches and heartaches of examinations will be eliminated and education will take another step forward.

On Dogs and Appetites

Dogs unquestionably have their tradition-studded place on the campus, but we do not believe that their numerous hangouts should include the interior of any of our local eateries.

Regardless of whether the dog be one of the campus favorites or just another mongrel, our canine companinon still has no business inside any restaurant, his hunger notwithstanding.

The majority of the students are fond of dogs. We like them too. But no one cares to look up from a juicy steak into the anguished eyes and dripping mouth of a hungry dog. It does something to ones appetite.

Also, it is unsanitary. We have noticed signs in many cafes stating that no dogs were allowed, but students still find themselves eating on occasion with unhealthy looking dogs looking over their shoulder.

Let's be kind to the dogs, but let's keep them out of local restaurants.

In Defense of Our Foreign Policy

Dear Sir:

It is easy for so-called democratic loving individuals like Manny Margolis to call President Truman's policy toward Greece and Turkey a failure and a step in the direction of war, when all they have is red spots before their eyes. Although Mr. Margolis presented a few logical points, in his criticism of Truman's foreign policy, he offered no concrete suggestion which would strengthen the cause of freedom and democracy among the nations of the world. Instead he cleverly and on numerous occasions manipulated our precious freedoms of speech and press to boomerang the so-called virtues of the evil and godless dostrine of Communism, so that intelligent Americans would be lulled into a false security regarding the safety of the God-fearing rights which they now enjoy under Democracy.

It is true that no people can be bought and no thought or belief can be outlawed, but Communism does not have to be fed and allowed to grow in a healthy American society if we hope to live in a world guided by the precepts of Christ. J. Edgar Hoover, director of the FBI and the man in whom all Americans have confidence said, "The Communist Trojan Horse has now become the Trojan snake in American life." We freedom-loving Americans cannot forget Russia's attack on little Finland in 1939, not to mention the Hitler-Stalin alliance when USSR stabbed Poland in the back. Let us also not forget in our rightful indignation, the mass murder in the Ukraine in the winter of 1932 when nearly five millions of peasants were deliberately starved to death by Joseph Stalin.

Mr. Margolis states that this nation is still licking its wounds from the recent world struggle against Fascism, but he did not tell you that we never won the battle against Fascism. From the standpoint of the USA it was a war against all tyranny, which would destroy human liberty.

If we are to achieve a just and lasting peace among ourselves, and with all nations, now is the time to undertake a crusade against Communism at home and abroad. We should support President Truman's foreign aid policy with utmost vigor. We should send immediate economic as well as military aid to all freedom-loving countries who are in danger of being devoured by totalitarian regimes whose ultimate goal is world domination.

By maintaining a strong, well-trained Army and pursuing a firm Democratic foreign policy with Russia, we may incur the hate of her leaders but at the same time we undoubtedly will retain Russia's respect. Through this course we can demonstrate true Christian charity which is the basis of a lasting peace.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

MARINES DETAILED AS SERVANTS AT NAVY OFFICER'S PARTY; CIO OFFICIALS TELL PHIL MURRAY THAT INDUSTRY SITS ON HANDS; REPUBLICANS FIRE BLIND MAN BUT RETAIN BARTENDER.

Washington—Using Marine enlisted men as servants seems to be catching among certain brass hats.

This column recently revealed how Marine Corps Commandant Gen. Alexander Vandergrift had used enlisted Marines as bartenders, hat-check boys, and doormen at cocktail parties, despite Marine Regulation 553, which states that "under no circumstances shall any enlisted man be employed as a servant."

Gen. Vandergrift, however, is not the only sinner. It now develops that Col. Harold E. Rosecrans, officer in charge of the Marines guarding the Washington Naval Gun Factory, also drafted enlisted men. He issued orders detailing two Marine sergeants, one corporal and nine privates to act as hat-check boys and doormen and to park cars at a party given for high-ranking officers by Adm. Glen B. Davis, commanding officer of the Naval Gun Factory. In charge of servant detail was warrant officer Ernest T. Bean. The men were not asked if they were willing to serve on this detail, nor were they paid anything for their services.

And while Marines were resentful at being relegated to the position of servants for General Vandergrift, the Marines at the Naval Gun Factory were even more indignant at waiting on a Navy Admiral.

Col. Rosecrans has gone even farther, and has used a detail of approximately four enlisted men to clean his personal quarters every day. Over the week-end, furthermore, six or seven Marines give his home a thorough Saturday housecleaning — sweeping, swabbing, and polishing until the place gleams. It's a fine solution to the servant problem—if you don't mind forgetting Iwo Jima, the Halls of Montezuma and the Shores of Tripoli.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

This column recently reported the difficulties of Polish Ambassador Winiewicz in finding a butler for his Embassy. A Filipino butler who applied for the job was able to mix only old-fashioneds because that was all they drank in the Navy. He thought the Embassy guests would have to be talked into drinking old-fashioneds. He did not get the job.

Day after publication of this column, a young Filipino turned up at the Polish Embassy with a copy of the column in his hand, explaining that he knew how to mix all kinds of drinks. He is now butler at the Polish Embassy. . . . Chairman Bob Taft of the Senate Labor committee is facing rebellion from Democrats and some Republicans on his committee who resent his hiring of Dr. Marjorie Shearon as committee consultant. Mrs. Shearon, formerly with the Republican National committee, has publicly called several senators on the committee Communists and fellow travelers. Now she expects to be a "consultant" for the solons she has called Communists. . . . Chairman Fred Hartley (N. J.) of the House Labor committee has been calling Republican members only to draft labor legislation. While Democratic Congressmen are barred, the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers are allowed to sit in on the secret sessions. This unusual, unparliamentary practice has been protested by a fellow Republican, Rep. Gerald Landis of Indiana, who has reminded Hartley that the Democrats didn't treat Republicans that way when they were in the majority.

Men's Glee Club Concert Is Delightful Musical Program

By R. Haskell Hamilton

The five hundred music enthusiasts who braved Tuesday night's rain to attend the Men's Glee club spring concert were more than amply compensated for whatever discomfort they may have undergone before entering Hill hall. Certainly, the program presented was nothing less than comfort and delight to the listeners. Under the direction of Paul Young, the nearly 150 male voices accompanied by pianists William Waters and John O'Steen sang out sweetly, with coordination with a rare mellowness, and with an understanding of the singing of serious music.

Judging from the applause of the audience, the Glee club's work brought much joy and entertainment to the listeners. In fact, the only non-satisfying feature of the concert was the omission of native American folk songs from the program. I, for one, would like to see a combined Glee club concert in the Forest theatre, this spring, featuring American folk songs; and some of the choral arrangements of a few of our more "popular" American classics. I'm sure that such a program would find wide favor among Chapel Hill audiences, and I put forth the suggestion to the Music department, for what it is worth.

The program Tuesday night opened with Arcadelt's arrangement of the ever-popular "Ave Maria," which seemed particularly appropriate during this Easter season. "Plorate, Filii Israel" (Carissimi) and two standards from the masters Bach and Handel "Now Let Every Tongue" and "Hallelujah, Amen," closed the initial portion of the program.

Pianist John Ellis favored the audience with Mozart's "Fantasia in D Minor," which was well received as a result of Mr. Ellis' talent and great digital dexterity in handling the selection's chromatics.

Next the Glee club returned with a series of three songs, sung in alternating choruses. The antiphonal style and spriteness of the two choruses was readily apparent as the club rendered Leisring's "O Filii Et Filiae," Palestrina's "Adoremus Te" and the familiar "Echo Song" of diLasso.

Edgar vom Lehn, baritone, was featured in a solo vocal as he sang "Pretty Lady," (the catalogue aria of Leporello, from Don Giovanni), accompanied by John O'Steen on the piano. Mr. vom Lehn's singing was exceptionally well received.

Six Love Songs by Brahms preceded the closing number of the first half of the program, Thompson's musical arrangement of Hilaire Belloc's "Tarantella." One of everybody's favorites, the "Tarantella" was sung Tuesday night in a finely contrasted rousing style, followed by the mournful dirge-like approach to the final stanza.

Following the intermission, the Glee club gave a feelingful rendition of Bantock's "Requiem," followed by the Wanderer's Song of Delius; and concluding the triad with Kun's rollicking, bounding "Hunting Song."

Palmgren's short, spiritous Finnish student song, "I'm Coming Back Home" was well treated by the group. Brahms' arrangement of a Suabian Folk Song and Davis' four-stanza "Gay Young Jack" were next. Perhaps the best song of the evening was Bartholomew's sea chantey "What Shall We Do with a Drunken Sailor," sung in a lusty, rhythmical style.

The Coronation Scene from Boris Godunov completed the program. This last selection, familiar to most of us through the Don Cossack recording, was sung in a robust, earthy, full manner which left the audience clamoring for encores. The Glee club obliged with two encores, "Down Among the Dead Men" by Von Williams, and Cook's "The Sleigh."

Netmen Take Third Straight Win By Blanking Kalamazoo, 6-0

IRWIN SMALLWOOD

IF FIRST WEEK performance is sound indication of things to follow, Carolina is in for one of its best spring sports seasons in history. We refer, naturally, to the record turned in by the baseball, track, tennis and golf teams during the first five days of competition.

These five days have seen four Tar Heel teams go unbeaten in eight contests, and in all eight they have shown signs of more outstanding displays for the future. It's a credit to Carolina coaching, and to the boys, and from this angle it appears as though they will keep it up and make this a red letter spring season—and add to the Tar Heel Southern conference title rack that already holds five out of seven played during the fall and winter quarters. The boxing championship is the only one that the Tar Heels were not high in the running for, the White Phantoms having gone to the finals in the fight for the basketball crown.

Probably more interest has been shown in tennis and baseball than in golf and track, but that is because of the presence of Vic Seixas, No. 16 ranking amateur in the nation, on the net crew, and the wide crave for America's favorite game.

Tennis, incidentally, drew what was probably the largest gallery in history last Saturday for the opening meet with Yale. Something in the vicinity of 2,000 showed up to see the Tar Heels take the New Englanders in stride. And crowds of between 2,000 and 3,000 have been on hand for the first two baseball games despite weather that hasn't been the best for the diamond sport.

Coach Dale Ranson, who is in his 23rd year as track coach at Carolina, will be anxiously watching the Carolina Relays Saturday afternoon when they are revived after a short lapse due to the war. The reason? The relays are his own personal project, started back about 1942, and he has been working untiringly during the past weeks to make them go this first year they have been held since the war.

It is a good job the outspoken little cinder hopper has done, noting that he has teams taking part from Yale, Tennessee, Duke and State. And this is in addition to a number of the larger high schools from the area in a special scholastic division. Ranson even has plans to enlarge the event, which will be one of the top contests of its kind in the South if it keeps going at the present pace.

Speaking of track, Carolina's spring cinder hopes were given a big boost last week when Jack Moody of Plainfield, N. J., entered under the banner of the Blue and White after being discharged from the army. Moody, a 19-year-old rookie, was twice national interscholastic champion in the high jump, was placed on the Look magazine All-American scholastic track team in 1944 and won the high jump in the Millrose games as a high school senior.

JUST SPORTS: A familiar figure of the not-too-distant past was in attendance at the Carolina-Michigan State game here Monday afternoon, former Lt. Howard Haak of the Pre-Flight school. Haak, who was head trainer in the navy program, is now one of the chief scouts for the Brooklyn Dodgers and is in North Carolina to conduct a baseball school at High Point during the next three weeks . . . A Pittsburgh Pirate scout was also roaming around the Tar Heel baseball camp last week, and he was impressed with the Carolina combine—particularly Jack Hussey's clout over the left field wall in a practice game . . . Chuck Quinlan, head wrestling coach, and Head Coach Carl Snavely of the football team were well received by the members of the Monogram club night before last at the initiation ceremonies. And Snavely gave the Monogramers the green light on their proposed intra-squad game at the end of spring practice . . . The Monogramers, by the way, will be honored guests of the Pi Phi sorority this evening . . . Coach Tom Scott of the White Phantoms has returned from a trip to Missouri and Kansas where he visited relatives. He also attended the National AAU basketball tourney in Denver, Col.

Seixas Scores Easy Victory

Darkness Forces Halt To Play In Doubles

By Billy Carmichael

Fighting the elements of nature at every turn, Carolina's flashy raqueteers got on the courts yesterday afternoon long enough to capture six straight singles matches and blank Kalamazoo College of Michigan, 6-0, for their third successive victory.

Due to the torrential rains that hit Chapel Hill yesterday, the matches were not begun until late in the afternoon and darkness finally closed in before the three doubles matches could be completed.

Haverford college will move into Chapel Hill this afternoon to take the courts against the Kenfieldmen, who will be seeking their fourth straight win. The match is scheduled to begin at 3 o'clock.

Vic Seixas, local No. 1 man, turned in an outstanding performance as he disposed of his opponent in short order, 6-4, 6-2, while team mate Clark Taylor was also putting on an exhibition of fine tennis in defeating visitor Alex Hetzeck, 6-1, 6-4.

The No. 3 match turned out to be the top tilt of the day as Tar Heel Charlie Rice came back after dropping the opening set. 2-6, to conquer Kalamazoo's Art Leighton, 6-2, 6-3 in a hard-fought encounter.

Coach Kenfield's remaining trio of Jim Nicholson, Don Skakle and Heath Alexander, then took over and registered three easy wins to give the local team the margin of victory.

Play in the doubles was begun, but soon the onrolling darkness took its toll and the matches were called after each quartet had completed little more than a set.

The Tar Heels played some of their best tennis of early season, especially evident by the fact that they dropped only one set during the afternoon.

The summaries:

Seixas (NC) defeated Sunderland, 6-4, 6-2.

Taylor (NC) defeated Hetzeck, 6-1, 6-4.

Rice (NC) defeated Leighton, 2-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Nicholson (NC) defeated Beresky, 6-1, 7-5.

Skakle (NC) defeated Jemal, 6-1, 6-2.

Alexander (NC) defeate Stowe, 6-2, 6-4.

Mural Openers Are Cancelled

Umpires, Managers To Convene Today

The opening of the intramural softball season was postponed again yesterday afternoon because of bad weather, and the first games are now scheduled to be played next Tuesday.

Due to the loss of two weeks playing time, the intramural department is having to revise the softball schedule in both the fraternity and dormitory divisions.

There will be a meeting at 5 o'clock this afternoon of softball umpires and the dormitory, fraternity and independent softball managers. The new setup of the softball leagues and schedules will be explained at the meeting, which is to be held in room 302 Woollen gym.

Acting mural director P. A. Lee said that smaller leagues will be formed, giving a schedule of eight games for each team instead of the eleven originally slated.

The new schedule will be made so as to eliminate as much as possible having any mural games on the same day as a varsity baseball game, according to Lee, who voiced regret that the slate had to be sliced. However, it was the only possible alternative in view of the existing conditions.

Top-Flight Collegiate Field Assured For Revival Of Carolina Relay Classic

With the college division lining up Duke, Carolina, State, Tennessee and Yale, the revival of the Carolina Relays promises to offer one of the stellar track attractions in the South during the spring season.

The field events are scheduled to get under way at 2 o'clock with the running events getting off an hour later. The high school division lists teams from Durham, Burlington, Granby, Norfolk, Va., Greenville, Huntington, W. Va., and Raleigh.

The highlight event of the afternoon is expected to be the hurdle events which will pair off Carolina's Chunk Simmons against Yale's Sherwood Finley, IC4A champion. Both these boys are among the leading timber toppers in the nation and keen competition is anticipated.

Another event that promises fireworks is the pole vault, which pits Norm McLeod of the Tar Heels against Jim Korick of the University of Tennessee. These boys ended up in a tie for first place last Saturday in Florida with leaps of 12 feet 9 inches.

Kramer Advances In Texas Tourney

Houston, Texas, April 2—(UP)—National tennis champion Jack Kramer has moved into the quarter-final round of the River Oaks International tennis tournament by beating Bob Goldbeck 6-0, 6-3.

Second-seeded Frankie Parker beat John Hoff of Houston 6-1, 6-0. Bitsy Grant of Atlanta, three-time holder of the River Oaks title, defeated James Hunt of the University of Texas 6-1, 6-1. In other preliminary matches, Billy Talbert of Wilmington, Deleware, eliminated Jay Fuller of Houston 6-2, and 6-1, and Eddie Moylan of San Francisco dropped Wilbur Hess of Houston 6-1, 6-3.

Carolina-Ohio Tilt Called; Cavaliers Here Tomorrow

One more game was washed off Carolina's baseball slate yesterday when the Tar Heels' clash with Ohio university had to be cancelled after an all-morning downpour soaked Emerson field.

The cancellation, the second of the young season due to uncooperative weather conditions, lowered the original schedule of 28 contests one more notch. There is no chance to shift the tilt to another date, since the Bobcats oppose Duke today, an open day for Carolina, while the locals engage Virginia and Duke tomorrow and Saturday respectively.

The bad weather did help to solve Assistant Coach Walter Rabb's hurling problems. With Bub Blair and Tommy Andrew named to pitch yesterday's game, the popular mentor, in charge of the team while Coach Bunn Hearn continues his recuperation, was uncertain as to his flingers for tomorrow.

With the intervention of the rain, Blair and Andrew will now see action against the Cavaliers. Monk Whiteheart, victor in Carolina's initial success of 1947 last Monday, will face the Blue Devils on Saturday when the Tar Heels inaugurate their Big Four campaign against the club that finished as runner-up in 1946.

Yesterday's respite afforded Coaches Rabb and Henry House some time to devote to looking over the flock of new hurlers still on the squad. The need for an additional starter became acute last weekend when it was announced that Hamp Coleman, one of last year's top moundsmen, had signed a professional contract with the Louisville club in the American association.

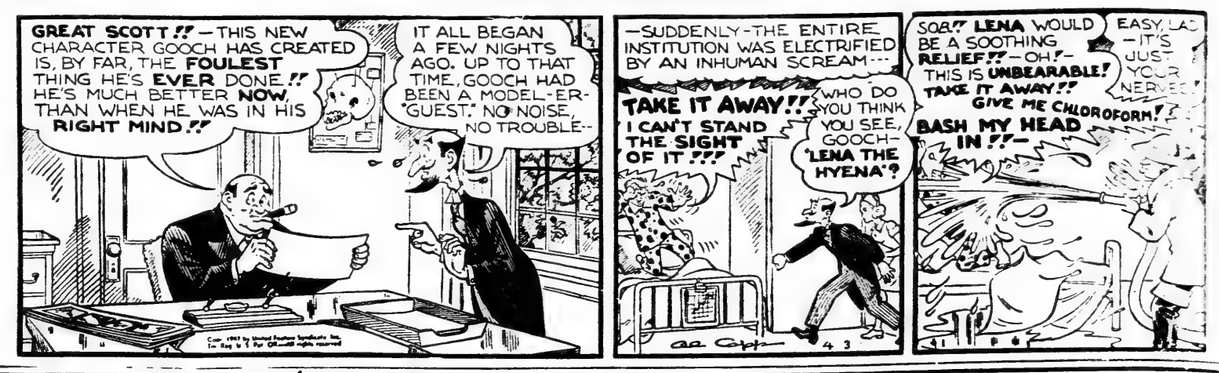
the Student party by nominating candidates for several coed offices in student government was cited.

The ruling is as follows:

BILL 120 passed by the Coed Senate May 14, 1946: Nominations for women officers elected by women shall be made in a coed mass meeting at least 10 days before elections. Women's council members are elected by women, and according to the above law should be nominated by women students.



Other business included the passage of two recommendations, both to be followed up by committee action. The Senate, in order to insure more complete signing of the honor system by women not living on campus, will recommend to the admissions office that all prospective students be required to sign the honor and campus codes before being allowed entrance into the University. The recommendation included an amendment providing for a definite reiteration of the meaning of that signature and acceptance during orientation.

The second recomendation asked that electric clocks synchronized with the bell tower clock, be placed in the four women's dormitories lacking them. This action was taken to solve a familiar problem of disagreeing timepieces in keeping dormitory closing hours.

Billy Hudson Excited Over Duke-UNC Classic, Only Five Months Late

William P. (Billy) Hudson, Carolina B.A. '38 and M.A. '39, U. S. vice-consul at Barranquilla, Colombia, S. A., has just read the details of the last Carolina-Duke football game. To his parents, Dr. and Mrs . A. P. Hudson of Chapel Hill, he wrote this week:

"I received, last week, the program and the write-ups of the Duke game, sent by steamer mail. Thank you ever so much. I raced through old Smith Barrier's pimply-purple story three times, with all the excitement and even the nascent tears of the exile. What a great game! Pray light some candles to San Carlos Justice for me."

A Washington, D. C., AP dispatch recently announced Billy Hudson's appointment as foreign officer of the United States, diplomatic secretary, and vice-consul of career. He and his wife (formerly Peggy Sabine, of Charlotte, UNC '39) have been at Barranquilla about two years. He became a State department career man this winter, after having passed the State department's career examinations.

While at Carolina he was on the Daily Tar Heel staff, and in his senior year was editor-in-chief of the Carolina Magazine. An earlier letter, this spring, from Barranquilla, brought his father the news that he had just won the golf championship of the Barranquilla Country club, with a silver loving cup and a case of Scotch as prizes.

Lilienthal Wins First Victory In Test Vote

Balloting Expected Early in Next Week

Washington, April 3. — (UP) — David Lilienthal has won a major victory on the floor of the Senate that Washington forecasters say virtually assures his confirmation as atomic-energy chief.

Late this afternoon, the Senate voted 52 to 38 against a motion to shelve his appointment until the FBI looked over his past.

The motion to send the Lilienthal nomination back to committee was considered the test of strength between his friends and foes. The most powerful foe, Ohio's Robert Taft, lost one of his most significant intra-party battles. He lost after arguing in vain that Lilienthal is "soft" toward Russia and should not be entrusted with this country's most vital secret.

Take Recess

Immediately after the vote, the Senate took an Easter weekend recess. Indications are it will vote on the direct confirmation issue on Monday or Tuesday of next week. And it looks very much as though the former Tennessee Valley chairman will win his long fight.

Western Union Workers File Notice of Strike

New York, April 3.—(UP)—The Western Union division of the A. F. of L. Commercial Telegraphers union announced that contract negotiations with the Western Union Telegraph company have broken down and that it has filed a 30-day strike notice against the company in accordance with the Smith-Connally act.

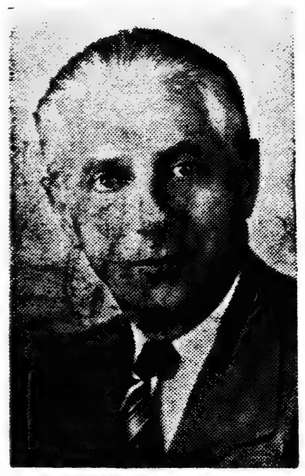
Krug Closes 500 Mines Regarded as Dangerous

Washington, April 3. — (UP) — One-sixth of the nation's coal supply will be cut off indefinitely by the department's mine-closing orders issued today by Secretary of the Interior Krug. More than 500 mines, regarded as dangerous, must remain closed until mine safety committees or federal inspectors decide their hazards have been corrected.

John L. Lewis has denounced Secretary Krug for failing to close unsafe coal mines before 111 miners were killed at Centralia, Illinois. Lewis told a House Labor subcommittee today that Congress should enact a resolution demanding Krug's removal from office, and he urged Congress to return the $700,000 fine levied on the mine workers—to be used as a trust fund for the families of the Centralia disaster victims.

Committee Approves Plan for Greek Aid

Washington, April 3. — (UP) — Senate Foreign Relations committee has unanimously approved President Truman's $400,000,000 program to quarantine communism in Greece and Turkey. The bill contains an amendment by Chairman Arthur Vandenberg giving the United Nations power to call a halt to the program if it desires. The bill now goes to the Senate floor where debate is expected to begin Monday.



Asheville Electricians Begin Citywide Strike

Asheville, April 3.—(UP)—A city-wide strike of union electricians is in progress in Asheville without picketing or violence.

The union electricians are members of the A. F. of L.'s International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. Their contract with Asheville electrical companies ran out April 1, and they are asking 25 cents an hour wage increases which the employers refuse.

WEATHER TODAY

Increasing cloudiness and slightly warmer. Light rains tonight.

HUGO GIDUZ

French House Will Be Held This Summer

Professor Hugo Giduz, founder and director of the French house, announces that he has finally succeeded in leasing the Alpha Delta house, 407 E. Rosemary, for the 1947 session. The Extension division, sponsor of the French house, was able to secure this lease through the cooperation of the Alpha Delta Pi and the Delta Delta Delta sororities.

The House will operate as last year, women students living in the House and men on the campus. The latter will take their meals at the House and will participate in the entire program there.

Students who are desirous of improving their ability to use spoken French will find here an excellent opportunity for such practice. At all times, the language spoken in the House will be French. Graduate students will be permitted to take courses in the romance language departments.

Assisting Professor Giduz will be Mrs. Charlotte V. Huse and Jacques Hardre both of whom were active in past sessions. Mrs. Huse will be in charge and instructor in conversation, while Hardre will conduct a class in conversation and one in French civilization. Professor Giduz will give a course in French review grammar for advanced students and teachers, and a course in the materials and methods of teaching French.

Anyone interested in registering for the French house, which will operate during the first summer session (June 12-July 22), may get information by contacting the Extension division in Swain hall (phone F-421), or Prof. Giduz in 305 Murphey or 107 Peabody.

NAVY PHYSICALS

All students who have not completed their physical examinations at the Naval Armory are requested to report to the Professor of Naval science today between 9 and 4 o'clock.

Constitutional Changes Killed

Folger Nominated by UP For Vice-President Post

Legislature Shouldn't Be Debating Society, Says Aspiring Candidate for Speaker's Spot

By Chuck Hauser

A Student Legislature which "serves the student body instead of acting as a debating society for political parties" is the proposed aim of Jack Folger, who, it was officially revealed yesterday, has been nominated by the University party for the position of vice-president of the student body.

The office to which Folger, a junior from Dobson, aspires, also entails the duties of Speaker of the Student Legislature.

Makes Statement

Folger's statement was released yesterday by Alex Davis, chairman of the University party:

"If the student body elects me to the post of Speaker of the Student Legislature, I will see that every member of the Legislature has a fair chance to express his views on every bill brought up."

No Debating Society

"I will do my best to see that the Legislature serves the student body instead of acting as a debating society for political parties."

Folger has been a member of the Legislature for two years, having previously served on both freshman and sophomore Honor Councils and Executive committees. Active in campus athletics, he has played junior varsity football, and was a member of his freshman class basketball squad.

SP Names Talley, Park for Council

The Student party, at its meeting yesterday afternoon, nominated Vivian Park and Walt Talley as rising junior class members for the Men's council.

Dewey Dorsett, who appeared during the course of the meeting, asked the Party to submit names, which the group would approve, to fill the vacancies now existing—one man and one coed representative in the legislature, and one coed in the Student council.

Next meeting of the Party is set for Tuesday afternoon.

Students May Pick Up Identification Photos

Students who had identification photos made at the beginning of this quarter may pick them up today in the basement of Swain hall.

Budget Action Gets Postponed Until Next Week

Although the campus budget was not discussed, the Student Legislature last night cleaned the table of proposed constitutional amendments, defeating the second half of the Student council change, and a bill which would have killed the Legislature's power to determine offenses.

Bill Mackie, chairman of the Finance committee explained his group's failure to report out on any sections of the 1947-48 budget. Mackie said, "The publications board budget is the largest single item at least $54,000 and has not yet been submitted. Without it, we feel that we cannot sensibly report on any other sections and still properly control the entire budget."

Freshman Elections

The assembly also defeated a resolution introduced by Basil Sherill to hold another run-off in the disputed freshman, sophomore elections.

In defeating the two constitutional proposals, the Legislature kept the membership of the Student council at nine, instead of five as the bill contained.

Also the Legislature retained its power to determine offenses against the student body. Concurrent with this, the body is authorized by the constitution to set the maximum and minimum penalties for violations against the campus and honor codes.

Constitution Finished

With the constitution off their minds legislators can now turn to consideration of the budget which is scheduled to be reported out of the Finance committee by next week.

Red Charges Flatly Denied By Local AVC

Group Hits Passage Of Hayes Amendment

Flatly denying that the American Veterans committee is "communist dominated" or that Franklin Roosevelt Jr. has disclaimed any connection with AVC as was stated before a committee of the North Carolina legislature this week, Walter Spearman, regional vice-chairman of AVC, and Ben Rouzie, chairman of the Chapel Hill chapter, today wired members of the state legislature.

They protested pasage of the "Hayes amendment" which would except the American Veterans committee from the provisions of a bill allowing income tax deductions on contributions made to veterans organizations.

"The American Veterans committee is not Communist dominated but represents 90,000 liberal veterans dedicated to American principles of democracy," stated the communication to legislators. "Franklin Roosevelt Jr. has not disclaimed connection with the group as falsely stated by James M. Hayes but is actually enthusiastic and active member of National Planning Committee and in charge of veterans housing. AVC is acredited by the Veterans administration, has 10 chapters in North Carolina with some 500 members. Legislature should not condemn unjustly without hearing."

Wiring Legislature

Roosevelt today telephoned Spearman that he was wiring Representative Kerr Craige Ramsey, chairman of the Finance committee of the N. C. House of Representatives, and Senator Gordon Gray, chairman of the Senate Finance committee, urging defeat of the Hayes amendment and declaring he was an active member of AVC and knew it was not a Communist dominated organization.

It was pointed out by Spearman that the American Veterans committee has been particularly active in its efforts to secure veterans housing, increased subsistence for veterans under the G.I. Bill, and terminal leave pay for enlisted men.

"Through its national chairman, Charles Bolte, AVC suggested the plan whereby war bonds paid veterans for their terminal leave could be used to apply on GI insurance premiums," said Spearman, "and the present Rogers Bill for increased subsistence allowances for veterans in school was drawn up by leaders of AVC."

With the slogan of 'Citizens First, Veterans Second,' the 50,000 members would improve the welfare and living conditions of all citizens as well as veterans."

Godfrey, professor of history at the University, opened the conference with an address. IRC chairman Bristow spoke to the delegates on the Balkan crisis and on the situation in Italy.

Yack Editors Taking Life Easy These Spring Days

Charlotte Now Made Scene of Operations

By Sigsbee Miller

Up in the Yackety Yack office on the mezzanine floor of Graham Memorial, a lot of editors and assistant editors are taking life easy these days. The scene of operations has shifted to a Charlotte printing house where eight miles of glossy surfaced paper is being turned into the 7,000 yearbooks that will be distributed to Tar Heels sometime in May.

Suave, immodest Gene Johnstone, the editor in charge of all other editors, even found time to admit the press and give out some pertinent facts on the most ambitious student publication effort ever undertaken in the University's history.

Different—Surprise

"I think it's going to be a surprise to everybody," said Johnstone. "It's different. Of course I can't tell you anything about the theme or dedication. That's to be the surprise."

He rummaged among a stack of discarded proofs and brought forth a sheet of yellow paper from which he proceeded to read some statistics an enthusiastic staff had worked out.

"We're printing 7,000 copies this year at a cost of over $35,000," he said, "twice as many as in an ordinary year. Each book will consist of 420 pages. If you put all the pages together they would stretch 35,280,000 feet, or around eight miles. You could ride to Durham on them—by airplane of course. There'll be around 7,000 individual photographs, including a lot of snapshots, about four or five times as many as last year. We've met all our deadlines and the books should be ready by the middle or latter part of May. "And," he added happily, "This is the first time in many years that the printer's deadlines have been met."

GENE JOHNSTONE

Success by Self

Johnstone, who doesn't mind admitting that his very successful year of editorship is due largely to his own tact and diplomacy in dealing with people, is a political science major hailing from Haleyville, Ala. He was associate editor and later co-editor of the 1945 Yackety Yack.

Getting out a yearbook, he said, is a year-round job.

"I started work on the 1947 book right after I was elected editor-in-chief last spring," he said. "I worked on it all summer and by the fall term I had worked out the theme. That's the hardest and the most important part of the job. Since last September we've worked from six to eight hours a day, aranging contracts for space, having class photographs made, fitting in art work with our theme, dickering with printers and engravers, and so on. It hasn't been dull a minute, though. There's always something happening."

Eight Miles of Paper Make 7,000 Yearbooks

This was fervently corroborated by Business Manager Jean Huske, who sat on the sidelines lamenting her own star-crossed career. She wanted it recorded, she said, that the business end was the toughest thing of all about a yearbook. Johnstone smiled tolerantly and turned back.

Credit to Byrnes, Evans

Johnstone accorded a large share of the credit for this year's yearbook to Associate Editor Elizabeth Barnes and Managing Editor Ruth Evans. In fact, he observed, the whole staff had been a veritable paragon of cooperation. He mentioned Bill Moffatt and Peter Gerns, assistant editors; Business Manager Huske; Sid McAden, assistant business manager; John Kerr, sports editor; Winkie Andrews, art editor; Les Bodden, photography editor; Bettie Washburn, senior editor; Hubert Philpott, junior editor, and their respective aides.

Plans for circulation of the yearbooks are incomplete but they will probably be distributed after the fashion of giving out grades, Johnstone said.

Coeds Will Elect Officers of WAA, Speaker Tuesday

Coeds will go to the polls in a special election Tuesday to choose the Speaker of the Coed Senate and officers of the Women's Athletic association. These elections are being held in order to facilitate the functioning of the Coed Leadership Training program immediately.

Voting will be by precinct, with three polls centrally located on campus. Polls will be open from 9 till 5. Coeds living in Alderman, McIver, and Kenan will vote in McIver. Spencer residents will vote in Spencer. Gerrard hall will be the voting place for Smith, Carr, Archer, sorority houses, and town girls.

Jerry Atkins, elections chairman of the Coed senate, has announced the nominees chosen at a mass meeting of the coeds Thursday, March 27. For Speaker of the Coed senate, Barbara Cashion, Audrey Bryson, and Annie Ben Beale.

For president of the WAA, Marshall Spears. For other WAA officers: vice-president, K. D. Durham, Bill Lloyd; secretary, Mary Ellen Wellens, Betsy Anne Barbee; treasurer, Janet Crinkley, Nina Moseley; awards chairman, Mary Goodwin.

Watch Your Vote

Within a few short weeks, academic problems will have to take a temporary backseat to the campus political scene. Elections are coming and three major parties will spring platforms and candidates upon the voters as they seek to grab the spoils, i.e. the choice offices and the majority of positions for their candidates. Also, in the running will be a number of independent politicoes.

There will be a tendency for many students to sit back and sneer at the shenanigans of these neophyte politicians with a "so what?" attitude. "It's all kids' stuff", they will assert. Others will vote for the fun of it, a few for their friends, and a distinct minority for the men they consider the most capable for the job. Unfortunately, the vast majority will follow the party line, down the ballot with the candidates of the Campus, Student, or University party, depending upon an individual's own affiliations.

It is unfortunately true that no controversial issues are at stake. Rather the elections will be decided on an analogous feature similar to the national solid Democratic or staunch Republican vote. As a result, the independent voters—as in national elections—will be in a position to decide the election, if they so choose.

For this reason it would be wise for students to begin to analyze the qualifications of various candidates in order that they may vote intelligently.

Your vote may not affect you greatly, but it will mean practice for you as a voter.

For this reason, if no other, Watch Your Vote. And know for whom and why you are voting.

If you believe student government is dying or is dead on campus, here will be your chance to lend it some artificial, nay actual, respiration.

Like the Good Health motto, "It's All Up To You."

The $64 Question!

A short while ago the Daily Tar Heel, in its editorial columns, predicted that the end of books lines was in sight.

This is not a retraction of this prediction. Our crystal ball is not yet cracked. For the sole obsticle brought up by Booketeria Boss H. R. Ritchie has been eliminated in the opinion of DTH editorialists.

As yet, however, there has been no confirmation of this by officials of the book store. Nor has there been a statement as to progress towards the adoption of the Daily Tar Heel sponsored plan of issuing books to veterans as soon as they receive class cards for the following quarter.

This newspaper feels that the student veterans should know the stage of development of this plan. For this reason it requests a statement from the powers-that-be who are, by their own words, considering the program's adoption.

It is hoped that such a statement will be forthcoming soon.

Serious Problem

Membership in the Communist party apparently is to become a crime in North Carolina.

While it is beyond question that the party's aim of overthrowing our present form of government is despicable and requires drastic counter measures, these means of fighting communism demand close security.

In seeking to eradicate an evil we must watch that it does not become shrouded in a martyr's cloak. Truthful exposure of facts would seem to be the logical way of destroying this evil. Outlawry may drive it underground to continue its damage.

The question is one of great portent.

Nations of World in Race To Create Atomic Weapons

By Howard C. Turnage
International Relations Club Member

Sixty-five thousand persons are now employed in the United States in the manufacture of atomic bombs. The Canadians, at their plant at Petawawa, have developed methods for the chemical separation of plutonium that are more effective and far cheaper than methods developed in the U. S.

The British are building an atom power plant and will also be able to make bombs. France is constructing a pile under the supervision of Joliot-Curie. Heisenberg has stated that even Germany had a pile in 1942 which was discontinued because of the lack of funds. Few know what Russia is doing.

Winston Churchill stated in August 1945 that the world had three years to put its house in order. Leo Szilard, German educated scientist now with the University of Chicago and active in the development of the bomb, was more optimistic. He gave us 10 years.

At any rate, our "secret" is rapidly vanishing. The race for the development of atomic weapons is on. If it is not stopped, we face the only consequence. Fear, mistrust and atomic stockpiles will accumulate. Finally, the Great War will begin.

Must we resign ourselves to an inevitable atomic war? It is this writer's contention that we must either establish rigid international control of atomic weapons or else prepare now to drop the first bomb of the next war. The principles of international control might include, as outlined in Mr. Baruch's letter to the President of January 5, 1947:

1) The creation of an international system of controls and inspections under the direction of an agency within the framework of the United Nations;

2) The control of every phase of the production of fissionable materials;

3) Provisions that the controlling agency should have the necessary authority to perform its duties and that its daily operations should be subject to the veto of no government;

4) Provisions that the agency should have unimpeded rights of ingress, egress and access in the performance of its inspections;

5) The establishment of laws forbidding the manufacture, possession and use of atomic weapons by all nations;

6) The specifications of acts constituting international crimes, and establishing adequate methods of enforcement and punishment.

Russia has agreed to this plan in part. But she wishes to limit the proposed inspections. This is folly!

International control of atomic weapons must be established now. The controlling agency must be absolutely unimpeded in its operations and subject to the jurisdiction of NO nation.

After plans for atomic control have been established the U. N. must be given authority to apprehend and punish an individual or government for violation of these plans.

Time is an important factor. We cannot wait.

Of Cabbages and Kings

Grieselda and Scribe with the Intelligentsia

By Dick Savage

There is an increasing tendency among students of the University to search into the fundamental questions of their existence . . . and occasionally the existence of others. Among the thinking part of the student body one can find little groups gathered in profound perturbation here and there about the campus.

Even so with myself. Several evenings ago Griselda and I were sitting in the entre-sol of Jeff's cabaret (a balcony in the rear designed for the use of secret societies and the more elite who wish to avoid the riff-raff of Danziger's, etc.) drinking our nightly quota of cholesterol. For a long time Griselda stared into the candle on our table. At last she leaned forward. There was a fierce light in her eyes and her bosom heaved tumultuously.

"Tristan," she breathed. "Tristan, do you ever have fears that you will cease to be before your pen has gleaned your teeming brain?" I shuddered at this soul-searching question. Then I rose to my feet.

"I do!" I cried thumping my chest. "There's so much inside of me! But I can't get it out. I try to make people and my professors understand, but . . . ."

"Dearest," said Griselda picking me up from the floor, "you shouldn't be so violent. Look, you've cut your hand on one of your ribs."

"Oh, don't be so prosaic, Griselda," I scoffed, regaining my seat and at the same time carefully bottling some blood for my zoology class.

"But what I really want to know about life," sighed Griselda, "is why? Why?"

"Griselda," I replied sagaciously, "I don't know all the answers . . . but you see, the real trick in life is to avoid most of the questions."

"Oh, darling, you're so wise, so witty, so felicitous, so . . ."

"But I don't want to be wise and felicitous any more, Griselda. I want to be normal! Look, 'you join a sorority and I'll join a fraternity and we'll both live like normal human beings. Hurrah!" I cried leaping onto the table and holding aloft my demitasse of cholesterol. "Here's to la vie naturale! To the eternal fiitness of things! To . . . ."

"No, darling!" shrieked Griselda, swinging from the crystal chandelier, "we don't want to give it all up now! It's people like us whose brave, new ideas suckle the children of society and wean the inteilects of a great university like this!"

"Oh, you're so right, Griselda," I admitted, gashing her skull with a nearby candelabrum in order to bring her down to earth, "you're so right."

"You see, dear," said Griselda, holding her hand in the flame of the candle, "the answer to everything is more asceticism . . . real asceticism like . . . ."

"Griselda," I admonished, "please take your hand out of that flame. The smell is nasty." At that moment four hooded figures crept into the entre-sol. They held aloft a large banner which had a picture on it of a man with a whip in his hand standing over a dead horse.

"Soft," breathed Griselda, "who are they?"

"They are the S.S.U.N.C.R.S. That is to say, the Secret Society for the Undermining of the North Carolina Registration System."

"Oh, how awful," shuddered Griselda.

"Yes, it is pretty awful," I admitted. "But there will always be revolutions and rumors of revolutions . . . ."

"Will it be bloodless?"

"As long as it's a rumor," I replied succinctly.

"Let's get out of here," shivered Griselda. "They frighten me." And as we left, the four hooded forms were setting fire to a puppet-like figure in the center of the table, accompanying this with a low, moaning chant.

"Let's go to the arboretum," suggested Griselda as I left a pourboire with the proprietor. "You haven't made love to me since last night."

"But darling," I protested, "I'm a veteran of a long war and I haven't the resiliency that I used to have."

"Oh, come on," urged Griselda. "Do the best you can." So hand in hand, with out two finely-chiseled, shining faces tilted bravely toward the horizon, we set off for the arboretum.

"'Once more spring has returned to the earth'," I began. "'It is the time for the singing of the birds and the voice of the turle is heard throughout the land.'"

"I didn't know turtles made any noise," said Griselda stooping to pick up a copy of the "Satyricon" which some freshman had dropped. I squeezed her hand reassuringly. That is why we get along so well together. We both wonder about the same things.

Letters To The Editor

All letters must be typewritten, double-spaced, under 300 words in length, and signed by the writer. Writer's name will be withheld on request, but letters must be signed. The Daily Tar Heel reserves the right to present the letters as it wishes and to delete all matter it considers libelous.

To the Election Board

In the freshmen elections you have disqualified Mr. Billy Wood; therefore giving the presidency to Steve Nimocks. Mr. Wood was disqualified because he failed to file his campaign expenses. It seems to me as though you should investigate and find out what the election laws passed by the legislature are before taking such irresponsible action as you have done.

On the 20th of February 1947 the legislature passed a bill calling for a new election of all freshmen and sophomore officers. The bill instructed the elections board to conduct the elections wavering all previous election rules. As we too well know "filing campaign expenditures" was one of those rules, and therefore should have been discarded. Because he failed to follow a law that had been void well over a month, he was disqualified. That just doesn't seem right, Mr. Elections Board. The next time we have an election, let's leave our stupidity at home and conduct a decent election.

Bob Seligman Shot Standout

Carolina Relays Begin Tomorrow

By Morty Schaap

The weight-tossing convention that is scheduled as part of the Carolina Relays tomorrow will feature such outstanding whales as Bob Seligman of Carolina, Mike Andrews of State college, Walt Messerole of Tennessee and Jack Gardinier of Duke.

Even with this collection of mastodons, it is very unlikely that the meet records will fall. The reason, of course, is that the marks for these events were set by the late Al Blozis of Georgetown, who heaved the shot 54 feet 3¾ inches, and tossed the discus 178 feet 10¾ inches. However, the University marks set by Seligman last Saturday may be bettered by him.

The javelin record of 187 feet by Steve Lach of Duke will be assaulted by such stalwarts as Fred Bauer of Carolina and Al Dunham of Duke.

The relay events will have Duke favored in the sprint medley and 440-yard and one-mile relays with Carolina the team to beat in the one-mile team race. These would repeat the results of the Florida meet last weekend. Duke has a strong team in the dash and middle distance events and is led by Roger Neighborgal, Howard Hartley and Doug Ausbon. Carolina relay hopes will be pinned on Don Nelson, Ted Shultz, Dick Freyer and several others out for the shorter distance events.

The high jump mark is sure to go by the boards since it stands at a mere 5 feet, 10 inches. With Jack Moody wearing Carolina's colors and Doub Ausbon and Colvin from Duke, it is expected that a new University mark will be in force come Saturday evening. Moody, incidentally, set the Carolina mark last weekend with a leap of 6 feet, 3 inches.

Allen Calls Meeting Of Soccer Players

A meeting of last year's soccer squad will be held Monday, April 7, at 3 o'clock in 304 Woollen, Coach Marvin Allen announced yesterday.

Informal practice will begin the next day in preparation for an intramural soccer tournament which will start April 15. All men interested in soccer are invited to the meeting.

Although no points will be awarded for this mural play a cup and medals will be awarded to the winners.

Coach Allen is interested in getting as many teams into the play as possible and he said that dorms and fraternities could combine for this effort. Any man in school is eligible to play in this tournament regardless of his experience.

Linksmen Practice On Soggy Course; To Play Tuesday

Coach Chuck Erickson's golfers returned to the soggy fairways of Hope Valley Country club yesterday after a day's rest granted by Old Mother Nature and began preparations for their match with the Hoyas of Georgetown come the first of the week.

The match, originally scheduled for Monday afternoon, has been switched to Tuesday because of the conflict that would occur with the large crowd of members scheduled to pack the course due to the Easter Monday holiday.

The same sextet that brought victory to the Tar Heels last Monday and Tuesday—Harvey Ward, Dick Doeschler, June Bailey, Bob Cox, Mike Nolan, and Ray Taylor—took a full afternoon's workout on the club's practice tee, correcting the mistakes of the first two matches. Another familiar face on the practice hole was that of Durham's Ed Ashby, No. 1 relief man, who shows promise of breaking into the lineup before the season progresses much farther.

Coach Erickson seemed rather pleased with the team's showing thus far, especially with that of dependable Dick Doeschler, who turned in a pair of blazing 71's against VPI and Davidson.

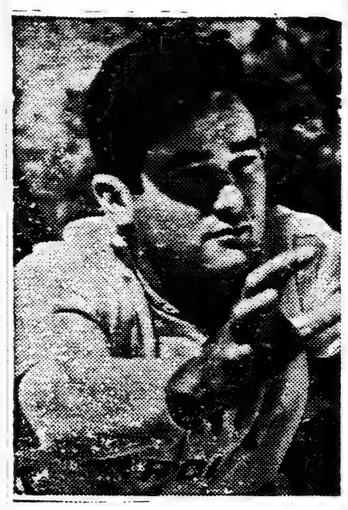
Rabb To Pitch Blair, Andrew

Duke Set to Play Locals Tomorrow

Victorious in their first two outings this week, Carolina's baseballers return to the diamond this afternoon in the first of a pair of weekend clashes when the Tar Heels engage Virginia's Cavaliers on Emerson field. Starting time is 4 o'clock.

Bub Blair and Tommy Andrew are the choices to take over the hurling assignments for today with Blair expected to gain the starting nod. Andrew, a letterman in 1944, is being counted on as one of the mainstays of this year's mound corps while Blair, in his first season with the Tar Heels, is among the newcomers that Coach Walt Rabb hopes to develop into a full-time starter.

The remainder of the opening lineup will have the same eight players that started the initial tilt of the season. This puts Buck Hardee behind the plate, Co-Captain Johnny Gregory, Cookie DiChiara, Rip Ryan and Dub Johnson around the infield, and Co-Captain Harry Beason, Whitey Black and Jack Hussey in the outer gardens. No mass substitutions are likely, with Coach Rabb expected to insert replacements sparingly.



Seek Revenge

The Cavaliers will be seeking revenge against Carolina, having suffered a 6-0 setback last year on their home diamond.

Following the Virginia encounter, the Tar Heels will inaugurate their Big Four slate of 12 games tomorrow when Duke's Blue Devils invade the Emerson lair. Monk White heart will handle the hill chores for the Hearnmen while Brandon Davis and Dick Strauch are his possible mound opponents.

The Blue Devils are slightly ahead of the Tar Heels in amount of work this year, sporting a record of four wins and three setbacks. Two of the losses came in Southern conference play, in which Duke also has a pair of triumphs. Coach Jack Coombs' charges captured three out of four contests with Carolina last season.

Today's batting order: Ryan, ss; Beason, lf; Johnson, 3b; Black, cf; Hussey, rf; Gregory, 1b; DiChiara, 2b; Hardee, c; Blair, p.

DUB JOHNSON, above, will start at third base for Carolina this afternoon against the Cavaliers of Virginia. Co-captain elect of the 1944 team, Johnson entered service before the campaign began.

Carolina Gridmen Continue Workouts

Spring football drills moved into the second week yesterday afternoon with something near 70 candidates working hard in preparation for the toughest season in many years.

Head Coach Carl Snavely of the defending Southern conference champion Carolinians stepped up activities in the workout yesterday and indicated that he would begin rough contact work and scrimmage early next week. A full-length scrimmage session is anticipated by the end of next week at the latest.

The majority of the first week of practice was spent on light formation drills, the running of plays, and a considerable bit of blocking and tackling. A lot of attention was given to the new men in the Tar Heel camp and those who have just recently returned from the service.

Tar Heels Blank Haverford For Fourth Victory in Row

Kenfield Kids Move To Greensboro For Sedgefield Tournament Today

By Roy Holsten

Hexed by ole' man weather in their last three outings, the Tar Heel netmen, forced to fight a strong wind all afternoon, extended their current victory string to four, when they shutout the Haverford Fords 9-0.

In the feature match of the afternoon, vaunted Vic Seixas took on the eighth ranking national interscholastic champion from Philadelphia, 19-year-old Diehl Mateer, number one representative of the Fords.

Versatile Mateer, who only two weeks previously teamed with Hunter Lott to gain a strong second in the National Squash doubles tournament held in New York, fell easy prey to Seixas' power filled foray of talent.

Knotted at 2-2 in the first set, Seixas pressed Mateer with his flawless net game and the freshman crumpled under the barrage of cannonball returns. Seixas took the next four games with play that featured well placed shots that nicked the corners repeatedly.

In the second set, the Tar Heel netter worked the score up to 5-1 and then lost the next two games when several of his returns fell short of the mark. Then in a final display of power Seixas fired two consecutive aces that drew large rounds of applause from the crowd. Bewildered, the Haverford star faltered and Seixas blasted his desperation lob shot to the corner, gaining the point for game, set and match.

The closest encounter of the meeting featured the evenly matched play of Carolina's "Frankie Kovacs," clowning Clark Taylor, and Jim Schnaars. Taylor captured the heart of the large crowd with his amusing antics and impressive play, and finally wilted the Haverford No. 2 man and took the match, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5.

The other results: (All matches won by Carolina) Rice beat B. Betson: 6-3, 6-4. Nicholson topped D. Betson: 6-1, 6-3. Skakle stopped Shields, 6-3, 6-4. Gruner trounced Crolius: 6-0, 6-2. Doubles: Seixas and Taylor beat Mateer and Schnaars: 6-4, 3-6, 6-2. Nicholson and Skakle topped Bob and Don Betson: 6-2, 6-8, 9-7. Kenfield and Rice stopped Shields (Capt.) and Crolius: 6-2, 6-2.

The Tar Heel netters will be in Greensboro today, tomorrow and Sunday to take part in the annual Sedgefield Invitational tournament.
